Carrie. Paul says in Rom. viii. 11. "He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by his SPIRIT which dwelleth in you." They will then be "born of the spirit." It is simply preposterous to talk of mortal dying men being already "born of the spirit," they may be "born of God," and "walk after the spirit," and be "spiritually minded," but not "born of the Spirit." Roberts says, commenting on Rom. viii. 11: "Here is a second birth to be effected by the spirit of God: and on the principle laid down by Christ, all who are the subjects of the operation of the Spirit upon their mortal bodies will be born of the spirit, and will therefore be spirit in nature, or spiritual bodies sustained in life by the spirit of life. Living by the thorough permeation of the life-spirit in their natures, they will be glorious and powerful, pure as the gem, strong as adamant, and more incorruptible than gold, glorious in the sense of physical luminosity, as exemplified in the Lord Jesus when he shone above the lustre of the Sun in its mid-day strength." Says Daniel: "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, (not until born of the spirit) and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." It is painful to hear preachers and mission-workers talk about being "born of the spirit" while in mortality.

Teacher. We can be "born of God" now, can't we?

Lud. Yes.

Teacher. Who are they?

Lud. See 1 John v. 1: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." That comprehends what it means to believe that "Jesus is the Christ." The phrases "born of God," and "born of water," are used interchangeably along with the word "begotten." The being born of God, or rather the begettal, commences with a belief of the gospel, but does not culminate in being "born of God" until brought to fruition in being "born of water," and there can be no such thing as being "born of the spirit," unless we are first "born of God," the one must absolutely precede the other. It is a manifestation of ignorance of God's word to use the phrases "born of God," and "born of the spirit," as meaning the same thing as many public teachers do. They darken the counsel of God.

Lucy. Let me call attention to 1 Pet. i. 23, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, (born of water, after believing the gospel) through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently. Being BORN AGAIN (born of God—born of water) not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever."

Teacher. What is this "incorruptible seed," called "the Word of God?"

Lucy. See verse 25, for a clear explanation: "But the Word of the Lord endureth forever. And THIS is the Word which by THE GOSPEL is preached unto you."

See Titus iii. 5: "NOT by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, (how?) by the WASHING of REGENERATION, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost." "The washing of regeneration," is rendered, "The bath of the new birth," "Born of water," after a begettal by the incorruptible seed, "the Word, which by the gospel (of the kingdom) is preached unto us."

Never tell people you are "Born of the Spirit," until the event has become a fact in your life, according to God's revealed order.

W. H. Wilson.

Conference Notice.

The Eleventh Annual Northwest Conference of the Church of God will convene on Friday Oct. 21, at Scholls, Oregon, and continue over the following Sunday. Now brethren, let me admonish you in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, come to this meeting, come with smiling faces and your hearts full of love and self-sacrifice. We would like to have all the Churches in Oregon and Washington represented at this Conference, and especially we would ask the isolated ones to come. Brothers and sisters, it will pay you to come even at a personal sacrifice. Those wishing conveyance from Portland to Scholls will please correspond with Bro. W. W. Jaquith, Scholls, Ore. Will say in conclusion that the brethren at Scholls are a generous people and will be pleased to meet you.

Herd-Clinkenbeard Debate.

Elder Philip Herd, of the Christian Church, challenged S. R. Clinkenbeard of the Church of God, of Oakland, Tex. Question: The Scriptures that the whole, entire man, dies, and is unconscious, until the resurrection. Clinkenbeard affirmed; and Herd denied. Brother Clinkenbeard brought abundance of Bible proof to bear in a masterful way, which established his position beyond controversy. Mr. Herd soon saw that he could not scope with Brother Clinkenbeard. They had a large and intelligent audience. All went off harmoniously and pleasant. You may know that Mr. Herd was in a strait when he brought up the Witch of Endor to prove his point. Bro. Clinkenbeard enlightened his hearers, and I think much good was accomplished.

T. C. Blakey.

Light Wanted.

Bro. George Moyer:

Will you please explain through The Restitution the Master's statement "And no man hath ascended up to heaven:" Jno. iii. 13, with "And Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven." 2 Kings ii. 11. Also the Master's statement to his disciples, "that with faith as a grain of mustard seed they could remove mountains, etc." And oblige one or more who are hunting for the light of life, that shines more and more unto the perfect day.

Yours in the blessed hope of life through Christ the Life giver,

T. E. Adams.

The light of friendship is as the light of phosphorus—seen plainest when all around is dark.

Report of Labor.

And still the good work goes on. At our last visit to Millbrook, Sept. 25, the hearts of the brethren were once more made glad when Sister Alger requested baptism. We had the pleasure of helping her to take the all-saving name. Don't be discouraged fellow-workers, a few can yet be reached by means of earnest, honest effort. The dear Master has not forgotten to bless his own cause.

Yours striving for the kingdom.

B. W. Woodward.

To all the faithful in Christ Jesus Greeting:

Do not fail to send postal card to Bro. Joblin ordering as many of the tracts on "Law or Gospel Which?" as you can use. It is the best campaign literature that can be got. Let every Church order largely, and each individual secure a supply as soon as published. In hope,

J. F. Wagoner.

Editor Restitution:

Will you please announce in the paper that Bro. A. J. Eychaner will preach at Antioch, Ill., Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 8 and 9.

Yours for the hope,

L. Booth.

Believe me when I tell you that thrift of time will pay you in after life with a usury of profit beyond your most sanguine dreams, and that the waste of it will make you dwindle alike in intellectual and moral stature beyond your darkest reckonings.—Gladstone.

Go to Pittsburgh—Special Rates and Special Trains via Pennsylvania Lines.

Magnificent decorations and electrical displays and Grand Parade at Triennial Conclave Knights Templar. From Oct. 8th to Oct. 15th, the cities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny will entertain people from all parts of the United States, as well as from foreign countries, assembled to participate in and witness the imposing ceremonies of Knights Templar in Triennial Conclave. Preparations for the event have been completed on a grand scale, and never in the history of the electrical age have there been such extensive illuminations by electricity as may be seen on this occasion. Both cities will be ablaze with lights every night. The decoration of business blocks and residences will be the most remarkable ever witnessed. The grand parade to take place Tuesday, Oct. 11th, will be a wonderful demonstration. Thousands of Sir Knights will be in line, marching to music furnished by hundreds of bands. The sight will be an inspiring one.

The grandeur of the occasion may be enjoyed at small cost for fare, as non-transferable tickets to Pittsburgh will be sold over the Pennsylvania Lines each day from Oct. 8th to 13th, inclusive. Tickets will be good returning Oct. 17th, with privilege to extend the return limit to Oct. 31st. Arrangements have also been made whereby holders of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines may indulge in cheap trips from Pittsburgh to points within a radius of 200 miles of that city, also to Harrisburg, Gettysburg, Baltimore and Washington. Concessions in fare for side trips may be secured by depositing the return portion of excursion tickets to Pittsburgh with the Joint Agent in that city.

Persons making the trip over the Pennsylvania Lines arrive at stations in the center of Allegheny or Pittsburgh, right in the midst of the hotel and boarding house districts, convenient to places where the events of the week will transpire. The Pennsylvania Station on Federal street, Allegheny, is close to the point where the grand parade will be formed on Tuesday, and is near splendid locations for viewing the procession. It is also directly on the line of march.

The hospitality of the Iron City is well known and all visitors will be satisfactorily taken care of. It will perhaps be the opportunity of a lifetime to see such a wonderful exhibition of electrical illumination and decorations, and vast army of representative men from all over the country in line. Persons who attend will be amply repaid for the trip, the expense of which will be small. Full information about rates, time of trains and other particulars may be ascertained by applying to J. E. Haines, Pennsylvania Lines Ticket Agent at Plymouth, Ind.

Obituary.

Mary C. Gladden, wife of William N. Gladden, died at their home near Healdsburg, Sonoma County, California, August 17, 1898. The deceased was the daughter of Jeremiah and Jane Corbaley; was born near Indianapolis, Indiana, Oct. 10, 1829. She was 68 years, 10 months and 7 days old. She became a member of the Church of God with her husband at "Old Union," Indiana, when a young woman. Was married to William N. Gladden, at her old home, April 13, 1848, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last April. They had a beautiful home near "Old Union," where they lived until October, 1871, when they and their children removed to California, where they have since resided until their home was invaded by the enemy death. She was the mother of six children, three of whom are dead. Her husband, two daughters and a son, and their families are left to mourn their loss. The deceased had a severe attack of "grippe" last winter, from the effect of which she did not fully recover. She in company with her husband and one of her brothers, S. B. Corbaley and wife of Indianapolis, Ind., spent a part of last summer at Bartlett Springs, a great health resort in Lake Co., Cal., but it did her but little, if any good. The immediate cause of death was heart failure. Her husband writes relative to the last moments of her life: "She was perfectly conscious to the last, and about five minutes before she died, she went to sleep breathing naturally, and so slept her life away." The doctor who was present remarked: "That is what I would call going to sleep." And truly it is a dreamless sleep. The deceased is a sister of the writer. I now have four sisters asleep in the dark domain of the tomb. Our sister had hoped she might live until the coming of the Lord; but as she could not, her faith and hope were strong that she would be numbered with the jewels who will be gathered at the first resurrection. Now to Bro. Gladden, and surviving children: I know you do not sorrow as those who have not hope. Live with reference to the future meeting. Remember her devotions, exhortations and wise counsels. The time is near at hand for the reunion by those who will be ready. Our dear Sister has finished her life work, may we all do ours as well. Many Indiana friends will remember Bro. and Sister Gladden. In hope,

RICHARD CORBALEY.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and no recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Conference Notice.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Southern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma will be held at Blackwell, Okla. (D.V.) commencing Oct. 14 and closing Oct. 23, 1898. We are very anxious to have this a meeting that will strengthen and uplmild. "Where no wood is, the fire goeth out." Let all come and come with fuel for a profitable meeting. Bro. A. H. Zillmer will be with us during this Conference, and for a few weeks afterwards. The following point only having been reported: three miles west and three south of Newkirk, Oklahoma. We wish to use these few weeks to the very best advantage, so all knowing of a desirous field make it known to the Secretary and the Committee will consider all points and favor the ones where they deem the best work can be done. The programme will be published later. It is the desire that all come prepared to stay on the grounds so they can attend every session. The business meeting will be the first Saturday in the afternoon.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Happier Life.

To-morrow the sun will rise and part
We need but one of these
To open always a leader-door
For the truest thing that is

The wish, the need to love we make,
The happiest lie we live
And the more we give for another's sake
The more we shall have to give.

So let us widen it day by day
By loving a little more,
Till nothing living be shut away
From a share in the heavenly store.

Indiana Conference Papers

"THERE IS THAT SCATTERETH AND YET INCREASETH."

"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. . . . He that . . . shall be watered also himself. . . . Withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him; but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth it." "There is that scattereth, yet increaseth." Referring so closely to the two verses.

There seems to be but one phase under which to consider this question, and that as was suggested, a lesson on giving freely. It seems to me this matter has been so thoroughly probed and ventilated, and treated from every point of view, that it is utterly useless for me to attempt to present any thing new or impress it more thoroughly upon the minds of those who should be interested in the welfare of the Master's cause.

Solomon in enumerating a long list of moral virtues and their contrary vices, among others says: "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth." This as you observe is an elliptical sentence, and when the omitted words are supplied reads: "There is that (which) scattereth and yet increaseth. This, to the casual observer might seem a contradiction of terms, to scatter and at the same time increase. Again he says: "There is that maketh himself rich and yet hath nothing. There is that maketh himself poor and yet hath great riches." Prov. xii. 7.

Another contradiction of terms from a worldly point of view. From this we conclude that Solomon does not at all times refer to earthly riches or poverty. A man may be rich in earthly possessions, and poor in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God and vice versa.

The question arises, Who is he who scattereth and yet increaseth? Is it the man who devotes all his time and energy to the accumulation of wealth, and for a time is prosperous; but who, at an ungarded moment partakes of the fatal cup and from its direful effects loses self control and in a few days scatters that which it took years of diligence to collect? Is it he who spends lavishly for the enjoyments and pleasures, who surrounds himself with every thing his heart may desire, loves sumptuously every day, without thought as to whom he is indebted for all he has? He is a financier, he makes close deals, so close he crowds over on the other side occasionally, loans money on real-estate securities and when it becomes due, if the man is not able to meet the payment, closes the mortgage, takes all the poor fellow has, turns him out of house and home, all of which is a fair and legitimate transaction of business in the eyes of the law of the land: and perchance his conscience chides him too much, he goes to church on Sunday morning, of which he is a very prominent and devout (?) member, and when the contribution box is passed drops in a five or ten dollar bill to compensate for the evil of his ways, and appease the wrath of a justly indignant God: and at last when he feels that the time of his departure is at hand, he makes a disposition of his wealth, bequeathing a large sum to some benevolent institution to perpetuate his name.

Does the declaration of Solomon apply to either of these? Certainly not. Does it refer to the worldling at all? I answer in the negative and feel what I believe a good deal will receive just recompense of reward. Then to whom does he refer? I believe he refers to the child of God: he who has made the goodly profession, the follower of the Anointed, he who has set affections on heavenly and not on earthly things. If I should speak somewhat plain I hope you will bear with me for it is a matter which concerns us all alike. This subject of finance, (for that is what it resolves itself into) has been a perfect bug bear to our Christian organizations all along the line. Why is this so? I ask. Is it because we are too poor and not able to meet the demand to carry on the work?

We will suppose some scheme is started by parties. . . . enjoy is backed by . . . to redeem every . . . We will say the business . . . annual dividend of one hundred percent on the investment. The business increases in proportions, and the founders being of a beneficent turn of mind, conclude to allow others the benefit of the enterprise. Stock is issued and you have the privilege of investing little or much as you see fit. Now that the reliability of this enterprise is fully established, do you suppose they would have to spend much time in urging and drumming people to take hold of it? Why bless you, you would see the purse-strings release, old stockings come from their hiding, men and church men at that, who never had any means for any thing else would open their hearts and purses, and it would be but a short while until that concern would be completely submerged with funds, and they would have to call a halt. Men would invest every cent they could spare, make themselves poor in order to become rich. Why is this, I ask? The reason is very plain. The individual has confidence in it, and he expects to get good returns.

Now again, we believe, or profess to believe in the all-wise Father, Creator of all, that he is all-wise, all-powerful, that he is able and will redeem his promises, that he has perfected a plan whereby men may, by complying with certain requisites, be most generously rewarded for every good deed, and that, no man who hath left all for his sake and the gospel's, but shall receive, not only one hundred fold now, but in the world to come eternal life. Mark x. 29, 30. And yet this enterprise goes begging, while the other is driven under full sail. Again I ask, why is this so? I answer, in the first instance the incentive is right in line with your natural inclinations, there is no resistance, your heart is in your hand and you can hardly run fast enough to get there. While on the other the order is reversed. God's way is not man's way. By nature he is wholly estranged from the divine order of things before we can become interested in his plan we must be in a sense regenerated, we must be begotten by the Word, the old Adam must be crucified, we must come out from the world and worldly affairs, keep ourselves unspotted from the world, take Christ as our man of counsel and hope. When this work is thoroughly done, and not until then will it be natural and easy for us to aid in the divine cause, for now we work by faith and not by sight. The man who has that filial faith and trust in our heavenly Father and the desire to obey from the heart will feel duty bound to contribute of his means to the cause, and he will not do it merely from a sense of duty; but will consider it a privilege and give cheerfully, and right here let me say until this change takes place in the individual you need not expect much of him in a financial way, nor indeed any way pertaining to Christian religion. You may make a demand on him for money and perhaps be able to extract a few dollars from him. Does God want such means? I very much doubt whether such was ever the means of converting a single soul to Christ. You may [illegible] him with the very quintessence of sarcasm, he will oblige it thinking it was meant for the other fellow: or perchance you strike him it will only have the effect of driving him further away. There is no reality in the religion of Jesus to him, he sees nothing in it, his affections are set on worldly things."

Some one has said that next to a man's religion is his pocket book; but in this enterprising generation it seems to me the order might be appropriately reversed, if perchance he made any profession at all. I do not wish to be understood as making the question of giving freely a test of a man's religion or christianity, but like the steam governor, a engine it is a pretty good [illegible] of the energy behind it. [illegible] to realize we are not [illegible] that we are bought with a price, when our desires and affections have been transferred from earthly to heavenly things by the transforming power of the gospel, then we will work for the good of the cause, and the perplexing question of how to raise means will cease to be perplexing. Then the question of how much must I give? will be transformed to, how much can I give?

Based on this hypothesis what better or more appropriate rule could be given than the one Paul gave the Corinthian brethren, to lay aside as the Lord hath prospered you.

Submitted in love,

A. C. ROBERTS.

Men and Brethren, What Shall We do?

Seeing no evidence that Gentile times have closed, as some of our scribes have recently marked out; we think it fit to remain at our post of duty, and occupy till the Master comes. And feeling assured that his coming is in the near future, and that a preparation of heart and life for that stupendous event is of most importance we should devote a good share of our best time and talent in making sure, and holding up "God's plan of salvation" to poor dying mortals: and then earnestly plead with them in the name of our blessed Master, to come, learn, believe, obey, and live. And now that we give the trumpet no uncertain sound, and thus bind some one astray, and call down upon our own head the curse of God; we kindly ask those out of the way to come with us to the Bible and learn what God would have us do to be saved.

"What says the Bible?
Few can tell.
What says the Bible?
Study it well."

Jesus, the Son of the living God, when on earth, spent much of his time in preaching and showing the glad tidings concerning the kingdom of God. And in order to learn what he meant by the "kingdom of God," let us go to his teaching in Matt. xxv. 31, where he introduces his future personal coming, or his return to earth with all the holy angels with him, as the time when he would be enthroned in glory, and would be a righteous ruler on earth, and a judge of all nations, and will then and there judge the living and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom. Preach the Word, preach this, brethren, where-ever you go, and thus preach like Jesus preached. Tell sinners how to become Christians and heirs of the kingdom, just like the Apostles told them, then tell them they are required to live a new life, a holy life of faith and obedience, waiting for the Son of God from heaven, when he shall come to be admired and glorified by all his children by faith, when he comes to set up and establish his righteous kingdom on earth, execute judgment and justice in the earth, and say to those on the right hand, the sheep, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Let all of God's people continue to pray fervently that God's kingdom may soon come, and be given to the saints of the Most High.

"And God's will on earth be done,
By all who live to seek the sun,
God's Kingdom then will be,
A righteous rule from sea to sea."

"Men and brethren, what shall we [illegible] Do to have our sins forgiven, and be saved, and finally inherit a home in the kingdom of God on earth, and live with Jesus, our living and loving Savior, and all his dear people of all ages.

This important question, our head line, is what the convicted Pentecostians cried out when they heard and believed and were made to feel the power of God through the gospel preached by Peter, on that largest occasion. He it remembered that Peter was filled full of Holy Spirit, and only had to open his mouth, and let the words of eternal truth as dictated by the Holy Spirit roll out and over that vast assembly of eager listeners, who believed with all their heart the words they heard preached to them in power, which pierced them to the heart, yet their mind was not at rest, and they did not feel satisfied and willing to risk the delusive "faith-alone doctrine," as it gave them no comfort or peace of mind until they heard Peter, the new Holy Ghost preacher, tell them to repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." This was the law of pardon then, and has been, and is to this day. And all who believe the gospel as preached by Peter on that great day, and are led and influenced by the Holy Spirit of God, are led down to the water for the obedience of faith just as they were, as this was the law of pardon, the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, that makes free from the law of sin and death, and to be led by the Spirit is to believe and obey his requirements. Then the comfort and peace of mind comes as a natural result of intelligent obedience.

When Saul of Tarsus was stricken [illegible] and [illegible] was told by an humble disciple of Jesus to arise and be baptized and wash away his sins, calling on then name of the Lord. And he too, like the Pentecostians, was not satisfied, did not feel that comfort and peace of mind, and was not willing to risk the "faith-alone doctrine" (although he had humbled himself down to the earth, and had prayed most earnestly for days) until he had purified his soul, his life from past sin, by obeying the truth through or by the directions of the Spirit given or requested, through or by Ananias. This was again the law of pardon—the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, that makes free from sin. Neither did the eunuch, although he believed the truth preached by Philip, find any comfort in the "faith-alone doctrine," but when he went down into the water, and was buried with Christ in baptism, then, yes then, he arose, and went on his way rejoicing. Just so it was with that Philippian jailor, when he saw what was done by that great earthquake, drew his sword and would have killed himself, but Paul a true soldier of the cross, cried with a loud voice, "Do thy self no harm, for we are all here." Then the jailor called for a light, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas. And brought them out and said, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" And they said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." Here is your "faith-alone doctrine," if there be any in the Bible, and it is certain this is not that sort of doctrine, as these true servants of God did not believe or teach it, for they went on and spake to him the Word of the Lord—the gospel, and to all that were in his house, that they might hear believe and obey. And to show that he was not willing to risk "the faith-alone doctrine," he took them the same hour of the night, washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his (family) straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house. The "faith-alone" is a dead doctrine, and will save no one, while the true faith of the gospel is an important factor in God's plan of salvation, as it prompts to obedience. Then this is in harmony with the great world-wide commission, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved: but he that believeth not (the gospel) shall be condemned. And when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." These testimonies from Jesus and his Apostles prove positively that faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ, and a hearty reformation of life, that changes all our bad habits, so that we are in reality dead to sin, and an immersion or burial with Christ in baptism for in order to remission of sin, to be the true and heaven ordained way to life, though few there be that find it. Then Paul the wise master builder, clinches the argument by telling his Roman brethren, that they were made free from sin, when they obeyed from the heart that form or mould of doctrine delivered unto them.

Now it is absolutely certain that men and women, too, are buried alive in the waters of baptism, unless they have previously died to sin by breaking them all off, and quit all foolish and hurtful habits contracted in their ignorance. While on the other hand if "the faith-alone doctrine" be true, and sinners are quickened and made alive by it, then they are buried alive, if buried in baptism. Baptism alone will save no one, and faith alone is dead, yet baptism with the necessary Scriptural pre-requisites is an essential and saving ordinance, and those who object, and reject it, Jew or Gentile, Pharisee or lawyer, reject the counsel of God against themselves. The design of Scriptural baptism is twofold: 1, It is for the remission of past sins; 2, It is the final act of the law of adoption into the church of Jesus Christ—the family of God; 3, It is God's memorial of the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus the Christ, the Son of the living God; 4, And last, but not least, it is God's symbol, figure and pattern or type of our physical death, burial and resurrection—the final adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. While those who prefer the tradition of the elders, will miss the object of their creation, and never see life. Acts ii. 38; xxii. 16; Rom. viii. 15; Gal. iv. 4-6; Eph. i. 5; Rom. vi. 17, 18; 1 Cor. xv. 1-4; Phil. iii. 10, 11; Rom. vi. 5.

Yet it is a sad and fatal fact, that some even among us, who claim to be teachers of the way of life, claim a difference between Jew and Gentile, and claim two ways, or laws of pardon, and yet one law of adoption for all. The Jew must now be immersed for the remission of sin, because he in his ignorance falsely accused the Savior of sinners, and clamored for his life blood; seeming to forget or overlook the fact that the Jews were only subjects, who paid tribute to the Roman Gentile government as an evidence of submission; and that Pilate, the Roman governor, had and claimed to have the power to crucify or release this falsely accused prisoner, and would not do so. And now for us Gentiles to rise up and say that God has made a difference between us, and that he now requires the Jew to be buried in baptism to be free from his past sins, and that we Gentiles can be free, and come in on a shorter line, is simply a chimera of the brain, a vain, idle fancy, standing directly in opposition to the plainly expressed will and Word of God.

Peter, one of God's Holy Ghost preachers, positively teaches otherwise, for he says, "And put no difference between us (Jews) and them, (Gentiles) purifying their hearts by faith." Then if there is no difference, the hearts of all are purified by faith, if purified at all, and if we claim a difference, we simply differ with God, and with Peter. Not only so, but we differ with Jesus the Son of God; who told his preachers to go and preach the gospel to every creature, he that believes and is baptized shall be saved. Now, if we make a difference and preach otherwise, one condition to one creature, and another condition to the other creature, then we must necessarily be some other man's servants, preaching another gospel. And to further prove that this great commission and plan of salvation as given by the Master is world wide, let us hear him once more. When he had opened their understanding he said to them, "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Now, go with me to Jerusalem and learn what was preached in his name for remission of sins, and we have it direct and pure, and those who still halt and oppose, would most surely oppose if one rose from the dead. To those who believed, and enquired what to do to be saved from their past sins, (not knowing or even thinking that they were thus saved) Peter said, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

Now, in conclusion let me say, that while I have written plainly and pointedly, I have written kindly and for the good of all concerned in this great salvation. And more, that I heartily endorse the synopsis or declaration or principles as enunciated prominently on the first page of our grand old RESTITUTION paper. Now, brethren and sisters, you know where I stand, and where to find me, and if you stand on this platform, then we stand together, and in union there is strength and communion. And to those who are aliens and strangers to the covenants of promise, without hope and without God in the world, let me say, Come to Jesus and learn of him, take his yoke upon you and find that sweet peace and rest to your souls or lives—promised in his Word. God, the Father, so loved the world, that he gave his beloved Son to die, the just for the unjust, for you and for me, that whosoever would believe in, and obey him, might not perish, but have everlasting life. Then a strong and living faith in his Word, and a hearty and loving obedience to his requirements is our only plan of safety. O do not delay until it is too late, hasten to obey, and become a child of a King, a child of God by faith, and very abba Father, then he will hear you, and bless you, and Jesus will be your elder brother and Savior, and will plead for you, and save you when he comes to gather his jewels home. But if you neglect this great salvation, offered now through the gospel, then how will you, how can you escape? Now is the day of salvation, O do not harden your hearts, but hear, learn, love, believe and obey, and thus have a right to the tree of life, and live forevermore. "And the Spirit and the Bride say come. And let him that heareth say come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

"Come to Jesus, while you may,
Come to Jesus, the true and living way;
Come to Jesus, and obey,
Come to Jesus, O, come today."

To all the faithful in Christ Jesus greeting:

Do not fail to send postal card to Bro. Joblin ordering as many of the tracts on "Law or Gospel Which?" as you can use. It is the best campaign literature that can be got. Let every Church order largely, and each individual secure a supply as soon as published. In hope,

J. F. WAGONER.

Cheap Trips to the Northwest, West, and Southwest.

Persons contemplating business or pleasure trips to the Northwest, West or Southwest may arrange for an enjoyable journey at low fare, by communicating with C. L. Kimball, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, Cleveland, O. He represents the short Lines to Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati, the gateways to the Northwest, West and Southwest. The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, OCTOBER 12, 1898. NUMBER 39.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is here given that the regular Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held in Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 19, 1898 for the purpose of chosing a Board of Directors, and the transaction of such business as may come before the meeting.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres.

A. R. UNDERWOOD, Sec'y.

A LETTER from Bro. Woodward tells that they are having a good meeting in Warren Co., Ind., where he with his wife have been laboring the past week. Bro. and Sister Woodward will attend the Conference at this place next month.

THE report of the Lamark, Ill., Conference is at hand and will be given next week. We are rejoiced to know that the brethren in Illinois have perfected an organization, the more systematically to do the work that is still left for the Church. Keep it going.

ACCORDING to John vii. 17 the Spirit of obedience ensures a clear perception of God's truth. "If any man wishes to perform his [God's] will, he shall know of the doctrine [teaching] whether it be of God, or I speak of myself." May we not hope that acquiescence with God's will, will unlock a thousand other truths?

PROF. PATTISON says preachers run out because they fail to do what Addison did when he had completed the "Cimodium." "I must take some time and lay in fuel for future work." The strongest blaze dies down and goes out when a man uses the bellows, but puts on no more fuel. Wind can never take the place of fuel."

WE desire to increase our list. There are members of our Church who do not take the paper, and we would urge each one who does take it, to present the matter to your neighbor, and see if he will not let you send in his name with yours, when you renew. As an inducement to new subscribers we will begin now and all who send for a year, and pay $1.50 in advance for it, will be given the remaining numbers for 1898, that is they will be credited to the end of 1899, for the price of one year's subscription.

WE desire to avoid the labor and expense of sending out statements to those of our friends who are in arrears on subscription. It costs considerable money besides much work, and we feel that if you were in our place you would like us to do as we now ask and urge you to do. We have furnished you the paper on your promise to pay us for it, and you certainly should not desire that we make a special request to you by letter to make your promise good. Surely you will be thoughtful enough to attend to this matter promptly, and not neglect it longer.

WE see that that great pulpit Orator, Talmage, has given up the idea of converting the world by the close of the present century. In addition to this, he has about concluded that no human agents will or can ever convert the world, and that from present appearances the Lord will have to take the matter in hand himself. If he had only believed what the Lord has said about it first, he would not have made many hundreds of foolish predictions, and such presumptious attempts to do what he now confesses to be impossible. It looks as if human failure, rather than the Word of Lord, has changed his mind now.

THE present arrangement seems to be that the German Emperor and his party will leave for Constantinople Oct. 12, reaching that city Oct. 17. The tour includes a special religious service on the Mount of Olives on Sunday, Oct. 30, visit to the Greek Monastery at Mar Saba, Haifa, Beirut, Damascus, and Bethlehem. They will reach Alexandria about Nov. 17. All Europe is kept guessing the real import of this pilgrimage at this time when such stirring events are demanding the best judgment of the diplomats. The Kaiser has taken such an active part in the government of his empire that it appears strange that he should go on such an extensive pleasure trip for pleasure's sake. More than likely it means something besides what is seen on the surface.

"THE highest glory of manhood is when it stands in the attitude of the benefactor. It is in this attitude that it most strikingly exhibits its own sense of gratitude to God for His benefactions."

AN minister of Ireland thinks that people who talk of sending missionaries into our own possessions, do not know what they are talking about. He doubtless thinks that Cuba and Porto Rico has all the spiritual light they need.

BROTHER A. H. ZILMER preached two excellent sermons for the Church at Plymouth on last Sunday. He goes this week to Blackwell, Okla., to attend the Conference at that place. We bespeak for him a hearty welcome in this to him new field, being sure the brethren will find him a workman of the true Christian sort, rightly dividing the Word.

WE had a few hours visit on Wednesday the 28th ult., with our dear Brother Zilmer, instead of four or five days as we expected, his appointments ahead compelling him to leave the same evening. We found him full of love and zeal for God's truth, and gratitude that God is smiling upon his efforts to save men. That he may have many souls for his hire is our fervent prayer.

ENGLAND'S troubles come thick and fast. Surely do her marines arrive in Pekin to protect her representative there, when Russian Cossacks appear, and the lion and bear are facing each other again. To still further arouse the British, word comes that through Menelik of Abyssinia the Russians have grabbled a coaling station on the Red Sea, directly on England's route to India. This point is on what was supposed to be Italian territory, but the claim is made that Italy had abandoned it, and Russia steps in and takes it. Should this be established, and Russia hold this place it will be a direct menace to English interests, and may lead to England and Italy joining hands for a time. England is not safe with Russia on her track so close, and may be looked upon to resent the intrusion. Then the African affair with France is still unsettled, and the dispatches state an ultimatum has been sent to Paris, demanding the withdrawal of the French from Fashoda within a given time. Whether France will take kindly to such a threat is to be seen. She is on the verge of civil war, and can hardly add much to her present debt, which is now the largest in the world, being £1,500,000,000. The British Premier seems to realize the trouble that is brewing in the far East, and is sending large stores of war goods and ammunition to Hong Kong, besides the first-class cruiser Terrible has been ordered to join her sister ship the Powerful, on the China station. These vessels are the largest cruisers in the world, which fact shows the importance attached to this part of the world. Another speck of trouble for Britain appears in the Transvaal once more, so that on all sides the lion is assailed. How much longer will these two leaders of the latter days (England and Russia) be in gathering about them the nations that will finally be on either side when the time comes for the King of the North to descend upon the unwalled villages described by Ezekiel? Faster and faster the nations maneuver on the world's great plain, and measures that took years formerly are now worked out in a day. Let us watch the developing of the picture closely, that no "sign" of his coming escape us.

"The Lord's Supper."

In reply to J. F. M., and all others interested, we say yes; the Church of God in Cleveland has broken bread on the First day of the week since its organization in 1863.

Among the reasons why, for such practice, we mention first of all,—

Apostolic authority and usage. The Apostle Paul delivered the ordinance,—to the Church at Corinth, and the brethren there kept them as he delivered them. (1 Cor. xi. 2,) and so praised for it.

As Christ has but one Body, what was law to one congregation was law to all congregations. Paul and Luke and others sailed away from Philippi after the end of the Passover week, and reached Troas five days later, Acts xx. 6, and remained there seven days and upon the First day of the week Paul and his companions broke bread with the disciples at that place, —that First day being at least twelve days after the Passover, which began on the 15th of Nisan, Ex. xii. 14, and lasted eight days. That feast could be observed at no other time, and if the Lord's Supper took the place of the Passover it can be observed at no other time.

Paul did observe it at least twelve days after the Passover, and therefore, the Lord's Supper has no relation to the Passover.

It was full fifty days after the Passover when the Pentecostal converts began to partake of the Lord's Supper and from that time forward we are told they "continued steadfastly in the apostolic doctrine, and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Acts ii. 42.

Besides this positive evidence against the yearly, and for the weekly observance we have strong inferential evidence of the weekly periodicity in 1 Cor. xi. 1, 2, where the apostle commands every one to set apart a portion of whatever he may have been prospered with, to prevent a collection when he arrived, showing it to have been deposited in the treasury every week, or else there would have been a collection after all, if each retained custody of his own offering.

This shows that the Corinthians did as the Church at Troas did.—came together to break bread on the First day of the week.

Further on in the chapter of 1 Cor. the apostle writes severely of some who came together in obedience to the ordinance, but did not come for the proper purpose, that is, to eat of the Lord's supper, but their own, and by their eating their suppers singly, and offering nothing to those who were without food, they were a disgrace to a social meal even, much more to a gathering of saints, to engage in a service calculated to feed their faith and confirm their hope by means of symbols of the Body and Blood of him who had been slain on their behalf, and had risen again for their Justification, and promised to come again, and the words of the Spirit in the 20th verse shows the chief object in coming together should be to eat the Lord's Supper, this they failed of, not discerning the Lord's Body, and ate and drank to their own condemnation, v. 29.

As the Passover was an essential part of the Old Covenant, which was only added because of transgressions till the Seed [Christ] should come, and then pass away: and Jesus' blood was the blood of the New Covenant, Luke xxii. 20, we trust you will see how impossible it would be for the Lord's Supper to be in any way related to something that has passed away.

But if still in doubt, please remember that the Passover was a NATIONAL institution, and secured only temporal blessings,—while the cup of blessing which we bless, is by faith the medium of communion with, or participation in the benefits growing out the blood of Christ by INDIVIDUALS.

Besides this you may see that the Lord's Supper was not instituted at the Passover feast,—but after it.

If the Passover were to have been thereafter the Lord's Supper, what need would there have been for two separate suppers in one evening? See Luke xxii. 15–20.

If the Passover of the Old Covenant was to have been continued, could he have said, "This cup is the New Covenant in my blood, which is shed for you?"

If the Old Covenant Passover was to have been perpetuated, would not the Passover lamb have been perpetually slain yearly?

What need would there have been to slay the Lamb of God?

What need would there have been to re-affirm or re-ratify a covenant that had been in force some two thousand years, and a Just recompense had been meted out under it for every transgression? See Heb. ii. 2.

We have the Word of the Spirit for it in Heb. vii. 11–12, that the Priesthood had been changed, and this made it necessary to change the Law also, because Jesus was of Judah, and could neither be connected with the Law officially nor sacrificially, as it only related to him typically.

As he in all his offices and work at his first appearance was the substance of the good things shadowed to come in the Old Covenant, how could the shadows exist after the good things themselves had come?

As Jesus positively says that his was the blood of the New Covenant,—and Heb. vii. 22, says he was made the surety of a better covenant, than the law or covenant which made nothing perfect, Heb. vii. 19, and as Heb. xiii. 20 shows that the New and better Covenant was an Everlasting Covenant, and the other was to last only to the time of Reformation, Heb. ix. 10,—and while it was in force did not perfect the consciences, Heb. ix. 9, it is plain to be seen that the Lord's Supper has no connection with the Passover, except that the latter was the type of our Passover who has been slain already: and surely we have no need of the type, after that transcendant event.

Let our correspondent and all in a similar estate of uncertainty through the perusal of the literature of those who do not know what the Gospel of the Kingdom and the things concerning the name of Jesus are, come to the fountain of truth, and take deep draughts, and let the speculations of the aliens alone. The coming together on the First day to break bread was confined to those who had taken upon them the name of Jesus. Only as those who were in that name could they meet the conditions upon which the Lord promises to be in the midst of them (Matt. xviii. 20) even where only two or three gather. Oh, is not that inducement enough to come together every First day? Is it not plain to be seen that he will be promptly on hand wheresoever they assemble who have named his name? And we say here, that after the experience of 35 years the precinct of the Lord's table is still the very gate of heaven to us. The happiest moments of our lives are spent there,—and the most hallowing and uplifting exercises we ever expect to engage in, this side of the coming of the Lord, are enjoyed there. Indeed, we believe that no one has ever come to that table in the proper frame of mind, and gone away without a blessing. And the fond hope has been frequently expressed that he will some day issue the command, "Gather my saints unto me," as we sit around the board.

May the glad day soon roll around when, according to promise, our glorious Lord shall gird himself, and invite the Servants whom he shall find watching for him, to take their seats at his table, and come forth and serve them; (Luke xii. 37) and in that happy company may writer and readers meet, to nevermore part. Amen and Amen.

Report of Labor.

At the invitation of Bro. P. H. Book, of Fonthill, Ontario, I left Plymouth, on the 8th of Sept., for that place. I arrived at Welland, Ont., early the next morning, and found Bro. Book waiting for me. We then drove 5 miles northwest to Fonthill, where we have a small band of believers. Although but few in number they have kept up their meetings, "not neglecting the assembling of themselves together." I began the meeting the evening of the same day and spoke to a small but attentive congregation on the "Inspiration of the Scriptures." I remained from the 8th to the 17th and delivered 10 discourses. During my stay in Canada the Prohibition campaign was in progress, and I had the pleasure not only of listening to able arguments against the continuation of the liquor traffic, but also of speaking a few words against this monster evil. I was pleased to see from the papers since the vote was taken that a majority of the votes cast were against liquor.

Our labors were not in vain in this place. The congregation grew in size as the meeting progressed and the interest increased. On the last night, the hall in which the meetings were held, was crowded, and not a few expressed their regret that the meeting had to be brought to a close. It was my happy privilege on the 16th to baptize four young believers into the Anointed, in Lake Ontario. Our ardent wish and prayer to God is that they may prove faithful and have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom. I always feel concerned for those who begin young, and have many difficulties to contend with. But on the other hand I am glad that the little ecclesia at Fonthill is apparently wide-awake, and will watch over and care for the new-born babes to the extent of their ability. Above all I am rejoiced to think that we have such a faithful High-Priest, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. On the eve of the 17th I had to say "good bye" to some of our dear people at Fonthill, as there was an appointment for me at Niagara Falls, N. Y., for the 18th. "We'll never say good bye in Eden." Thus it goes in this life; we form acquaintances only to say farewell and make new ones. I spoke for our congregation at Niagara Falls, 3 times on Sunday, and on Monday and Wednesday evenings, and very much enjoyed my stay with them. Being so near the great Cataract of the Niagara, I could not leave the place without visiting this great wonder, of seeing the water fall over a precipice 150 feet. The sight of the mighty waterfall every minute rolling its tons of water over the high bank is treble grand; nay, that expresses it too mildly—it is awful. Great and marvelous are God's works. But wonderful are also the works of man. But a short distance below the Falls are at present three steel bridges each over 150 feet above the water, two to carry railroad bridges, and the other for passengers. The Niagara Falls are not only ornamental but also useful. The electric cars of Niagara Falls city, of the city of Buffalo, and for a distance of about 30 miles along the Niagara River, are driven by power supplied by this river. Besides this a number of manufacturing establishments have utilized some of the power thus supplied by nature. Indeed, there seems to be no end to possibilities for turning this mighty power to the service of man. I also improved this trip to pay a visit to the city of Toronto, on the North shore of Lake Ontario. It was a most delightful trip on the Steamers "Chicora" and "Corona" of the Niagara Navigation Co. Toronto is an interesting city. It has a great many churches, as also large numbers of educational institutions. During my stay at this place I met with Bro. T. A. Weldon, local manager for the Eddy Company, a large paper firm in Canada. I secured Bro. Weldon's subscription for THE RESTITUTION. My next stop was at Buffalo, New York where I called on Bro. Oakley, whom I had met at Niagara Falls. I spent a pleasant time in company with him and his excellent family.

From this place I bought passage to Meadville, Pa., where I was met by Bro. Ira R. Hull, with whom I had conducted a correspondence for some time relative to making a trip to Randolph. Bro. Hull and his sister, Mrs. Haight, have been rather alone for some years, and they were pleased to see some one who had obtained the same "precious faith." I spoke 10 times to interested congregations, and regret that my time was so limited that I could not remain longer. I am quite confident that with a little more effort a people might be gathered for the Lord at this place. Bro. Hull, I am pleased to say, will keep up the interest and speak on Bible subjects from time to time. I hope he may do much good in this way. I wish to speak on one feature of the work in which I am intensely interested and that is that there are, apparently at least, so very few workers in the field to push the work energetically, while there seems to be so very much to do on every hand. I learned of a number of places in the State of New York where we even have congregations, which for the want of care or some one to push the work or to lend are losing ground. So also in Pennsylvania there are places in which much good could be done, if there was some one to do it. "The harvest is white, but the laborers are few." Where are the reapers? Where are our young men whom God has blessed with talents with which to do good? Can we afford to allow the work to go down when it is within our power to help it along? We as a people should have two or three live men in the East to devote their entire time to the work of evangelizing. If these lines come under the notice of young men whom God has blessed with the ability to speak, let me appeal to such. As "workers together with God," can we allow the work to go down? Would this be working together with God? Again, there are others who have been blessed with this world's goods; if you can not preach, can you not out of love for your dying fellowmen and love to God, to whom you owe everything, devote of your means to this noble cause? Brethren, let us "think on these things," and let us do it seriously before God!

On the 28th I stopped for a few hours at my old home in Cleveland, Ohio, calling on Bro. and Sister Joslin and Bro. and Sister McLaughlan. Fond recollections came to mind as I approached the "Church of the Blessed Hope," No. 626 Woodland Ave. Here on Dec. 12th, 1898, I forever renounced immortal soul doctrine and all the errors of orthodoxy, which I had preached for six years previously, and confessed faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and here I was inducted into that blessed Name in which alone we have the promise of salvation. My heart rejoiced to see those dear ones again, who had manifested such a deep interest in my behalf and did so much for me. I should like to have remained with them over Sunday, but other engagements made this impossible. On the 29th I arrived safe at home and found my family well, after an absence of just three weeks.

On the 30th I departed for Brady, Mich., where the Michigan Conference met for their quarterly conference. These were pleasant hours spent in company with brethren and sisters of like precious faith. At present I am at home preparatory to my trip to the Southern Kansas and Oklahoma Conference.

Your Brother in the Anointed,

A. H. ZULMER.

Dear Restitution:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to make a short report of the progress of the truth in Southeast Missouri in Madison Co. On Sept. 17, we met Bro. John Foore of Kansas, at the depot at Fredericktown, and Bloch, 6 miles west by team, and in conformity with previous appointment commenced a meeting Saturday night, Sept. 17, and continued until Friday night Sept. 23. On Friday 11 A. M. we met at a nice walnut grove on the banks of the Big St. Francois River, and after hearing a masterly sermon on Baptism, six were buried in baptism in the name of Jesus for remission of sins, of which five were over 50 years old, one man was nearly 83 years. At 5 P. M. we met at the School House where our meetings were held at nights and partook of the emblems of our Lord's broken Body and shed Blood. At 7 P. M. sermon, "Duties to the Church," whereupon Bro. W. T. Waggoner's oldest daughter, Mrs. Laura Vishins, came forward for baptism which was administered Saturday 10 A. M. making seven in all. From there we conveyed Bro. Foore back to Fredericktown, and at 3 P. M. we took the parting hand but we hope not forever as he promised, the Lord willing, he would visit us again Aug., 1899. He then took the train for De Soto, Mo., 90 miles north to hold meetings there with the brethren at that place.

This was a grand and glorious meeting for us and long to be remembered, as it is so seldom we ever hear any preaching. Bro. Foore visited us three years ago last May, and Bro. I. S. Hatch, of Indiana, two years ago. Bro. Foore at his first visit baptized seven, making fourteen in all. Bro. Hatch baptized five, of which two have fallen asleep. We have a membership now of 21 baptized believers. The good Seed has been sown and any preaching Brother who templates going South this winter would be glad to have call on us, we are 75 miles south of St. Louis, on the Iron Mountain branch of the I. M. R. R. I will say in conclusion Bro. Foore is a talented preacher and should be kept constantly in the field of labor.

Yours in hope of eternal life when the Master comes,

P. J. GRAHAM.

Poetry.

The Dawn of Peace.

Put on your strength, O Kings,
And beat your bounds to dust!
Your hands must learn a stiffer grasp,
Your feet a firmer tread.

O Leaders! Hope's young spirit
Is alive in the morning wind.
Do not the poets hear it,

Even in the grassy mountain paths
The glittering dust-fire leaps—
Lo, it comes! They come! How fair their feet!
They come who publish peace!

And O ye, can ye rest,
Dear hearts, one hour,
For all need on Love's gospel to light
And all the earth with flowers,

Ye sad-oppressed and dying with a cry
Of want and little woe,
And with the patient deathless eyes
Of weariness shed smile,

And weary toilers, asking thing
Of all by sweat of brow,
Not hands shall wear the flock be fed,
Nor mouths go to the rest.

Will China be Open to All?

London, Oct. 1.—The palace revolution at Peking is treated here as a minor occurrence in the slow solution of the Chinese question. What the European powers are now striving to decide is whether the decrepit empire will henceforth be a dependency of the Czar's or whether the territory will be made accessible to the rest of the world to increase the world's wealth.

There is no need to dogmatize as to the question under which system the Chinese people would be happiest, but it may be affirmed, from the standpoint of the struggle that statesmen are now waging, that it will not affect the issue whether the Emperor of China is alive or dead. The new man who mounts the throne will, like Alexander I. of Russia, "be preceded by the men who murdered his grandfather, surrounded by men who murdered his father, and followed by the men who may murder himself."

There is the best reason for believing that Lord Salisbury will hold steadily aloof from this turmoil and intrigue. An influential supporter of the government says today: "Our concern is with what the rulers of China will do, not who they are. If we restore the Emperor or any pretender to full authority we must help him govern China. We must protect him from all foreign and domestic foes. We must, in fact, govern China. It would, in the end, require an army, and the job is too big for men of sense to undertake."

On the other hand, the government's supporters are hoping much from an extension of the Anglo-American agreement to joint action for certain purposes in China. Germany's precipitation of China's collapse by the seizure of Kiao Chou was a strongly anti-English action, but events have since taught the wisdom of considering certain joint measures as an alternative, instead of having to face disastrous, accomplished facts. The idea of any kind of co-operation with Germany is still unpopular here. The supporters of the government are arguing for the benefit of their constituents that it is perfectly possible to carry an enterprise through successfully with a man for whom the country has no affection.

The last week has seen several important disclosures as to the extent of the Anglo-German agreement in Africa. They have been received without friendly comment, in marked contrast with the enthusiastic support of every suggestion of Anglo-American co-operation. If this afternoon's grave news from Peking effects the latter consummation it will be by far the most popular achievement of the present government's career. It would be premature to connect the stoning of English and Americans in Pekings with the palace revolution, but people here already see in the choice of British victims the results of a Russian corruption fund acting on ignorant and overzealous converts.

American Interests in China.

The promptness with which the administration has directed Admiral Dewey to send the warships Baltimore and Petrel from Manila to the Chinese waters will not only be universally commended in this country but has evidently produced a favorable impression abroad. In view of the critical condition of affairs at Peking there will be much anxiety for the safety of foreigners of all nationalities in the Chinese capital until the present crisis is past. Scarcely anything will be likely to do so much towards checking the lawless spirit which has been manifesting itself, as well as the revolutionary tendencies of the governing factions, as the evidence that all the great powers are determined to act in concert in preserving order.

It is deeply to be regretted that we have not some light-draft vessels on the Asiatic station capable of reaching Peking itself by the Peiho River, but that lack will no doubt be remedied by the Navy department as soon as practicable. The great battleships Oregon and Iowa will soon be headed for Manila, and, although the voyage will consume some two months' time, the knowledge that they are on their way will inspire confidence in the belief that shall soon be prepared in that quarter for any probable emergencies.

The fact is now widely recognized that we are destined henceforth to take a stronger hand in the affairs of the far East than we have ever done before. This means no invasion of the rights of any foreign power, but simply protection of our growing interests in that quarter of the globe. Already there is abundant evidence that such a step will be hailed with satisfaction by such powers as Great Britain and Japan, while Russia, France, and Germany will have no ground of complaint.

What the present commotion now existing at Peking may portend for the Chinese Empire cannot be accurately predicted, but there is a general disposition to look for some far-reaching results. Russia is already in practical possession of the great northeastern dependency of Manchuria, with eight or ten millions of population, and by its aggressive policy is evidently seeking new advantages. Its attempt to divert trade from the open port of Niu Chang to Port Arthur by getting possession of the Niu Chang railway concession has been a direct blow to American trade as well as that of Great Britain and other foreign countries. Germany is also seeking to strengthen its hold upon Chinese trade by using to the utmost its advantages obtained in the concession of Kiau Chou Bay. In the face of movements such as these the United States cannot afford to omit any steps necessary to protect American interests in China, destined soon to develop in such vast proportions, and the foothold we have already gained in the Philippines places us in a position to do this more promptly and more efficiently than ever before.—Tribune.

The Extinction of Evil.

Far back in the eternal past the origin of evil manifested itself in the universe in contrast to that which is good. The purpose and design of its origin and manifestation it is not my purpose at this time to unfold; but of its annihilation and extermination from the universe of God. That evil exists, needs no argument to prove. The history of the human race from Adam to the end of the present age bears witness to the fact. Evil is the contrast to good. It is the direct cause of all the bloodshed misery and death that has occurred in the past, or ever will occur in the future.

This being true, a revelation of its extinction, together with a redemption from its effects, must be hailed with delight as the most glorious news that ever greeted the ears of Adam's race. That such a revelation has been given to us by the God of heaven through the prophets, in the Scriptures of truth, it is my purpose in this paper to prove.

The first manifestation of evil in our world was sin. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin," or on account of sin as a penalty for sin. What is sin? "All unrighteousness is sin." "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

If this world continued for a billion of years, (without divine intervention), earth's inhabitants would still be a sinful race. Humanity cannot by any means or process extricate itself from a sinful nature. Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots; how then shall they do good who are accustomed to do evil? "There is none that doeth good, no, not one." How then can we prove that evil shall be extinct, if sin, its first manifestation, has got such a grip of humanity, that not all the boasted art or science, evolution or development of 6,000 years has produced one single specimen of sinless humanity. We prove it by faith in the Word and power of him, concerning whom John the Baptist spake, "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world." Hitherto, among all the sons of men none could be found adequate to the accomplishment of a work so mighty and so grand. Thus far the question is settled that the extinction of evil is an assured fact resting upon divine revelation.

Our next inquiry is, how and when will he do it? First, how will he do it? I answer, by the Spirit of the living God. This divine Teacher, called the Lamb of God, communicated to his disciples a message of good news called the "Gospel of the kingdom of God," for to be preached among all nations; accompanied with the declaration "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "For he that believeth in him, as the Script ure hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive." The Spirit then is given to all them that believe. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." This is the first step to the sinless state. But believers are not sinless. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." The possession of the sinless state is reached when this same Spirit shall have quickened our mortal bodies, when this mortal shall put on immortality. When we reach this period in the unfolding plan of redemption, (the resurrection of the body of Christ) the church only will appear pure and spotless, perfect and holy, the first trophy of redemption, the first fruits as it were of the extinction of evil.

We now come to the second question. When will he, the Lamb of God, "take away the sin of the world?" I answer in the world or age to come. Proof, "For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man that thou art mindful of him? Or the Son of Man that thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownest him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him." Heb. ii. 5-8. From this Scripture we learn, that in the world or age to come, all things must be put under the feet of the Lamb of God, or as he will then appear, "The Lion of the tribe of Judah." Having come in great power and glory, fitly represented by the Lion, the most powerful of beasts. He then sets up his kingdom on earth in the Holy Land, with Jerusalem its capital, and begins a conquest in the midst of "his enemies." "The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion, rule thou in the midst of thine enemies." Psa cx. 2. Compare this with 1 Cor. xv. 25. "For he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." When he thus puts down all rule and all authority and power, the world to come shall then be subdued or put in subjection to Christ. Then will occur the resurrection of "the rest of the dead," for then cometh the end or the general resurrection of the dead both small and great; and the judgment of "the great white throne." Then death, the last enemy, shall be destroyed, with the devil and his angels, "and all whose names are not found written in the book of life." Thus we have reached the extinction of evil."

I said sin was the first manifestation of evil in the history of Adam's race; but it did not stop with sin; for it is written, "Cursed be the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee." And so with the extinction of evil, we must expect the removal of the curse and the beautifying of the earth. And the Scriptures fully justify us in looking for and expecting the same in such texts as the following, "And there shall be no more curse." Rev. xxii. 3. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree; and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." Isa. lv. 13. "Thou renewest the face of the earth." Psa. civ. 30. "And the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." Isa. xxxv. "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Hab. ii. 14.

From the above textait will be seen, that every trace and effect of evil will be blotted out from this now sin-cursed and rebellious world. Then will be fulfilled the Apostle's words, "That God may be all in all." A purified, renovated earth, with an Eden-like landscape encircling the globe (for there shall be no more sea) phenomenally fertile as the Paradise of God, and peopled with countless millions of deathless race, the multitudinous seed of Abraham; ruled over by Christ and the Church united, the elect body of the gospel age. Mount Zion towering in majestic splendor in the midst of the eternal city, with its transparent, golden paved street; its "pure river of water of life clear as crystal;" its "tree of life bearing twelve manner of fruits, and yielding its fruit every month, and whose leaves shall be for the healing of the nations;" its gates of pearl through whose portals shall flow the glory and honor of deathless nations; its dazzling light outshining the sevenfold splendor of the sun; its twelve foundations of earth's most precious stones. Such is the revelation of some of the things that shall exist when evil shall be extinct. Concerning this same Jerusalem it is written, "Thou shalt not see evil any more." Zep. iii. 15. "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God." 1 Cor. ii. 9, 10. A glorious conquest, a glorious world, a glorious age, "God all in all."

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

Conference Report.

The first Quarterly Conference convened at Brady, Michigan, as appointed, with our President Lorenzo Decker at his post to call the house to order. A goodly number were in attendance at the beginning of the meeting; among them Sister Nichols, of Minneapolis, Minn., formerly of Grand Rapids. Sister Cooper of Indiana, and Sister Catt of Bangor, Michigan. Conference opened with several songs of praise, prayer by Elder B. W. Woodward followed by a good sermon from A. H. Zilmer of Indiana, speaking from 1 Pet. iii. 15. Saturday morning B. W. Woodward spoke from Rom. xii. 16, after lunch at the house of worship Sister Woodward spoke from Matt. xii. 42. We met early in the evening to enjoy a prayer and social meeting, and had begun to sing the songs of Zion, when Bro. and Sister Thompson and Bro. and Sister Underwood entered. They came by private conveyance, were tired, but not too tired to lend their voices in inspiring song and testimony, how it thrills and electrifies the whole being when we listen to the voices of others, even strangers in the flesh, as we realize they have stopped to quench their thirst at the same fountain, are partakers of the same hope and calling, trusting in the coming of the Christ for the fulfillment of all their hopes of eternal life; some of us had never met Sister Nichols before, but it did not matter, we soon found in her an active worker and helper in the cause. It was a great pleasure for us to meet Sister Catt again after many years of separation. She is the widow of our beloved Bro. Isaac Catt, who fell asleep June 14, strong in the blessed hope. We had wandered somewhat in the long separation from this dear brother and sister what the years had done for them, but as Sister Catt arose to testify there was no uncertain sound or discordant notes, the blessed hope was the comforting thought to her as to others, and this social meeting was an inspiration to Bro Zilmer as he spoke from 1 John iii. 3. Sunday A. M. Bro. Zilmer's subject was "Why do we believe as we do?" followed by an address from Sister Woodward, her subject being "Profit and Loss." Another good social meeting in the evening followed by Bro. Zilmer using that important subject, "What must I do to be Saved?" as his theme. The attendance was good all through and we trust all were benefited by this gathering together.

REPORT OF AID SOCIETY.

The ladies met during lunch hour to transact business. Sister Emily Barnum, President, called the meeting to order. Secretary being absent Sister Woodward acted in her place. Roll call found seven members present, one new name was added. Sister Martha Pike paying in the offerings, resulted as follows: Sisters M. Good, $5.00; A. Miller, $3.00; A. Moon, $2.50; M. Woodward, $1.00; Griggs, $.50; E. Culp, $.50. On motion the name of society was changed to "Ladies' Tithing Society," with directions to Sister Woodward to correspond with each member, sending them a copy of constitution and urging each one to consider their obligation to God's work. And trying to induce each one to consider their back delinquencies as a debt to God which should be paid, also that hereafter our meeting was a part of the Conference and should be called before the general assembly that each member of Conference might understand our mission and work, and be brought to see the necessity of system in the Lord's work.

Evangelist Labors in Indiana.

At our recent Conference at Rensselaer, Ind., an evangelism Committee was appointed "to look to the furtherance of evangelical work." The following are members of this committee: J. F. Wagoner, J. L. Wince, Abel Grant, Harry Evans, and the undersigned. Now, I wish to say to these brethren, and to all concerned, that I am going to the Southern Kansas Conference on the 12th of this month (Oct.), and expect to be gone about one month. I wish that during this time each one would put forth every effort to ascertain suitable places in Indiana for evangelistic work, and communicate the same to me. And should there be any isolated members knowing of favorable openings for work please let me know. As "workers together with God," let us be wide awake, and improve every opportunity for pushing the Master's cause. Please do not neglect this matter, but act at once.

Yours for work.

A. H. ZILMER.

Conference Notice.

The Eleventh Annual Northwest Conference of the Church of God will convene on Friday Oct. 21, at Scholls, Oregon, and continue over the following Sunday. Now brethren, let me admonish you in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, come to this meeting, come with smiling faces and your hearts full of love and self-sacrifice. We would like to have all the Churches in Oregon and Washington represented at this Conference, and especially we would ask the isolated ones to come. Brothers and sisters, it will pay you to come even at a personal sacrifice. Those wishing conveyance from Portland to Scholls will please correspond with Bro. W. W. Jaquith, Scholls, Ore. Will say in conclusion that the brethren at Scholls are a generous people and will be pleased to meet you.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

JOHN E. MCELVAIN, Sec.

Our Annual Conference will be held at Scholls, Ore., beginning on the evening of Oct. 21, and continuing over the Sunday following. Any wishing to attend will be met by conveyance at the National hotel, Portland, between the hours of ten and three on the 21st. Besure to notify us in ample time if you wish for conveyance. Try by all means to come and you will be provided for while in attendance. The following are the committee of arrangement.

WM. TRUESDELL,
ALMIRA BROOKS,
W. L. SKEELS.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening November 17, 1898, and continue over the Sunday following.

The Church at Plymouth is desirous of having a good meeting and we hope all who can will come and help to make it one of interest and profit to all concerned. We are all responsible for the result of the effort, and whether it is a success or not depends upon the effort of each individual. Let us come with the true spirit of worship and work together in harmony of purpose and we will surely be blessed with that spiritual strength which will enable us to come off conquerors in the end. Let all the churches be represented by duly appointed delegates. All will be welcomed who desire to attend.

Poetry.

The Master's Touch.

In the still air the music lies unheard;
In the rough marble beauty hides unseen;
To make the music and the beauty, needs
The master's touch, the sculptor's chisel keen.

Great Master, touch us with Thy skilful hand;
Let not the music that is in us die;
Great Sculptor, hew and polish us; nor let
Hidden and lost the form within us lie.

Spare not the stroke; do with us as Thou will;
Let there be naught unfinished, broken, marred;
Complete in us the purpose that we may become Thy perfect image, Thou our God and Lord.

HIGHER CRITICISM—ITS EFFECT ON CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

The recent examination of two young men for license to preach,—the one, Wm. J. Long, called by the North Avenue Congregational Church, Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the other, William B. Robb, who appeared before the New York Presbytery,—reveals a state of things, that is intensely alarming, not only because these young men confessed that "they did not believe all parts of the Bible to be wholly inspired and inerrant" but because of the great number who voted to give them license, the negative, triumphing in one case by only 12 votes and in the other by 4! What does it mean, but that true and living faith is vanishing from the earth, [illegible] the time has come of which the [illegible] prophesied, when there would [illegible] earnest and importunate cries [illegible] to God for deliverance, like that made by the widow to the unjust judge?

What is this "Higher Criticism" but covert infidelity? It sets itself above God; it dares to pass judgment on his Word; to question his authority. And the awfulness of this blasphemous daring is intensified, because these critics claim to be ministers of Christ and of his religion: to be the sworn servants of that God, whose law they are undermining and overthrowing. They stand up in the pulpit before assembled thousands, and beginning with the story of creation and of the fall of man, go on through the Bible, denying the inspiration of this part, and of that until there is little left for perishing men to cling to. Reason must be the arbiter of what is to be accepted or rejected. Historical statements that cannot be explained; miracles that are beyond understanding; doctrines that conflict with the fleshly lusts of the natural man, are flatly denied, or treated as myths or stories of the early ages. It is true, that the "Higher Critics," are not all ministers, that some of them are men of science, teachers of the young in the colleges of our land, that others are the heads of philosophic systems, which reject the belief in a personal God and a divinely revealed religion, such as Atomism, Positivism, Pantheism, Spiritism, Theosophy, Christian Science, etc., and that it is from these that our pulpit orators get their seditious doctrines, but so far as the influence over society and the nation is concerned, that of the first named, is by far the most pernicious.

The Church is intended to be "the pillar and ground of the truth," she is set in the world for a light; she is to reflect the glory and the character of the Being who has called her. But if at her head she places a man, who deliberately plans to undermine the foundations upon which she has been built, what then?

"All the Scriptures, without distinction, are called the Word of God." The Lord hath spoken in Isaiah, and he hath spoken in Genesis. It is he who has given us the story of Israel, who has sung for us in the Psalms of David, who has looked forward through thousands of years in the prophets. It was he who told the story of Jonah and the great fish, from his lips came the account of Satan and the fall of man; he put in force laws that are beyond our comprehension, to perform miraculous things. Every word, every phrase, every sentence, every chapter, every book, is the work of his hands; it is all inspired. We can take no part away, can question no historical statement, to do so, would be to invalidate the whole. Stephen filled with the Holy Spirit calls the books of the Old Testament the Living Oracles. Jesus said that "All things must be fulfilled which were written in Moses and in the Psalms and in the Prophets concerning him."

God went with the mouth of Moses and taught him what to say. Ex. iv. 11. There has been no greater prophet in Israel, save Jesus, Deut. xxxiv. 10; Acts vii. 37. "Jesus and the Apostles and the whole people call by the name of Prophets, all the authors of the Old Testament. "And prophecy," says Peter, "came not by the will of man, but holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." There is prophecy in Bible history. The actors, the scenes, the lands, the offerings, prophecy of other times,

"When from grass-grown graveyards old,
Coral caves and mountains bold,
Desert sands and flowery plain,
Dust shall leap and live again."

We have now the Old Testament all called Prophecy, and all Prophecy given by inspiration, or the literal king of God. What then of the New Testament? How did it come? Is it of equal authority? Can the story of the birth of Jesus be questioned? Did such a being as Satan, fallen from his estate, meet and tempt the Lamb of God in the wilderness of Judea? Was the sacrifice made on the cross? Is there efficacy in the blood of the Saviour? Jesus said to the Apostles, "It is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you." At Pentecost they spake in fifteen different languages as the Spirit gave them utterance." Acts ii. 4-12, 17, 18—they "declared the whole counsel of God,"—they "had the mind of Christ;" it was the Word of God that they preached; all the authors of the New Testament wrote as prophets. Then all that they have written is inspired, and we feel as the Israelites felt at Mount Sinai when there were "thunders and lightnings and a thick cloud upon the Mount, and the voice of a trumpet exceeding loud." We tremble: we seem to see "the fire," "the smoke as the smoke of a furnace," and to hear "the voice." But bounds are set that we may not pass, "lest we die." God has "talked with us from heaven" and it is enough. We can come near to him but with reverent feet.

We must now go back to our question, "If the Church—intended to be 'the pillar and ground of the truth'—sets at her head a leader, who goes to work to overthrow the truth, what then? What influence will he have upon them, and they upon the world? Will not the result be an overflowing flood of evil? That time is not coming—it has already come. "Evil men and seducers have waxed worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." They have seduced men from the faith,—they have "loosed the faith."

To doubt God's Word is to doubt God,—to say that the Old Testament is all fulfilled, and is no longer of much use; that prophecy is to be valued only for its moral influence, that it is not "a light set in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise;" that Christ's death was useless, that Christ was only a man: is to loosen faith in God, and when faith is loosened in God, what follows? What is the effect upon Christian character? Is it not destroyed? And if Reason is made the criterion as to what in the Bible is important and what is not, of what is essential to salvation and what is not, then Reason becomes a sort of goddess, as it once did in France, and if this wicked unbelief continues to spread, the world will become a sea of crime and bloodshed, such as has never been known.

The Bible cannot be thought human and infallible and have any power over men. To weaken faith in any of its parts or statements, is to break the force of its moral code, and to increase sin. We have the proof of this statement before our very eyes. We have only to roll up a time, not so far back in our lives as to be forgotten, when there was a solemn and almost universal reverence for every word of the Bible, and a corresponding rectitude of conduct on the part of those who bore the name of Christ. It is not so now. Dishonesty in Government is no longer a crime: the edges of the precipice of profanity can be laughingly trodden upon: to oppress the fatherless and the stranger by laying the weight of a banker's hand upon them, is a light thing. Lack of reverence for the Word of the Lord has the same effect upon Christian character, that lack of reverence for the word of the parent has upon the child. The little one may have been carefully trained, its heart may be full of love and trust for the dear beings who gave it life, but let it fall in with bad companions, or come under the control of a nurse or teacher who has no scruples for questioning the truth of what those beings say, and slowly and unconsciously unbelief will creep in, and disobedience will follow. No child whose faith has been shaken in its father's and mother's word will yield loving obedience: it will break away from restraint, it will become reckless, its character will be ruined. And just so it is with the child of God, if he listens to these Higher Critics. The Bible will become changed to him and he to it. It will no longer be to him an infallible law that he must obey. It will have no weight nor authority over him, and he will become indifferent and will cease attending church, and will bring up his children without faith in, or reverence for, holy things. If we allow ourselves to take the role of the "Higher Critic," this must be the effect.

There is a word in 2 Tim. iii 16, that means God-breathed. It is the word "inspiration." The passage says that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

In the Syriac it reads, "All Scripture written by the Spirit is profitable," etc., and in the Diaglott, "All Scripture divinely inspired is profitable." The word Scripture means something written with a pen, or stylus. All that is thus written, is not God-breathed, though all books are Scriptures. The not understanding this, is what makes the difficulty with the text, for many think the word only applies to the Bible. It does apply, but usually with the presence holy or sacred, or with the edit truth.

But there are other Scriptures beside the Bible, that are held sacred among men. The Koran, or Mohammedan Bible, Vedas of the Hindoos, and the Book of Mormon, are such Scriptures. But these Books are not inspired. God had nothing to do with them, neither directly, nor by his envoy extraordinary—the Holy Spirit. He sent no great angel to Mohammed nor to John Smith as he did to Daniel and to John the Revelator.

God has a right to govern us, to teach us, for he made us, and gave us the earth. His book ought to be and soon will be the law of the world. Satan sees that that time is drawing near, and would, "if possible, deceive the very elect"—the elect nation—and the elect rulers. He wants to hold the dominion of earth, by keeping his minions on the throne. Higher Criticism is his effort to overthrow God's authority in the Church, for if he gets the Church he has the whole. Be careful then, O my brethren and sisters, that it affect not you. Hold fast to the Book, for it is all, all from God. Take it as it reads, that Satan is Satan, as described, that the sun and moon did stand still at the battle of Bethheron, that Jesus was the Son of Mary as recorded in Matthew, that he arose bodily from the dead, and that he is so coming again. Eliminate no passage, no chapter, doubt no statement. It is the last days, and "false teachers are privily bringing in their damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, bringing upon themselves swift destruction."

"Give up the direct inspiration of the Bible," in all its parts, and the child of God is left in dark uncertainty not knowing on what to depend or whether to flee. If part of the Book is not true, none of it may be true, and who is to tell? But it is true—all of it is true. God has proved himself a God of truth by fulfilling to the letter his Prophetic Word. The very fact that there are Higher Critics and such a thing as Higher Criticism, with the wide spread unbelief that it has fostered, and the licentiousness, the dishonesty and the murderous spirit that has followed, proves that his Word is inspired, for it foretold that such a class of men would come, and what the result of their teachings would be.

But in more ways than this he God proved himself to be a God of truth; keeping truth with his servants forever. He has proved it by his care for his children and for his chosen people Israel, by his work among the nations in breaking the yokes and letting the oppressed go free, as in the case of Cuba, and the still grander steps that he is taking in Africa, in Hawaiian matters, and in the far East, toward the establishment of a kingdom upon earth, wherein true liberty and light and holiness shall abound.

He has proved himself a God of truth in that the Turkish abomination rests upon the Holy Land: he is proving it in that the Jews are being driven back to the covenanted home of their fathers, and he will soon still farther vindicate himself by taking the Turkish curse from off that suffering land, breaking the power of Russia, and making Jerusalem the joy and the praise of the whole earth, the capitality of united Israel and Judah. We rejoice in him; our pole-star of faith has not gone down; our chart is not a fiction, our sun still shines, our shield still protects and will protect forever; the Bible can never be overthrown.

Baleful as is the effect of Higher Criticism upon the Christian character of our nation and of other nations of the world, the Pyramid will have the cap-stone,—carried by Israel in all her wanderings—put on by and by—the mountain-kingdom will have Christ, and God's will will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Fear not; "the Old Book is going to stand," a perfect Gibralter against all the assaults of unbelief, it cannot fall, for God ever keeps in the world a select band of men and women whom the seditious doctrines of the Higher Critics cannot defile. They have not bowed the knee to Baal; they never will. They are the servants of Christ, they are virgins, and sometime in the near future, they will "walk with Christ in white, for they are worthy." Sing the doxology, dear ones. Praise God that the Bible is inspired, lift up your heads for the things you are coming to pass, for behold your redemption draweth nigh.

Important Problem for the United States.

We have already annexed Hawaii, and it now seems certain that the ultimate outcome of the war with Spain will be to leave us possessed not only of Porto Rico and one of the Ladrone Islands, but also of considerable territory of the Philippines. All of these newly acquired domains lie within the tropics, and we are thus confronted for the first time with the question, How can we best turn to account the natural resources of regions the climatological conditions of which are unfavorable to prolonged residence and intense physical activity on the part of men born and reared in the temperate zones? By a curious coincidence this question has been lately made the subject of study by Mr. Benjamin Kidd in a series of essays originally contributed to a newspaper and since reprinted in book form.

The economical importance of the tropics to mankind is recognized by Mr. Kidd as naturally vast and prospectively incalculable. The statistics of British and American trade bear impressive witness to the extent of our dependence upon tropical and sub-tropical products. Before reproducing the striking data, we should mention that the section of the earth's surface which Mr. Kidd has in mind, when he speaks roughly of "the tropics," is the belt of territory on both sides of the equator within the parallels of 30 degrees north and 30 degrees south. Outside of this zone lies in the northern hemisphere nearly the whole of the territory of the United States and of Europe, besides the greater part of Asia, including Japan and two-thirds of China. In the southern hemisphere there would be excluded from the belt Cape Colony and Natal, the Argentine Republic, and Chile, and the whole of Great Britain's Australian colonies, except Queensland. With the tropics thus defined, the trade of the United Kingdom in 1896 amounted to $6,000,000,000, while its trade with the English-speaking world, not including the British tropics, was valued at $1,465,000,000. The trade of the United States in 1895 with the same tropical belt amounted to $346,000,000, while their commerce with the English-speaking world, not including the British tropics, was valued in the same year at $657,000,000.

The combined trade, then, of Great Britain and the United States with the tropics was $1,036,000,000. On the other hand, the combined trade of these two countries with the remainder of the world, outside of English-speaking islands, was but $2,365,000,000. That is to say, their united trade with the tropics represents about 44 per cent of their total trade with all the rest of the globe. Impressing as these figures are, they are insignificant compared with those which the twentieth century is destined to exhibit. In the immense regions comprised within the tropical belt are embraced some of the richest territories on the earth's surface. But, as yet, they are territories for the greater part undeveloped. Throughout a considerable proportion of these regions exists a state either of anarchy or of primitive savagery, in which no attempt is made or can be made to turn to account the natural resources lying ready to hand. Over a part of the remainder of the tropical lands European powers hold control, but in some cases this control is maintained on principles beyond the exercise of which the advanced peoples have certainly moved, and for which a substitute will have to be found, if the natural resources of the tropics are to be successfully exploited.

It is Mr. Kidd's belief that the event which is to play a great part in the twentieth century will be the final filling up by Western peoples of all those tracts in the temperate regions of the earth which are suitable for permanent occupation by them. As this process tends toward completion, it may be expected that the inexpediency of allowing a great expanse of territory in the richest section of the globe, that, namely, comprised within the tropics, to remain undeveloped, with its resources running largely to waste under the management of races of low social efficiency, will be brought home with ever-growing force to the minds of the Western peoples. The day is probably not far distant when, with the advance science is making, we shall recognize that it is in the tropics, and not in the temperate zones, that we have the greatest food-producing and raw-material-producing regions of the earth; that the natural highways of the world's commerce are those that run north and south, and that the inhabitants of the temperate zones have the highest possible interest in the proper development and efficient administration of the tropical regions, and in an exchange of products [illegible] with on a far larger scale than has been yet attempted or imagined. In this interdependence of the [illegible] and the tropical zones, the [illegible] import of which will soon be [illegible] ssed home to Europe, the United States is so deeply concerned, for we already possess the beginnings of a tropical empire.

The question, then, that at an early day will present itself for solution will be, How is the development and efficient administration of the tropical regions to be secured? Endeavoring to answer the inquiry, Mr. Kidd points out that the ethical improvement that has taken place in our civilization, has rendered the experiment once made to develop their resources by forced native labor no longer possible, or permissible, even if possible. Never again will a social structure, of which the corner stone is human slavery, be tolerated by an enlightened people. Abandoned, also, under the pressure of experience, has been the idea, which at one time prevailed, that tropical lands might be occupied and permanently colonized by Europeans, as have been vast tracts in the temperate climes. Within a reasonable period, and under the like pressure of experience, we shall probably have to discard the idea which in its turn has temporarily found many advocates, the idea, namely, that the colored races, left to themselves, possess the qualities requisite for the exploitation of the rich lands they have inherited. This optimistic assumption has been refuted in practice by Hayti, San Domingo, Liberia, the British West Indies, and the Central American commonwealths. A clearer insight into the laws that have shaped the course of human evolution must bring us to see that the process which has gradually developed the energy, enterprise, and social efficiency of mankind northwards, and which has left less richly endowed in this respect the peoples inhabiting the regions where the conditions of life are easiest, is no passing accident or the result of circumstances changeable at will, but part of the cosmic order of things which we have no power to order or to alter.

It is Mr. Kidd's opinion, and we may do well to consider it in framing forms of government for our new tropical possessions, that the European races will gradually come to realize that the tropics, which modern ethics will not permit us to enslave, and which, as experience has shown, cannot be colonized, must be simply administered from the temperate regions. There is no insurmountable difficulty in the task. It is being performed under our eyes by England in India, in the Straits Settlements, and in Egypt. What England has done, the United States can do. All that is needed to assure the successful performance of the administrative function in the tropics is a clearly defined conception of the moral necessity and the economical advantage. Such a conception is sure to come when the energetic races of the world, having completed the colonization of the temperate zones, are met with the spectacle of the resources of the richest regions upon earth still running largely to waste under inefficient management.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

Notice is here given that the regular Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held in Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 19, 1898 for the purpose of chosing a Board of Directors, and the transaction of such business as may come before the meeting.

We desire to increase our list. There are numbers of our Church who do not take the paper, and we would urge each one who does take it, to present the matter to your neighbor, and see if he will not let you send in his name with yours, when you renew. As an inducement to new subscribers we will begin now and all who send for a year, and pay $1.50 in advance for it, will be given the remaining numbers for 1898, that is they will be credited to the end of 1899, for the price of one year's subscription.

From the diary of Rev. William Emerson, pastor of the church at Conway, Mass., we quote from a contemporary magazine, as follows:—Jan. 1, attended to study. Bottle rum, fifty cents. Jan. 23, married three couples; fee $6.25. Feb. 4, paid a woman tailor for one day, twenty-five cents. Aug. 12, Two quarts of rum at William's store, $1.50. Paid for killing hog, seventeen cents. Oct. 10. Put in cellar for winter use thirty-eight barrels of cider; value, $32. Dec. 29. Lord's Day. Preached from 2 Sam. i. 27, "How are the mighty fallen?" The Editor's remarks on the above say he is amazed at the revolution of a century, and is sure the world does move, and concludes the reign of righteousness must be drawing near. We are wondering if this will cause Talmage to change his mind again.

TACT is one of the first of mental virtues, the absence of which is frequently fatal to the best of talents. This idea well digested would explain the cause of many failures. Is not this the lesson taught by Jesus to his Evangelists in Matt. x. 16, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore, [in view of this condition of things] wise as serpents and harmless as doves?" The necessity of wisdom and harmlessness under the circumstances will be obvious to all who consider that these gospel messengers were expected to encounter persecution without compromising their principles, and where possible, avoid persecution without incurring guilt. They would have, not only to stand before the Ecclesiastical authorities, but also governors and kings as well, and this implies that they would be treated as common criminals. But all was wisely pre-arranged as a testimony against those authorities and the Gentiles, proving conclusively that responsibility is the basis of Judgment with God.

The New Covenant—What is It?

M. Joblin, My Dear Brother:

In RESTITUTION on Sep 28, in your 23rd and last article on "Law or Gospel," if I read aright, you take the position that the Jer. xxxi. 31. covenant has not yet been made and ratified. I honestly differ with you here. The rest of your article I like. I always thought Paul in Heb. 8th and 9th chapters was speaking of the Jeremiah covenant, read both chapters, also x. 9, 10; now read Heb. xii. 24; xiii. 20, through the blood of the everlasting covenant. Now go with me to 2 Cor. iii. 3-6 "Who hath made us able ministers of the New Testament" (Covenant.) Then if the teachings of Christ, and confirmed by the apostles was not the New Covenant, what is it? By reading Matt. x. 5-7; xv. 22-27, we find the Covenant made to or with the House of Israel, in harmony with Jer. xxxi. 31; Heb. viii. 6-13. If the New has not been made the Old must yet be in force, then that must be out of joint with your arguments against seventh day folks. I believe the New Covenant to be in force now, and we show that we do believe it when we commemorate the Lord's death. See Matt. xxvi. 28, "For this is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins," which points back to the Jeremiah Covenant. Now please read Heb. ix. 15-20, showing the Christ Covenant, taking the place of the Old, or First Covenant, both dedicated with blood,—the New when he was crucified. See Luke xxii. 20, with Heb. x. 29. If we are not now under the New Covenant, you will do us a favor by telling us why we are not. Yours in hope.

M. L. ADAMS.

In addition to the above, in a personal note the writer says, in a very commendable spirit, "If I am wrong I want to be set right, and I am satisfied there are others in the same boat with me." This is very encouraging indeed, and we take pen in hand earnestly praying to be so illumined by the Spirit, that we may present the truth as it is in Jesus, so that we may ere long rejoice together in the bonds of the same Covenant.

We will first show wherein we agree already, and thus clear away the underbrush, and find out exactly what we have to do.

1. We believe with the writer of the article that the New Covenant is now in force.

2. Like him we show that we believe it to be in force when we commemorate the Lord's death.

3. We believe the Old Covenant is not in force.

4. Like him we understand, and believe, and teach, that Heb. ix. 15-20 refers to the New Covenant in contrast with the Old, and as having superseded the Old.

5. We are also in harmony with him when he refers to Heb. x. 28, and Matt. xxvi. 28, and Luke xxii. 20, to prove that the blood of Christ was the blood of the New Covenant.

6. We also agree with him that we are now under the New Covenant. But when we say WE are under the New Covenant, we mean those who have believed the Covenants of Promise, turned from sin and put on the Anointed One by baptism and are living Godly in Christ, and waiting for him.

The difference is now reduced to this:—

"If the teachings of Christ confirmed by the apostles was not the New Covenant, what is?

We think that by showing first, What the New Covenant is, little will be required to show the relation of the teachings of Christ to that Covenant.

First then, we have a series of Covenants to deal with. That is, a first and a second, an Old and a New Covenant or Testament.

2. That ONE of these two Covenants, was that one made at Sinai, and is distinctly taught, Gal. iii. 22-24 as follows:

"For it is written that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a free-woman. But he of the bond-woman was born after the flesh, but he of the free-woman by promise,—which things are an allegory, for these are [represents] the two Covenants; the one from the Mount Sinai which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar." Here one of the two Covenants is plainly indicated,—and just as plainly is it taught in verse 30 that the Sinai Covenant was to be abolished. The bond-woman and her son was to be cast out, and the "son of the bond-woman shall not be heir with the son of the free-woman."

3. The son of the free-woman was born by promise (v. 23,) of the Spirit (v. 29,) and thus is infallible testimony that the promise by which Isaac was born was part and parcel of the OTHER ONE of the TWO represented by allegory in v. 24.

4. Verses 28 and 31 prove that Paul and the church at Galatia were, as Isaac was, the children of the promise,—children NOT of the bond-woman, the Sinai Covenant, which gendered to bondage, v. 24 but of the free, v. 31.

5. Verse 1 of Gal. v. furnishes infallible evidence that Christ had cast out the bond-woman and her son, and had given Paul and his brethren liberty by becoming "children of promise" by believing and obeying it.

6. Eph. ii. 12 proves even more emphatically than Gal. iv. 22-24 that the bundle of promises made to Abraham, and which included the birth of Isaac, is called the Covenants of promise.

7. Romans ix. 8, 9, 10 proves (a) that the children of the promise are counted for the seed, and (b) that the Father-promise, that is one of the promises by which the children BECOME children, was that made to Abraham concerning the birth of Isaac, through whom the seed of Abraham [Christ—Gal. iii. 16] should come. It says, "For this is the Word of promise, at this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son; (Isaac) in whom thy seed shall be called," vs. 7, 8, 9, 10. The awful importance of this one promise concerning Isaac is seen by this last Scripture. "For this is the word of promise," shows it contained the germ of all the rest, so to speak,—without Isaac there will be no Christ,—no Christ, no king Jew, no life, no glory or honor,—no restitution.

8. Zacharias filled with Holy Spirit, in expounding this matter to us in Luke i. 67, says the Lord God of Israel has raised up a horn of salvation .....To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy Covenant." What Holy Covenant? Was it the Covenant he promised to make with the house of Israel and the house of Judah through Jeremiah (xxxi. 31-34)? Our correspondent wants the truth, and we are glad. the Spirit's Answer to the question What holy Covenant Zacharias spoke of, is found in the next verse, viz.:—"The oath which he sware to our father Abraham." The Spirit's Word for it that is the mercy promised,—(v. 72); that is the holy Covenant he is to remember, and does remember.

9. That being settled beyond doubt, verse 74 happily shows the glorious final result of remembering his holy Covenant to Abraham: viz., Israel is to be delivered out of the hand of their enemies, and they will serve God without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of their life.

Reader, do not forget that all this is to attain under the holy covenant to Abraham, and sworn to by God: and then consider that no such results have been achieved by Christ's teachings. (a) They have not been delivered out of the hands of their enemies by Christ's teachings. (b) They do not serve him in holiness and righteousness all the days of their life. (c) They were delivered unto the hands of their enemies. (d) They do wickedly all the days of their life; showing conclusively, that the New Covenant TO BE made with the house of Judah and Israel as promised in Jeremiah xxxi. 31 is the one under which they shall all know the Lord as there described.

10 The New Covenant of Jer. xxxi. 31, is a NATIONAL INSTRUMENT, and takes the place of, and is contrasted with the NATIONAL COVENANT made with them when they were brought out of Egypt. See Jer. xxxi. 32.

11. Jesus was born to be King of the Jews, Matt. ii. 2, and Gabriel promised his mother that the Lord God would give unto him the throne of his father David, and that he should reign over the house of Jacob [the 12 tribes of Israel] to the ages, Dinglott, of his kingdom there shall be no end. And Jesus in Matt. xix., promised the twelve that each should have a throne, and rule a tribe under him; and they show by what they said to him on the eve of his departure that they expected him to do as he promised. See Acts i. 6.

12. In Jeremiah xxiii 5-8 we learn that it is when the Branch of David [Jesus] reigns and prospers and executes judgment and justice in the earth that Judah and Israel are to be saved, and dwell safely; and having been gathered out of all countries whither God drove them, they dwell in their own land. See abundant testimony to this effect in Ezek. xxxvii., and scores of other passages.

13. Jesus while on earth visited his people with an invitation to be kings and priests in his kingdom which is to be established under the Covenant made to Abraham and Christ (Gal. iii. 16) and which is to cause God's will to be done in earth as it is in heaven, but, being then a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and no place to lay his head, he did not meet their expectations respecting David's heir, and so rejected him, and slew him,—with the result that as a nation the invitation was withdrawn from them,—and a world-wide commission given, in order to take out a people for God's name; and Acts xv. 16, 17 shows that when this mission is fulfilled, Jesus then returns and re-erects David's tabernacle according to the predictions referred to above.

14. Jeremiah xxxi. 31 shows that instead of an arbitrary law like unto that of SINAI, the twelve tribes of Israel as the subjects proper of the kingdom of God to come, will be governed on principles similar to those governing the household of faith in this age. Israel as a people, rejected the opportunity to reign, and yet, being loved for the Fathers' sake, they, when they see him whom they pierced, (Zech. xii. 10, and xiii. 6) and repent, are permitted to live in that kingdom and be reigned over as previously seen.

15. Rom. xi. 8-26 teaches in unequivocal terms, (a) That God has blinded Israel as a recompence, (b) That through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles. (c) That as their fall was the riches of the Gentiles, and their diminishing the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness. (d) And that if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, the receiving of them will be life from the dead. (e) That they were broken off because of unbelief. (f) That God was severe toward them that fell, but good toward us, if we continue in his goodness: otherwise we also shall be cut off. (g) And that if they abide not in unbelief they shall be grafted in again. (h) That blindness in part is happened to Israel, UNTIL the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. (i) And then all Israel shall be saved, as it written, there shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob.

16. Isaiah lix. 19-21, and Jeremiah xxxi. 31 show HOW he will turn ungodliness from Jacob.

17. Romans xi. 27 shows also that God covenants to thus take away their sins when the Deliverer comes, not before, so that the door of admittance as kings and priests will then have been closed.

18. Romans xi. 28 says, in view of the above: "As concerning the gospel [of the kingdom, which offers the kingdom and crowns, to reign with Christ,] they [Israel] are enemies for your sakes; but are elected [as subjects] for the love borne them for the Fathers' sakes."

19. Gal. iii. 29 says "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's Seed and heirs according to the promise." If the promise which bestows the inheritance had not been made to Abraham and believed by him, how could we become his Seed, by believing it?

20. As Abraham became heir of the world by believing the promise of it, [Rom. iv. 13] it WAS made to him. "God gave it to him by Promise," is the Spirit's Word in Gal. iii. 18.

21. Rom. iv. 16 says the heirship of the world is made sure to all who have the same faith as Abraham did.

21. Rom. iv. 16, 17 calls the promises referred to in Romans 4 "the Covenant," and it was not made, nor promised to be made through Jeremiah, but 430. years before the law from Sinai was given even.

23. Gal. iii. 14 says that Christ was made a curse for us that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles.

24. Gal. iii. 8 proves that the promises to Abraham were gospel to him.

25. Acts xxvi. shows that these Covenants of promise made to the fathers was what Paul hoped for,—and hence there is no other gospel hope. See Eph. iv. 4.

26. This Covenant to Abraham is the Everlasting Covenant, because it bestows an everlasting inheritance, which involves everlasting Covenant, because it bestows an everlasting inheritance, which involves Everlasting life.

27. This Covenant was confirmed to Abraham typically with the blood of beasts, which pointed to the blood of the Lamb of God; but it did not bring the Covenant into force. It required a better sacrifice,—the spotless blood of one of our own race.

28. His blood being accepted as the ratification of that instrument, it was brought into full force—power was imparted to it to give, not only life after death, but everlasting life. And the precious passage in Heb. xiii. 20 shows the Christ of God to be the first raised through his blood of the New Covenant. New in contrast to the Old one then ready to vanish away. New, because it only existed as a matter of promise till Christ came to confirm the promises composing it, not to make a New Covenant. See Rom. xv. 8, 9.

29. If the New Covenant was not made till the time of Jeremiah, then no means of attaining to future life was offered to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob or any of the ancient worthies.

30. Positively no Covenant was made by Jeremiah xxxi. 31. A promise was made that a New Covenant should be made with the same people that God made a Covenant with when he brought them out of Egypt, and he will do it, when the Deliverer comes.

Finally, all the offices of Christ—his life and death of suffering and his matchless teachings constitute the new and living Way, whereby the exceeding great and precious promises made to the fathers may be possessed. We believe this to be an epitome of God's eternal truth in the premises and we thank Him for the occasion to present it, and pray it may be blessed to all who read it.

Passing Events.

The evacuation of Porto Rico by the Spanish forces is practically accomplished as General Macias, the Spanish governor has sailed for Spain with his entire staff. The demand is made for Cuba to be cleared of Spanish rule by Dec. 1, whether the peace commissioners arrive at a conclusion of their work or not. This may not suit Spain, and he will likely try to delay matters, and endeavor to gain by keeping the world uneasy until the nations try to interfere and settle between the two countries. The United States is in no humor to allow such a result to be reached, and may be firm enough to even resort again to arms if this is the policy of Spain.

The Isthmus canals are being considered by the engineers in charge, and great activity is apparent in these enterprises. One or the other of them—perhaps both—will be necessary for the full development of the growing trade in the Pacific. The idea is advancing rapidly that the United States must see that this work is accomplished, and that it be done by American capital.

France is fast working herself into as bad a plight as is Spain. Strikes of workmen have caused the paralysis of every branch of industry, railroads are affected and it may be spread to the docks of Havre. Large numbers of troops have been called into Paris, and it is possible that soon the city may be under martial rule. The first steps looking to a revision of the Dreyfus trial are taken, but it is likely to be secret as before. Whether this will satisfy the people is an open question as they demanded to know all about it. The Fashoda case may be taken as a measure to divert public attention, and there may be some who will rather risk a war with England than submit to the people's demand to know the inside workings of governmental affairs. Should such a course be taken France would quickly be found in the condition her sister Spain is in, unless perchance Russia should take up her cause.

The Sultan has consented to withdraw his troops from Crete. The Sick Man was made to realize that the four powers were in earnest, and would brook no delay, hence he submits to the inevitable. He hoped for aid from Germany, and counted on the inactivity of Russia, as she had said she would not favor any "violent measures," but the firm stand of England finally made itself felt in this case.

The impression abroad last week that the Chinese Emperor was dead seems now to be false, as it is claimed that he has by a friend given assurance to the British Consul that he is alive and in good health. The Empress Dowager also gives out that in a partial degree the reforms inaugurated will be carried out. She has not restored Li Hung Chang to power, but is evidently endeavoring to conciliate all sides, and so keep friends if possible with the world. An arrangement has been made with certain capitalists of the United States to build a railroad in China. It may be possible that Russia will not antagonize such an enterprise undertaken by Americans as she would were the same an English measure, but the chances are that what is built by America will be of benefit to Britain, and that may cause Russia to oppose the scheme, or at least to ask a similar concession.

Leslie J. Perry, of the War Records office at Washington, writing in the New York Independent under the Caption "An Alliance with England," says "In the commercial partition of the world now going on, we shall, perhaps, get left unless we fight for our share." Further on in discussing the probabilities in China he says, "China's 400,000,000 of people are now the commercial world's bone of contention. Russian, German, or French supremacy there means the exclusion of all others. An Anglo-American Alliance would control the whole. It is a commercial booty worth fighting for, and we may have to fight for our share of it anyhow, alliance or no alliance." Again "Our only chance to maintain the 'open door' is to support the English policy. Weighing all the chances, it appears to me that the United States can well afford to enter upon this new 'imperial' policy of commercial aggression hand in hand with Great Britain.

Gradually we see that the Guiding Hand of the God of the Universe is forcing the nations into the channels that will finally gather them under the banners of the two dominant powers, and yet this is being brought about by perfectly natural and regular means. No miracle is being wrought, no command is given for them to assemble, but the inate selfishness and desire for self-aggrandizement is governing each, and where self-interest is you will surely find them. Watch, brethren. The end is not far off now, and events come rapidly. Be on guard, ever ready.

Conference Report.

Report of Missouri and Kansas Conference of the Church of God held near Purcell, Kansas, Sept. 4, 1898, at Bro. O. M. Anderson's. Conference was called to order by the President, Bro. E. M. Saylor. Dear Restitution:

I was very much pleased to see Bro. Wagoner's appeal in behalf of Bro. Joblin's tract, Subject: "Law or Gospel,—Which?" It is the most thorough expose of one of the most giant errors of these last days. Let each church take right hold of the matter and secure a liberal supply. I know of no tract that is needed so much as this, as many are being deceived. Honor to whom honor is due. Let us hold up Bro. Joblin's hands. He has done a noble work in behalf of truth, which has cost him a world of research and work. Let us show him that we, as a people, appreciate his efforts. The tract is what is needed now.

B. W. WOODWARD.

We desire to avoid the labor and expense of sending out statements to those of our friends who are in arrears on subscription. It costs considerable money besides much work, and we feel that if you were in our place you would like us to do as we now ask and urge you to do. We have furnished you the paper on your promise to pay us for it, and you certainly should not desire that we make a special request to you by letter to make your promise good. Surely you will be thoughtful enough to attend to this matter promptly, and not neglect it longer.

Flour is now being pressed for army use in camps and on the march. The The British government is testing it for this purpose.

The King of Annam has an original idea in the way of a strong box. He has the trunks of trees hollowed out, filled with gold and silver and flung into his private lake, where a large staff of crocodiles wards off intruders. What will he do when he wants his treasures?

Poetry.

"Behold He Cometh."

Time's sun is fast setting,
Its twilight is nigh,
The evening is falling
In cloud o'er the sky;
Its shadows are stretching
In ominous gloom;
Its midnight approaches—
The midnight of doom:
Then haste, sinner, haste, there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee!

Rides forth the fierce tempest
On the wing of the cloud;
The moan of the night-blast
Is fitful and loud.
The mountains are heaving,
The forests are bowed,
The ocean is surging,
Earth gathers its shroud;
Then haste, sinner, haste, there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee!

The vision is nearing—
The Judge and the throne!—
The voice of the angel
Proclaims "it is done;"
On the whirl of the tempest
Its voice shall come,
And the blaze of its glory
Flashes out from its gloom:
Then haste, sinner, haste, there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee!

With clouds he is coming!
His people shall sing;
With gladness they hail him;
Redeemer and King.
The iron rod wielding,
The rod of his ire,
He cometh to kindle
Earth's last fatal fire!
Then haste, sinner, haste, there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, lingerer, flee!

The Empress Dowager of China.

The late events in connection with the removal of the Emperor of China have brought to notice the hitherto little known real ruler of the empire. The following from the Chicago Tribune regarding this woman, will we trust be of interest to our readers.

The most remarkable, the most powerful, and the one about whom least is known is Tuen Tson Hsi of China. A poor slave girl, her beauty and wit won her the favor of an Emperor, who married her, and her intellect and will have enabled her after her beauty faded to maintain power over the people whom she rules. There have been more or less inaccurate sketches of her life. It is not true that she is the mother of the deposed Emperor, although that is the popular impression. She was the step-mother of his predecessor, Tung-Chi, and a secondary concubine of Hien-Fung, the latter's predecessor, but no relation to Kwang-Su.

She was born in the family of a laborer, who did not kill this daughter, as is often the custom in Chinese families. But when 10 years old, as she was good-looking and he needeth money, he sold her to the Viceroy of Lung-Chang, who made the slave girl a servant. Winning favor with her mistress, she later won that of her master, and as a great boon he allowed her to learn to read. It may have been then that she became ambitious. Chinese history tells of the supremacy attained by others of her sex, as, for instance, by the Empress Liuchi under the Han dynasty and by the Empress Kiachi under the 1st of the latter Tsins. Each of these two last named women removed occupants of the throne by poison, as the present Empress has done twice.

When 20 years of age the Viceroy sent her as the prettiest of his slaves with a present to the Emperor, Hien-Fung, in gratitude for a decoration of the peacock feather. By Chinese custom, the slave who bears the present is a part of the gift, and Tuen Tson Hsi became a slave in the royal harem. Her beauty and wit attracted attention, and soon became known to the Emperor, who made her one of his secondary concubines. This was in 1854, when she was 21 years of age, and for the last forty-three years she has been increasing in power and influence, and for the greater part of the time has been the ruler of China.

By the Chinese law, the Emperor names his successor. Hien Fung named his son, a child of less than 6 years, and appointed a Board of Regents. Three months later Tsi Tshi, the principal widow of the former Emperor, and the present Dowager, with Prince Kung, his brother, together carried out a plot for the removal of the regents and the appointment of the elder woman as Regent. Afterwards Tuen Tson Hsi also was associated in the regency. This being effected four years later, Kung, who had been made chief Minister, was removed for a year in order that the Empresses might show their power. Together they ruled until 1873, when the Emperor, being 16 years of age, was given nominal authority. He endeavored to kick over the traces, and it was then announced that his health was in a precarious state. He died, and soon afterwards his widow followed him. Foul play was hinted at the time.

The successor was Kwang-Su, the son of Prince Chung, and he was chosen because he was only 4 years of age. This was in 1875. In 1881 the older dowager died, and the former slave girl assumed the reigns by herself. It was reported at the time that the older dowager had been poisoned by her more ambitious and capable colleague, who wished to rule alone. In 1884 she dismissed Prince Kung, the most powerful man in the empire, in order to show her power, and since then her favorite Ministers were, first, Prince Chung, father of Kwang Su, then Marquis Tzeng and later Li Hung Chang. The two former, becoming ambitious, died sudden deaths, and Li has since been the most important man.

When Kwang Su married, on Feb. 26, 1889, Tuen Tson Hsi abdicated formally, but has really continued to rule.

The Emperor was intelligent in appearance, travelers said, but had a frightened look, and it is probable that he was ruled by fear of such a death as the world believes has now overtaken him. The Empress has always been the power behind the throne, with Li Hung Chang as her ally, and in 1893, after his temporary disgrace, it was only her interference that saved the Viceroy his head. In 1895, against Kwang Su's protests, she had Li restored to his former dignities, and connived with him in his schemes for amassing wealth at the sacrifice of China's best interests. There is no need to attempt to summarize the character of the woman, which is clearly shown in this brief sketch of her life. It might be added that she is the richest woman in the world through peculations of various kinds. Her tool, Li Hung Chang, is worth $100,000,000. This being so, the estimate is made that she must have $800,000,000, although this is mere guess.

Quebec, Sept. 29.—J. W. Foster, one of the American commissioners, said today of Chinese affairs: "The situation at Peking appears to be grave, but my conjectures are based on newspaper reports and knowledge of Oriental character. The Dowager Empress has for years been the real ruler of China. I regard her as one of the most remarkable women of the century. Four years ago, in accordance with Chinese custom, she retired from public life on attaining her 60th year. There were grand ceremonials, and great was the satisfaction of the nations which had incurred her hostility.

Now it would appear that the situation resulting from the war has led her to assert herself once more. She has abiding faith in Li Hung Chang, and their joint influence will be in the future still further exercised for the advantage of Russia. It is difficult to conjecture the real fate or position of the Emperor, who leads a life of prison-like seclusion. His personality is generally known to be weak, and he either showed no inclination to govern or was regarded by greater individuals as a mere puppet."

Report of Illinois Conference.

Illinois has once more swung into line, and in union with our sister states, as a state organization, we will once more unfurl the glorious gospel banner to the breeze, that perishing children of earth may rally around the standard, and find rest and peace beneath its graceful folds, shouting Hallelujah to the coming King of Israel!

FRIDAY MORNING SEP. 30.

In answer to the call published in THE RESTITUTION, Representatives from various parts of the State assembled at the Church of God, located on Locust Street, Lanark, Illinois. At 10:30 A. M. Conference was rolled to order by J. M. Glotfelty, of Lanark. After devotional exercises a temporary organization was effected by electing Lyman Booth, of Ashton, temporary President, and W. H. Wilson, of Austin, temporary Secretary.

The chair then appointed J. W. Wilson, J. M. Glotfelty, D. L. Hudler, and Ruth Whitehead a committee on programme to report during the afternoon.

On motion, the chair appointed A. J. Eychaner, J. Glotfelty, Mrs. Dean and Simon Renner, as a committee on permanent organization, with instructions to report on Saturday afternoon.

Reports of Churches were then called for and listened to. The reports were only partial, as many Representatives were not present at the opening session, but came in later in the day, and some in the morning following.

Letters were read from S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, Mrs. H. V. Reed, Chicago, William and Martha Knodle, Silver Creek, Sober A. Grisel and wife, C. P. Grahame, Waynesville, Martha Harris, Dalgoun.

On motion, A. J. Eychaner, of Iowa, was invited to give us a talk about the Conference work in Iowa—the methods employed, and point out where their successes and failures came in, that we may profit by their experience. The following are a few of the leading points noted while he was speaking.

"The Churches comprising the Iowa Conference were composed of baptized believers of the Gospel of the Kingdom and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ. In such churches as the grade system was abolished. Elders, deacons and members were all brethren, and stood on the same level. To insure life in these churches they found it a necessity to be aggressive, and push the work. It was also found necessary to form a bond of union between these churches, and those believers living in isolation.

For Evangelists and church officers they always sought the best men, it did not always comprise the men who knew the most, but the men who had the push and were competent to teach men how to reform their lives.

The finances for Conference work was obtained by means of pledges and trust in God. By this means they never have lacked money but always had enough to carry on the work. He laid great stress on the tenth system. He said, take the Lord into partnership with you, open up an account, and do business with the Lord, don't rob him, but give him the tenth of your income, and prosperity will follow both the giver and the cause of Christ.

He said it was easy to trust God when we had an abundance, but the true test would come when afflicted with poverty and distress."

At this point Conference adjourned for dinner. Elder Eychaner to continue his remarks in the afternoon.

The Trustees of the Baptist Church at Lanark, offered the use of their Church to the Conference as a dining-hall. Seats were removed and tables spread all over the Church, and the entire conference took both dinner and supper together throughout the sessions of the conference, and you may be sure we had a blessed social time of of it.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

He said, "The President, Secretary and Treasurer were made an Executive Board to carry on the State work.

In selecting an Evangelist he advised not to hire him by the year, but by the week or month, that you will be enabled to make a change, should he not suit your purpose, and always insist that he carry out the instructions given him, and pay him only when he works. And that he turn in to the State Treasurer finances collected on his trips.

Keep a record of every cent received and who contributed the same.

He said our Churches in Iowa paid more per capita, than any other Church organization in the State. He said that a contribution of $1.00 for each male and 50 cts for each female would sustain one evangelist his entire time, and $2.00 for each male, and $1.00 for each female would sustain two evangelists.

He claimed the tenth plan was the most successful financial system, and that each person should be a steward over his or her tenth, and be accountable to God for its right use, even to the tenth of the corn-stalks in the field, he said, were God's.

In 1881 they bought a tent which with its necessary accompaniments were soon paid for. This investment he said had been the best one we had ever made. By means of a tent, the ears of the people are reached. You cannot catch fish unless you go where the fish are.

Use the tent for conference purposes and relieve the people where conference is held of the financial pressure. Besides this, he said, the social element of a tent was beneficial. The first years tent work, cost five days work, and $12.50 in money to make a convert. The second years work, thirteen discourses, and seventeen dollars per convert. He advised to be spiritual minded, be zealous, but according to knowledge. Elect clean officers, and make your constitution short and to the point.

Committee on programme reported and report adopted.

A paper on Evangelical Work was given by Mrs. Greenbaum.

Adjourned for supper.

FRIDAY EVENING.

At 7:00 o'clock, a social service was led by Anna Drew of Dixon, which was generally participated in to our spiritual profit. She also ably presided at the organ during the sessions of the conference.

Following this a sermon was delivered by W. H. Wilson, of Austin, entitled, "Who Made the Bible?" after which conference adjourned until 9:30 A. M.

SATURDAY MORNING.

After devotional exercises the following papers were read:

James Wilson, Austin, "Church Word and Organization."

Lelia Whitehead, of Austin, "Auxiliary Societies."

Eddie Renner, Lanark, "The Kingdom of God."

Jessie May Wilson, Austin, "Baptism and its Object."

Moved and carried that the papers constitute a part of the Conference Report, and that THE RESTITUTION, etc, be requested to publish the same.

A vote of thanks to the Trustees of the Baptist Church for the use of their house was then given.

TEMPERANCE DAY.

The following motion was presented and carried:

Resolved:—That the Conference recommend to all congregations and ministers to observe "Temperance Day" on the last Sunday in November, and have a special service for temperance on that day.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Moved and carried, that this Conference recommend to all our existing churches to join in a delegate Conference to take place in November, 1899.

It was moved that a permanent fund be established for mission work among the Jews, and that Elder Hudler be elected missionary to the Jews, and that a prayer union be formed for prayer at regular stated periods, for the furtherance of this cause. Referred to the Board of Managers.

Adjourned for dinner.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Committee on Permanent Organization recommended the adoption of the Constitution as presented.

On motion each Section was acted on separately, and then adopted as a whole, as amended, which reads as follows:

ILLINOIS CONSTITUTION

Adopted at the First State Conference at Lanark, Ill., Sept. 30-Oct. 2, 1898.

1st. This Conference shall be called the Illinois State Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus.

2nd. This conference recognizes the Bible as its rule of faith and practice.

3rd. The object of the organization shall be the propagation of the blessed Gospel of Christ, organization, upbuilding and strengthening of churches, encouragement of Bible study, holy living, Christian work and charity throughout the State.

4th. Its membership shall comprise all baptized believers in the Gospel of the Kingdom of God and the things concerning the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, who are living faithful lives in harmony with the precepts of the Gospel, who shall enjoy its privileges and freely participate in its meetings.

5th. The Conference shall hold annual meetings for the election of officers and the transaction of such other business as may come before it.

6th. The officers of the Conference shall be:

(a) A Board of Management, consisting of five members, who shall have general direction of all Conference work, such as the collection and disbursement of funds, employment and direction of evangelists, selection and distribution of literature, and such other work as shall further the object of the Conference. The Board shall hold quarterly meetings at such place or places as a majority may direct on the last Saturday of each quarter year, to hear reports of officers and transact such necessary business as may come before it.

(b) A president, who shall be the executive officer and overseer of the Conference, preside at all meetings of the Conference and of the Executive Board, countersign all orders for the disbursement of funds, and fulfill such other duties as devolve upon the President in like organizations. The President shall be elected at the annual meeting of the Conference, to hold his office one year. And in case of sickness, absence, or other disability the Board shall have the power to appoint a Vice President from its members to fulfill in the absence of the President all his duties.

(c) The Secretary and Treasurer shall be elected by the Board of Management and shall hold their offices each one year, or at the discretion of the Board. They shall fulfill the usual duties devolving upon such officers in like organizations.

(d) An evangelist or evangelists shall be employed by the Board at its discretion, whose duty shall be to preach the Gospel from place to place as directed by the Board, organize churches and set them in working order, and fulfill such other duties as devolve upon an evangelist as set forth in the Scriptures.

7th. This Conference shall be maintained by voluntary contributions from the churches and individual members, who are invited to contribute to this, which we believe to be the Lord's work, according as the Lord has prospered them, ever bearing in mind that "the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

8th. Letters of authorization may be granted by the Conference to evangelists upon recommendation by a majority vote of the members of the local church organization to which he belongs.

10th. This Constitution may be changed by a two-thirds vote of all members present and voting at any annual meeting of the Conference.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

James Wilson, Austin, President.

Lyman Booth, Ashton, Secretary.

J. Glotfelty, Lanark, Treasurer.

S. D. Fahrney, Chicago, Martin Asbaeksen, Chicago, Ernest Gesin, Foreston, J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Board of Management.

FINANCES.

It was moved and carried that there be created a Conference fund, known as an "Evangelist Fund," which shall be used for tent and other evangelistic purposes under the direction and control of the Board of Management. Three hundred and fourteen dollars were pledged on the spot.

ONE-TENTH.

The undersigned hereby pledge ourselves to give to the Lord one-tenth of our income during the coming year. Judd Lyon, Ada Drew, Mrs. Julia Dean, Eva Norris, Ruth W. Whitehead, E. J. Ruthbun, Mary M. Renner, Dell Glotfelty, Martin Asbaeksen.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

Social Service led by Mrs. Glotfelty. Subject: "Faithfulness," was participated in quite freely by those present, followed by a discourse by Mrs. Greenbaum, "What Must I do to be Saved."

SUNDAY MORNING.

9:00. Bible Class led by J. M. Glotfelty of Lanark.

9:30. Paper on "Sunday School Work" by Ruth Whitehead, of Austin, followed with a paper read by Miss. Medin Mitchell, of Lanark, entitled: "My Friend."

10:30. Discourse by James Wilson of Austin, Subject: "Prophecies of the Book of Revelation."

11:30. Communion Service led by W. H. Wilson, of Austin.

Adjourned for dinner, at which about 150 sat down.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Discourse by A. J. Eychaner. Subject: "A Sign of the times."

Adjourned for supper.

SUNDAY NIGHT.

Social Service led by Judd Lyon of Chicago.

Discourse by D. L. Hudler. Subject: "Jerusalem, the Throne of Glory."

This was followed by an earnest appeal by A. J. Eychaner, to obey the gospel. Closing with devotional service. A vote of thanks was given the church at Lanark, for their hospitality and generous treatment of their guests. "Good-bye until we meet again," was feelingly sung. It is very probable that we will not all meet again, in like capacity. But may God grant that we may all meet again, on the Evergreen shore where partings will be unknown.

God bless you all.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

And especially those whose privilege it was to meet at our yearly Conference at Dutton, Mich. Did we receive any real good in meeting together? If not—why not? If you did, tell us about it, that we may know how to make our next meeting together more helpful and truly spiritual. How can this be done? Some one will ask. Let us begin now and pray earnestly each day, that God will renew our hope, strengthen our love and fit us for the gathering time, if it is in this life, or in the life to come. Then surely when we meet together it will be a glorious time and the Lord's work will be done and done right. If there should be any cause for reproof or rebuke, it may be done in love and received the same, not received in rebellion. Heb. xii. 4-11. Be sure and remember Luke xvii. 3. Especially the last clause, "and if he repent, forgive him." also 2 Tim. iv. 2; Titus ii. 14-15. How do we forgive those who sometime have said or done some unkind thing? Do we really and truly forgive as we wish our heavenly Father to forgive us? All, everything, not one bit of the old bitter feeling left, not just enough to make us say, "They did it all the same," with a selfish injured air. O, these human natures of ours, warring against the Spirit, crowding out the good.

Back to the first question: Did we receive any good from the meeting in Conference? Yes, I did. I feel stronger and have a greater desire to do more work for the Master and for our Church at Dutton, Mich. I think because of the subjects on our program being carried out so far as possible in the brief space of time, we had many good thoughts brought before us and surely we can't but see the time is short to do our Master's work. How will he find us when he comes, with our work well done, our lamps trimmed and burning,—plenty of oil in our vessels,—or do we expect to get into the kingdom because we have done so much work. Can we afford to harbor one little evil thought against any one, even though they have not done their duty. Shall we do wrong and suffer for wrong doing? We might humble ourselves and show them where they are wrong, and try to get the thing made right. It certainly does no good to keep repenting the fault of some else, when perhaps if we could get the beam out of our own eye, we could see more clearly our own duty. O brothers and sisters, let us be more careful and live better lives. Let us be very careful of our words, for by our words we are justified, Matt. xii. 36-37, and by our words we are condemned. Are we always careful, before those who know not God's love, do we talk to them about it and tell them how much he has helped us to overcome, or do we spend our time telling funny stories that would cause the blush of shame in our own faces, if our little ones should be heard repeating them after us? "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," may God help us to search our hearts that we may be found blameless at his coming.

Your Sister in Christian love,

MRS. C. J. CHAFFEE.

"Only two monarchs of first class states, Austria and Holy, are now Catholics, and one of these has remained excommunicated for two generations. No Catholic ecclesiastic is now a sovereign prince, actually ruler in his territory; no government, excepting perhaps that of Ecuador, maintains laws completely in accord with the ideas and wishes of the Holy See. The rulers of Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Bavaria, Saxony, and Roumania acknowledge the authority of St. Peter, but they are rivaled and outweighted by the princes of Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Wurtemburg, Hesse, Baden, Greece, Servia, and Montenegro. Of the great powers, Great Britain and Germany are Protestant, while Russia's allegiance is to the Greek Church."—Christian Work.

ALMIRA BROOKS,
W. L. SKILES.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Apostolic Faith will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening November 17, 1898, and continue over the Sunday following.

The Church at Plymouth is desirous of having a good meeting and we hope all who can will come and help to make it one of interest and profit to all concerned. We are all responsible for the result of the effort, and whether it is a success or not depends upon the effort of each individual. Let us come with the true spirit of worship and work together in harmony of purpose and we will surely be blessed with that spiritual strength which will enable us to come off conquerors in the end. Let all the churches be represented by duly appointed delegates. All will be welcomed who desire to attend.

Evangelist Labors in Indiana.

At our recent Conference at Rossville, Ind., an extension Committee was appointed "to look to the furtherance of evangelical work." The following are members of this committee: J. F. Wagoner, J. L. Wince, Abel Grant, Harry Evans, and the undersigned. Now I wish to say to those brethren, and to all concerned, that I am going to the Southern Kansas Conference on the 23d of this month (Oct.), and expect to be gone about one month. I wish that during this time each one would put forth every effort to ascertain settable places in Indiana for evangelistic work, and communicate the same to me. And should there be any isolated members, desiring to be settled, or any openings for work, please send me them. As "workers together with God," let us be wide awake and earnest in every respect in order to bring the Master's cause. Please do not neglect this matter, but put at once.

Yours for Work,
A. H. ZILMER.

A nice present for a friend would be a years' subscription to this paper. By accepting this offer you get the Indiana Tent Fund and all for only 1.50.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and as accurate maps are necessary to make clear the situation, we have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps showing all the territory where conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed for only 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places made clear to you. Address, The Restitution, Plymouth, Ind.

Simla, India, is built on the side of a steep hill, and the roof of one house is often on a line with the foundation of one in the next tier.

Important Notices.

All those subscribing who should give their address to their company at state, vicinity and date.

All those whose subscription to The Restitution expires with the 24th, Ind.

Remittances should be by bank draft, postoffice money order or registered letter. Money sent in other ways is at your risk, and we cannot be responsible for the loss of the same. It is easy to obtain the above mentioned safe methods, and we can tell it, for those who handle your mail matter run almost no risks. Put a letter with money in it. Take no chance, and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Writers should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in Oct.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance and your order will be much more promptly handled to.

Excursions to Chicago.

Commencing July 17th and continuing every Sunday until further notice the Pennsylvania Lines will sell One Dollar round trip excursion tickets from Plymouth to Chicago. Special train will leave at 7:15 a. m. central time; returning leave Chicago 8 p. m. and 11:30 p. m. Excursionists have all day to look about the great city.

The Nickel Plate Road has arranged a low excursion rate of ——— on Oct. 25th, account the Exposition. This will be the last day on which such rates will be in effect. Agents of the Nickel Plate Road are in position to furnish cheap information. 11

Cheap Trips to the Northwest, West and Southwest.

Persons contemplating business or pleasure trips to the Northwest, West or Southwest may arrange for an enjoyable journey at low fare by communicating with C. L. Kimball, Ass't Gen'l Passenger Agent of the Pennsylvania Lines, Cleveland, O. He represents the short Lines to Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville and Cincinnati, the gateways to the Northwest, West and Southwest. Tell Mr. Kimball where you wish to go, and he will cheerfully furnish full information about special low rates and quick through time.—Oct 31.

Send to this office and get a "War Atlas" only 25 cts post-paid.

The last chance to visit the Omaha Exposition at low excursion rates will be Oct. 25th, on which date there are special rates via the Nickel Plate Road. Ask agents.—11.

Indiana Tent Fund.

We the undersigned promise to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purchase and equipping of a tent, to be used in Indiana for the purpose of evangelizing. Said tent to belong to the Indiana Conference, and to be under the control of the Executive Board of said Conference. Said subscription to be paid by the 20th of April, 1899, pending notice is given through The Restitution that enough has been subscribed with which to purchase said tent. All notices of subscription and all communications to be sent to C. L. Gridley, Box 340, Peymouth, Ind.

Poetry.

Rejoice Evermore.

Although the fig tree refuse its shade bloom,
Nor fruit be plucked from the ever-changing vine,
Even labor in the olive prove for naught,
The fields their meat yield not at harvest time;
The flock be cut off from the fold the fruitful flock,
And herdless stalls resound my hungering pain;
Yet in the Lord I ever will rejoice,
With joy the God of my salvation praise.

The Abomination of Desolation. Where? What? When?

The Scriptures mention many abominations and several desolations, but in Matt. xxiv. 15, Christ points to that one spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, as I gives the caution as in Dan. viii. 7, 9, 23, to "understand" as if this vision was specially important and difficult. Where? The locality of this event is given by Christ. The abomination of desolation would be seen standing in the holy place. Lev. vi. 16; 2 Thes. ii. 4, and from the connequent or accompanying tribulation the unfaithful believer could not should escape by fleeing out of Judea to the mountains, so it would seem that the abomination of desolation would be set up in the temple, and the tribulation would not extend much beyond the Jordan. The great tribulation would be "in the land" of Judea, and "wrath upon this people," the Jews. Luke xxi. 23; Dan. viii. 11-12; iv. 27; xi. 31-35, 45; Rev. xii. 13-17.

What? What is this event standing second in the series of nine signs of Christ's coming, and which series should be fulfilled during the one generation, the "ye" who should see "all these things." "These things begin to come to pass." Referring to Daniel we find that the abomination of desolation is set up in the reign of the little horn. Dan. viii. 11, 31. A power about which Daniel makes over 120 distinct statements giving his contemporaries, vii. 8, his origin, viii. 9, his conquests, vii. 8; viii. 9, his character, vii. 25; viii. 24, and his end, viii. 25, ix. 26. Some of these statements will apply to almost any king, but to the right king every statement of time and circumstance will apply. I do not find such a king in history.

Dan. viii. 11, "By him the daily sacrifice was taken away and the place of his sanctuary was cast down." (It took away from him the continual burnt-offering, and the prince of the host, and it took away from him the continual burnt offering, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down." R. V. This king or his military supporters "shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abominations that maketh desolate." xi. 31.

"He shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every God." xi. 36-39; John v. 43; 2 Thes. ii. 3-12, neither shall he regard the God (gods R. V.) of his fathers—nor regard any god, but in his estate shall he honor the god of forces, a god whom his fathers knew not." Rev. xiii. 5-18.

"Thus shall he do in the most strongholds with a strange god." xi. 39. ("He shall deal with the strongest fortresses by the help of a strange god." R. V.) Rev. xiii. 14.

This rules out Antiochus who lived before Christ's prophecy, and worshiped the gods of his fathers. The Roman invaders did not exalt themselves above every god, but worshiped the gods of their fathers. It also rules out the Arabian prophet and the Pope, (1 John ii. 22,) who both worshiped the true God, and the evening and morning sacrifice had ceased centuries before their time. But this king, although exalting himself above every god, yet sets up and uses a new god. Rev. xiii. 12-18. It seems that the policy of enforcing this abominable idolatry will desolate the city and bring the great tribulation on the worshipers of God. Dan. xii. 1; Matt. xxiv. 21; Luke xxi. 22-24; Rev. vii. 14; xi. 2-11. Type Dan. iii., although great prosperity will be enjoyed by the adherents of the little horn and "whosoever acknowledgeth" his new god. Dan. viii. 25; xi. 24-39; Rev. xiii. 17; Ezek. xxxviii. 8-13.

When? After predicting the preaching of the gospel in all the world before the end, he says "When ye therefore shall see the abomination," the word "therefore" seems to indicate that the abomination should be expected as the consequent and next succeeding event after the preaching of the gospel in all the world. Acts xv. 13-17; 2 Thes. ii. 6-12.

Referring to Daniel we find the abomination of desolation spoken of in the "vision of the evening and morning." (Dan. viii. 9-14,) and in three interpretations, viii. 16-26; ix. 22-27; xi. 12.

Below are some statements of times and events which locate the time of the abomination of desolation.

"By him the daily sacrifice was taken away." ("It took away from him the continual burnt-offering and the place of his sanctuary was cast down." R. V.)

"How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation," ("continual burnt offering and the transgressions that maketh desolate," R. V.) to give both the sanctuary and host to be trodden under foot?"

"Unto 2300 days (evenings and mornings, R. V.) then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

This period measured by 2300 recurrences of the evening and morning sacrifice, seems to begin with the taking away of the continual burnt offering by the little horn, viii. 10, 11; ix. 27; xi. 31-32, and end at the cleansing of the sanctuary. Isa. x. 12; xvi. 4-5. This sacrifice was not a yearly ceremony and the period can by no fair means be called 2300 years.

Dan. viii. 17, "Understand, O son of man, for at the time of the end shall be the vision." ("The vision belongeth to the time of the end." R. V.)

Ver 19, "Behold I will make thee to know what shall be in the last end of the indignation." Isa. x. 5-25 "For at a time appointed the end shall be." ("In the latter time of the indignation for it belongeth to the appointed time of the end." R. V.) Dan. vii. 25-27; viii. 14.

Ver. 23, "In the latter time of their kingdom." (Dan. ii. 25; xi. 40. when the transgressors are come to the full, (John v. 43.) a king of fierce countenance shall stand up."

Ver. 26, "The vision of the evening and morning"—it shall be for many days ("it belongeth to many days to come." R. V.) Hab. ii. 3.

Dan. ix. 27. "He shall confirm the covenant (make a firm covenant, R. V.) with many for one week, and in the midst of the week (for the half of the week, R. V.) he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease." I believe that in this week occur the events mentioned in Dan. vii. 25; viii. 11; xi. 31; xii. 7-13; Zech. xiv. 1-4; Luke xxi. 24; Rom. xi.

Dan. x. 14, "Now, I come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people (Dan. ix. 20) in the latter days, for yet the vision is for many days."

Dan. xi. 35. "Some of them of understanding shall fall—even to the time of the end," Rev. vii. 14.

Ver. 36. "Shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished." Dan. viii. 12, 19; Dan. xii. 7; Deut. xxxii. 21-26; Ezek. xxi. 27; Matt. xxiv. 21-22; Dan. xii. 1, "At that time shall Michael stand up, (Rev. xii. 7,) and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." Isa. xxvi. 16-21; Jer. xxx. 5-8; Gen. xxxii., Rev. xii. 12.

Dan. xii. 6, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders." "It shall be for a time times and a half, (Dan. vii. 25; Rev. xii. 14,) and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people (made an end of breaking in pieces the power, R. V.) all these things shall be finished" Deut. xxxii. 36; Isa. lix. 14-21; Rev. xi. 2; xiii. 5.

Dan. xii. 9, "The words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end." Hab. ii.

Ver. 11, "From the time that the daily sacrifice (continual burnt offering, R. V.) shall be taken away and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be 1290 days."

The foregoing passages appear to locate the vision concerning the continual burnt offering, and the abomination that maketh desolate, at the time of the end, in the latter days, in the 70th week, therefore these events will not be found in ancient or medieval history, but within 1290 days of the end.

A. S. CLOUGH.

Dear Friend and Sir:

I beg your pardon for intruding these lines upon you, but I am impelled to do so by the best of motives, that of doing you good—if I may be able to do so. I believe you to be sincere in your devotion to the truth as revealed to us in the Bible, and that as a thinking man you will appreciate the suggestion I am about to make. The matter to which I would call your attention is the kingdom of God. It is spoken of over 100 times in the New Testament and is the subject of Prophecy and frequent mention in the Old Testament. I am aware of the fact that the organization of which you are a member holds that the kingdom of God was set upon the day of Pentecost, and that for this reason we may not pray: "Thy kingdom come." It is said that at Pentecost the church was organized, and that this was the beginning of the kingdom of God. I desire to call your attention to the fact that the church was not organized on the day of Pentecost; it already had an existence from the day when Jesus chose out the 12 disciples to follow him. We find by reference to Acts i. 15, that "in those days," between the ascension and Pentecost, "The number of names that were together were about 120," and by reference to chapter ii. 41 that those who gladly received Peter's words and were immersed, were added unto them, that is to the 120, whose "names were together" already.

I desire to make two propositions, which I hope to be able to prove by the Word. Before doing so I must state that the church, neither the one you belong to, nor the one of which I am a member, nor any other, is the kingdom. The church is not the kingdom, but the latter is the hope of the former. It would not do to read church in the place of kingdom, or vice versa. And now to my two propositions, First: The kingdom was not established before Pentecost. Second: The kingdom was not established at Pentecost.

I. The kingdom was not established before Pentecost. Here I point to a statement by Jesus concerning John the Immerser, as recorded in Luke vii. 28: "Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Immerser: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he." If the church were the kingdom we might read: "He that is least in the church is greater than John." But how does this agree with the facts? I am sure that as to myself I would bear no manner of comparison with the Immerser, and no church member today would imagine himself or herself greater than John, the greatest of the Prophets, neither in understanding, nor in authority, nor in power, nor in any respect. But the least saint who has been immortalized, and thus put on the Divine nature (2 Peter i. 4), "is greater than he." Then notice a statement that Jesus made, not to sinners, but to his disciples, Matt. v. 1, 20: "Except your righteousness shall exceed that of the Scribes and Pharisees, yet shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." They were disciples, but not yet in the kingdom; entrance into this must be preceded by a life of "righteousness." Again, it was said to the disciples to "seek the kingdom," and they were assured that it was their "Father's good pleasure to give it" to them. Luke xii. 31, 32. Further, they were to pray, that the kingdom might come. Matt. vi. 10. Notice in connection with this the petition: "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." When the kingdom comes, to "put down all rule and authority and power" (1 Cor. xv. 24, 25), when every enemy shall be subdued, then, and no sooner, will God's will be done on earth as perfectly as it is done in heaven.

Notice also the attitude of Joseph of Arimathea "a good and just man," toward the kingdom of God. He is even said to have been "a disciple of Jesus," and in his day he "waited for the kingdom of God." Luke ii. 3, 50; Jno. xix. 38; Mark xv. 43.

I desire particularly to call your attention to the words of Jesus to those who murmured at his treatment of Zacchaeus, and "thought the kingdom of God should immediately appear." Luke xix. 7, 11, 12. He said: "A certain Nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return." We know who the "Nobleman" was, where he "went," but he has not yet "returned," to administer the affairs of his kingdom, and give his servants according to their deeds. This is still in the future.

Once more, read Luke xxii. 18: "For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come." Did he drink of the fruit of the vine after this, before or after Pentecost? Never, as far as known from revelation. I think you will agree with me that the kingdom was not established before Pentecost. Now let us proceed to our second proposition:

II. The kingdom was not established at Pentecost. Peter speaks of the "demonstration" on Pentecost as being in fulfillment of the prophecy of Joel. Acts ii. 16, 17. Now I call your attention to the fact that the prophecy of Joel as cited by Peter on Pentecost, did not have reference to the establishment of the kingdom, but to the miraculous out-pouring of the Spirit. If that was the setting up of the kingdom why have those striking accompaniments of the Spirit's presence ceased in the kingdom? For we see no such demonstrations today. Has the order in the kingdom of God changed? Why did not Peter say: "This is that which was written by Daniel the Prophet: In the days of these kingdoms the God of heaven will set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed.....And the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him?" But not so, for Peter will knew that that prophecy was not applicable to this case, and therefore did not so apply it.

In the year of our Lord 46, 12 years after Pentecost, we find Paul "confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith," telling them that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." Acts xiv. 22. Here were disciples who had become such by the obedience of the gospel, and to disciples Paul says that the way into the kingdom leads through much tribulation. This proves, to me at least, that although disciples, they were not yet in the kingdom, but that the kingdom lies, as it were, at the further end of much tribulation. Again 33 years after Pentecost the Apostle Peter wrote to those who had obtained the like precious faith with himself, that by doing certain things they should not only be guarded against stumbling, but there should be ministered to them abundantly "an entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Peter i. 11. He did not say: "There has been ministered to you an entrance; no, this would depend whether they would do" the things enjoined or not. Further, Paul wrote, 21 years after Pentecost, not to sinners, but to a church which was "in God, the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ," that they were to endure tribulation, "that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God; for which ye also suffer." 2 Thess. i. 5. He did not encourage them to suffer in the kingdom for which they had been counted worthy. According to Paul there will be no suffering to those who are in the kingdom of God. He anticipated "rest" for himself and his suffering brethren, when the Lord shall be revealed with with his angels. v. 7. When will this counting or reckoning take place? When Jesus comes, and not one minute sooner. Then will he say to worthy ones: "Inherit the kingdom." How proper, and how reasonable, and how Scriptural this is! Again, Paul admonishes this church to "walk worthy of God, who calls them unto his kingdom and glory." "Sinners are called out from the world, into the church, but the latter is called for the kingdom and glory. When will the kingdom and glory be manifested? "When Christ shall appear then shall we also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 4. When the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, in connection with the building up of Zion. Psa. cii. 16. God has "promised," not given, a kingdom to those who love him (James ii. 5), but they are no more in possession than they have the crown of life, which he has promised to those who love him (John i. 12). We know very well what "day" it is upon which the crown will be given: "THAT DAY," "at his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. iv. 1, 8. Further, the righteous are to shine in the kingdom of their Father. When? Do they shine? Yes, they now shine as lights in the world (Phil. ii. 15), but at a certain time they are to shine as the Sun in the kingdom of their Father. Matt. xiii. 43. When is this to take place? Please notice that it is "then," at "the harvest" which is "the end of the age." The end of the age will be when Jesus comes, and that is also when the kingdom is to come. 2 Tim. iv. 1. The two—"appearing and kingdom"—go together. We notice also by reference to Luke xxi. 28, 31, that redemption and the kingdom of God are near when certain signs will be observed. Then look, and lift up your heads. Oh what comfort those words are to us in these troublous times when men's hearts are failing them for fear, etc. Verse 26. "Your redemption—what is it? Why, that spoken of by Paul in Rom. viii. 23, as "the redemption of the body." "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. xv. 50. You and I are flesh and blood to our entire satisfaction, and as far as God is concerned we can have all there is of the church, and doubtless we are in the church. But as long as we are flesh and blood, with mortal natures, limited knowledge, defective judgment, and great liability to fall, we are not in the kingdom. We have been once born, of the flesh, and are flesh, but the birth of the Spirit, of which Jesus is the First-Fruit, is a thing still in the future, (Col. i. 18) and is just as necessary to entrance into the kingdom, as the birth of the flesh is to natural existence. We will have a divine nature when we have been born of the Spirit, and are Spiritual beings. Jno. iii. 1-8; 2 Pet. i. 4. It is sown a natural—soulical—body; it is raised a spiritual body. As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. 1 Cor. xv. 44, 49. Then will we be in a proper condition to inherit the kingdom of God. Then we will be able, not only to govern ourselves, but can also reign with Christ. We do not begin to reign with Christ when we join church, neither are we to be ruled over by him, because the overcomers are to sit with Christ upon his throne even as he overcame and sat on his Father's throne. Rev. iii. 21. No, it is not now the prerogative of the church to reign, inasmuch as the reign is divinely ordained to follow a school of suffering. 2 Tim. ii. 12. Now is the testing time, the time for the development of character and fitting for God's purposes in the ages that are coming. Eph. ii. 7. When the Nobleman returns from his visit to the "far country," then will he assign cities to his faithful servants to reign over. Luke xix. 12-28.

But this may suffice for today. Please look this matter up carefully, and I know you are willing to be governed by the positive declarations of the Word. Wishing you much joy I am, Yours very truly,

A. H. ZIESER.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Restitution:

I was very much gratified when I read the report made by Bro. John Anderson showing the work that is being done in the church in Anderson County, South Carolina. Wife and I had the privilege of meeting and worshiping with that congregation during October, November and half of December last year. I never preached to more earnest and honest Christian people than those we found down there. They were hungering and thirsting for the truth and were kind and generous to a fault. How I rejoiced when I read in Bro. John's letter of the large number who had lately been baptized. I remember them well and hope and pray that we may all meet in the kingdom.

Elder E. M. Anderson, who is the father of Bro. John, is the founder of that church. Years ago he was a popular preacher in the Baptist church in North Carolina. He was the pastor of quite a large congregation at a point twenty miles south of Asheville, N. C. In his investigation of the Bible he learned the truth and when he did he honestly told his congregation how his views had changed. His experience was the "old, old story." The door of the church was closed against him. His salary was stopped. It had never been large enough to enable him to accumulate anything. He was therefore left without any means to support quite a large family, except common day labor in a country where wages were quite low. But he did not become discouraged. His congregation wanted him to renounce the new doctrine and remain their pastor. He said no, I must preach the truth. He held services just across the road from the church, in a grove, from week to week, until he had converted enough of the members of his old congregation to control the church building and from that time he held services in the building. Before he left there, he had the glorious satisfaction of having converted nearly all the members of his old congregation. The church now numbers about sixty. Four or five years ago he moved to Pelzer, S. C., where he now resides. He soon found a neighborhood five miles west of Pelzer where the people let him have a school house in which to hold services. It was all new to them. He was permitted to use the school house two Sundays and then it was closed against him. Again he went to the grove and continued his preaching. He is a very pleasant and forcible talker, and with all very kind and considerate of the feelings of others. He continued to preach each Sunday after Sunday and the people became interested and went to hear him. The result was that in a short time some became convinced and were baptized. The church grew and now numbers forty-six. They have erected a nice little church in a beautiful grove where they meet from week to week to worship. Little did Bro. Anderson think when he told me of his labors and experiences, that it would ever get into the Good Old RESTITUTION and be carried to others of like precious faith. My only apology for giving a very small part of what he told me to the loved ones, is that it proves how much one determined Christian can do for the Master under the most adverse circumstances. May God help us to take courage and press on. The Master will soon come.

The Rev. D. W. Le Lacheur says that infanticide is so common in Pekin, China, that each day a cart goes around to pick up the little girl babies, to throw them into the potter's field.

Errata—In paragraph No. 9 for attain read obtain. Same paragraph, for unto the hands of their enemies read into. In paragraph 26 for "involves everlasting favor," read involves everlasting life.

We are made to sorrow with our beloved Brother Driggins over the sudden death of his wife. We know how weak are words at such a time, and can only express our sympathy, and point to the eastern sky, already giving signs of coming day.

"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But yesmy, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." This was a challenge from God to Israel when all other methods failed to induce obedience. Love to God they had not enough of to cause them to give him his due; and he was under the necessity of appealing to their selfishness for means to carry on his work. We are wondering if they were yet able to take him at his Word,—trust him to return to them through natural channels, compound interest, as if it were loaned to him as a favor, or whether they thought it safest to hold fast to what they had in hand. The words, "Will a man rob God?" show that such conduct on the part of man, who lived and moved and had his being in God, was so audacious that it almost astonished him!

"If ye continued in my Word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." The friends of God have been pressing to the front lately, after a noble fashion, and it has rejoiced us to see that many hearts have been rekindled with love for the pure gospel of the kingdom, and the divine conditions enacted after initiation into the Body of the Anointed One. This means, doubtless, that they have clearer conceptions of what Jesus meant in John xv. 16 when he said:—"Ye did not choose me, but I chose you, and appointed you, that ye should go and bear fruit, and that your fruit should abide; that whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name, he may give it you." Doubtless this explains why so many prayers are never answered; the promise is only made to bearers of fruit. God bless the brethren and sisters who so strenuously advocate purity of faith and practice, in spite of taunts that there's no progress about them. His the oh! old gospel that saves,—there is no other.

Passing Events.

Great Britain is aggravated at the turn of events in China. The dethronement of the Emperor and Li Hung Chang's restoration to power give great advantages to Russia. Trouble is certainly brewing in the far East.

After playing with the fire a little while, it growing hotter all the time, the Sultan of Turkey at last yielded to the pressure brought to bear upon him by the powers in Cretan affairs.

Among the notable events of the week may be noted visit of the Emperor and Empress of Germany to Constantinople, where the Kaiser and the Sultan have seemed to try to outdo each other in splendid courtesies. Diamonds of great value were given to the Empress by the poor old sick man of the East, and to the Emperor a magnificent sword, besides allowing the construction of a commercial portant Haidar, opposite Constantinople, and has decorated all the members of the Kaiser's suite. And the Emperor on his part has presented to the Sultan the busts of Emperor William I. and the late Empress Augusta; and bestowed the order of the Black Eagle on the Grand Visier. The Kaiser is said to have designs upon Asiatic territory belonging to Turkey as an outlet for his surplus population. And it is hoped in some quarters that his influence with the Sultan may smooth the way of the Zionist movement, and at the same time rid Germany of vast numbers of objectionable citizens. We will watch the result of the Kaiser's Eastern tour with interest.

Matters between England and France begin to look serious. The latter power is reported to be mobilizing ships and rushing troops toward her seaport towns; but the bold utterance of some English statesmen to the effect that that country will fight rather than yield an inch in the Nile Valley indicates that they are ready for the conflict at any time.

The Spanish and American Peace Commissioners seem to be making little headway just now. The former are trying to saddle the Cuban debt upon America before it evacuates the island. As the latter strenuously refuse to assume that burden it will take some time for Spaniards to accommodate themselves to their manifest destiny. In Porto Rico the stars and stripes are floating all over the island.

The impressions of the Zionists, as expressed after returning from the Basle Congress furnish very interesting reading to those who constantly pray for the peace of Jerusalem. From one of the English delegates we quote as follows:—

"I have just come back from Basle, physically worn out, but spiritually exalted in such a manner as I have seldom experienced. I have felt the fellowship of a common suffering, and a part of the spiritual reward which is at times the lot of those who are the afflicted in this world. But until I came to Basle I never experienced that great delight which come from being a member of a body of Jews who fearlessly and openly discuss the affairs of their people, and seek some help from out of difficulties with which it had been beset these many hundred years. With many of my brethren I thought not to see again the Jew all a fire with the holy flame, but here were men and women—certainly not the least among the descendants of Jacob—so possessed of this enthusiasm as to be ready for any sacrifice which may be demanded. Aye, the despised of the world sitting in Congress! From the Tribune I looked at that sea of heads! What a miracle had taken place! The power to do and to act was once more given to those who had ceased to do and to act these eighteen hundred years. Through all this time they had been crying, "How long, O Lord! How long yet!" Did I dare to hope that at length the Almighty had heard that prayer? that the time had come at last when out of Israel's own midst salvation should be brought? that the breath of the Lord had once more gone forth, and touched the dry bones into life?

And so the Second Zionist Congress has ended. I carry from it a great inspiration. My Jewish heart beats once more in joy and hope. They of the wandering foot, weary goers from place to place may yet find rest and peace. As I write, the news that comes from Algiers, and what I hear from Paris itself, is another spur in our flank. Israel must once again be up and doing. God will give his weary ones rest."

The Jewish World says:—

"Nearly two thousand years have passed away since Israel ceased to be a nation, and was scattered over the face of the earth. Nothing but the Mosaic code sufficed to bind the wanderers. This was the sole shield against assimilation,—their one defence against the nations that strove to swallow them up. Now, after the long centuries of almost ceaseless persecution, after troubles to which the Egyptian captivity must seem, by comparison, a small thing, a cry is raised to call the nation home again; and from the four corners of the earth the call echoes to hearts that have never lost hope or faith."

A special correspondent of the Jewish World writes thus:—

"Light is truly breaking through the darkened glass. The new page of history is almost completed. It is goodly written: it tells a plain, but wondrous tale. The Zionists builded better than they knew. Their strivings have been far from being in vain. They have awakened the sleepers far and near. Simply by personal exertion they have aroused the conscience of the nation; and the Congress with all its conflicting elements was a microcosm of Israel, and, as such, spoke what it thought, asked for what it wanted. There was no man there who came to scoff, but remained to pray!

Yes, the Second Congress is at an end. It kept the oath administered at the first. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget its cunning."

Most remarkable and soul stirring words; they irresistibly carry us back to Ezekiel xxxvii., where we are taught that then bones will come together, bone to his bone, and be clothed with sinews and flesh, and the whole body politic receive the breath of life."

Lord Charles Beresford has arrived in Pekin as bearer of a special mission from England to China.

It is stated on good authority that Russia now has 40,000 troops at Port Arthur.

Native Chinese merchants are refusing to make contracts for English goods for Northern China, as they declare that that part of their country will be Russian territory in the spring.

The Fashoda matter will not down. France is making immense preparation for war. Perhaps with the intent of drawing the nation's attention to outside affairs and away from the present internal trouble. Fifty thousand troops are assembled in and about Paris.

The outbreak of the bubonic plague in Vienna is causing consternation there. One feature of it is that some papers are inflaming the people by telling that it was brought to the city by certain Jewish doctors from India, and the result may be riots against the Jews.

A recent commission that was sent to Nicaragua has just finished its work, and reports that such arrangements have been made as will enable the great Canal across that country to be built and controlled by American capital.

We desire to increase our list. There are members of our Church who do not take the paper, and we would urge each one who does take it, to present the matter to your neighbor, and see if he will not let you send in his name with yours, when you renew. As an inducement to new subscribers we will begin now and all who send for a year, and pay $1.50 in advance for it, will be given the remaining numbers for 1898, that is they will be credited to the end of 1899, for the price of one year's subscription.

Obituary.

Stricken by the dread enemy death, Mrs. Fannie T. Dwiggins, wife of Bro. R. S. Dwiggins. Sister Dwiggins, though she had been somewhat ill for several months, was attacked by man's greatest enemy without the slightest warning and with no opportunity for defence. She arose Thursday morning, Oct. 20, 1898, at her usual time, feeling fully as well as usual and being in a very joyful frame of mind. At nine o'clock Bro. Dwiggins was hastily summoned from his work at the court house only to bend over the lifeless form of the companion he had bade "good bye" but two hours previously. Heart disease was the cause.

Sister Dwiggins has been a faithful wife to Bro. Dwiggins for nearly thirty-six years. The memories of the past—the bridal robes, the exultant heart, the anxious care, the faithful hands, the loyal life—but dimly foreshadow what she hoped to become, a member of the Bride of God's well beloved Son. When that Son, our Saviour, shall leave the seat beside his Father's throne to take his Bride, to "cleave to his wife:" when "they twain shall be one flesh," may our late Sister together with her now lone companion be called to share the glories, the honors, and the enduring riches of that day.

Fannie T. Dwiggins was born in Clarion Co., Penn., May 1, 1836, died at Rensselaer, Ind., Oct. 20, 1898, aged 62 years, 5 months, and 19 days. Her maiden name was Travis. She was married to Robert S. Dwiggins, Dec. 28, 1862. May that day soon come when there "shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying." When the "former things are passed away."

Jewish Nationality.

The following paper was written for our Plymouth Church service of last Sunday morning, without the least intention of publication, but the earnest solicitation of a number who heard it read has overruled our intent, and it is given here as read.

I desire to call your attention this morning to a general survey of the world in its bearing upon the most vital, the most important question of the times, viz the subject of the Jewish nationality.

Away back in the beginning of Creation, when the morning stars sang their pæans of praise at the birth of our world, the All-Wise Creator had in his mind a definite plan and purpose in the things he wrought. The infidel who sees only Chance and Nature and recognizes no hand of an over-ruling God is the only excuse for an intelligent being who does not endorse this statement. Every mind, whether of one denomination or another, Protestant or Catholic, all who recognize God—agree that he has a purpose in his words and deeds. When therefore, God made the world he fitted it up as an abode for man, then made man, and gave him charge concerning the work for him to do. Man miserably failed to come up to the standard God desired—hence he was cursed for his short-comings.

But was God's plan to fail because the first man, and the second and the third, failed to respond to the demand made upon them? Surely not. God's plan can be carried out though many men fail to grasp the blessings offered for righteousness.

Upon the scene finally came one man who was faithful, and with him God made a solemn covenant that because of his well-doing he should be called the Father of the Faithful. Abraham is the foundation upon which the family of God is builded. Through many vicissitudes the line ran—now an upright man to carry the nation that sprung from the small beginning on to sublime heights, when seemingly the goal was reached, and God could indeed dwell with them. Then, alas, the next generation saw the nation plunged in the deepest idolatry—the one true God rejected, and many false gods worshiped with all the zeal possible.

This was the signal for repented warning of wrath to come if it was continued in, and the nation was well nigh wiped off the earth many times, a mere lathe only sometimes being preserved of the royal line through whom the covenant made with the ancient fathers should be kept alive. God had promised Abraham that he would bless the world through his descendants, and that he would remember the nation he had chosen to build up, that they should suffer for their evil deeds—be scattered and become a hiss and a by-word among the other peoples of the earth—but that at a set time he would again remember them, and for the sake of the faithful fathers, he would finally establish them in the land he had covenanted to Abraham—having repeated the pledge to Isaac and Jacob. As God's first plan of having a race of beings to inhabit and care for the things he had made cannot fail, so his ratified covenant with the father of Israel cannot but be accomplished. It were an idle task for me to undertake to cite you to the scores of testimonies of prophets and holy men who have told and retold of the glory in store of God for the nation whom he long ages ago claimed as his chosen.

This is a subject so well known by you that it is unnecessary to detail it here. God has promised—covenanted, and confirmed it by an oath—ratified in blood—that he will call the scattered and accursed family of faithful Abraham from the uttermost corners of earth, and give them the inheritance that is theirs of old. Man fails in things small and great, but every iota of the promises of God will be fulfilled, and that to the remotest letter. The one thing that God cannot do is to lie. Each word uttered by him relating to the future will be accomplished. The Psalmist David says, "The Lord shall arise and have mercy upon Zion, for the time to favor her, yea, the set time is come."

From the lesson read, and other portions of Scripture familiar to each of you, we learn that the conditions of the world's affairs are just now more than at any other time, precisely as they are to be when the set time to favor Zion will come, and we have but to look about us to see the signs fulfilling at our doors. We have become so used to natural earthquakes that it must be something very great that even startles us. We have become so used to hearing of rumors of wars that we read the news and pass it by in an idle hour; ready for the next to come. Mighty indeed are the convulsions of nations brought about by wars—but far and away beyond all this is the revolution in the sentiment of the people. "Men's hearts failing them for fear." What does it all mean? Not only the student of the prophetic word, but men who know nothing of such things see this "sign of the times" and exclaim, What do these things mean? They see the advancement in art, science and invention, discontent where there is plenty and even luxury, and they see the increase in millionaires and paupers. Business enterprises that once were local and confined to narrow limits are now immense corporations world-wide in power. Common men composing the masses of the people dare to discuss and criticize at will national policies, and the sayings and doings of public men. Even church denominations show this spirit of unrest, for we see the creeds and dogmas criticized, and there is evident dissatisfaction among all Christian societies. Every preacher standing in a pulpit this day stands there conscious that the sitter in the pew is listening but to criticize his words. No hand holds pen to write upon any question but feels as each word is noted down that the reader will be his critic. We are in an eddy. The whirlpool is all around us. Things are not as they once were. Times are changed. The times that try men's souls are upon us. The time of lack of confidence, when none know which way to turn. Times of wars and rumors of wars; evil times; troublous, perilous times. Strange times. The times when men's very hearts sink and fail them.

But brother, sister, look up. The Scriptures declare such times will come. The hour of God's judgment is near. The changing time—the short dark hour just before the dawn of day. Think of it—only a little—little while longer to wait amid the darkness and uncertainty—then the brightness of the glad day—and permanent relief from all the turmoil of this time. Do we really comprehend it all?

But we were to take a rapid glance at the world, with the view of seeing if we really are down in the time when God will favor his people of old. The plan is for him to cause them in large numbers to return, with the wealth they have accumulated during their weary wanderings, back to their own land. To establish themselves there with the prosperity of the land returned. We have heard for numbers of years of many bodies of Hebrews, mostly those driven by persecution, going back to Palestine, and so by degrees some thousands are already there, and gradually have developed the land somewhat, but no very large and decisive movement has been noticed until lately, when the "Zionist Movement" was organized. This society is formed not altogether on a sentimental basis, but on the sure foundation of a solid business. Many of the foremost financiers of the world, prominent bankers and money holders of the time are Israelites; and not only have they become largely interested in this movement, but the promoters of the scheme conceived the idea of enlisting the people—the common people of the race, so they organized a "Shekel Contribution" and at their meeting held in Switzerland a few weeks since the report shows that the result is very encouraging—250,000 people having responded to the call, and they pronounce it an "unqualified success." This shows that once the enterprise of securing the land for a national home is taken up in a tangible manner, the people are ready and willing to enter into it. People who put their money into anything are interested in it, and want it to succeed, and this response is significant indeed. It is proposed to establish a bank, with this money, with headquarters in London. It is to be a people's bank, and this participation of the masses is the best guarantee of the security of the concern. The report says:—

"The Corporation who shall have supervision of the Bank is to be charged with the promotion of various enterprises among which are

1. The creation of industrial establishments, both of Insurance and Shipping Companies in the East, especially Palestine and Syria for the purpose of utilizing Jewish labor.

2. The support of Jewish Agricultural Colonies.

3. Organization of export and import trade in Syria and Palestine by support of commercial undertakings.

4. Acquisition of concession for construction of roads, harbor works, mines and trade monopolies in the East.

Branch banks will be established in different countries. The founding capital is to be two million pounds sterling, in shares of one pound each. This means that as many people may be stockholders in the institution. Thus in a strictly business way it is proposed to gain such a footing in the land as will develop and control the trade of the country.

Whenever the Jews have manifested a disposition to return to Palestine the Sultan of Turkey, who now owns the land, has opposed them. He is afraid to let them get in in too large numbers. So while they must wait for his "removal" which will come in God's own good time, they will, from the outside world, develop and improve the country so that when the gates are opened they will be ready to pour in with numbers and wealth, and take up personally the businesses they have built up. Who says the Jews are not returning to their own land? It would be hard to conceive of a more perfect scheme to "return" them. We must remember that the ways of doing business change. No more will the old ways do—new lines are followed, and in this the old way in vogue a few years since of lending a few Jews on to a vessel with a lot of agricultural implements, landing them and saying, Now sneak in and go to work developing the land, and so get a foothold—such are no longer the proper methods. Times have changed, and no one has been quicker to grasp the changed situation than the down-trodden, hissed at, spat upon, Jew. Yes, the Jews are returning to the land of promise. So far the plan is working, and we are living in the time and seeing it.

But, when this condition of things is in existence, and all dwell safely in unwalled cities, apparently secure from outside trouble, a power to the north desiring to possess this vast wealth, anxious for self-aggrandisement, the prophet tells us will think to go up against them, to take to himself this goodly land with its gold. At the same moment another power will say, Why so? What do you want? Think you to take a spoil? Dare to proceed against this defenceless people who are not harming you, and I will join you in battle.

While the Jews are going back, these powers, one of whom will wish to [illegible] your the holy land and people, [illegible] that will fight for Israel, are also to be developed. We are right in that developing era now. An epoch—a grand division of time is just before us. At no point in the history of the world has the work that is being wrought by the hand of man been so far-reaching in its import, and no less remarkable than this fact is the terrific speed with which all is coming about. Take the case of our own land in the events that have transpired since the beginning of 1898 for example. When last spring it was evident that the United States would be compelled to go to war with Spain for the avowed purpose of setting Cuba free, the very idea of any acquisition of territory was not advanced even. War was declared on April 21st, and Pres. McKinley uttered the language of the prophet Joel, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near. Let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords and your pruning hooks into spears. Let the weak say, I am strong. Assemble yourselves and come." He said to Admiral Sampson, Take your ships and blockade the ports of Cuba. His generals were ordered to assemble the fighting men. He called for 125,000 more to come from the walks of peaceful life and join the ranks of war. Factories that were making useful articles for commerce were told to make implements of war. The war spirit was born in a moment and in a day sprang to the stature of a man. But while this was going on at home, the other nations of the earth were not idle, they could not be. By the laws of nations no vessels that were covered by the Stars and Stripes could remain in a neutral port. This nation had been very much of a "stay at home," and had never realized the benefits of "Coaling" and "naval" stations in far away places. Commodore Dewey was in command of a few ships on the coast of China, thousands of miles away from any American port. He telegraphed to Mr. McKinley, "I am ordered to leave the neutral port I am now in. You have made no provision for me in your blind haste. What shall I do? Back goes the answer, "Go find the Spanish fleet and capture or destroy it." With that message sent April 23rd Mr. Dewey started his ships, and with them went the United States on rapid wings to her manifest destiny. You are all familiar with the result of the battle fought May 1 in Manila Bay, and I need not repeat it here, but the lightning rapidity with which our country has pursued her course since that day is wonderful to contemplate. No more complete revolution could be imagined. Here and there an occasional man among us asked the question "What will be done with the territory Mr. Dewey has taken?" Gradually men ventured to discuss the subject. Occasionally the words "territorial expansion" "imperialism" "foreign alliances" were heard. With something of horror and in whispers at first, then louder and louder, until now the conviction that we have outlived the time of Washington and the Monroe doctrine is accepted by the entire American people. What has brought this about? What reason is there for such complete change in an intelligent people, such a radical transposition of sentiment and of thought? Less than a year ago the United States was founded firmly on the policy of, Our country is all we want, and we do not propose to enter your quarrels. We will take care of ourselves, and you may do the same. We do not wish to meddle with you, and we want you to keep away from us. Now what? We want to know what you are doing, and we want you to do what you do in a manner that we will sanction. Failing to do so we will interfere. We want to branch out. We manufacture many articles and we raise much produce, all of which we wish to sell. Our people want articles that are the product of other countries. We want the privilege of trading where we can market our own goods best, and buy what we want most. To do this we are building ships to carry these goods, and as a natural consequence we must have stations of our own on the watery highways, so we want some of your islands where we may establish such places. Again, we have some men among us who have money and are possessed of enterprise and push, and they wish to build railroads for you and operate them for personal gain, therefore we want concessions from you to enable us to do this. As we thus get an interest in your countries we will build many war ships, and ha[illegible] them in readiness to protect the interest we thus gain among you. We [illegible] and equip an army also to further enforce our demands.

Further, we recognize that the richest part of the world, the place that will yield the largest returns the quickest is over on the other side of the Pacific in China and adjacent countries. Therefore we ask that this land especially be open for our trade. We see that the "open door" policy of Great Britain is the one that exactly suits us. What is to their interest is to ours. We are out among you other nations. We did not know that we were "coming out," but here we are, and we feel very well over it, so we just propose to stay out and share these things with you. Without hardly realizing it, even against our will, declaring among ourselves that we do not want an alliance with England, we are driven by the hand that has marked out our destiny, by perfectly natural means, by means the most potent because they are strongest, appealing to the selfish interests of our natures as they do, to this union of forces. We see that our self-preservation now requires us to demand the same things that England has been demanding, that England has been on the verge of fighting for. We will soon see that England cares not a whit whether China is developed by Americans or Englishmen—to her they are already one. What she desires is the opportunity to trade there.

While this widespread spirit has taken possession of the people of the U. S., we are not alone in this revolution of national policy. In China England has been for some years arranging to build railroads and engage in various enterprises that will develop the natural resources of this "rich old China," and enable her to get the wealth to the sea where her ships are always waiting. Russia is jealous of every move England makes, and so she moves to checkmate the Briton and do the work herself. But her interest lies in a different direction. When the product of the country is brought to the sea Russia has no ships to deliver it to. There Britain is supreme. She therefore interests Germany and France, and other countries who have ships, and gets them to unite with her to crowd England out. She sees it is best to not develop these parts too fast. She is not ready to take full advantage of the condition of things, hence would strangle the rising spirit of progress born of the pushing Briton. But it will not down. The seed is planted, and the people of China see their condition and are quick to imitate the example of others. They demand various reforms, and the enlargement of their opportunities. Their Emperor responds to the call of his people, and issues edicts commanding a complete reversal of the existing policy of his government. The common people would feel the effect of the movement, and be benefitted. But the class who had hitherto enriched themselves at the expense of the poor would be exposed and disgraced were this measure to prevail. Russia sees that such a thing will be her defeat, so at once sets her diplomats at work to frustrate it at any cost. The old Empress Dowager still has power. She boldly steps in and deposes the Emperor, and immediately all is turmoil. It was supposed the Emperor was dead. That is now believed to be false, but he is a prisoner at least. While we look on we see the ships of war of nations interested hurry to the scene and wonder what the outcome will be. We soon learn that the deposing of the Emperor, or even his death, could not stifle the spirit aroused in the people, so the Empress announces that part of the reforms mentioned will be at once inaugurated, and other measures looking to the development of the nation on modern lines will follow. She dare not at once restore her old friend to power, but is endeavoring to conciliate all sides, and keep friends with the world. An arrangement has been made with certain capitalists of the U. S. to build a railroad in China. It may be possible that Russia will not antagonize such an enterprise undertaken by Americans as she would were the same an English measure, but the chances are that what is built by America will be of benefit to Britain, and that may cause Russia to oppose the scheme, or at least ask a similar concession.

Truly significant words are these. We have gone so far now that the trade of China is necessary for us to have a share in. We will, we must have it, even if we have to fight Russia for it. This war spirit that is aroused in us is but the outgrowth of the hand that is leading us on to our destined place in the world of nations. To where we must be when the "set time" is fully here. To where we must be when Russia, that Gog Power of the North, shall come against the gathered tribes of Israel to cover them and their land as with a cloud. This is a period to which we are hastening, and the world is being fitted out with everything necessary to be used at this event. Do we say "Awful time, perilous, troublous time?" To the worldling, yes it is, but the child of God can see the Grand and Sublime in it. Can catch the "gleams of the golden morning" and in the language of the Scripture "lift up the head and rejoice, for the day of our redemption draweth near."

But we are not through with the map of the world and must hasten. We have seen that our self-interest requires we have a share of the China and India trade—the Pacific market so largely undeveloped is to be opened up, and we must share it with others. To do this we must now keep the Philippines. The Hawaiis we have. It is openly advocated now that we must have the rest of the Ladrones and all of the Carolina islands. In short Spain must get out of all her Pacific possessions, and we take them. This is argued as a measure of safety for our commercial vessels that carry the merchandise back and forth. It looks very much as if this would ultimately be accomplished. With such a result England will be immensely pleased, and we may look for Russia to be proportionately displeased. Such an outcome would make an almost impregnable fortress, for the Anglo-Saxon race would then own and control the strategic points on every route to India and China. Take the map and remember that the desire of Russia is not altogether the mere possession of Palestine, that being but an incident in the way. She really wants what others want, viz., the wealth of the tropical lands. Frozen through part of the year, cold and barren as she is, she wants the warmth and wealth of "England's fair India." China is on the route, and therefore to be taken. But with the United States in possession of the points named, England and America can control every port from Shanghai in China just by the 30th parallel, clear down the coast of China, along India and Hindustan, through the Indian Ocean, the Red Sea and the Suez canal. Into the Mediterranean next, and who will dare doubt England's ability to hold her own there? especially when the U. S. shall by "purchase or otherwise" secure a naval station in that Sea. Is it any wonder that with a desperation born of fury at the sight, Russia attempts to seize a station on the Red Sea? Is it any wonder that her present ally France, grasps at the drowning man's straw, and tries to make a show of holding Fashoda in Africa. With this line of Anglo-American stations it were not safe for the vessels of Russia, Germany or any other nation to try to force a path through them. The only open way will be by the long and costly trip around the Cape of Good Hope.

Apparently the power that will oppose the Northern King is now uppermost, and may take a breathing spell, but it is not safe to do so. The map shows that only Persia is between the Caspian Sea where the Russian now is, and the Persian gulf, with the Sea of Arabia opening right out to the shores of India. Even now the Russians all but control the weak Persian Government, and we may look for stirring events in this direction once Russia sees she is shut out by the way of China. She is shrewd. Peter the Great left her a legacy, and his outline of her course has not been altered one iota. Steadily she keeps on her way, gaining all the time. She is indeed a foe worthy the steel of any antagonist. Occasionally she is checked, but never is she whipped. We may look for her to continue her policy to the end.

Then again the visit at this time of the German Emperor to Palestine is not wholly a sentimental affair. The times are too fraught with dangers of various kinds to make it purely a pleasure trip. Whether he designs to further the establishment of German colonies there, or just the point he has in view, it does not now signify much what it is—certain it is that he is manifesting great interest in the land. Were the Czar of Russia to undertake such a trip, the world would hold its breath, and watch each day's doings with keenest eye—indeed it is possible that such a visit by Russia's ruler would be opposed bitterly by England. But may there not be as much in this visit of the German Emperor? There exists not one student of the prophetic word but is certain that the "Gomer and all his bands" who will be with Gog and Magog when the descent is made upon the Holy Land, is identical with Germany. It reasonably follows therefore that whatever interest Germany takes in Palestine is really a semi-Russian interest; and therefore opposed to British interest.

These matters all tend to the calling together, by the uniting of self-interest, of the powers to be antagonized at the last great battle. The battle is going to be brought about by the return of the Jew to Palestine and his establishment there in peace. By whatever means this is brought about the result is the same. Whether God performs a miracle, as some have supposed he would, and so changes the hearts and natures of the Hebrew people that they will recognize him in their return, or whether it be by the regular and natural development of business and selfish interests, the end attained is the same.

Meantime England and Russia, with their various allies, go on with the world's great game of checkers, sometimes one then the other leading, all the time binding in closer union those who are designed of God to be joined together. Ever crystallizing the head of each, until in God's own good time the Jew is back, and the conditions fit for the onslaught, when the Lord will fight for his people and the enemies of righteousness will be broken and destroyed. This is the solution of the Great Eastern question—when the Sick Man of Turkey will no more disturb—when the tyranny and oppression of a Spain will be at an end. When the dispensation changes, and the glad day, so long foretold, will dawn with all its brightness.

Brothers, "the night is far spent, the day is at hand." I have not touched in this brief essay on what is the duty and position of the people taken out for a "peculiar people" from among all the tribes of earth—whose destiny it is to be associated with Christ when he comes at that day. This is matter for a score of discourses. Suffice it to say that the Guide and Former of all these conditions—the Great God of the Universe—is moulding all and forcing the nations into the channels where apparently their natural interest leads them—setting them in order under the banners of their leaders, all in perfectly regular order. No miracle wrought, no command given, but the gradual, natural, destiny of each worked out. Every point coming out as laid down by the inspired men of old—answering the exact conditions portrayed for the last times.

Do we realize our position? are we alive to our manifest destiny? Is it true that "the night is far spent, and the day at hand." Is the long night of the world's agony almost—is it almost—over? Is the day at hand? Is the Son of Man really coming? Coming with power and glory? Will the common-place things of earth be ended, and a different order of things be ushered in? Will faces here in Plymouth be upturned to see the skies brighten with the flash of the light of his countenance? Will this really happen, and will we see it? Yes, we do believe such will be the course of events, and we cry out Come, O Lord, come, for we are all weary with anxious care. We would hail thee in thy brightness. We cry "Fly faster round ye wheels of time, and bring the welcome day."

May we each be on the watch-tower, eagerly scanning the Eastern sky for the early glimpses of the coming morning—ever ready to gladly welcome the One who will deliver the turbulent, toilsome earth from her present thraldom, and bring in the Era of peace and happiness, joy and glory. May we each have an abundant entrance into that Holy City prepared of God's own hand is my prayer.

Emmaus.

Art thou a stranger even, and hast not heard
Things that have come to pass, these bitter days,
Jesus of Nazareth is crucified—our Lord:
And we walk desolate, in sore amaze,
We trusted it was he who should redeem
His waiting Israel—nay, it was a dream.

Our hearts go mourning even in the gloom
That wrapped Golgotha and its crosses three;
We knelt in fruitless pleading at the tomb
Where Jesus have stationed Roman soldiery.
And Hope is dead, and Faith yields to Despair;
There is no living Savior anywhere.

How heavily the woful hours have passed
Since his last lamentation filled the air!
The rock-hewn cave that held his body fast,
Filled with sweet odors, like a woman's prayer,
Echoed in mournful answer to our cry;
The guards sealed up the door and thrust us by.

And when the women, at the break of day,
For his anointing brought their spices sweet,
The stone that sealed the door was rolled away.
Some know where rest those weary, mangled feet.
Nothing is left; and some already go
Back to their fishing; and we loved him so!

Come, thou companion of our loneliness,
Abide with us; the day is now far spent;
Surely God sent thee our sad hearts to bless
As sorrowful across the hills we went.
Hadst thou but known our Lord! but now, beside
All this, 'tis three days since the Master died.

And they constrained him; and the risen Lord,
Staying but for their urgency of need,
Entered the house with them, sat at their board,
Took bread, and blessed. As the familiar deed
Revealed the form unrecognized before,
Blessing the bread, they saw his face no more.

He passed from sight; but in their lightening gaze
Still breathed his blessing whom they mourned as dead.
And faith, upspringing from their conquered fears,
Grew strong, since he was risen, as he said;
Forgotten were the cross, the rocky prison;
The Lord lay there no longer: He was risen.

From the dark cave where I have laid away
Hopes crowned with thorns, and dreams with spear-thrusts torn,
Comest Thou, Lord, to join me on my way
As I go weeping, faithless and forlorn?
Until the day break and the shadows flee,
O risen Savior, come, abide with me!

Died near Calhoun, Oct. 5, 1898, infant of W. H. and M. H. Loyd, aged 27 days. Funeral services by the writer at Pleasant Grove Church, where we laid her away till the Deliverer will come and loose the bonds of death and set the prisoner free. We mourn not as others who have no hope; for we believe that when Rachel's children come from the land of the enemy that she will come with them to die no more. May God hasten the time when we all may meet on that evergreen shore.

Russia and Manchuria.

Russian interest in Manchuria is of ancient date. A couple of centuries ago Russians explored Eastern Siberia, and crossing the Amur, erected two forts south of it. The then Emperor Kanghi was as suspicious of his Russian neighbors as any of his successors have been, and the Chinese regarded those two forts, though in unoccupied territory, as a wedge involving future trouble. As a defensive measure Kirin was built as an arsenal to provide for the military wants of northern Manchuria, and troops were sent to the wild north to drive the Russians across the Amur. Despite the Russian bombs, which terrified the Chinese soldiers, the forts were taken and the garrisons escorted as prisoners to Peking. Their descendants form a Russian colony there at the present day, which has been religiously ministered to by a succession of Archimandrites sent by the Russian Government. The existence of this colony had important results in 1860. It may have a greater influence in the future.

In 1860 the Anglo-French expedition destroyed the Northern armies of China and made their victory a basis of treaties of commerce, concluded before they withdrew. Russia, noting as the private friend of the Empire, at the same time secured possession of the rich and extensive maritime province east of the Amur and erected at its southern extremity Vladivostock, fortifying the fort against all comers. At the same time a number of other smaller forts were set on the western border of the province along the Amur as points of observation on China. In 1857 came the great Mohammedan rebellion, and Russia, again acting as the friend of China and in the interests of the preservation of order, took possession of the fine province of Ili. When, however, General Tso put an end to the rebellion in so remarkable a manner, the province was restored, on payment, however, of a sum of money to Russia for her trouble in keeping the peace. Then came the Japan-China War. For twenty years the Japanese had been spying out every corner of land and policed its immense value, but saw also what powerful influence Russia would exercise as soon as her splendid railway should be completed. They therefore struck the blow which destroyed the defensive power of China on the north, and demanded and obtained the southern part of Manchuria for a military possession. Again Russia appeared as a friend of China, strenuously opposed the plan of the Japanese, drew to her support France and Germany; and the victors, who dared not defy the combined fleets, withdrew, exacting, however, a large sum for the retrocession of the territory which was almost immediately leased to Russia.

It is, therefore, no new or hastily conceived plan that Russia is carrying out in Manchuria, but one of long growth and well considered. Its developments only are startling as circumstances favor its evolution; these circumstances being, as a rule, wars carried on against China by other Powers. Nor can this plan be considered unreasonable. Russia desires a warmer climate than is hers by birth or inheritance, and least of all can the Briton protest, who has not only desired but taken with a celerity undreamed of in Russia whatsoever portion of the earth, tropical or temperate, he believed necessary to his well-being. There are, however, two facts to be noted in considering this southward movement of Russia as explaining, at least in a measure, British opposition—her prohibitive tariff and her inimical attitude toward Christian missions.

It is as natural for Russia to adopt a protective tariff as for England to adopt a free-trade policy. She needs the development of her internal resources, thoroughly sufficient for all her needs. What she wants is not so much markets as tax-paying peoples; and hence wherever she goes the products of other nations are shut off as by a wall of fire. Her advance, therefore, means a serious loss to the trade of every other nation, and it can scarcely be wondered at that while many regard her ambition with a certain amount of sympathy, they also oppose her acquisition of territory as a danger to themselves.—Rev. John Ross, of Mukden, Manchuria, in The Independent.

Report of Omaha Conference.

A general Conference of the Church of God met at Omaha, Neb., beginning Aug. 19 and closing Aug. 28. The meeting was held in an orchard which Bro. Jacob Elton kindly donated for the use of the Conference. The Kansas-Missouri tent was used as an audience tent, the Nebraska tent for dining purposes, and smaller tents with cots for sleeping apartments. During the time there were about 160 persons present, some remaining only a few days while others attended the entire time.

G. M. Myers was chosen chairman and much credit is due him for his excellent management. Lydia Orem was elected secretary. The chairman appointed Sisters Gould and Johnson, and Bro. Chas. Cole a committee on table arrangements, and Bros. Stauffer Cole and Jacob Elton as a committee whose duty should be to look after the tents and receive the newcomers.

The audiences were very good throughout both as to interest and numbers. The programme had to be altered somewhat as some of the brethren could not be present at the appointed time. Friday evening after a short song service W. J. Orem addressed the congregation on the subject of our relation to the religious world, and our duty to keep aloof from it—to make our separation a complete one. Saturday at 11 o'clock Jno. Foore spoke from Acts xxvi.—"Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead?" J. F. Kiggins spoke in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. In the evening G. M. Myers spoke on the subject, Life. W. J. Orem spoke twice on Sunday—in the morning on The Kingdom of God, and in the evening, after a social meeting led by Rena Gordon, on The Resurrection, reading from 1 Cor. xv. Sunday afternoon J. F. Kiggins spoke on Obedience. Monday at 11 o'clock J. T. Prime spoke on the Restitution, and at 8 P. M. we listened to J. K. Thompson, on The Coming of the Lord, speaking from 2 Peter. In the evening G. M. Myers gave a discourse on The Inheritance of the Earth. At 11 o'clock Tuesday Jno. Foore spoke on the Restoration of Israel, at 3 P. M. W. J. Orem on The Tabernacle and Apostasy, and at 8 P. M. C. C. Ramsey on the Restitution, reading from Micah. Wednesday A. M. G. M. Myers spoke on Anglo-Israel, 3 P. M. Amos Adams on The Mortality of Man, Heb. ii. 6. Wednesday evening, C. C. Ramsey on The Coming Man. Thursday morning J. S. Arnold spoke on The Design of Baptism, followed by a short talk from J. K. Thompson. Jno. Foore spoke again in the afternoon, and in the evening W. J. Orem discoursed on The Coming Woman. Friday morning C. C. Ramsey gave his last address, the subject being, Christian Life. Friday P. M. W. Crowe spoke on The Gospel, followed in the evening by Amos Adams on the Resurrection. Saturday D. M. Hudler spoke both in the morning and afternoon. The morning address was from Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. Saturday evening the subject was, The History of the Jews, discussed by A. Adams. Sunday morning W. J. Orem delivered his last address, the subject being, The Gospel, W. Crowe spoke in the afternoon, and the meetings closed with an address by D. M. Hudler on the Restoration of Israel. We had Bible Readings each morning at 7 o'clock and Bible Class at 9 o'clock. Saturday Miss Della Westburg read a paper on The Holy Spirit.

Everything went off pleasantly and harmoniously. The Bible classes were interesting and instructive, many points being discussed in the spirit of "Come and let us reason together." Seven were immersed by Bro. G. M. Myers, at the home of Bro. Elton. One young man from Iowa on Thursday afternoon and on Saturday forenoon five children of Bro. Gould, of Omaha, and a young lady from Blair, Nebraska.

To those who have never had the privilege of attending such a meeting, and who are isolated from those of "like precious faith," the meeting was a rare treat and inspiration. It was source of pleasure and instruction to all and every one left with the feeling that "it was good to have been there" and hoping and praying for the soon coming of the Lord to carry out God's will in the earth.

The demand for the Polychrome Bible in England seems to be very great. The first supply of the three volumes issued, Isaiah, Judges and Psalms, has been exhausted, and a second edition is nearly finished.

Death of the Leader of the Christadelphians.

The death is announced in his 60th year as having taken place suddenly, at San Francisco, on Saturday, of Mr. Robert Roberts, the leader of the religious body known as "Christadelphians." Mr. Roberts was a native of Aberdeen, and in his youth followed the occupation of a newspaper reporter. In 1858 he came to Edinburgh to fill a situation in that capacity on the now defunct "Caledonian Mercury," from he subsequently removed to Huddersfield to a similar appointment on the "Huddersfield Examiner." In 1861, when Messrs Fowler & Wells, the American phrenologists, visited this country for the first time, he joined them as one of their staff of shorthand writers, and along with them travelled over the principal towns in England, ultimately settling in Birmingham, where for a time he resumed his connection with the newspaper press. About twenty years ago he devoted himself wholly to the work in connection with the Christadelphians, and during that period he published a large number of religious works, chiefly of a controversial nature. For thirty-four years he had edited and published a monthly magazine advocating the peculiar tenets of the body. He had also at different times engaged in public discussions with a number of the leading opponents of his views. Three years ago Mr. Roberts went on protracted tour in Australia and America in propagation of the Christadelphian faith, which occupied a whole year. He set out on a similar expedition about a year ago, and was at San Francisco on his return to this country, when his death took place there suddenly, as already stated. Mr. Roberts married an Edinburgh lady, who is at present at Melbourne with her two daughters. An only son of Mr. Roberts is a medical man in London.—Edinburgh Evening News, Sept. 27, 1898.

Dear Restitution:

By this time at least some of the brethren want to know what has become of John Foore, as some write that way to me, Why don't you write to THE RESTITUTION, and what are you doing? Well, my last work was in Madison Co., Missouri. I began a meeting on the 17th day of September, near P. J. Graham's, at Bush, or near there. Preached fourteen discourses, baptized seven. Four out of the seven were Baptists, two Camellites, one Seventh Day Adventist. We closed one of the best meetings that I have had the privilege to attend in many a day. One old man, aged 88, put on Christ by baptism, 71 years a Baptist, also his son, W. H. Rose and wife. Two from the Christian or Camellite, a man and his wife. It was a meeting that will not be forgotten soon. On Friday evening before I left we partook of bread and wine to show forth Christ's death till he comes. The brethren are all poor at that place, so far as this world's goods are concerned, but rich in faith, all good soldiers of the cross. If any one of the faith passes by that way, call and see them. Their houses are ever open for Jesus and his friends. Oh, how many poor people are neglected on account of their being poor in this world. All would rather go where people are rich and would be able to pay some salary over and above their expenses, all of us are good to pray for one another, and that is all right, but the railroad Co. will not take that for fare. We must have something in the shape of money. My time of preaching will soon be over. I have always been in the front of the battle, or "bushwacking" as the Kansas brethren call it. I will go on till the Master comes. Pray for me when you enter into your secret closets that I may cast my bread upon the waters, till we may all meet where sickness and sorrow, pain nor death, will ever disturb us. This is my prayer for the sake of Christ and his cause,

JOHN FOORE.

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening November 17, 1898, and continue over the Sunday following.

The Church at Plymouth is desirous of having a good meeting and we hope all who can will come and help to make it one of interest and profit to all concerned. We are all responsible for the result of the effort, and whether it is a success or not depends upon the effort of each individual. Let us come with the true spirit of worship and work together in harmony of purpose and we will surely be blessed with that spiritual strength which will enable us to come off conquerors in the end. Let all the churches be represented by duly appointed delegates. All will be welcomed who desire to attend.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled: "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Methods;" "Born to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Home.—Tune "Oak."

Weary of waiting here,—
Come, Jesus, come;
To wipe away each tear,—
Come, Jesus, Come.
A place thou dost prepare
For saints with thee to share;
O quickly, quickly come!
To call us home.

In thee we hope and live,—
Come, Jesus, Come;
Thou only canst relieve,—
Come, Jesus, Come.
Thy wondrous promise fair,
Thy loved thy home will share,
O quickly, quickly, come!
To call us home.

Transfiguration Scene, and the Lessons Taught by it.

I desire to offer a few thoughts under the above caption, not with the idea of adding anything bearing the impress of novelty or newness, for the literature of this subject is so voluminous as to preclude the possibility of such a thing. But like all great truths promulgated by the Holy Scriptures the facts are so vividly set forth by those startling occurrences upon the Mount of Transfiguration will bear an infinite amount of reiteration and each repetition causes them to shine with increased effulgence and soon to give them augmented attractiveness to the minds of all honest inquirers after the truth. No other portion of the inspired Word is so frequently appealed to nor quoted so confidently as this by the advocates of man's unconditional immortality—to sustain their peculiar view of the conscious state of the dead between death and the resurrection. For Moses they argue had been dead for hundreds of years and yet the Apostles saw him talking with the Savior. How could he carry on an intelligent conversation with the Master unless he was then capable of of maintaining a conscious state of existence. All this looks plausible to the casual thinker. But it is only to those who are imbued with that nineteenth century inheritance of the Witch of Endor times, and who give to question a superficial or incomplete investigation that this view of the case appeals with any degree of force.

According to this class of theologians it was Moses's disembodied, immortal soul that was holding intelligent converse with the Savior upon the Holy Mount. And upon this class of Bible interpreters the fact that the Moses the disciples saw upon the occasion in question manifested powers and capacities totally incompatible with an immaterial, disembodied spirit has no staggering or disturbing effect. Let us give this a little more attention than it ordinarily receives at the hands of such cursory, biased students. What does he say in the concluding verse of the preceding chapter? (Matt. xvi. 28) "Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here which shall not taste death till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom." Weighing his words carefully as we always should, what does he mean? Simply that there were those in the group to whom he was addressing himself that should not die until they had seen the Son of Man exactly as he would appear when coming to this earth again as King of kings and Lord of lords. That promise made then was faithfully kept, when at the expiration of six days he took with him Peter, James and John and went up into the mountain and was transfigured before them. That the transfiguration scene was the redemption of Christ's promise made to the Apostles six days before scarcely none will dispute. It is also very nearly universally conceded that Christ's coming in his kingdom is yet future. And when he does come it will be as an immortalized King. Having exchanged the mortal habiliments of this life for the incorruptible nature upon his emergence from the sepulchre of Joseph of Arimathea nineteen hundred years ago. The object of this transfiguration drama is obvious. They, the Apostles, were at that time acquainted with the Savior in a mortal capacity only. They had no basis or foundation upon which to predicate a conception of what he would be in an immortalized state.

The striking occurrences upon the transfiguration Mount were made simply a great lesson, a panorama of the future spread out before them by the interposition of divine power to in a measure illuminate their minds with some sort of an appreciation of the glories of the age to come. That it had the desired effect is evidenced by Peter's enthusiastic exclamation—"It is good for us to be here." Notwithstanding the fact that he was only an interested spectator in the tremendous transformations laid before his astonished gaze Peter was very averse to taking up the trials and perplexities of this life again, and wished to escape such a contingency by constructing tabernacles and remaining there. They were looking upon an immortalized King and upon the indescribable glories of the great consummation age. The point to which attention is specially invited is this, Was Christ immortal at that time? Certainly not, for he dropped his mortal nature for the immortal at his resurrection and that was an event still in the future. Yet he was represented in the grand transfiguration scene as a being that had previously passed the line of demarcation between the mortal and the immortal state. Now it is evident that so far as our Savior was individually concerned the transfiguration scenes were only apparent. This fact being demonstrated beyond any doubt is it logical or reasonable to suppose that any other portions of the drama partook of the nature of reality.

The whole transaction was simply a vision by which as previously stated the Savior sought to supplement by ocular demonstration the inability of the Apostles to comprehend the magnificence of the age to come.

This view of the case is amply sustained by the language of our Savior as he descended from the Mount when he cautioned the Apostles to tell the vision to no man until he should be risen from the dead, clothed upon with immortality. Be actually ushered into that state so beautifully and effectively pre-figured by the scene they had just witnessed. The injunction of the Master just mentioned should be sufficient to satisfy any one not steeped in the superstition of the ages of the true nature of the occurrences upon the Mount of transfiguration. To undertake to treat this as an actuality in the interest of dogmas and paganistic notions entirely antagonistical to the harmonious teachings of the entire Word of God subjects us to the necessity of giving similar treatment to other occurrences of the same nature. Peter upon the house-top is a notable example. To pursue the line of interpretation just described we should have to accept as a fact that the Great God embarked in the menagerie business upon a scale far surpassing P. T. Barnum's wildest dreams. True no one questions the power of God to do such a thing and yet we imagine that few if any will be found who will positively assert that such a stupendous miracle was actually performed.

We rather think that Peter would have experienced great difficulty in establishing the reputation of a Mighty Nimrod with the different types of the inferior animals he saw in the great sheet. Now if the power of God was sufficient and ample to make so vivid an impression upon Peter's mind without the presence or intervention of actual animals was not the same power adequate to produce just as vivid an impression upon the mind of the same person and his comrades several years before without the actual presence of the persons represented. In addition it is only necessary to say that this view of the case must be accepted as true or the Bible becomes one of the most contradictory and unsatisfactory books extant. Having partially at least cleared the gospel highway of the theological obstructions interposed by prejudice let us take another step up the mountain of truth. We have been looking at this question chiefly from a negative standpoint. Let us examine it affirmatively and in doing so approach the subject by the Scriptural route instead of the superstitious one along which the ghosts of the departed flit in shadowy outlines. Having at the same time due regard for the sign posts erected by the holy men of old for our guidance and information upon this particular occasion the beneficent hand of Omnipotence lifted the veil that intervenes between the present and future and exposed to the enraptured gaze of the Apostles the glories of the resurrection hour. The immortalized Christ as the central figure in the resurrection scenes was exchanging greetings with Moses and Elias two personages who represent two conditions of saintship in the regeneration times. Moses, that sublime leader of men, at whose obsequies angels presided, whose funeral oration was pronounced by the Great God of heaven and earth, whose weary form was reverently laid to rest in an unknown grave by celestial hands stood for the dead saints, who in that glad hour shall burst the cerements of the grave and come forth in an immortalized condition to meet the King in his beauty. And Elijah, that servant of God as a reward for an unswerving devotion to the cause of his Master, was permitted to exchange the frailties of a mortal existence for the incorruptible crown that fadeth not away without enduring the horrors of a passage across the dark river, represents those saints who shall be so fortunate as to be living when the cry shall come, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him."

The Apostles numerically superior but vastly inferior in organization. But at the same time intensely interested spectators of the transcendent glorious scene represent earth's inhabitants, who by non-compliance with God's demands, are not permitted to immediately become active participants in the benefits conferred upon others more faithful to their trust, and who now keenly realize the extent and magnitude of their loss and desire to retrieve as much as possible their impaired fortunes by inviting and submitting to the leadership of King Emmanuel. This we conceive to be the true lessons taught by this grand panorama of the ages and not the old paganistic idea that the dead are conscious after death in opposition to the plainest declarations of Scripture.

Respectfully submitted,

E. E. HELSZER.

The Issue in Africa.

France seems to be getting ready to fight England over the possession of Fashoda, and England is certainly determined to fight France if the latter does not give up this patch of Nile swamps and rude native huts. Some people think the issue is trivial and not worth fighting for, but this is a great mistake. Fashoda is worthless enough in itself, but it stands for an empire. It is the point at which two vast schemes of territorial expansion meet in deadly conflict, and the one that triumphs will henceforth dominate the continent.

British statesmen, manufacturers, and merchants foresee a time when Great Britain may lose its hold on the vast market of India and China, for Russia's completion of the transsiberian railway may enable the colossus of the North to control China completely and dominate all Asia, more or less. Looking ahead to these possibilities the British have set out to establish a great dependent empire in Africa—a new India. Roughly speaking, this empire consists of the eastern half of Africa, stretching 5,000 miles north and south, from Cairo to Cape Town, without a break, except the German "sphere of influence" between the equator and 10 degrees south, and this England will try to secure by purchase, exchange, or force. Abyssinia will eventually be absorbed in this British domain. The only region still left white on the maps is the indefinite area still called the Soudan, and it is for a part of this that both France and England have made a dash. The two claims meet and clash at Fashoda.

The Nile River extends from the great lake, Victoria Nyanza, northward to Alexandria on the Mediterranean, thus furnishing a continuous waterway fully half the length of the continent. The British are determined that their control of this river shall not be broken at any point. On the other hand France is equally eager to get a water front on the Red Sea, and in order to do so it must cross the Nile somewhere.

A large part of the long stretch of territory south of Khartum is fertile and well watered—including the region around Fashoda. Probably a million square miles of area are here included in the British "sphere of influence." Great Britain also claims another million of square miles in southeastern Africa—including the Boer republic, the adjoining Free State, Delagoa Bay, and the Portuguese Province of East Africa, though the British title to some of these still remains to be perfected in one way or another. The English are already preparing to build a railroad, beginning near the Island and Port of Zanzibar and extending to the great Victoria Nyanza, the scene of Livingston's discoveries and death.

Great Britain has a firm grip on all the Lower Nile. It rules old Egypt, with its six or seven millions of population, and with its wonderfully rich land for raising wheat, cotton, sugar cane, rice, and tropical fruits. Under British methods much of the former desert is being reclaimed by vast irrigating dams and a scientific system of canals. One of these irrigation enterprises is alone to reclaim three or four millions of acres. These agricultural projects, in connection with the great trans-continental railway, sufficiently indicates the position and purpose of Great Britain in eastern Africa, along the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean. The region is to be a second India, with a short cut to it through the Suez Canal, which England can control if it desires, being the owner of over one-half the stock shares.

The French have mapped out for themselves a domain no less vast across the northern half of Africa. It begins in Algeria and Tripoli, fronting France on the Mediterranean, and it contemplates the acquisition of Morocco, fronting on the Atlantic. Thence the French influence stretches southward to the Niger and even to the Congo, while the ambition of France is to extend this broad sweep eastward to the Nile, and beyond it to the Red Sea. It is an immense tract, including much of what was formerly the Sahara desert on the maps. With a sweep nearly a thousand miles in breadth it aspires to cross the British Upper Nile, taking in the Fashoda district above Dongola.

This whole French claim in northern Africa, counting only what has already been conceded by the other powers, embraces three million square miles. To this France is now trying to add anywhere from half a million to a whole million of square miles on the Nile and across to the Red Sea. If it should succeed it would have an African empire as large as the whole of the United States, including Alaska. England claims about 2,000,000 square miles in Africa. All but 500,000 of this—mainly on the Niger—is located in the eastern part of the continent.

France says it has the best right to seize the Upper Nile country claimed by England. Great Britain sternly and unitedly denies this, and it has notified France that it will fight for its claims. If war breaks out between these powers there is but little doubt that the British claim will prevail, for the British have the resources and strength of Egypt at their disposal, giving easy access to all the Upper Nile region, via a water and railroute which has already mastered the Nile cataracts. And if it comes to open war France will be likely to lose some of the territory it already possesses. Great Britain will unquestionably seize the French Niger territory on the west, south of the desert—a region said to be remarkably rich in tropical products; also the great island of Madagascar on the east coast, containing five or six millions of half civilized Africans who hate France.

These, in brief, are the vast interests that center about the obscure Nile village called Fashoda. They furnished plenty of material for a bitter war between the two powers if one of them does not recede. Both England and France have found out the great agricultural, mineral, and forest resources of Africa. Both have discovered the ease with which the poor, ignorant, passive, unprogressive, unorganized natives can be governed. Both have come to realize that these tropical lands and natives can be made profitable under white control and dictation in raising all sorts of valuable products, without any fear of their revolting for centuries to come. Wealth and power and future dominion are at stake at Fashoda. The ambitions of one country or the other will have to be curtailed, and as Great Britain evidently has the whip hand it will rest with France to do the backing down. As this can be done more gracefully before hostilities begin than after, many persons still look for France to recall Major Marchand from Fashoda and give up the Nile in order to remain sure of the Niger.—Tribune.

William II. in Palestine.

The German Emperor is now in Constantinople on his way to Palestine, which is part of the country ruled by the "unspeakable Turk." What does his visit mean? No doubt it means something more than a desire to gratify curiosity or to satisfy religious sentimentalism, but how much more? It is only natural that the nations of Europe should feel an interest, resembling anxiety, to know what political purpose occasioned this remarkable visit—the first of its kind made by any great European sovereign since the crusades.

It was announced when he left Berlin that William II. intended to land at Haifa, the ancient Hepha or "haven" of the Jews, about fifty-one miles from the Sea of Galilee. This place is at the foot of Mount Carmel and hard by Acre, called by Napoleon "the key of Syria." It is about to be connected by railroad with Damascus, a city of 250,000 inhabitants. The significance of the Emperor's choice of a landing place lies partly in the fact that there is a prosperous German colony there now and partly in the rumor that the Sultan may make the Emperor a present of this port, with its great possibilities.

The Fortnightly Review for October intimates that not only Haifa, but some small port on the Persian sea, may be bestowed on the German Emperor by his friend at Constantinople. That such a suggestion should be made by such a periodical is of itself significant. It shows how suspicious and apprehensive the England of today is. The same magazine recalls the fact that German statisticians have figured out lately that Palestine and Syria could support, under proper conditions, from 10,000,000 to 14,000,000 of Germany's surplus population. "To any one," it adds, "acquainted with the fine climate and extraordinary fertility of the country such an estimate appear excessive."

It is not altogether likely that the German Emperor is the advance agent of a colonization scheme, but it is possible. Germany has shown of late years a growing ambition for commercial enterprise and an astounding ability to enter it. The young Emperor's strongest desire is to make the Germans the greatest commercial people on the globe. Despite the fact that the Anglomaniac ignoramus has named him "warlord," he aims primarily to be a "trade lord," enriching his empire and stopping with colonial wealth the gapping mouths of the hungry socialist mob.

During his stay in Constantinople the Emperor visited, among other places, a German school, and in the speech he made there he used the phrase, "victorious force of Germanism." Vague as is the phrase, it shows clearly that the Emperor's mind was dwelling on business of the sort that kings engage in. A new movement in the commerce between the far East and Europe may be approaching, and the object of the Emperor's visit may be put to "Germanism" in the way of asserting its "victorious force" in the coming era. Venice fell because the Turks closed her commercial routes to the East. The Fortnightly Review recalls this fact and adds: "Our little country is at present the center of the world's commerce, but will not remain so if the great trade routes fall into other hands." Perhaps that was what the German Emperor was thinking about when he decided to go to Jerusalem by way of Constantinople and Haifa.

No doubt the Sultan of Turkey holds the key to the commercial situation in the Levant, but he utterly lacks the power to use it. If he should attempt to hand it over to his friend, William II., England and France might unite in objecting. However that may be, it is certainly true that in these days of steam power by land and water there is a natural line of intercontinental commerce which extends from the Bosporus to the east shore of the Pacific, by way of Palestine, Persia, India, Burmah, and China, and that to open it might endanger the present British supremacy in Oriental trade. There is still another intercontinental route, which touches Alexandria and passes through Palestine. "Whoever holds Palestine," says a recent English writer, "commands the great lines of communication, not by land, but by sea. Not only would the power in Syria control the railways, but would be master of the Suez canal, and in addition would dominate Egypt. With a modern power like France or Germany firmly established in Syria, the British could only remain in Egypt on tolerance."

The Emperor may find no practical way to gain a comprehensive grasp on Palestine, but, under cover of a pious wish to visit the birthplace of Christianity, he can be his own Joshua and Caleb, spying out the land and perhaps bringing back a cluster or two of the territorial and commercial grapes of the country.—Tribune.

Obituary.

John O. Turner was born May 3, 1828, died Oct. 11, 1898. Bro. Turner was born in South Carolina, but his parents moved to Georgia while he was quite small and he grew to manhood there. He was married to Rosamond Bean, Aug. 31, 1851; moved to Kansas in 1857 and settled on a farm four miles east of Plesanton where he died. Seven children were born to them, two died in infancy, and the other five are all married, but one Thomas S. who is still at home with his mother. Two sons live in Texas, one in Pittsburgh, one in Abilene and one in Mound City, Kansas. Bro. Turner was baptized by Bro. J. C. Kinsey twenty-eight years ago. I was at Prescott, south of Plesanton holding a discussion and a few meetings, and knowing that Bro. Turner was in bad health had set Thursday to go and see him, but on Wednesday morning a message came saying Bro. Turner was dead, and they wanted me to come and deliver a funeral discourse. Such are the uncertainties of life. May we all meet with Bro. Turner in the kingdom of God.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING

Notice is here given that the regular Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Christian Publishing Association will be held in Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 19, 1898 for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, and the transaction of such business as may come before the meeting.

J. H. WILLEY, Pres.
A. R. UNDERWOOD, Sec'y.

We have no doubt but our brethren are nobly working to provide the bread that perishes, for all dependents; but what are they doing for God? Are they furnishing the bread and water which will prevent hunger and thirst ever after, to those out of the ark of safety?

We are in a time when a day may bring the most important change. Yesterday the Emperor of Germany had plans for his trip through Syria and to Jericho, but now abandons all to hurry home. The gravity of the English and French controversy demands his return. It now transpires that France is inspired by Russia to practically abandon her position at Fashoda, and all at once the whole Egyptian question is opened up. The Pall Mall Gazette says: "England has been and even now is so near war that the government has carried its preparations to the farthest limits of the preparatory stage." The Eclair of Paris says: "France has now decided to raise the whole Egyptian question, which should have been done from the first, thus avoiding the humiliation of yielding to the British ultimatum. When the question is thus enlarged France will not be alone in its discussion with the Marquis of Salisbury. Egypt interests all the powers. Russia has promised M. Delcasse its most effective assistance, and, besides, Germany has the biggest interest, in view of her east African possession and trade in the far East, that the Suez Canal should not become exclusively British and is disposed to support the Franco-Russian arguments for a definite settlement of the Egyptian question."

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

The Gospel is good news concerning a future kingdom to be established on the earth, which will ultimately become universal, having Christ as King, the saints ruling with him, and all the nations of earth as the subjects to be ruled.

Jesus taught this Gospel. Mark testifies (Mark i. 4) that he came "preaching the Gospel of the kingdom of God."

The Apostles taught it. "Among all ye," says Paul, "I have gone preaching the kingdom of God." Acts xx. 5.

What is that kingdom? It is a real kingdom on earth that occupies all the territory,—for the prophet (Zech. xiv. 9) says "The Lord shall be King over all the earth, and in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one." Clearly this decrees the universality of the kingdom. Jesus announced the coming of: and the personality of its King: and its locality. But in addition to this we may add that it is to be the kingdom of Israel restored, under an immortal Son of David, who will occupy David's throne and reign over the house of Jacob, (the twelve tribes of Israel) Luke i. 30-33, and Matt. xix. 28, and many other proofs, including Psa. cxxxii. 11, and Acts ii. 30, where we find Jehovah's oath to the effect that he would raise up Christ and set him upon David's throne. That it will in no sense be a mystical or mythical kingdom, such as is often said to be in men's hearts, is evinced by the work divinely laid out for it to do. The Spirit in Daniel ii. 35, 44, makes the positive announcement that it will actually break in pieces and consume all human kingdoms, and stand for ever; yes, occupy all the territory, and stand forever.

And we would press upon the attention of any who are not familiar with the Gospel, or good news of the kingdom of God, that it is like all other kingdoms, in that, besides having territory and a King and associate rulers, and a capital city where its laws and decrees will be issued (Isa. ii. 1-3, Psa. cx. 2, 3, and Jer. iii. 17), it still have subjects. Therein be no kingdom, either good or bad, without subjects; no need of laws where there are no subjects; no need of kings or rulers if there be none to rule, and therefore we pity those who are expecting to reign in heaven. Who would they reign over there?

Are we asked by any one who the subjects of God's kingdom will be? If so, we answer in the language of the Spirit in Dan. v. i. 13, 14. All people, nations and languages shall serve the Son of Man when the dominion, glory and kingdom has been given him," and this includes the 12 tribes of Israel. Matt. xix 28.

Seeing the saints POSSESS the kingdom, along with the Son, Dan. vii. 14, 18,—and all the overcomers have the promise of a seat on the throne with Jesus, and authority over the nations given them, Rev. ii. 26, and Rev. iii. 21, this divine testimony should satisfy every candid mind, that a kingdom where there are no kindreds and tongues and peoples and nations to serve Him and his saints, every one of whom share this authority and power, IS NOT THE KINGDOM TO BE GIVEN TO THE SON OF MAN. Dan. vii. 14.

In addition to this, let those desirous of testing the validity of their faith remember that the honor and power over the nations is not promised to a part of the overcomers, but to every one of them. Psa. cxlix. 9, Rev. ii. 26, 27; Rev. iii. 21. And Paul in 2 Tim. ii 12 says "if we suffer with him (Christ) we shall also reign with him."

Let them remember, too, that belief of the Gospel of the kingdom by Paul, caused him to suffer very severely—so severely that we do not see how it could be more severe: but while we may not be called upon to suffer as he did for believing the same gospel, we understand Phil. i. 29 to teach that belief in the Anointed, which is belief of his Gospel, invariably brings suffering of some sort.

Will our readers now ask themselves, if Paul had believed in a different kingdom from that which the prophets and Jesus himself foretold, would he have been suffering with Christ then? If so, on what principle?

Suppose, for instance, Paul had believed in a kingdom in which there is to be only Jesus and the saints,—that is to say, all kings and priests and no subjects—no peoples, nations and tongues to serve him, would he have been suffering with Christ under such circumstances? Where would he find any promise of such a kingdom?

Would it not be impossible for Jesus to do what it is promised he will do, in Acts xv. 16, return from heaven "build again the tabernacle of David .....That the residue of men may seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom his name is called? The utter impossibility of this is seen at a glance, in a kingdom without subjects,—which by the way, is a misnomer—how could the residue, or the rest of men, seek after the Lord after the saints have been glorified and all the rest destroyed?

Where would the ten cities or the five to be awarded those who were faithful while the Nobleman was absent in the far country be found, if all out of Christ be destroyed when he comes?

Seriously, is there any gospel, or good news in the story of a kingdom that God has never promised?

Can a man be justified by faith in what is not true?

Did not Jesus pray, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth?" If only is lief of the Gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached will save a man, we affectionately and earnestly ask again, how he who believes a different Gospel can be justified and saved?

We earnestly entreat any of our readers whose minds are beclouded in this direction to read the beautiful pen-picture of the future age in the 72nd Psalm and ask themselves if they can find a place for it in the above theory of the kingdom, held by many: and also to ask how the prayer of the Psalmist could be fulfilled: "Let all the people praise thee, O God," when the earth yields her increase and God blesses them, and the nations sing for joy because he judges the people righteously and GOVERNS the nations upon earth. Psa. lxvii. 1-7. A theory of the kingdom that has no room in it for these prophetic utterances, is of human origin, without question.

Dear Restitution:

Never in the history of the world has the work of mankind, under the providence of God, been so far-reaching and fraught with such tremendous results as at the present time. The most remarkable thing about it is the tremendous speed with which things are accomplished.

Wholly without intention on the part of the Administration this country is rapidly approaching a situation, where a decision, more momentous than any for a century past, must be taken, and this decision when rendered will affect the entire world.

No definite policy has been reached by the Administration at Washington, or by our American statesmen. In fact the great questions have scarcely been thought of, much less decided.

The United States government is steadily drifting toward its destiny. England's necessity forced Admiral Dewey's fleet to sea. Nothing was left for him to do but annihilate the Spanish fleet and seize Manila this accomplished it became instantly imperative to send him reinforcement sufficiently strong to defeat the Spanish land forces and hold Manila. Thus, this nation, without design, without intention and almost against its will, is forced to take possession of a huge territory in Asiatic waters, with a population of nearly ten million people and hold it against the world.

Who could have foreseen or foretold the change in public opinion in this country. On April 30th nobody wanted the Philippine Islands. On May 1st few people thought of giving them up. The people of the nation have had a short time to consider the matter and no one now thinks of restoring these islands to Spanish misrule. Neither can they be turned over to other nations. We must and will keep them.

Thus in every direction events have moved and the Administration has followed. In the language of Ambassador Hay "it has been a case of the imposition of invisible hands. The moving finger has written, and it cannot be lured back to "cancel half a line."

Will the United States when peace is declared, withdraw within its old limits, and abide by its old traditions and resist the temptation of empire, or will it accept what the fortunes of war have brought and turn its face toward a new destiny? The struggle will be long and bitter, but of the result I have no doubt. The advice of General Washington, to confine our efforts to this continent and let foreign nations alone, is no longer patent.

Why should we entangle ourselves with European powers, says one. We are already entangled. Our interests are equal to those of England in keeping open the vast markets of China. England is not able to resist the encroachments of other nations single handed. Unless this nation shall assist, England will be overborne and China will be seized piecemeal.

The hand of God is leading us on to the accomplishment of his own great purposes. The war spirit is abroad in the world today as it never has been before. The Armies and Navies of the world, with their smokeless powder, are many times more powerful and destructive than any armies or navies which have ever been joined in battle.

Many long years ago the Ruler of the Universe, made a proclamation to the Gentiles, through his Prophet Joel. It reads "Proclaim this among the Gentiles. Prepare war. Wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords and your pruning hooks into spears." Joel iii. 9.

It must be remembered that the proclamation is not to the Jews or Israelites. They are therefore not included in its terms. The proclamation contains a positive command, but it is addressed to the Gentiles only. Has this prophecy ever been fulfilled? It has not. Is it being fulfilled at the present time? In my opinion it is. How is it with the great powers of Europe, viz. England, Germany, Russia, France, Austro-Hungary and Italy? Are they prepared for war? Have they beaten their plowshares into swords and their pruning hooks into spears? The peace footing of the army of Russia is 1,250,000. In case of war, that country could put 5,250,000 effective, well armed and well equipped men in the field. Germany has the finest and best drilled army of any nation in Europe. In the event of war she could put an army of 5,000,000 men in the field, every one of whom had seen at least one year's service. France could muster an effective army, in case of an emergency, of 4,000,000 men. Austro-Hungary could muster 3,100,000 men. England's land forces are not so great as some of the other nations, but her navy is more powerful than any other nation. She could muster, by calling on her dependencies, an army of from two to three million men. Italy could put 1,000,000 men into the field. In addition to the foregoing the smaller nations of Europe viz: Turkey 150,000, Portugal, Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden and Norway could muster 75,000 troops, making a grand total of 19,975,000 men in Europe alone.

All the foregoing nations are almost as well prepared for war as it is possible for them to be. The Czar of all the Russias admits this by his proclamation to the nations of the world asking for a disarmament. If the nations were not armed to the very teeth, it would not be necessary to hold a congress of nations, to discuss the question of disarmament.

Joel's prophecy struck this nation about six months ago and within sixty days we called into action 285,000 men, including soldiers, men for the navy and sea. In the same length of time we spent $200,000,000 for war ships, war material, and other expenses of the war. Truly we are beating our plowshares into swords and our pruning hooks into spears at a tremendous rate.

But is that all? Has this nation and other nations ceased to make preparation for war? By no means. I have referred to the calling of the Peace Congress by the Russian government. That call has been accepted by many of the nations, including this country and England. Less than ten days before the calling of this PEACE CONGRESS, the Czar of Russia entered into a contract with a ship building company in this country, for the building of three war ships for his government, which when constructed will excel any warships now afloat.

This nation, through President McKinley, accepted the invitation of the Czar and appointed a delegate to attend the Peace Congress, but just before doing so, not to be outdone by the Russian government, contracts were entered into for the construction three war ships, which when completed will be equal to the three contracted for by the Czar.

England also accepted the Czar's invitation and appointed a delegate to the Peace Congress. But Johnny Bull understands the importance of having his "Shooting Irons" ready, and so before accepting the Czar's invitation and before appointing a delegate to consider the question of disarmament, he appropriated eight million pounds—equal to $40,000,000—in addition to the regular appropriation with which to build and buy warships. This will enable England to build more war ships the coming year than Germany, Russia and France all combined. This is disarming with a vengeance.

Truly "they cry peace, peace, when there is no peace." In the great pending contest, the interests of the English nation and of this nation, will be identical. Outside of the fraternal feeling existing between the two nations, their interests being the same, they would naturally unite their efforts. Why shouldn't they? When they represent nearly all the Christian people now in the world?

No formal alliance has been, or perhaps will be entered into between them, but there is no doubt there is or will be a tacit understanding between them. Japan, England and the United States will undoubtedly be united in the contest for the control of the country of China and the ports of entry to that country. Their interests are identical so far as it relates to China and Chinese waters.

With the United States government occupying and controlling ALL the Philippine Islands, the three countries of Japan, England and the United States could so guard and defend these waters that the ships of other nations could not enter them. They would thus not only control the ports of China but the ports of other small countries which border on the China Sea.

England owns and controls the Suez canal and in that way controls the navigation of the Red Sea. The vessels of other nations cannot therefore, without the consent of England, approach any of the countries bordering on the Indian Ocean, without going around the Cape of Good Hope.

With the United States controlling all of the Philippine Islands, the three countries of England, Japan and the United States would have the practical control of the entire sea coast of the Continent of Asia, south of the fiftieth parallel north latitude, amounting in all to about eight thousand miles of the best and richest sea coast in the eastern hemisphere. A sea coast which controls the trade of about seven hundred million people. All of whom are heathen, to whom the gospel of the Kingdom must, and in God's own good time, will be preached. Is not our heavenly Father leading us on to the accomplishment of his own great purposes?

The foregoing results cannot be brought about unless the United States Government has absolute control of ALL the Philippine Islands. They are the key to the whole situation. Is it any wonder that England wants this nation to hold ALL these islands? Is there any doubt that we will hold all of them?

The war spirit in the world, which is more intense and more determined than it ever has been before, must be broken before there can or will be universal peace, as foretold by the prophets. There will be a great war between the Gentile nations of the world. They have been directed to arm and will, ere long be brought into conflict.

In that war England, the United States, France and I think Japan, with some smaller nations perhaps, will be united in the struggle. On the other side, Russia will be the leader, and will have Germany, Austro-Hungary, Persia, perhaps Italy and some smaller nations to assist her.

With a view to this war and for the purposes of getting ready for the same, Russia is building a railroad across Siberia. She wants to make the terminus of this road at a port that never freezes. The only ports now owned by Russia are frozen up about five months in the year, and she cannot during that time use her navy? Therefore she is very desirous of securing a port that does not freeze. To get to such a port she is compelled to build her railroad across Chinese territory. She has been negotiating with the Chinese government for a long time trying to secure the right to build her road to Port Arthur and the right to control that port absolutely. Naturally England opposes her and is determined that China shall not grant her what she wants. Only a few days ago Russia succeeded in getting the Chinese government to grant her request. Thereupon England demanded of the Emperor of China that the agreement he had made with Russia should be cancelled and set aside and to enforce her demand she sent some war ships and threatened to bombard some of the cities of China if her demand was not granted. Whereupon the Emperor of China became frightened and cancelled the agreement with Russia, and also at the demand of England he removed Li Hung Chang from office, who as the representative of the Chinese government, had made the agreement with the Russian government. The Emperor of China had no sooner done this than the Dowager Empress removed him and took control of the Chinese government herself and she will probably renew the agreement with Russia. What the end will be no man knows.

In my opinion the only thing that delays the general conflict, is the fact that Russia cannot carry on the war successfully without this railroad being completed and connecting with a harbor in Chinese waters. Russia is the aggressor and when she is ready she will bring on the terrible conflict.

It will be the last war that will ever be fought, and when it is over the world will be at peace forever. The picture is dark, but there is a silver lining to the cloud. We open the books of prophecy and learn that the time is coming when universal peace will prevail in all the world. "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isa. ii. 4.

The spirit of peace and good will shall be so strong that the whole human family, then living on the earth, will not only lose their disposition to quarrel with their neighbors, but every one will become so imbued with the spirit of love, that it will become contagious, and the wild and savage animals will be filled with that spirit and become tame and gentle. "The wolf shall then dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid.....The sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand in the cockatrice's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Isa. xi. 6. Nothing less than the eternal love of our heavenly Father for his frail erring children, would ever induce him to take the trouble to bring about such a glorious result.

Our God does nothing by halves. When he begins the "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began," Acts iii. 21, He does not stop short of a full and complete work. "The eyes of the blind shall be opened and ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. The lame man shall leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb sing." Isa. xxxv. 5.

There is so much wrangling and contention among nations and individuals that we are very apt to conclude that the whole universe has become so wicked, that it will be impossible to ever again have genuine peace and love rule the affairs of men. I have called attention to the foregoing prophecies to prove that the works of Satan will not always prevail. The blessings of God are only held in abeyance for a short time. He rules in the affairs of men as absolutely and completely today, as he ever did, and we can trust him as confidently as could Father Abraham and the Patriarchs. In the economy of God there is a difference between the nations of the world and the people who compose them. While it is true that the work for the conversion of the world will not be undertaken until the beginning of the Millennium, nevertheless our heavenly Father is working and will continue to work, to get the nations ready for that event.

I have shown how the two nations of England and the United States, following the lead of the Master will get control of the trade and commerce of the two mighty Empires of China and India. Should this be accomplished, what will it mean? It will mean that these two nations, England and the United States, would in that event build the railroads, improve the cities, establish manufactories, make them a market for all their surplus products and sell to them such things as they need. They would also establish schools and educate the people in arts and sciences and teach them how to become prosperous and live happily.

In this manner we will get such a hold on the people of those countries, that when Jesus comes and inaugurates the work of the Millennium and sends out the saints to preach the gospel to every nation, kindred and tongue, the way will have already been opened for the work.

Why should not the English speaking people and the God-fearing nations of the world be united in an alliance for not only promoting their commercial and material interest, but also for the purpose of pushing forward the glorious work of the Master?

There will be war. There will be great trouble and suffering, but it will not always be so. God rules and the nations of the world, ere long, will have great cause to rejoice.

"Right forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
But the scaffold rules the future,
And behind the great unknown,
Standeth God within the shadows,
Keeping watch above his own."

Poetry.

At Anchor.

At anchor, in a sheltered cove,
We heed no more the sweeping seas,
Though raised, beyond the swelling breeze,
To mingle with the clouds above.

We know our anchor staunch and strong,
Will hold amid the breaker's strain,
And warring winds must strive in vain
And so we pass the night in song.

At anchor in the port of Love,
The swollen seas of life may roar,
And storm-tossed breakers lash the shore,
While home, temptations, ne'er us move.

We know our anchor, tried and true,
Will keep safe-moored the fairest gale;
For Faith and Hope have set our sail
And angels watch among the crew.

We shrink not from the angry blast,
The waves shall sleep, the morn arise,
Yet troubled clouds forsake the skies;
Then, let us sing till storms are passed.

CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

The question of the organization and maintainance of local churches is of vital importance to the welfare and prosperity of the Body of Christ. Paul's words, "Let all things be done decently and in order," 1st. Cor. xiv. 40, implies organization, for without system orderly work is impossible. Also his use of the human body as a figure of the church with "Christ the head," making with the church "the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every part supplieth according to the working due of every part." Eph. iv. 16 (R. V.) strikingly implies organization of the highest type, and of a nature where every individual, no matter how insignificant, has some work to perform in the service and at the will of his Master, the head.

IS IT GOD'S WILL THAT WE ORGANIZE?

Jesus said: "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

GATHERING TOGETHER AND AGREEING PRESUPPOSES ORGANIZATION.

It is a blessed privilege to have our petitions granted of the Father, and still more blessed to have Jesus with us. We are promised both in these words of Jesus if we will come together and agree.

On the night of his betrayal Jesus gathered his disciples in that memorable upper chamber, to eat the last passover supper, and there after supper instituted a new ordinance. The old paschal lamb feast, would be no longer necessary. Before another sun should set that which it foreshadowed would be accomplished. "The Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world" would be slain. John i. 29.

It would then be no longer needful to commemorate the night of Israel's deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, but to commemorate our deliverance from the bondage of sin through the medium of a crucified Savior. Hence, a new ordinance—a token of the New Covenant was instituted.

The old type, the paschal lamb, like the arms of a cross pointed back to Egypt and forward to the great antitype, the crucified Savior. The new points back to the crucified Savior and forward to the reunion with him in the kingdom of God.

It was the will of God that the Jewish people should come together on stated occasions to observe certain ordinances, among which was the passover supper. This would soon be fulfilled, but another vastly more important event was about to transpire, the greatest event in the world's history, which it would be doubly important to commemorate.

After the passover supper therefore, "Jesus took bread and gave thanks and brake it and gave it unto his disciples saying, 'this is my body which is given (not broken) for you. This do in remembrance of me.'" "And the cup in like manner after supper, saying, 'this is the new covenant in my blood even that which is poured out for you.'" (R. V.) Matt. xxii. 19, 20. Thus the new ordinance was instituted and handed down to his followers for their continued observance until fulfilled by reunion in the kingdom of God.

It is evidently the will of the Master that we should come together at stated intervals to thus in sacred concourse and in the communion of the bread and wine "eat his body and drink his blood." John vi. 54. Otherwise he would not have instituted this ordinance and his wish is law with those who love him. Nay, this is more than an expressed wish. The words, "this do in remembrance of me" embody a command.

Hence we find the early Christians "continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship and in the breaking of bread and in prayers." Acts ii. 42, (R. V.) In order to continue steadfastly in doing these things it was necessary to assemble at some given place at a stated time, and follow some system. This is organization. Such a gathering constituted a church. Paul says, 1st. Cor. x. 16. "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread."

The central object of these gatherings was in old times to partake of the Lord's supper, and indulge the thoughts, suggestions, self-examination, and the renewal of spiritual vigor which surround it and spring from it. That such was the case is evident from the Scriptures. Luke says, in Acts xx. 7, "On the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them." The fact of their coming together to break bread presupposes a regular assembling for that purpose, of which Paul took advantage to deliver a sermon.

There has been no change authorized. No other or later command has been given. Men may have changed or lessened the importance of the ordinance in their own minds, and changed the times of its observance, or forgotten the central object of the gathering of the church, but God has not changed, and I am sure Christ will be best pleased with those who, other things being equal, continue faithfully to remember him in the way he himself instituted. Those who neglect such assembling are missing a blessed privilege.

IS IT IMPORTANT?

Was an ordinance of the Lord ever instituted that was not important? Did God ever hold a man guiltless who counted any of his ordinances unimportant or neglected them? Jesus himself instituted it and commanded its observance.

Paul shows how important he esteemed it in the severe lecture he gave the Corinthians (See 1st. Cor. xi.) for having corrupted it into an unbecoming feast. They came together, it is true, seemingly according to an established custom, and the central object of their coming seemed to be to partake of the Lord's supper, but instead of making a communion or community service of it, feeding on the spiritual rather than the carnal food, each brought his own supper, sufficient to satisfy his carnal appetite, and went off into his own little corner by himself to eat it, so that the spiritual object—the communion of the body and blood of Christ was lost. While some went hungry others were drunken. The apostle reminds them that they have houses to eat and drink in and said "If any man is hungry let him eat at home."

The Lord's supper is not to satisfy a carnal appetite, but is of a spiritual character, designed to keep alive in our hearts the memory of the great love of Jesus as exhibited in his bruised body and shed blood.

After reprimanding the Corinthians Paul further says: "For I received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you." Mark carefully the language. It came from the Lord through the medium of the apostle Paul. Would the apostle lay such stress upon it if it was unimportant, if it was a thing which could be observed or neglected at will? "That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread: And when he had given thanks he brake it and said, 'Take, eat: This is my body, which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me.' After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, "This cup is the new covenant in my blood: This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death 'till he comes.'"

Then he shows how important it is by teaching how careful we should be how we eat of this bread and drink of this cup, because if it is done unworthily we become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord—murderers of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is therefore needful for us to be careful and examine ourselves; otherwise, we are in danger of bringing condemnation upon ourselves. Because the Corinthians were eating and drinking unworthily he says, 20th verse, "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep," undoubtedly referring to spiritual weakness and sickness and spiritual death—a kind of weakness, sickness and death of a much more serious character than mere bodily afflictions.

As again showing the importance of these assemblings Paul says, Heb. x. 25, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." "For if we sin willfully after that we have received a knowledge of the truth there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin."

Is it then a willful sin to forsake the assembling together to remember the Lord's death in this ordinance? He is talking about the covenant and the sacrifices old and new. That is the theme of the chapter. He then goes on to say, "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?"

Does he mean that those who neglect this communion of the body and blood of Christ are despising the law of God and trampling under foot the Son of God and counting that precious blood wherewith we are sanctified an unholy thing? If there are any who have forsaken assembling themselves together, which God forbid, let them answer.

Read this chapter carefully, weigh it well, especially in connection with the significant words of the same writer in the 11th of Corinthians. We cannot afford to slight the love of Christ.

In the early days of the church, following the apostles as well as in the apostles' time, this ordinance was considered of the utmost importance and was celebrated with great regularity. It was not only celebrated upon the regular assembly days, the first day of the week, but on many important occasions of life such as marriages, or deaths, or in commemoration of martyrs. It was also considered so important that every one should partake of it that if any of the members were sick or were shut up in the prisons on account of their faith and thus were unable to attend, the deacons carried the ordinance to them. In Africa it was the practice of many of the members to carry portions of the bread and wine home with them after its celebration that they might begin another new day by partaking of the consecrated food the next morning.

From the first period after the apostles there was attributed to it great efficacy, but as the church in time began to degenerate, ideas of the wonderful and mystical began to be associated with it. These extreme views only tend however to confirm the importance attributed to it by the early Christians.

Some, however, held to its original intent and celebrated it in its original simplicity, and I firmly believe not a week has passed but that somewhere, somehow, some faithful souls, even though in mountain fastnesses, catacombs or dens and caves of the earth, have remained faithful to the Master by thus assembling in remembrance of and communing with his body and blood, and that the chain will not be broken but his death will thus be openly published until the grand consummation, when all the faithful will partake with him in grand reunion in the kingdom of God.

FORM OF ORGANIZATION.

The method of organization of the early churches, how the services were conducted, what officers ruled them, how such officers were selected, the length of the term of office, and the days and hours of gathering, how often the communion was celebrated, is not clearly revealed.

While God made clearly defined rules regulating the assemblies of the Israelites, he seems to have left much to the discretion of the churches, probably that the church might adapt itself to the varying conditions to which it has been subjected during the years of its existence.

A form of organization which would fit a flourishing church in a peaceful city might not be adapted to one hiding itself in the mountain fastnesses or in the catacombs, and an organization made for a church with a numerous membership would not fit two or three gathered together in Jesus' name.

The first organization seems to have taken the form of a commune. The record says, Acts iv. 32, "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own, but they had all things in common."

In course of time however trouble grew, seemingly through a lack of system. Some of the widows were neglected in the daily ministrations. So the apostles, in order that they themselves might be free from such cares, called the multitude of the disciples together and asked them to elect seven men of honest report who should have charge of the distribution of food, etc., in the community. (See Acts vi.)

These seven deacons were elected by the church and the choice of the church confirmed by the apostles. How they were selected we are not informed. It was customary at that time to make such selections or elections by lot or ballot. (See Acts i. 26.) So in all probability that was the method used.

This community system seems to have been broken up by persecution, in which Saul, afterwards called Paul, was conspicuous, when the church at Jerusalem was broken up and its members scattered. We read that those who were scattered abroad through this persecution went everywhere preaching the word, and they seem also to have followed some system of organizing churches. Hence we begin to read of churches in different places.

Thus in xi. 26, 29, 30, we read: "And it came to pass that for a whole year they," that is Paul and Barnabas, "assembled themselves with the church and taught much people. And the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch." And in the 29th verse, "Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea. Which also they did and sent it to the elders by the hand of Barnabas and Saul."

We learn from this that a church had been established at Antioch and that a relief system was organized to send relief to suffering brethren in Judea, and that such relief was sent by Paul and Barnabas, and delivered to certain officers of the churches called elders.

In Acts xiv. 25, we learn that it was customary for Paul and Barnabas, and doubtless other evangelists, to ordain elders in the several churches they organized and visited. How they were selected, and elected, and how long they held their terms of office is not stated.

The name elder as applied to such officers is of Jewish origin, and doubtless the elder in the Christian church occupied the same relation to the church that the elder did in the Jewish congregation, viz: that of an overseer.

There seems in some instances to have been more than one elder to each church. For example, in Acts xx. 17, the record says, "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church."

And in the 28th verse ye calls these same elders bishops or overseers, whose duty was "to feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood."

That the terms elder and bishop are practically synonymous, and were so used by the New Testament writers, and applied to the same officers is further evidenced by Philippians i. 1, "Paul and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons."

Bishop means overseer, and deacon from diakonos, minister or minister. One's duty evidently was to preside and oversee the spiritual welfare of the church, the other to minister to it in other matters. Of the qualification of elders or bishops Paul says, Titus i. 5, "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee: If any be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children, not accused of riot, or unruly. For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre; but a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate, holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers."

He also gives similar rules in Tim. iii. beginning with the 1st verse. Of the qualifications of deacons he says, 1 Tim. iii. 8, "Likewise must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; hold the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of deacon, being found blameless. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things. Let the deacons be the husband of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus."

The duty of the elders seems to be to oversee or have the care of the Church of God. Paul says, 1 Tim. iii. 5. "For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the Church of God?"

They were also to be teachers of the Word. See 1 Tim. iii. 2; Titus i. 9. They are to rule over the church but not necessarily to minister to the Word; that is, proclaim the gospel to outsiders, but if they added this to their duties they were counted worthy of double honor. See 1 Tim. v. 17. "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine."

It was also seemingly a part of their duties to visit and pray over the sick, as the record says, see James v. 14. "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up."

The duties falling to the lot of deacons is nowhere plainly stated. In the pioneer organization at Jerusalem the seven deacons were appointed to wait upon tables and look after the distribution of food and other matters of that character. Following this thought, as ministrant, it would fall to the lot of the deacons of later churches to provide and see to the distribution of the constituents of the Lord's supper; see to the collections and finances of the church, and the distribution of the church's relief funds, and other matters of a like character.

We find that two at least of the seven deacons of the pioneer church were also ministers of the word. Paul frequently calls himself a diakonos, or minister, see Eph. iii. 7.

Another officer in the primitive organization was the evangelist, which means one who announces good tidings. Philip was called an evangelist. See Acts xxi. 8; 2 Tim. iv. 5. Paul and Barnabas and all who went from place to place preaching the word were evangelists. In addition to their duty of announcing glad tidings they were to organize churches, set them in order, appoint elders, etc. See Titus i. 5.

HOW SHALL WE ORGANIZE AND OFFICER CHURCHES AT THE PRESENT TIME?

On the principle that God knows best, our wisest plan would be to follow the precedent of the early churches as closely as the meagre information as to the form of organization they followed will permit. As to the minor details where no instructions or precedents are found it is evidently intended that the churches should use their own discretion.

The duty and necessity of organization is plain and evident. How many may constitute a church is also plain, —"where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst of them." Two is more than one. A man and a wife make two and may constitute a church, and if isolated ought to hold communion service at regular stated intervals. Why not do so as well as hold family worship, which I hope none neglect.

If there are two believing families that can assemble all the better. A small organization can then be effected, which in the appointed way can show forth the Lord's death until he comes, and also may become a shining light shedding forth the lustre of the gospel in their neighborhood.

Larger churches will need more systematic organization and more officers and other regular appointments of an organized society. Bishops, elders, or overseers should be elected to take spiritual oversight, preside at meetings, etc. Deacons also should be chosen, in both these officers following carefully the apostle's instructions as to character and ability. The deacons to have charge of the offerings and communion service, and other details of like character.

The primitive church had no paid local ministry. These officers were not allowed to take money for their services. Those who labored in the word and gave their whole time to it received compensation, as was proper. A workman is worthy of his hire. If a man gives his whole time to the word and is employed for that purpose by the churches it is proper that he and his family should be supported. A paid ministry presiding over local churches is a product of the apostasy.

Regular services should be held at least as often as once a week, on the first day of the week, the resurrection day. I do not believe that churches which only assemble when an evangelist or preacher comes around are fulfilling their whole duty towards God and the Master, and are missing a blessed privilege.

Each church, no matter how small, should be made to stand alone. Its members should discipline themselves by practice and study so as to conduct the services in a becoming manner. It is the duty of the evangelist to spread the glad tidings among believers, and thus additional burden should not be imposed upon him.

In organizing churches he must at the outset assume a responsibility which his experience should qualify him to fulfill. Without being dictatorial he should assist the newly organized church to a proper selection of officers, and instruct those officers in their duties, one of the first principles of which should be not to rely too much on him.

We have no inspired apostles now to direct and appoint elders, so that the broadest principles of democracy should be followed in making such a choice, letting the members of the church make free choice by secret ballot. Such officers I believe should also be re-chosen each year, thus giving the church an opportunity to easily relieve an officer from his position if he is not fulfilling his whole duty towards God.

I am a firm believer and strong advocate of weekly communion service, although there is no law upon the subject but the law of love. At the same time, the great preponderance of evidence is in favor of weekly meetings. The evidences both of the Scriptures and church history favor it, while there is not a particle of evidence in favor of yearly or monthly observance. The only argument that has weight in favor of a yearly observance is the fact that Christ instituted it on the night of the passover supper. We are not, however, commemorating the deliverance of Israel from Egypt, but that greater deliverance from the bondage of sin which the great Deliverer, the Lord Jesus Christ has opened up for us. Paul says as oft as we do this we show forth the Lord's death until he come. Surely it is best, considering its object to do it oft.

In my experience and observation I have noted that those churches which hold weekly services are as a church spiritually alive, and those members who commune weekly with the body and blood of the Savior are the ones who can be depended upon to carry forward his work, while those churches and individuals who are unfaithful in this respect are like those of the Church at Corinth whom Paul reproved weak and sickly or spiritually dead.

Of the order of service much is left to the churches. There is much instruction in the Scripture which should as nearly as possible be followed. See especially 1st Cor. 11, 12, 13 and 14th chapters. Paul says: 1 Cor. xiv. 26, "When ye come together every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying." It seems then in the early church that every one contributed something to the service. This is a wise policy—a course which should be followed in all churches. Young members as well as the old should be drawn out and exercised in taking part in the service. Spiritual strength, like physical, comes through exercise. Let every one have a chance to grow. Such churches and members become bright shining lights and will stand in the day of visitation, while those who depend upon a minister and do not develop their own strength will be scattered and lost.

Report of Labor.

I left home the first day of Oct. to hold meeting, going first to the neighborhood of Brethren, Claypool and Murphy in Clark Co., Ill., beginning on Saturday night and continuing until Thursday night following, delivering six discourses, good attendance and a good meeting. I then went to Hazel, Jasper Co., Ill., where I held a twelve days' meeting in the neighborhood of Brethren, Woods, Rogers, Slack and Shamness preached fourteen regular discourses. We had seven social meetings, five at the houses of the brethren and two at the meeting house. It was one of the best, if not the best meeting of my life, as every one went into it with such a zeal, the brethren laid aside their work, and sisters did the same. The little band are good singers and apt in exhortation and prayer. During the meeting we had communion twice. The Church is certainly a zealous one, and perfectly joined together, no discord among them. At the close of our meeting the last Sunday night two presented themselves for baptism which was promptly attended to on Monday afternoon by our beloved Bro. B. J. Woods. Then in the evening we returned to our place of meeting where we preached our last discourse to a good audience with the best of interest. There are others almost persuaded. They wish for me to return some time next summer and hold another meeting. All praise and honor and glory to God.

Your Brother in Christ.
J. S. HAVEN.

Dear Restitution:

This leaves me well, hope you and all that are near and dear to you are enjoying a like blessing. I am still contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and the battle is becoming more and more intense. I find there is a contest between truth and error, that is assuredly growing, and teachers of the various denominations are blindly leading their hearers on and all are becoming indifferent, and say it makes no difference about baptism, or what a person believes, just so he is sincere: it makes no difference where the kingdom is, just so I am prepared to get into it. As Jesus taught in vain, you leave me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. We see the multiplying evidences of God's Word all around us, the battle is close upon us, and the conflict must soon come. God has said that he will perform the intent of his heart in the latter days you shall consider it, then nations shall see and be confounded, and lay their hands upon their mouths and crawl out of their holds like worms of the earth. Thus says the Prophet, thou will perform the truth to Jacob and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old.

As true as God has said it, the Word that has gone out of my mouth shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish that whereunto I have sent it; thus my brethren, as we see the fulfilment of what God has said, should come to pass, let us hold fast our profession firm unto the end, least another take our crown, and may the multiplying evidences strengthen our faith, confirm our hope and make our heritage more noble in the ages to come, and that we may be partakers of the divine nature of our Master at his coming.

Since returning from the South I have attended the Marshalltown, Ia., Conference, and the Omaha Conference of Kansas and Nebraska and met with brethren at Omaha that I never met before and hope to meet them again under like circumstances. The Iowa Conference was a most enjoyable season. I preached for the brethren at Sac City, and hope it may be my good pleasure to preach for them again; and at Hickory Grove, Irving and Belle Plain, all of which we found some faithful, honest searchers after eternal life. My prayer is that they may be found faithful at the important hour. Amen.

Your Brother in hope,
D. M. HUDLER.

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening November 17, 1898, and continue over the Sunday following.

The Church at Plymouth is desirous of having a good meeting and we hope all who can will come and help to make it one of interest and profit to all concerned. We are all responsible for the result of the effort, and whether it is a success or not depends upon the effort of each individual. Let us come with the true spirit of worship and work together in harmony of purpose and we will surely be blessed with that spiritual strength which will enable us to come off conquerors in the end. Let all the churches be represented by duly appointed delegates. All will be welcomed who desire to attend.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and no recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Indiana Tent Fund.

We the undersigned promise to pay the sums set opposite our names for the purchase and equipping of a tent, to be used in Indiana for the purpose of evangelizing. Said tent to belong to the Indiana Conference, and to be under the control of the Executive Board of said Conference. Said subscription to be paid by the 20th of April, 1898, providing notice is given through THE RESTITUTION that enough has been subscribed with which to purchase said tent. Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Fling Thou Thy Banner O'er Our Host.

Though we, O Lord, in all our actions
Are crippled all by those we call to be
We humbly bow, must wait, and call on
To those who are with us in battle's fight
Though foes may rage, our home is cold,
Still be our Welcome and our Shield.

Created we, O Lord, to worship Thee,
Our souls — in ceaseless melody,
For us to kiss Thy pierced side, to see
We render homage unto Thee;
Didst Thou thy banner o'er our host,
Thine answer to our fervent heart

Ages on ages would stand shoulder
We raise their force and questioning looks,
In thy hands are the little and great —
What mortals in time will these or that
Or Most High, what will these mean —
Nor we thy work must finish forever.

Will make all tribes and people free —
We all are bankrupt by sin's trade —
There are special laws on this —
And [illegible] Peace Lord — or that more [illegible]
Lead thou all armies with thine own.

Haste Liberty's full meridian hour,
Break that iron reign of sin and wrong,
And host of good and pitiful power;
Build up our Ark — Hope more strong,
Go thou before, our father's God,
And light the years where thou hast trod.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES.

God, in his infinite wisdom and mercy, has not left us to struggle alone but has placed at hand, above and below, around and about, examples and lessons by which we may grow and be strengthened. In the starry heavens, where the suns and worlds revolve in order and majesty; in the earth, from the tiniest grass seed to the glory and grandeur of the mountains, in all of God's vast book of nature are found the symbols of our hope and of our faith, and of the ideals to which we must aspire.

Two little brown seeds are laid in the earth, both die and decay. From the one comes forth a plant, from the other, nothing, but the process of decay goes on and on until it cannot be told from the earth around. What a symbol of the dead; the dead, who are laid side by side, the one to come forth to glory unspeakable, the other to remain to eternal destruction, to resolve into the dust from which he was taken. What tells us the lesson of the resurrection more beautifully than the birth of the plant from the death of the seed, or the transformation of the ugly green worm into the beautiful, fairy butterfly. And so let us take our lesson for the morning from this book of God's making.

Look at that noble and grand tree, that dream of grace and strength and beauty. See how it holds its head aloft, in the proud consciousness that it is the most beautiful of God's creations. Look at the trunk, how it neither bends nor breaks, but holds itself erect in every storm. See how it sends its roots down to bed rock, there securing a hold and foundation from which it cannot be stirred; then see how it spreads in every direction, gathering the food so bountifully provided and carrying it up to feed the branches and leaves. Where can you find a better symbol of the Church? Yes, but what is the trunk without the gracefully drooping branches crowned by the delicate quivering leaves, which gather in the blessed sunshine, and send it down to stimulate and freshen the trunk? What the branches are to the trunk, the auxiliary societies are to the church. While the church feeds —the auxiliary societies stimulate and show forth the life that is present. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Show me anywhere a church which has a live Sunday School, an active Ladies' Aid Society and a working Young People's Society, and I will show you a live church, and one that will hear the "well done" at our Master's coming. On the other hand show me a church with neither Young People's Society, Ladies' Aid Society nor Sunday School, and I will show you a half-dead church, a lukewarm church, one that will be saved as if by fire.

The most important of these branches, the Sunday School, I will not speak on, as that is assigned to another, but I will begin, ladies, with you. I wish to put this question to each and every woman before me. Are you a member of a Ladies' Aid Society, and if no, why not? Are you a band of Christian workers who are united in that part of the Master's service you are so fitted to do? "This is pure religion and undefiled, to visit the widow, and fatherless in their affliction and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world." Who can so soothe the woman's bleeding heart as a woman can look after the little orphaned babies, to feed and clothe them. Oh, there is so much you can do, so much you are fitted to do that the men cannot do.

Is there no tired, overworked mother who will be glad to receive with Christian grace the help with her sewing that you give in Christian love. You are fortunate indeed if you live where there are no needy ones. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Then how about the absent members, with whom a call and a chat on church work may do so much. Not one call but many until they are warmed to life again.

Have you a Sunday School? If you have not, what a great work lies at your hands, and if you have, there is still a great work.

But why do we have to organize a Ladies' Aid Society to do this work, you ask. Is it not the duty of every Christian to do these things? Of course it is, but you know that what is everybody's business is nobody's business. Organize, systematize your work and systematize, and you have no idea how much more you will accomplish. If there is no Ladies' Aid Society, then start one. Do not say that you cannot, for you can do all things through Christ, who strengthens you. Find one other and if there are no more than two, begin with two. Do not delay and do not expect big things. Above all do not be discouraged, but work and pray and pray without ceasing, and let the blessed comfort of God's Word help and strengthen. "He who is faithful in that which is least is faithful in much."

And now I come to one of the most vital of all the questions of church work, the young people. Our young people have joined other churches, our people prefer to go to other churches because there is more society there. Do we not hear these things over and over again? Why is it so? There cannot be an effect without a cause, and I am going to lay a great deal of blame on the parents. Have you had a Sunday School of your own faith and trained your little ones in the love of the truth? If not, then where does the blame lie? If you have, after you have gathered them into the fold have you protected them and helped them along the way? You do not expect a baby's tottering steps to have the firmness of a man's. Have you taken pains every little while, to make the Sunday Service especially interesting to the younger members or do you forget all about them and feed to the babes in God's Truth strong meat all of the time. How can they stand it? Do you try to draw the younger members out, and train them to walk in your path? If the Lord delays his coming, who will take your places when you are laid to rest, but these same younger members? But they will not develop unless they are given an opportunity by themselves, where all are on the same footing and there is no criticism from the older ones. And that is why I would urge so strongly the forming of a Young People's Society. Young people—assemble yourselves together for the study of God's Word. Each and every one of you take your turn at leading the meetings. Never mind the failures, for they are the stepping stones to perfection. Make it your chief aim to draw out the youngest members. Have those who are not members but interested, attend. If you have an influence over them, keep it. Don't start with objections and say you can't lead and the members won't come. Our little society has an average attendance of six and some of the members live thirteen miles apart. Of course we have the railroads to travel on and we try to find a place of meeting that is central, but you see, at the best we have a long way to travel. But the members come and expect to continue coming. Are we never discouraged, you ask? Yes, at times it is disheartening to think that the members do not take more interest, but we carry it to the Master and go right along.

I was visiting this summer where there were seven or eight young people living in the town and as many more within two miles and they have their own church to meet in. They have no Young People's Society because they are afraid the members will not come. Have you any right to be afraid? Have a meeting, begin with those who come out, choose your officers and get to work. Choose good live subjects, expect every member to take part, if it is only the reading of a verse, have a social meeting every now and then, a meeting of the young people, not of the older ones. Then when you are in good working order, see where you can take hold of some special church work. When there is a time for all to speak, do not let the time drag. Get on your feet and say something. Help in the Sunday School work. You have no idea how your fresh young vigor will stimulate the tired, discouraged workers already in the field. And above all, make it the training school for church work.

Do not neglect to use auxiliary societies. Make them one with the church and the church one with them —each upholding and supporting the other. Then we will have no dead churches, no lagging of interest, no waiting for a minister to come before we can have a service; but we will have active, wide awake churches, churches that are longing for our Savior's coming and churches which have made their calling and election sure. May we all be among that number.

Submitted in love.

A Letter to a Friend.

Dear Restitution:

I send a copy of a letter that I have written to a South Methodist minister, that I had a short talk with one evening in the mountains, and if you think it worthy a place in our valuable paper, I would like to have it appear.

Dear Friend:

As I had to come home without any more talk with you on the most important subjects to me, and should be to all mankind, I will tell you a little of what I believe, and why I believe it. First, I believe that God is a person, because Paul says, that Jesus is the express image of his (God's) person, Heb. i. 3, and that he has form, because the Word so plainly says that Jesus was in the form of God Phil. ii. 6. I can't believe that God made man and then put his image into him, because God says, that in the image of God made he man. Gen. ix. 6. It was the man made in the image of of God, and not an image put into the man. Gen. ii. 26. Can you believe that man is part earth, and part God, when the Scriptures so plainly teach, that God made man of the dust of the ground, and that the first man (Adam) is of the earth, earthy. Gen. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 47. I cannot believe the creeds of men to be consistent, when they assert that God is without parts, and yet teach that God has part of man in him, which divides God into a multitude of parts. I cannot believe that the breath God breathed into man was part of God's very immortal nature, because the Bible says thus man and beast have one breath. (Eccl. iii. 19;) which would prove that beasts were immortal as well as men. I cannot believe that God made man's body, and put an immortal soul into it, because God says, that man became a living soul; and Paul says, that the first man Adam was made a living soul. Gen. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 45; it was the man that became a living soul, and not that God put a soul into the man's body. I believe that man is mortal, because God says so in Job iv. 17: he doesn't say, the house that man lives in. I want you to give me the best reasons you have for believing that man has an immortal soul when the Apostle teaches us that we must seek for immortality by patient continuance in well doing, Rom. ii. 7. Why seek for it if we have it? I believe that Paul told the truth, when he said, that God only had immortality, 1 Tim. vi. 15-16; and that we don't get it until the resurrection of the dead. 1 Cor. xv. 53-54. I don't see how you can believe me to be immortal, when the Word of God nowhere teaches such an idea, and when the word immortal is used but once in the Scriptures, and then is applied to God. (1 Tim. i. 17;) and the word immortality but five times, once that God only had it, once that we should seek for it, once that it is brought to light through the gospel, and twice that it is not put on until the resurrection of the dead. 1 Tim. vi. 16; Rom. ii. 7; 2 Tim. i. 10; 1 Cor. xv. 52-54. Those are the only places where it is used in the Bible. God says in Ezekiel xviii. 4, the soul that sinneth it shall die. With many people, the testimony of dying Christians has had more weight than any thing they read in the Bible. Such should consider the language of Sampson and Balaam, which said, let my soul die with the Philistines, Judges xvi. 30; and let my soul die the death of the righteous. Num. xxiii. 10. See margin of these quotations for correct rendering. Job did not indorse the popular doctrine of today, or he would not have said, My soul chooseth strangling and death. (Job vii. 15;) for it is impossible for immortality to strangle and David did not embrace the doctrine, that the soul never dies, or he would not have said, none can keep alive his own soul. 'Again, he (God) spared not his soul from death, (his soul certainly died according to that) Psa. xxii. 29; lxxviii. 50; the righteous are promised immortality, eternal life, by patient continuance in well doing, Rom. ii. 7: and this is the promise that he (Christ) has promised us eternal life. Jno. ii. 25. You claim that the terrible wicked ones, already have what is promised the righteous for patient continuance in well doing, in Mark x. 30: the righteous have a promise of eternal life in the world to come. Also the same promise in Luke xviii. 30, once more. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he (Christ) should give eternal life to (all mankind): no it doesn't read that way, but to as many as thou hast given him. John xvii. 2. You claim that when death is spoken of, as the wages of sin, it means a death that never dies, that is just what I am striving for in my weakness, eternal life. I don't see how you can believe that a man's thoughts continue to live right on after death, when the Bible says, in that very day his thoughts perish. Psa. cxlvi. 4. So if your views be correct, that the soul, the thinking part of man never dies, and the Bible be correct, that man's thoughts perish at death, then we would be forced to the conclusion that the immortal soul at death becomes a perfect idiot, without thoughts, rather a bad fix for part of God to be in, I am sure. We told in Psa. cxv. 17; that the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence; and in Eccl. ix. 5, that the dead know not any thing, there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest. Eccl. ix. 10. Is it possible that God was addressing the house or tabernacle, if so, I don't know of one promise in the entire Bible to the man. David says, in death there is no remembrance of thee. Psa. vi. 5. Many years after David died, Peter said, David is not ascended into the heavens, Acts ii. 34; and that he is both dead and buried. Verse 29. Take notice, it was not the house nor the tabernacle, but David that was buried. The Apostle says if the dead rise not, then they who are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. 1 Cor. xv. 18; would you dare say, that makes no difference to me, for it is only the house that I live in that will fall asleep. Paul surely did not believe that he had a soul that lived on after he was dead, or he would not have said. What advantageth it me if the dead rise not, let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die. 1 Cor. xv. 32. And Jesus said. All that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, (even a house bear) they that have done good, to the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. I believe that Christ's words are true, and if your views are correct, man has no distinct understanding parts, the one that hears the voice or call from the grave, and the one that you say leaves the body at death, of which I find no account of in the Bible. The statement in Psa. cxlvi. 4, in that very day his thoughts perish, should ever settle the question of consciousness after death. The Scriptures say, that the gift of God is eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. vi. 23. That don't sound much like inherent immortality. You told me that the wicked would live eternally in some place of torment.

I will send you a few more of the many reasons why I believe there is no mortality out of Christ, because God says all the wicked will be destroyed (can he destroy immortality?) Psa. cxlv. 20; and they shall be as though they had not been; and shall not be, perish, be as nothing, be burned up root and branch; be consumed: lose life; not see life; be denounced: burnt up with an unquenchable fire; shall be as ashes. Obad. xvi.; Psa. xxxvii. 19-20; Isa. xli. 11-12; Mal. iv. 1-3; John xii. 25; Psa. civ. 35; ci. 8; Ezek. xviii. 4, 20; Rom. vi. 23, Heb. vi. 8; Gal. vi. 7-8; Matt. iii. 12. I truly hope you will thoroughly examine the reasons I send, why I believe there is no eternal life out of Christ, and if my reasons are good accept of them. When you tell me what you believe, please don't fail to tell me the reason why you believe it. You said, it makes no difference what I believe about other things, just so that I believed that Jesus came and suffered and died for our sins. I was all right. If I understand anything of your belief, you don't believe that Jesus died, but that the house was burned and Jesus went to heaven, or some other place on business. A few of the many reasons why I believe it makes a vast difference what we believe and teach; because God said in Gen. ii. 17, Thou shalt surely die: and the serpent said, in Gen. iii. 4, Thou shalt not surely die. Jesus also disputes the serpent for he says, I am he that liveth and was dead. Rev. i. 18. Most all of the infidels that I have talked with dispute all of the Bible except Gen. iii. 4. I believe what God said, because it agrees with the rest of Scripture, and also with reason. Paul says, in Gal. i. 8, Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. Again, the 9th verse, If any man preach any other gospel let him be accursed. Is a man all right that is accursed, if not, I can't find words to express how much difference it does make what we believe and teach. Them that seek for glory, and honor, and immortality have the promise of eternal life, Rom. ii. 7. If we have immortal souls as is generally taught and believed, what a pack of foolishness the Bible is, (as the infidel calls it) for we are told to seek for immortality, and have promises of it, if faithful, all through the Bible, with only one contradiction, and that is in Gen. iii. 4. Many a man has stumbled and fallen headlong, over professed Christians. O how careful we should all be that profess Christianity, in precept, and example, a pattern should be as near correct as possible.

I close, hoping to meet all the faithful in the kindgom of God, under the whole heaven. Dan. vii. 27.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, NOVEMBER 9, 1898. NUMBER 43.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

"Law or Gospel, Which?"

This is a very important question, one in which we all are, or ought to be deeply concerned, as it forms the basis of our eternal destiny. If I understand the import of our Master's message to poor frail mortals, it was gospel. For three years or more his constant theme was the gospel of the kingdom of God. Near the close of his ministry, he said, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." He tells his preachers to go teach all nations—preach the gospel to every creature, he that believes (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be condemned. Paul also says, It is gospel. Hear him, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth: to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Then for salvation purposes, the gospel is the power, plan, or means God uses to that end. And there is abundance of law in that, all that is necessary, as it is the law of Christ—the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus that frees from the law of sin and death." Then brethren and friends, let me say to you kindly, be not deceived, cling to the gospel system, God's plan of salvation. And as an aid to this end, do not fail to send to Bro. Joblin for his very able and clear exposition of this question, read, loan, scatter and thus lend a helping hand.

T. E. ADAMS.

Dear Restitution:

I join Bros. Wagoner and Woodward in urging the publication, in tract form, of Bro. Joblin's series of Articles on "Law or Gospel—Which?" It should be in the hands of all who are after the truth in this matter. I will do my best to give it an extensive circulation among our people wherever I go.

Yours for the Gospel,

A. H. ZILMER.

Married.

At the home of the bride's parents 6700 Stewart Avenue, Chicago, on Tuesday Oct. 25, 1898, Brother Judd S. Lyon and Sister Louisa M. Turney, both of Chicago. May the blessing of our kind Father in heaven be upon them through life, and peace and love be theirs until we are all called unto the Marriage Supper of the King.

Egypt is the only country in the world where there are more men than women. The male sex in the dominions of the Khedive exceeds the female by 160,000. Another interesting fact is that the proportion of Egyptian women knowing how to read and write is one woman in every 200.

There has been a steady decrease during the last ten years of candidates for holy orders in England, and among them the proportion of Oxford and Cambridge graduates is also diminishing. The number ordained in 1897 was 1296, which is the lowest in twenty-two years.

It has been lately discovered in the excavations at Nippur (supposed to be the ancient Calneh) that the river of 'Chebar,' by which Ezekiel dwelt, and where he had his visions, was one of the navigable canals in the plain of Shinar near Nippur, or Calneh, itself.

The Old Testament is now recommended to those preparing for examination in China, on the ground that it is a classic of Christian countries. About two million candidates take this examination every year.

Gold was first coined in England in the eleventh century, the first round coins were not made until one hundred years later. Herodotus says that Croesus was the first ruler to order gold coins to be made.

The longest stretch of straight railroad line in America is on the Lake-shore railway, beginning at a point three miles west of Toledo, O., and running sixty-nine miles without a curve.

THE way to live for God is to live for him wholly.

HE who prays fervently should watch strictly.

"THE most profitable work that we can do, is to work out our salvation with fear and trembling."

"THE person who loves to pray, prays because he loves to, and loves to pray the more, the more he prays."

WILL you be at the Indiana Conference? Do try to come. We need your help in every way. Begin today to get ready to come.

THE Christian's brow would be ofter unclouded, did he visit more frequently the mount of prayer. There the wounds received by contact with the world are all healed, and the heart rests in the fulness of infinite love."

W. H. P. FAUNCE says, in writing of evangellatic work:—"The field is not the church; the church is composed of the reapers thrust out into the field. God help us to keep before our eyes the map of all the territory to be cultivated, and may we have hearts that are willing to go anywhere, or else we will be fit to go nowhere."

We hope all our friends will save us the expense and labor of sending notice regarding renewal of subscription. The time of the expiration of your subscription is known to you certainly, and you must realize that we need the money. It seems to you doubtless a small matter, and to be attended to a little later on, but while each one is but little, when gathered in to us it makes it easy for us to pay our bills. We have to meet our bills, so please be prompt with your renewals.

ON Sunday October 30 we had the pleasure of assisting another to obtain the sin-covering name of Jesus. He came all the way from Denmark with the object of bettering his condition in this life, but found something infinitely better—the Pearl of Great price. The truth, which makes men and women free indeed, was brought to the notice of Brother Aggard and his wife, a Scottish lady, by two of our sisters; and it seems to be just what they were hungering and thirsting for, —they received the Word with gladness, and would have been baptized together, but for sickness. May our loving Father watch over this babe in Christ, and not only bless him, but make him a blessing to others, and at last may he have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God's dear Son.

BRETHREN and Sisters are you all preaching Jesus the Anointed? Are you preaching his humiliation, suffering, death, sacrifice, resurrection, ascension and mediation? Are you preaching his coming again? Are you preaching the glorious gospel of his kingdom and of life to inherit it by resurrection,—the seat of the government of which will be Jerusalem, from whence the law is to go forth? Are you teaching the soul-cheering truths concerning the mundane inheritance of the saints? Are you publishing far and wide the codicil to God's will, which contains the law of pardon and peace and reconciliation and adoption? Are you making it clear to all that faith in the gospel of the kingdom of God, repentance towards him, and heart obedience to the above faith in baptism is necessary for the forgiveness of past sin,—and that the justified standing before God can only be maintained by a godly walk and conversation while life lasts? A fearful responsibility rests upon every one of us, loved ones, to hold up the lamp of life to others,—Are you doing it? Will it be said of us, They have done what they could?

McWHORTER says it is a truth of science that the plateau of Central Asia, described in Genesis as the birthplace of man, was the portion of the earth's surface first prepared for such a resident.

REMEMBER that we send the balance of 1898 issues to each new subscriber sent in before Jan. 1, 1899. When sending your renewal try and get your brother who does not take the paper to try it for a year. Or if you can spare the money, send it to some friend. You will never know, perhaps, the good done by such an action, but you can be assured the Father will make record of each item to your credit.

JESUS said "the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light;" therefore we commend to our readers what Napoleon is reported to have once said: —"The army that remains in its intrenchments is already beaten." Whether this is universally true of military tactics or not, we believe it is eminently true of soldiers of the cross. It is evident from the published regulations, that the soldiers of Jesus Christ are expected to be always on duty, except when asleep,—in fact are placed under marching orders from the day of enlistment. From the day of Pentecost,—Christ's conception of his army is that it is always on a forward movement, and not that they are to be housed up in barracks or hiding behind entrenchments. "Forward," is the order that has sounded out all along the centuries since the resurrection of Jesus. Ceaseless aggression has been the divine policy until now, and ever will be till the Captain of our salvation comes and in person assumes command. And experience teaches that that is the only way they can hold the ground already taken. Brethren, let us move on, and push the enemy hard, and then we will never be surprised, never repulsed, although our ranks be greatly thinned. One vastly greater than Blucher will come to our relief before long, and the defeat of the adversary will be immensely greater than that at Waterloo.

THIS is called a wonderful age of progress, and so it is in many respects; but in one direction there is no progress, as may be seen by the fact, that on the 28th of December, 1856 our dear brother J. L. Winge, reported to the Expositor and Advocate in outline, a discourse he heard at Pontine, Ill., by a United Brethren preacher,—his text being Psalm xlvi. 4, "There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High." He said the gospel was called the river, the streams the several divisions of the Protestant church; and finally made the church answer to the description of rebuilt Jerusalem in the Age to Come! In concluding Bro. Winge said:

"Such is a specimen of the doctrines preached by this poor man, remarkable only for zeal, to a large community, the most inveterate lovers of this world's goods and its false pleasures! The Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians are all here, but do not possess even the empty form or cold ceremony of religion.....They can only talk of religion as something of vital importance which the most vicious and profligate in the community should pay deference and respect to; or that themselves should have meetings to attend on Sundays so as to be fashionable and respectable."

Themselves being witnesses, the moral and religious status of the Populars has not only not improved, it is far worse, and their best men are making frantic appeals to their members to pray for God's converting power to be sent, that the tide may be turned the other way. It is heart-saddening, to hear such wails for the converting power to be sent when it is here already, and only requires their heart acceptance to make it operative But it saddens from one view, and gladdens from another; for we are thankful all over to know that God, who caused the light to shine out of darkness, has shined into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ;" and the rapidly increasing darkness only assures us that we are nearing the break of day. Soon may it come, we pray.

The Mark!

In Phil. iii. 14 Paul says: "I press toward the Mark for the prize of the High calling of God in Christ Jesus." It is said that no person can walk straight in any direction unless he follows some path, or mark, or is guided by some distant object toward which he may direct his course. Let a man be blind-folded, and if he attempt to walk in a right line he will invariably find himself describing a circle, as persons lost in forests or on trackless wastes usually travel round and round, sometimes wandering for days yet never going far from the point whence they started. The way we have heard this explained is, by the unequal strength of the two sides of the human body, one foot walking a little faster than the other, and so turning the steps from a straight line to a circular course, and sending a man round in aimless and endless wanderings. We do not know this to be correct. But if a person be blind-folded and placed in a large field and told to find his way to a particular distant point he will probably not find it. Nothing but sight can guide the steps,—and the sight must be rightly directed, and steadily fixed upon some distant object, or the steps will unconsciously diverge from the desired course. The lesson for us is obvious. Men blinded by the God of this world wander round and round, chase this phantom and that. But he who would make straight paths for his feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way,—who would, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, pursue a steadfast course, must fix his eye upon some mark toward which he may direct his steps and unflagging zeal. "Wherefore laying aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the beginner and finisher of our faith." Oh, what a star to steer by! Taking him for our pattern, our guide, our beacon, our bright and morning star, we may walk boldly and confidently through this world of snares and cares, and errors, and mistakes, assured that as long as our eye is fixed on Jesus our feet will never leave the narrow way of life. Oh beloved, let us forget the things that are behind, and reach forward to the things that are before, and press toward the Mark for the prize of the High calling of God in Christ Jesus.

News Notes.

The Spanish vessel, Maria Teresa, that was raised by Hobson at Santiago bay, was swamped during a storm while on its way to Norfolk to be repaired. The crew all escaped, but the vessel is lost.

It is now stated that the Sultan of Turkey gave the German Emperor, while on his visit to the Holy Land, a certain piece of land on the Mount of Olives, and the Emperor at once turned it over to German Catholics there, notifying the Pope at Rome of his gift, and receiving his thanks in return.

The peace negotiations between America and Spain proceed very slowly. A demand was made on Spain for the relinquishment of all the Philippines, and the proposition was rejected. Another delay is the result.

While it is assured that the French will be withdrawn from Fashoda, yet the English navy has not ceased its gigantic preparations for war. France must retire from other points where Marchand has established posts, for England is determined to press the Egyptian matter to a settlement now. Should France persist in her course, it is not improbable that she may find her seaport town blockaded, and then the colonies in continents and islands throughout the world will be at the mercy of the numerous English fleets which are already moving to vantage grounds, preparatory to the onslaught. Englishmen say "Why delay longer? We are now ready. Force the matter to settlement at once." Rumors of wars are heard.

In China the only treaty port in the province of Manchuria, New Chwang, is menaced by Russia. In a month it will be naturally closed by ice, and then when outside nations are cut off the Russian overland will be able to quietly do his work.

Despatches from Washington tell of a fire on Sunday last which destroyed the historic Supreme Court chamber, the Congressional Law Library, with 75,000 volumes, and several other rooms adjoining in the National Capitol building.

Indiana Co-Workers.

I wish to especially call the attention of Indiana co-workers to the notice of the Conference to be held at Plymouth, Nov. 17 to 20. I notice that the churches which are generally represented at the Conferences are the most eager to further the proclamation of the truths we hold dear. May I ask the following named churches in particular to send delegates? Roll, Pleasant View, Colfax, Schreiberville, Olio and North Salem. May we not see your representatives at Plymouth from Nov. 17 to Nov. 20? We meet for study, for exhortation, for instruction, and for WORK.

Russia's Great Canal.

St. Petersburgh, Oct. 20.—Russia's disarmament proposition and the war talk, which keep all Europe busy just now, are responsible for the fact that an immense Russian undertaking has been kept from the outside world, though it is so enormous in its possible results that it may mean a revolution in industrial conditions in Europe, and indeed in the world, and a complete change in the naval programme of the powers. The project is nothing less than a ship canal across the Empire which shall connect the Baltic sea with the Black sea so that the largest battle-ship can pass through it at reasonable speed. Great as the plan is, it is so simple in its engineering aspects, and also from a financial viewpoint that the only wonder is that the work has not been done long ago. Though the waterway will be ten times as long as the Suez canal, the territorial conditions are so favorable and the existing waterways are so large and deep and convenient in their natural direction that only about 150 miles of the 1000 miles will need to be dug, and comparatively little dredging will be required to complete the availability of the natural waterways.

The least width of this great ship canal is to be little more than 213 feet at water level and 114 feet at the bottom. The depth will be twenty-nine and one-half feet uniformly. The Baltic sea terminus of the ship canal is to be the port of Riga. Riga is on the mouth of the Dvina river, which is navigable for many miles from its mouth. The channel of the Dvina river will be used for the canal as far as Dunaburg, where an artificial canal will branch off across the Lepel watershed and into the Beresina river, a confluent of the Dnieper, the third largest river in Europe. Here there is little work except dredging necessary, and the canal-builders will utilize the course of the Beresina to the Dnieper river, meeting the latter stream somewhere near Lviel. Then the Dnieper channel will be followed to its mouth on the Black sea, where the port of Kherson now is. The topographical conditions are so favorable that the canal needs only two locks, one at each terminus, and the soil of almost the whole territory through which the canal will pass is of the best possible character, being clay of exceptional consistency and of such good quality that the bricks and other necessary materials can be manufactured, as the work proceeds, from the earth which is dug up.

Five years is the time which it is calculated will be necessary to complete the work and open the canal for shipping. The cost is estimated at only 200,000,000 rubles, or $154,400,000.

Besides the two terminal ports, fifteen inland ports are to be created from cities that are almost isolated at present. The canal will practically give them the importance of coast cities, for in each it is planned to construct harbor facilities in which the largest ocean-going vessels can lie at anchor and take and discharge cargo without interfering with the commerce of the canal.

The engineers who have been planning this great waterway estimate that the largest ship can steam through it at the rate of six knots an hour, and thus go from the Black sea to the Baltic in a little less than seven days. The branches of the Dnieper, most of which are deep and wide, can be opened as feeding canals, and thus an immense inland territory of Russia will be opened to the outer world.

Perhaps the most direct interest for Americans is the fact that this ship canal will open a cheap and quick route of transportation to the wheat growers and petroleum producers of Russia. They can reach the Baltic and Mediterranean with equal facility and economy, and thus supply Asia and Europe and Africa more quickly and economically than can the Americans. The canal passes through the best petroleum territory. Russia expects that the facility of intercourse which the canal will furnish will give great impetus to many industries which are prosecuted at present only for home purposes, and which could be extended enormously when the markets of the entire world are open to them. What this means can be estimated from the figures that show the wonderful growth of the population of some of the cities which will be ports on the canal when it is finished. There is Ekaterinoslaf, near Kherson, for instance, which has doubled its population and size in less than twenty years. Odessa, with 404,000 inhabitants, and Lodz, with 314,000, have grown with a rapidity that would be remarked even in the United States, the country of rapid urban growth. Riga has 282,000 inhabitants, and is growing at a rate which promises to double this number in ten years. Kief has 230,000 inhabitants. All these cities, and a half dozen others with more than 100,000 inhabitants each, will be in easy communication by water, the cheapest of routes, with the markets of Europe and America.

In the effort to drive the American petroleum out of the Russian markets the Russian producers always have brought all possible influence on the government for a reduction of freight rates, because they saw that only in this way could they fight the petroleum from the United States' refiners.

The government helped them several times, and the rate now is only 0¼ cents a gallon, throwing a heavy burden on the roads, without apparently any great corresponding benefit to the shippers. The ship canal will be the one thing that they need.

The Russian navy will gain immeasurably in effectiveness from the new canal. Its fleets are separated hopelessly now. The Black Sea fleet is shut in by the Dardanelles, and could not make connection with the Mediterranean fleet except by breaking through. Even if the two did manage to combine in that way they would be penned in a sea both exits of which are held by Great Britain, Gibraltar commanding one and the Suez canal the other.

With the canal the entire question in time of war would resolve itself into a question of commanding the Dardanelles, with a immense advantage on the side of the Russians. Should the Black sea fleet, on the other hand, be menaced by a victorious enemy, the canal would save it, for where the ships now would be locked up helplessly, with the canal they could steam into the Baltic in a week and refit or carry offensive operations on hostile northern coasts long before the fleet which menaced them in the south could steam through the Mediterranean and meet them in the North Sea.

In addition to this the Russians have almost completed their work on their new ice-free harbor in the Baltic, which will offer a safe winter port for their northern navy. It is within striking distance of the most eastern German coast fortification, and, with Riga well fortified, the Baltic Russia will be impregnable and a steady menace to all the other powers. —Inter Ocean.

Armed Alliance Between Germany and Turkey.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The Frankfort Zeitung says it learns from a well-informed source that Emperor William's visit to Turkey led to an agreement by which Germany undertakes to support the integrity of the Sultan's Asiatic possessions, for which Germany will receive commercial and industrial privileges. The paper adds that it is believed this agreement is tantamount to an armed alliance between the two countries.

A number of rumors as to the real objects of Emperor William's visit to Constantinople and the Holy Land have been in circulation ever since the intention of his Majesty to visit the Orient was announced about a year ago. These alleged purposes included important railroad concessions to Germany, the ceding of territory in Syria to Germany for colonizing purposes, the ceding of the Port of Haifa in Palestine, the ceding of the Island of Rhodes to Germany, and the granting to Germany of the right to plant a large German colony along the whole frontier at Tripoli.

This last agreement it was added, was intended to protect the Sultan against French encroachments across the Tripoli-Tunis frontier, and would also avoid granting Germany a concession in Asia Minor, which would induce Russia to demand compensation.

On the other hand, it has been announced that some of the powers have notified Turkey that she will not be permitted to cede any territory to Germany; and Russia, it was announced from Berlin on Saturday last, was arriving at an understanding with Austria and France to provide against the accomplishment of certain German plans in the Orient.

Constantinople, Nov. 6.—M. Zinovieff, the Russian Ambassador to Turkey, has formally proposed the appointment of Prince George of Greece as Commissioner General of the European powers in Crete.

Russia's is going to turn the harbor of Libau, on the Baltic, near Riga, into a first class naval station and fortress. The port will be closed to merchantmen and foreigners, for whom the harbor in Windau is being fitted up.

Poetry.

Something Kind

If thou can'st tell me something kind
That has been thought of me,
If thou can'st lift my spirit up
To moods of buoyancy,
Then speak the words, I pray thee, dear,
However light they seem,
Withhold not from me anything
That adds to life's sweet dream.

If thou can'st tell me of some one
Whom I have chanced to aid,
If thou can'st point me to some spot
That I have brighter made,
Then whisper softly unto me,
In accents low and low;
The kind truth never carries one harm,
But stirs the heart aglow.

So come with light and warmth and cheer
To meet me every day.
Reflect to me the world's bright smiles,
And hide its frowns away.
Oh, hast thou sorrows of thine own?
Have others injured thee?
I chasten as them will, then I feel
My tender sympathy.

But if some cruel, heedless tongue
Has uttered words to hurt,
With justice or injustice mixed
My errors, hesitate
Before thou tell'st me what will bring
But shadows in my life.
God knows we all have need of love
To calm our secret strife.

If thou can'st tell me something kind
That has been thought or spoken,
If thou can'st lift a spirit up
Too oft by treachery broken,
Repeat it, dear, my faith inspire,
However vain it seems,
For I would ask be trustful still,
Nor wake from life's sweet dreams.

America and England in the Pacific.

Two hundred years ago William Patterson, the founder of the Bank of England, warned Great Britain to beware of American influence in the Pacific. He declared then that if neither England singly nor the maritime powers of Europe jointly seized the American "isthmus America would seize it and thereupon take possession of the Sandwich Islands. Stationed thus in the middle of the Pacific, and on the east and west sides of the new world, the Americans, Mr. Patterson maintained, would form the most potent empire of history—potent not only in dominion of mainland but also in dominion of the sea. "They can make the tour of the Indian and South-Seas," he said, "collecting wealth by trade wherever they pass. During European wars they may have the trade of all. If blessed with letters and arts, they will spread civilization over the universe. Then England with all her liberties and glory may be known as Egypt is now."

This prophecy did not fall on deaf ears. Ever since it was uttered England has been striving to control the Pacific. She possesses the key to the eastern entrance. She has Gibraltar, Malta, and Cyprus, lending to the Suez canal, which she controls. At the mouth of the Red sea she keeps guard at Aden, Perim, and on the Somali coast. She is supreme in the Indian ocean. The Indian peninsula is a part of the British empire, and England holds the outlet to the Western Pacific—the straits of Malacca—where she owns more territory than any other country in the world, except China.

English statesmen had the control of the Pacific in mind when they founded new colonies in Australia, when they occupied scores of islands in the great ocean, and when they developed African colonies from the Cape of Good Hope northward. They had it in mind when they tried to capture the valley of the Columbia river, and when they attempted to bar the way to exclusive American control of the isthmus by means of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. While American statesmen were neglecting the Pacific, England by force of arms or diplomacy was pushing to every point of vantage. It was not until Seward said in the Senate thirty years ago, "The Pacific ocean, its shores, its lands, and the vast regions beyond, will become the chief theater of events in the world's great hereafter," that American statecraft concerned itself with the great ocean slumbering in the west of us. Since that time an attempt has been made to correct the mistakes of the old era, and within the last year we have made such progress on the line pointed out by William Patterson in 1698 that English statesmen and publicists are alarmed.

In the Nineteenth Century for October Benjamin Taylor gives voice to the alarm when he says that the war with Spain having convinced America that the Nicaragua canal must be constructed with all the speed the scramble for China should convince England that no such canal ought to be constructed unless she has a very decided share in it. Mr. Taylor makes this pregnant statement: "In defeating Spain the American Union has become a maritime nation, and by annexing Hawaii and protecting the Philippines she will become politically, as she always has been geographically, one of the powers of the Pacific." In precipitating itself into the Pacific, in committing itself to an international policy in the Philippines, Mr. Taylor does not believe the United States need abandon the principles of the Monroe doctrine, if it will stand by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The English idea of the Monroe doctrine is that England and the United States shall dominate America, and that England and the United States, as American powers, must build and control the isthmus canal. If the Monroe doctrine and the Clayton-Bulwer treaty are reconcilable, and if both must fall before the advance of the United States into the Pacific, then England will resist. In the words of Mr. Taylor, "England's position in the Pacific is too critical; her commercial and financial interests there too vast for her to allow the western water route to fall absolutely under the control of any other power, even of a friendly power like the United States."

In urging joint ownership of the Nicaragua canal Mr. Taylor reminds Englishmen that there are 878,000,000 people in the Pacific area, or more than half the population of the globe; that the sea-borne commerce of the Pacific exceeds $5,000,000,000 per annum, and that the twentieth century will see this doubled; that in struggling for this trade the United States will become "a great maritime power, whose territorial ambitions will not be limited by Hawaii or even by the Philippines."

Mr. Taylor points out that in the markets of Europe the manufacturers of the United States have to compete with experienced and resourceful producers of the old world on their own ground, while in the Pacific American and European manufacturers will compete on neutral ground, where America will have the advantage of contiguity.

Every argument advanced for his own country by this Englishman, looking to joint control of the Nicaragua canal, has tenfold strength for the United States when limited to us alone. Mr. Taylor's every argument as to the control of the Pacific has special application to this Nation today. England is alert to the importance of our new ventures in the Pacific. Many Americans are asleep or as indifferent as when the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was negotiated. Now is the time to awake. A year hence will be too late. Tribune.

Our Margin of Expansion.

The Pacific possessions of the United States were characterized by the late Secretary Blaine as "imperial in extent and of extraordinary growth." He estimated that the American territory depending for commercial outlet on that ocean comprises an area of 800,000 square miles—only three, however, of the eleven states included in this territory actually having a seaboard. These eleven states contain 6 per cent of the population and 10 per cent of the wealth of the Union, according to the calculation of M. G. Mulhall, and the three coast states possess about 60 percent of the wealth of the group. Yet, while the center of so much wealth and the natural ocean outlet for it, San Francisco, the seventh city of the Union, has as yet barely 5 per cent of the sea-borne foreign trade. Speaking broadly, the Pacific states have at present about 6 per cent of the whole foreign trade of the Union. What a margin, then, remains for expansion in these splendidly endowed states fronting that enormous ocean within whose basin may be counted the major portions of the population of the globe! Sixty years ago there were probably not as many hundreds as there are now millions of white residents in these states; Australia was still terra incognita Australis, and the wide range of Oceanica was but a geographical expression.

The late Secretary Seward was neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, yet some thirty years ago he made a prediction in the United States Senate that "the Pacific ocean, its shores, its islands, and the vast regions beyond, will become the chief theater of events in the world's great hereafter." We are now seeing the fulfillment of that prophecy. A dozen years ago there was a race for island-grabbing in the south seas that might easily have resulted in a great European war, and which left the Union Jack as the predominating flag on the broad bosom of the Pacific. The gains did not at the time seem worth the candle, but who can say what part these insular groups may yet play in the development of the Pacific? They are, at any rate, stepping stones between the two vast borderlands. Britain has tapped the North Pacific by railway to Vancouver, just as Russia is tapping it by railway to Vladivostok. The Anglo-Saxon races are filling up British Columbia and the Pacific states of the Union, just as the Amur and Manchuria will soon be filled with emigrants from Russia. Thus is Europe streaming into Asia, while Japan stands as a young giant between the old and the new, and China looks on in placid ignorance that the front of the world is being changed, and she more than all.—Nineteenth Century.

Russia Pushing Her Railroads Toward India's Frontier.

From a German diplomat who has just returned from Persia I get the interesting news that Russian influence is now paramount in the Shah's empire. Russia, without making any fuss about it, has recently completed the construction of a railway from Resht, on the southwestern coast of the Caspian Sea, to Kasbin, near Teheran and Russian capital, the activities of which may be taken as the pulse of the St. Petersburg government, is seeking and obtaining railway concessions which will make it a simple matter to mobilize the imperial army on the Persian Gulf or the Afghan frontier. The railway already completed will enable Russia at need to mass troops on short notice near Teheran, but in addition thereto Russian engineers have obtained a concession for the construction of a railway through northern Persia, and the preliminaries are already under way.

From Teheran, which lies about sixty miles south of the Caspian Sea, to Hamadan 150 miles southwest of Teheran, a German syndicate is now constructing a railway. Negotiations are now in progress between the Shah and the Czar's government for the building of a road parallel to the German railway, and another from Hamadan southeast to Bushir, on the Persian Gulf. If these negotiations are successful the granting of Bushir as a Russian coaling station will soon be included. Russia already has a naval station in Persian territory at Ashurada, on the southeastern coast of the Caspian Sea. According to present indications there will doubtless soon be a Russian railway running both from Resht and from Ashurada to Teheran, and thence through Hamadan straight through Persia to Bushir and the Persian Gulf.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I feel that I could not get along without the paper as it is all the spiritual food I have aside from my Bible. I am trying to do a little missionary work as I feel that I do not want to let my zeal to work for my Master get cold right on the brink of his coming to set up his kingdom and reign here on earth. Pray for me that I may be found working and worthy to enter into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ at his coming.

Your Sister, patiently waiting.

MRS. W. WETHERBEE.

Editor Restitution:

We have just heard two discourses.—"The Restoration of Israel," and "The Final Great Battle," from Bro. Hudler, who has been engaged for this work at Antioch, Ill., and other places for the coming year.

The speaking was done in the Y. M. C. A. rooms which will hold perhaps seventy-five or eighty people when carefully seated. The room was comfortably filled each evening with people who are hungry for the peculiar (?) doctrines as set forth by our brother who uses the Scriptures as a two-edged sword. Brother Hudler just gave the friends enough to whet their appetites to that extent that they are clamoring for more.

Owing to the lateness of the hour when we received Brother Hudler's notice that he could spend two evenings with us it was too late to get one of the churches and advertise the meetings. The next time he visits this place we hope the conditions may be more favorable for many to hear the words of our blessed hope

In addition to this brief report I am minded to write of another matter which I believe concerns the church so much in this day and age. I have reference to the matter of laying by us regularly a share of our earnings so that those who come to us with the Bread of Life need not go away from us hungering for the bread that is necessary to keep the body alive that God has given them. If we who receive the benefits of this preaching were required to live on the same amount of money that some of our gospel teachers are compelled to live on I fear that we would think God had dealt harshly with us. Listen! "Freely ye have received, freely give." "It is more blessed to give than to receive." "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Friends and brethren, as a rule God has blessed our people beyond the lot of the average and with the proper spirit of giving in our hearts, our church could today be feeding the gospel-hungry that are crying and the many who have never heard the glad tidings, instead of being in the impoverished condition that we are. I am so glad that it entered the hearts of some of our people at the Lanark Conference to obey the command to lay by one-tenth. When I view God's mercies to me and mine I feel like weeping for joy because of his goodness I declare unto you I believe we have made no sacrifice, nor do we deny ourselves until we give to him from the nine-tenths which we have left. "The cattle on a thousand hills are mine." "The gold and the silver are mine." "The earth and the fullness thereof are mine." So saith the Lord and why should we deny him that which is his? If we keep back what belongs to him how shall we stand in the judgment before those who have not heard of the gospel because of it?

Let us study God's word prayerfully in regard to this matter with fear, knowing that it is of no advantage to any one to gain even the whole world if by so doing he loses his own soul. I am with you all in the Spirit, watching for the soon coming of the One who cometh like a thief in the night.

S. J. LINDSAY.

Dear Restitution:

I have been going from place to place for some time, and have missed several numbers of THE RESTITUTION. but bless the Lord I have not forgotten to "Search the Scriptures." I am still firm in the blessed hope set before us in the gospel, and the one faith, one hope, one baptism, one God and Father of all. May the Lord bless you and all the good brethren who write for the paper, so many good things, it does my heart good to see the truths of the Bible so ably defended.

JULIUS SAUNDERS.

Communicated.

Brother Underwood:

Will you kindly say to the readers of THE RESTITUTION that I was mistaken in saying that the Alliance people were Ranters. They are not Ranters but are strict Immersionists and I humbly beg pardon of all concerned. They have advertised and keep a tract for sale, entitled, "Do you see the three C's?" The tract is published by a Presbyterian clergyman. But is too much piled up with bodnage and is not an exhaustive work.

The Author says—Ranters is a sin and had its origin in heathenism.

The three C's, he says—are Conviction, Conversion and Confession.

The Alliance people believe in the immortality of the soul and going to heaven at death. In this I am not mistaken.

They doubtless read Jude 14th, "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." They therefore reason that if the saints come from heaven with Christ: they must have been taken there previously. In this they are not mistaken: but when were they taken to heaven? Not at death certainly. This would contradict many plain and positive statements of Scripture But they, as the "man child" of Rev. xii. 5: "Were caught up unto God, and to his throne." And this occurs silently and noiselessly "as a thief in the night." See 1 Thes. v. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 10. But when he comes with his saints, he comes with a great sound of the trumpet. See Matt. xxiv. 31.

But I cannot say of doctrine of the immortality of the soul as our author says of ranterism that it and its origin in heathenism. Its origin is prior to heathenism. It can be traced right back to "Ye shall not surely die." But what then? Will all be decided at the revelation of Jesus Christ who have believed the Serpent's lie, or who have not obeyed the demands of the gospel in not having been baptized? If so, Jesus Christ is not a Savior but a Destroyer. Then what use will the overcomers have for their rods of iron? How can the Apostles judge the 12 tribes of Israel in the regeneration, seeing they are all destroyed?

I hold the same views in regard to immortal soul believers that I have so frequently expressed in regard to ranting believers. All these will be found in the immeasurable multitude of Rev. vii. 9, 15, and will be servants to "serve God day and night in his Temple."

In Joshua ix. we learn that the Gibeonites worked willily and came to Joshua with a lie in their mouths, yet Joshua delivered them out of the hands of the children of Israel that they slew them not because of the oath which he had sworn to them. Joshua had promised to spare their lives, but made them servants: hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation and for the altar of the Lord. And although the Alliance people are believing in a lie, yet they have not worked willily to deceive as the Gibeonites did, but are innocent of any intention to deceive.

Will our King be less compassionate, less merciful to those who have left their homes, their brethren and friends and have gone to the dark and pestilential corners of the earth to preach the gospel of the kingdom in all the world as a witness to all nations, even though they are believing the Serpent's lie, than was Joshua in saving the lives of the lying Gibeonites and making them useful? Our King will have use for a vast number, an innumerable multitude of servants, missionaries, teachers, etc., etc., before the heathen and even Christendom shall be brought under his righteous laws.

In Isa. lxvi. 18, 19, 20, the prophet describes the work that our King will have done when he is enthroned in Jerusalem. He will send his servants to the nations that have not heard his fame neither have seen his glory, and they shall gather all nations and tongues to see his glory, and shall also gather Israel in chariots and litters (coaches margin), of whom he will take for priests and Levites saith the Lord."

In THE RESTITUTION some time since, I noticed an editorial entitled "Our Work," which attracted my attention because it coincided with my views of the rewards that shall be dispensed at the great assize and because it so clearly illustrated Paul's description of the vessels in a great house. See 2 Tim. ii. 20. Paul says! "In a great house, there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and earth, and some to honor and some to dishonor."

In the illustration above refered to: those who had tickets to the exhibition were admitted with honor, and those who had no tickets, but manifested a desire to see the performance, were admitted graciously by the kind hearted manager; but were required to take a back seat or stand back there where they could witness the crowning act of the performance, even the "glory of God from the rising to the setting sun."

In the illustration; those who had tickets clearly represent the virgins of Rev xiv. 4, and those without tickets represent the innumerable multitude of Rev vii. 9, 15.

Submitted in love for the truth.

DANIEL HEWARD.

(We give Bro. Howard's letter as above. It would be well if we could bring ourselves to realize fully just what God wants of us. He has laid down in unmistakable terms that we must believe certain things and must do certain works. That these honestly continued in, we will be rewarded with the position for future usefulness and glory as laid down. To believers and doers God says, Go tell this to others, and persuade them to join my family. The future of all or part of living or dead nations is safe in the hands of the Ruler of the Universe, and until he gives us direction concerning them we may as well let them alone. We may conclude, from what is said will occur after this dispensation changes, that there will be plenty to do, and as to how it will be done, we may rest assured God is able to manage it without so many "pointers" being given by us. Our present duty simply stated appears to be to believe what God says, work the works he has given us, tell others of his goodness and love, and so induce them to come in and partake, and to watch the signs that portend the near approach of the changing time that will herald the dawn of the new day. Let us do the work God has given us for this time, and when tomorrow comes we will be ready for the duties of that day. —ED.)

Notice of Ministerial Meeting.

After due consideration it is thought best to hold our ministerial meeting at Plymouth, Nov. 21 and 22, immediately following the Conference meeting. We believe this to be an important meeting and much good may result from it. A programme will be arranged and we look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting.

F. L. AUSTIN, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec.

Plan of Work for Ministerial Meeting.

The following are a list of the subjects we hope to discuss at the Ministerial Meeting to convene at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 21. You notice this meeting will be called Monday morning after Conference closes Sunday evening, Nov. 20. It will therefore serve well as supplement to the Conference. We do not wish it to be understood that this will be a meeting solely for ministers. The practical subjects are such as demand thought and consideration of the minister particularly. One of the primary objects of the meeting is to discuss these subjects. We invite one and all to unite with us in this effort, indeed we shall be disappointed do we not have good attendance of, and assistance from believers generally. The work is arranged as follows: Morning sessions, practical topics; Afternoon sessions, studies in prophecy; Evening sessions, sermons (omitted in outline). The meeting will probably close Wednesday evening.

OUTLINE OF PROGRAMME.

Why we should be encouraged. Short statements by all.

A Minister's duties and opportunities, how to discharge them and improve them.

The duties and opportunities of all believers.

Events of today compared with prophecy, or, Today in Prophecy.

Church Organization. Does the Bible condemn it? The advantages derived therefrom.

Today in Prophecy.

How encourage churches to more active and definite work?

How engage holiest believers in a more hearty co-operation with church and conference.

The advisability of scattering tracts.

Peace is Only a Dream.

Man is a fighting animal. After 4,000 years, according to Biblical chronology, two highly civilized nations have just been flying at one another's throats. The most enlightened nation in the world, the United States of America, has been engaged in war, variously stated to be for "the pacification of Cuba," "the freedom of Cuba," "the annexation of Cuba," "a war for humanity," "a war to drive Spain out of the Western Hemisphere," and "a war to avenge the Maine."

Universal peace is a dream of the student and the scholar. That amiable person, Albert, the Prince-consort—who was imported from Germany into England to continue the royal Hanoverian line—believed in peace. At the opening of the Crystal Palace exhibition, nearly half a century ago, he told the world that this exhibition heralded the dawn of peace; that thereafter the dogs of war would never be let loose. This was in 1851. Yet in 1851 England waged war against China; in 1856 she waged war against Persia; in 1857 she made shooters like water in India, crushing the mutiny there; in 1859 France, Italy, and Austria became engaged in war; in 1861 the United States entered upon the bloodiest civil war ever known to the world; in 1866 Prussia vanquished Austria; in 1867 England began her war against Abyssinia; in 1870 France and Germany engaged in their bloody struggle; in 1874 England waged war against the Ashantees; in 1879 Russia and Turkey went to war; in 1879 England began her Zulu war; in 1882 England bombarded Alexandria and invaded Egypt; in 1883 Chili and Peru were at war; in 1883 the French were at war in Tonking; in 1894 China and Japan went to war; in 1895 Greece and Turkey were at war; in 1898 the United States went to war with Spain. These are a few of the wars that have taken place in the last half century, not to mention the scores of minor wars in half-civilized countries like South America. Prince Albert's dream of peace was a bloody one.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Jerusalem to be a Great Railroad Junction.

Within three years a man will be able to get into the train at Ostend and travel strait through to Port Arthur. In five years a person will be able to travel in a railway carriage from the Cape to Alexandria. There is yet a third great world line from Constantinople via Palestine, Persia, India, and Burmah to Hongkong. The importance of these three great lines of communication cannot be sufficiently dwelt upon; it can certainly not be exaggerated. With the Siberian railroad we have nothing to do now; with regard to the other two this is to be noted—they both of them meet in Palestine. Palestine is the great center, the meeting of the roads. Whoever holds Palestine commands the great lines of communication, not only by land, but also by sea.—Fortnightly Review.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given here with, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is represented by some one known to be trustworthy.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening November 17, 1898, and continue over the Sunday following.

The Church at Plymouth is desirous of having a good meeting and we hope all who can will come and help to make it one of interest and profit to all concerned. We are all responsible for the result of the meeting, and whether it is a success or not depends upon the effort of each individual. Let us come with the true spirit of worship and seek together in harmony of purpose and we will surely be blessed with that spiritual strength which will enable us to come off victorious in the end. Let all the churches be represented by duly appointed delegates. All will be welcomed who desire to attend.

Important Notices.

All those sending us money should give their names, post-office, county and state plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Mail Publishing Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or express money order. Money sent to either of the above ways is at our risk, unless sent in letter or at the risk of the sender. It is safer to think it over and then write it. Be sure that no one but the publisher, for whom letter is addressed, can get it. Be sure to write your address plainly in giving it. Take warning and act safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

Where you find this sign [illegible] it is a return of unsent copies. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and refer only to what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of order send both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance and your order will be more promptly attended to.

Popular Lectures by M. Jubilee.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves naturally by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who are moving for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Jubilee, entitled "The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Substitute for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Poetry.

He Cometh.

He cometh, again the time hath expected,
For long has the prophet, the Christian King
Been promised as a shepherd to his people appointed
Peace, righteousness, blessing he cometh to bring.

Lift up, our eyes, for the morning is breaking,
The beauties of daylight and glory is near
The kingdoms of evil in weakness are quaking,
They totter and fall and shall rise never more.

BAPTISM, ITS NECESSITY AND OBJECT.

The question is, What is baptism? Some people say it is sprinkling, some dipping or pouring, and some immersion. We as believers think it is immersion, but what does the Bible say. let us turn to Romans vi. 4 and we read, "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Again we read in Col. ii. 12. "Buried with him in baptism, wherein ye are also risen with him, through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." We would draw from this, that baptism is a burial, a covering and not sprinkling. We think of the story of Philip and the eunuch. Philip was preaching Jesus, and the eunuch said, "See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized? and Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest, and he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still, and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch and he baptized him." This could not have been sprinkling, for it is not necessary to go down into the water to be sprinkled.

Mr. Calvin says: "The church did grant liberty to herself since the beginning to change the rites somewhat, excepting the substance."

Mr. Campbell says, "This is the reason, then, why they tolerated sprinkling; and their concessions are unimpaired by this declaration. The fact is, those learned Pedo-Baptists conceded the points at issue now, but pleased themselves with the supposed power the church had, from the beginning of changing the rites somewhat."

Hence they change immersion into sprinkling, and a river or a bath into a basin. For Calvin and others declare that the reason why John baptized at Aenon was, because the water was deep enough to immerse. The only question between those learned Pedo-Baptists and us, is not about the meaning of baptism, for in this we agree, but this right the church granted herself.

We allege the essence of popery is contained in this right or assumption, those men did not see this, or if they did, did not think proper to abandon it. I fearlessly affirm that the Presbyterian church is founded on the very principle assumed in those words of Calvin. They have granted unto themselves the liberty of changing the rites somewhat, sometimes scarcely retaining the substance.

In a periodical entitled the Nineteenth Century, Dean Stanley, called "the Queen's preacher" says, "The change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of Apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the Word."

The reason of the change is obvious. The practice of immersion, apostolic and primitive as it was, peculiarly suitable to the Southern and Eastern countries for which it was designed, and peculiarly unsuitable to the tastes, the convenience, and the feelings of the countries of the North and West. There is no one who would now wish to go back to the old practice.

It had no doubt the sanction of the Apostles and their Master. It had the sanction of the venerable churches of the early ages, and of the sacred countries of the East. But, speaking generally, the Christian, civilized world has decided against it. It is a striking example of the triumph of reason and convenience over the bondage of favor and custom.

The author of the "Gospel of the Kingdom" says: "But he ought to know that to 'change' and 'decide against' what Christ has ordained, and to set aside the larger part of apostolic language regarding it," are things that pertain to the Anti-Christian and not to "the Christian world." Contrast what the holy prophets have said with what this modern "Dean" says about such changing. Dan. vii. 25, "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws, and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time."

Isa. xxiv. 5 reads: "The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant."

The Episcopalian "Dean" is candid enough to admit and confess that immersion is the "apostolic and primitive" way, but his effort to justify "the change" on the grounds of "common sense and convenience," etc., is a piece of impious effrontery, and a "striking example of wickedness in high places," Ephes. vi. 12. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." I use this pointed language because truth requires it, and because I am trying to save people, not to flatter them. Mark xvi. 16, reads, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." Then we are to believe something.

What are we to believe, immortal soul, sky-kingdom, etc.? We will see what God teaches. We read in Acts viii. 12, "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." What are "the things concerning the kingdom of God," that we are to believe? Acts ii. 38, Peter says: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts xxiv. 15. And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust. Paul speaks of a sleep, he says in 1 Cor. xv., "We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed." We read in 1 Thess. iv., "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring forth with him. For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then they which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Paul says in Rom. vi., "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him a thousand years." "Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality; so when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

Brothers and sisters of the faith of Abraham, I am longing for Christ to come, when death will be swallowed up in victory. I truly thank my dear teacher, Sister Ruth Whitehead, for her so patiently instructing me about this wonderful and glorious kingdom of God. She has been my only Sunday School teacher from a little child. She has brought many to see the light. May God bless her in her work.

I could not do better than to finish my paper with this quotation I here by give from the "Doctrine of Baptism."

"Our works must correspond with our faith. Like faith like works is one of the simplest axioms of philosophy. To have a Gospel baptism we must have a Gospel faith; and to have a Gospel faith we must first hear and understand the Gospel;—the Gospel therefore sustains the relation to faith of cause and effect. Conclusion, no Gospel faith no Gospel baptism. Baptism sustains precisely the same relation to Gospel faith that fruit sustains to the tree which produces it. It can no more exist antecedently to such faith than an effect can exist before the cause that produces it, a stream before its fountain, or fruit before the tree upon which it grows. The whole issue of salvation therefore turns upon having heard and understood the Gospel previous to baptism. Let us not deceive ourselves in reference to this matter. Too much is at stake to run any risks. If there should be any doubts as to the validity of our title to houses, lands, or worldly interests, we could not rest until the question of validity should be settled by an appeal to the records of lands and titles. Eternal interests are involved. If the least doubts shadow our title to an incorruptible crown of endless life, let us not rest until an appeal to the Book of Records the Word of God, shall anchor our hope upon the Rock of Ages; and having made sure our title to all the glorious promises of the Gospel, which run commensurate with the endless years of God, let us lay aside every weight and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, for in due time we shall reap the golden harvest, if we faint not."

Your Sister, looking for the soon coming King,

JESSIE M. WILSON.

Evolution.

Mr. Scott of the New York Witness, writes his view of "Evolution." He says, the Standard Dictionary has this to say concerning evolution, as to its meaning, "It is the act of being evolved or developed," etc.

In the year 1876 a New Jersey tailor by the name of Soutar was known all over that region as "the drunken tailor." He was of Scotch birth and had many good qualities. In the winter season it was the custom of the boys to bring him home on their sleds when he was found so drunk he could not walk. He tried all kinds of schemes to cure himself of his evil habit, but was a slave bound in chains to the monster intoxication. But one day some W. C. T. U. ladies prayed with him, and he prayed himself. The result was that a Savior, who can save to the utmost, broke the fetters that bound him and set the captive free. In other words he was an "evolutionist" who had evolved from a miserable drunkard to a bright and living light. That is the kind of evolution I believe in, and wish there was more of it. All hail to such an evolution that takes a man out of the gutter and puts a new song in his mouth, even praises to him who had saved and was keeping him saved. For years after, that reformed tailor lived to be an honor to his race. One day he died, and then took place another evolution. He was taken from his troubled life here to a mansion in the skies. That was another evolution by a development or growth in grace."

Mr. Scott's last evolution is a great mistake. What is the true Bible evolution? "The Lord said unto David, and when thy days be fulfilled and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers," etc. Again, "So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David." "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xvii. 15. What does Peter say of David at Pentecost? "For David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts ii. 34.

The Prophet Isaiah was sent to King Hezekiah to tell him to set his house in order, "for thou shalt die and not live." Isa. xxxviii. 1. Would he have lived if that solemn message had been carried out? Again, the same Prophet says, "Thy dead men shall live, with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." A great evolution!

The Prophet Daniel declares "And many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life"—not all. Eternal life will then begin. Take the words of Jesus, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." The gift of that kingdom to all who become heirs of it beforehand, will at the second coming of the King, be the greatest evolution that this world has seen!

Paul writes to the Romans, "God will render to every man according to his deeds: to them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality," eternal life. Why seek for eternal life if we have it already? Eternal life also is in the future, and why seek for immortality if we have it already. Rom. ii. 7. Again, viii. 23. Paul says we are "waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." For we are saved by hope. Paul writes to the church at Philippi that the Lord Jesus will change our vile body, that it shall be like his glorious body, when he shall appear. He writes to the Colossians, "Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye appear with him in glory."

Job writes, (iv. 7). "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" Job never says immortal man. Nowhere in the Bible is man called immortal in this life—no immortal soul is found in the Bible. "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, his breath goeth forth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 4, "For our citizenship is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change this vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. iii. Again, he writes to the Colossians, (iii. 4) "For ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory,"—Cannot appear with him in glory until he appears. Read Paul's letter to the Thessalonians i. 10; ii. 19. "And to wait for his Son from heaven." For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?" Again in iv. 13, in the same letter, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him." For this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not go before them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Again, Thes. i. 6, "And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus: who shall be punished, not with eternal misery, but with everlasting destruction, from the presence of the Lord."

Paul writes to Timothy in his second letter, (iv. 1) "I charge thee before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, Preach the Word, for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give unto me in that day, and not me only, but unto all them that love his appearing." "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus ii. 13.

In Paul's first letter to the church at Corinth, (xv. 51) "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." No immortality till the trump of God shall sound to wake the sleeping saints of all ages. Death and the grave will be swallowed up in victory! But thanks to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ! "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Hebrews ix. 28.

In these passages I have quoted and many others show us that the day of judgment of the quick and dead and that immortality and eternal life will be given to all who have sought them by a patient continuance in well-doing, and the promised kingdom, not at death, but at the glorious second appearing, without sin unto salvation. Heb. ix. 28. Jesus Christ, who is the true Nobleman, has gone into the far country to gain a kingdom, and will return and reward all who have become heirs of the kingdom and the great salvation. That will be the great evolution.

E. HOYT.

Editor Restitution:

I wish to say through your valuable paper, that I have felt it an oversight in the Church at Niagara Falls in not giving public expression of our appreciation of Brother Zilmer's services while here. He gave in all five grand discourses which were beneficial to all, and I believe I speak the sentiments of the church when I say they were appreciated by all. As far as I am individually concerned I feel in a position to say that as a preacher he is of high merit. As a teacher he is plain and easily understood and as a guest he is without fault. This is not flattery but honor to whom honor is due.

Since the building of our place of worship through the efforts of our lamented Bro. Black, we have been favored with a variety of speakers from other places, among whom are Brother L. E. Conner, Brother and Sister Woodward, Brother J. G. Haupt, Brother Mason, Brother Hudler and last but not least is Brother Zilmer, all of whom gave good satisfaction.

Our pulpit is supplied except when visiting brethren are here, by home talent, our brethren speaking in turn, and we have good meetings twice every Sunday, and Bible study Wednesday evenings. We feel that we are truly blessed in this respect for we have quite a number of good ability. We feel and when we learn from the old paper which is now THE RESTITUTION, of the many appointments all through this state that have gone down for the want of a shepherd which is necessary for the growth of any church. Brother Zilmer fully appreciates our situation in the east, judging from his report of labor here, in which he speaks of our need of an evangelist, to which I fully agree. I think a good, energetic, earnest evangelist would do a great deal of good in this state if one would settle here and travel through Ontario as there are preaching places closed for the want of a preacher, and members gone to other churches.

Oh, it does seem to me that somebody is not redeeming the time, somebody is letting the precious moments fly which God has granted unto them. They are gone and we "Can never turn the mill with the water the water that has passed." Somebody is letting the precious grain waste and die just for the sound of one awakening word, one gospel sermon. There are those who really and truly belong to the household of faith, that are being rocked to sleep in the cradle of the world whose lullaby's have almost overcome them, without the sound of one familiar voice to arouse them to their situation. Can there be no lifeline to reach them? no one to touch them kindly and say, "Awake, thou that sleepest?" No one to feel that while there are ninety and nine in the shelter of the fold, there is one wandering on the mountains far away? Who is there that will leave the ninety and nine and go to seek the wandering one?

We hear a call for reapers, shall it be in vain? While the call is sounding loud and long, let us remember that the laborer is worthy of his hire. We cannot expect to employ laborers and not pay them. What would we think of a farmer who would employ reapers and after they had performed the labor, would say, "Depart, be ye clothed and fed," without giving them a recompense? we would denounce such a person unfit for the household of faith, and yet, it is just as reasonable to expect the reapers of life's harvest to labor without proper compensation. I have the conviction that there are many talented young men of our faith who would enter the field if they could be financially sustained sufficient to procure the necessaries of life. I am persuaded that any one could preach better if they had a little to fall back on, a few dollars in his pocket would be quite an incentive. I fully believe that if those of our faith were one-half as zealous as the churches at large that we could call for reapers and they would cheerfully respond to our call and enter heartily in the vineyard. Let us each think of these things, and see that we do not "Muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn."

A gospel that is not worthy of a little sacrifice is not worth having. If money is worth more to us than the gospel then let us keep the money, but let us be more dignified than to get all the preaching we can for nothing, and be like the Methodist Brother who "thanked the Lord for a free gospel, he had belonged to the church 40 years and it had never cost him but a shilling."

Submitted in love.

ANGELINE LENT.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Married.

ON Thursday Nov. 3, 1898, Brother Charles Franboner, and Sister Mattie Gibbs were united in marriage by the writer, at his home, 626 Woodland Ave. Being young, healthy and possessing the blessed hope of seeing Jesus and being made like him, we are encouraged to hope for them all the joy it is reasonable to expect in this vale of tears, and crowns of unfading glory at last.

M. JOSLIN.

It is ten thousand times harder to live right than to die right. It is not difficult for a man to give his life up through the chamber of death. But to give your life while you hold it, yes, and to use it so that it is a perpetual benefaction all through—that is hard, and that is the special Christian duty. To live in such a way that, as from the moon by night and the sun by day, light and guidance are issuing, so from you shall proceed an influence that comforts, cheers, instructs and alleviates the troubles and sufferings of life—this is the true following of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Conscience is half of religion.

Will the person who sent an article on "Sowing and Reaping" please send name. It was unsigned, and we must know the author's name before printing.

J. S. Hatch writes as follows:—

Please state in The Restitution that since I came home from Illinois I immersed one Sister into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, then to walk in new life.

It is altogether too late in the day to talk in a general way about living Godly. The flesh is always warring against the Spirit, and trying to give the impression that the commandments of Jesus just suit some one else. The fact is they were intended for all and suit all.

The call for peace and disarmament has not yet affected the United States. At Norfolk, Va., orders have been given to work night and day on the vessels there for repairs, etc. And 20,000 shells of the six-pound style are ordered shipped to San Francisco at once to be sent to Dewey at Manilla.

Brethren and Sisters, if we are not ready and willing to do God's will now, is it not a solemn mockery to pray for it to be done in the future? If God's will is distasteful to us now, what likelihood is there that it will suit us by and by? We can press this matter closer home yet. If we do not do God's will now, as far as lies in us, it will make no difference to us whether God's will be ever done in earth, as it is in heaven, or no.

We hope all our friends will save us the expense and labor of sending notice regarding renewal of subscription. The time of the expiration of your subscription is known to you certainly, and you must realize that we need the money. It seems to you doubtless a small matter, and to be attended to a little later on, but while each one is but little, when gathered in to us it makes it easy for us to pay our bills. We have to meet our bills, so please be prompt with your renewals.

The Turkish forces are at last all out of Crete, and the flag of that country is lowered. Actual force had to be used at the end, as after a number of troops were loaded on the transports an attempt was made to reland them. This was resisted by the British Admiral who put armed men ashore, surrounding the Turks and gave them but ten minutes in which to leave, meanwhile clearing a warship for action to enforce his demand. He was obeyed, and now it is almost certain that Prince George, son of the King of Greece, will be appointed Governor of the Island.

Notwithstanding the call of the Czar for a Peace Convention, the active war preparations the world over indicate that the nations do not believe that permanent peace is in sight. England has gone so far that she cannot now turn back. She must play her card, and failing to win by diplomacy, will have to fight. If the Franco-Russian combination see fit to persist in the China and Africa positions it looks very much as if England will also remain firm and a clash is inevitable. The fact is patent to the world that neither France nor Russia are quite ready for a war. On the other hand England never was in better shape to strike quick and heavy blows. Germany will not care to repeat her late experiment at Kiao-Chau in China, nor the South Africa deal, both of which were by the connivance of Russia, and have both turned out to be failures. Whatever be, future course may be, just now she will make most as the nominal supporter of England. Dangers are on all sides. A day may bring forth startling events.

The Spanish-American Peace Commissioners are near to a dead-lock. Spain hopes for Europe's sympathy, but none has manifested itself as yet. The United States demand the Philippines, and Spain proposes to resist what she claims is an unjust claim.

Remember that we send the balance of 1898 issues to each new subscriber sent in before Jan. 1, 1898. When sending your renewal try and get your brother who does not take the paper to try it for a year. Or if you can spare the money send it to some friend. You will never know, perhaps, the good done by such an action, but you can be assured the Father will make record of each item to your credit.

Jesus said of certain ones—"I speak to them in parables, because they seeing, see not, and hearing, hear not, neither do they understand. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand, and seeing ye shall see and shall not perceive. For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their hearts, and should be converted and I should heal them." Matt. xiii. 13. The very conditions existing today.

What God thinks of sin may be learned from the threats leveled against it: "In the day thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt die." "The wages of sin is death." Almost imperceptibly our abhorrence of sin will diminish if we are not watchful. Crimes are amazingly increased during the past two decades and the daily paper make its readers so familiar with the blackest and foulest deeds that they are getting accustomed to it, and of course it does not shock them as it used to do, and that means that sin does not seem to be so exceedingly sinful as it once did. And the next thing in natural order is to make a classification of sin to suit themselves such as little sins and big sins,—white lies and black lies, and so forth. But we have yet to learn that God does not treat all as being exceedingly sinful. The times we live in make it imperative for all who would secure a crown of life, to cultivate the sense of sin's sinfulness,—yes; the EXCEEDING sinfulness of ALL SIN in the sight of God.

All Day Services

Were held by the Church of God in Cleveland on Sunday Nov. 6, it being the tenth anniversary since opening the present house of worship. Although the weather was very inclement we had a large gathering, and the interest in the various exercises was maintained from morning till night. We believe that the hallowing and uplifting influence exerted will long be felt. The fact that two more were baptized into Christ's death, added greatly to our joy, and encouragement to maintain the conflict. Sister Parker, wife of Bro. Parker and Sister Aagaard, wife of Bro. Aagaard, are hereby introduced to the church scattered abroad, trusting they will prove to be faithful for God and Truth and share the great salvation.

A New Creature

The Word of the Spirit says: "If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature." Not physically new, of course, but morally and mentally new. Old things in these respects have passed away. What can this message have been sent to us for, if not to show us that we are NOT new creatures, if we cherish old loves, and old tastes, and old likes still control us, and restraint in that direction is irksome. No matter how much truth there may be in our heads, we have no right to sit at his table if our minds are unrenewed, and our affections not transferred. We have been squarely warned that if we love the world the love of the Father is not in us. These loves are not compatible. The ways, aims and principles of the people of the world, the things worldlings love,—that which gratifies the flesh, that which relates only to the present evil age, is utterly faithless of God, and at variance with his purposes. If we think we can habitually gratify self and please God at the same time, we will experience an awful surprise by and by.

It is an easy matter to say in the language of the apostle, "If we suffer with Christ we shall also reign with him," but do we all realize that we cannot suffer with him unless we deny ourselves? We read of Jesus that he pleased not himself. (Rom. xv. 3.) He had a mind that yielded to that of the Father. He denied himself, and the language addressed to us is found in Matt. xvi. 24; it says:—"Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Every one's selfhood is sure to be opposed to the discipline involved in following Christ. Every intelligent and obedient believer of the Gospel of Christ solemnly undertakes to displease himself in order to please his Father in heaven. The cross has to be shouldered as soon as the name of Jesus is taken, and it must be carried all along the way of life. Ever remember that Jesus did not please himself, it should be our aim to live a life of sacrifice, because it assures us of a diploma for suffering with him, and raises the crown certain.

Talmage Again.

It is a difficult matter to put one's finger on this slippery theologian. He shifts with the wind very often, but when the wind doesn't shift often enough, he shifts independently of it. On the 18th of September he drew such a gruesome picture of the world's moral condition, and confessed the failure of all human efforts to improve it, and thought the Almighty would soon have to take the matter in hand himself. This looked as if one little ray of divine light had beamed upon him, and begat a hope of the restitution predicted by all God's prophets, when, as Jesus promised, the meek should inherit the earth. But his sermon on the 30th of October shows that he is back in the old rut of popular theology, and is talking heaven as one home more recklessly and blasphemously than we have known him before.

He says the storest typed heaven does not make adequate impression upon us. What is the reason "the stereotyped heaven," as he calls it, does not make adequate impression upon us? Is it true, or false? If true, how dare he set it aside? If true, he is not responsible for the cool reception it receives. If it is false it ought to be coolly received. If it is false, who is accountable for its being stereotyped? Isn't it as true now as ever it was? Isn't it as true as the improved heaven that is to take its place? Does he not know he willfully advances what is without foundation? Does he not know there is no moral power in his list of lies? He says not, now suppose we are tied down to the phraseology of King James' translation and proceeds to give a description all his own, but tries to evade its authorship by calling it a "translation" from the old King James' to modern phraseology. In the first place, he uses an "I SUPPOSE," and goes on to the end as if all the statements made were ascertained facts. Among many other statements are these:—The atmosphere of heaven is a combination of early June and Indian Summer in October. That it combines the advantages of city and country,—the streets standing for one, and the twelve manner of fruits for the other. A place of musical entertainments,—harpers, pipers, trumpeters, doxologies. Wonderful architecture. The higher forms of animals may be there. Those once beaten, lashed and galled, and unblanketed and worked to death (so he expects them to have a resurrection) are to be turned out (to grass we suppose) with those white horses which the Revelator says are seen in heaven. That it is a place of stupendous literature—the books are open. A place of botanical, ponological, ornithological, arboreseent and worshipful beauty and grandeur.

He speaks next of the improved heaven,—no city on earth has been improved in fifty years as heaven has. It is not the same place as when Job and David and Paul wrote about it. The population has vastly increased by five hundred million babies to say nothing of the adults, whereas it was only a village when Abel went there. Heaven has vastly improved in knowledge also after studying the sciences with all the advantages of laboratories, for thousands of years.

And who would have thought it, besides Talmage? Heaven's society has been vastly improved by the blessed souls which have gone there, including Hannah More, Charlotte Elizabeth, Robt. McCheyne and John Summerfield, and many others, including members of the households of his Washington audience. It is constantly improved by the good cheer of announced victories in the old earth that four or five weeks ago had almost completely gone over to the devil,—yes; every one that goes makes it a brighter place, and although it is a thousand times more of a heaven than it used to be, it will be better yet. He then describes his own entry into heaven, which he found almost empty. On enquiring of the guard it some[illegible] the city, he [illegible] that there was a world burning away off there and all heaven had gone over to look at it, and take the victims out of the ruins. Presently the rumbling of wheels and the clattering of hoofs were heard, and all heaven came back. All this is offered because the people are tired of the old talk about heaven, and it fails to impress them. Does the reader feel impressed with the improved heaven? Does it make you feel as if you had taken a powerful emetic? Do you not wonder at the effrontery of the man who will stand before an audience at the national Capital and devote his time to such false and ridiculous nonsense, and such presumptuous and insulting stuff as this?

Has the knowledge of the Gospel of the Kingdom sending me from the dead to make us eligible to it, should gladden our hearts after reading such trash from a doctor of divinity? Is it not doctoring divinity with a vengeance? Sure enough the doctor was right respecting human instrumentalities, if that is the best gospel he has to offer.

One could hardly believe that such wretched drivellings came from the most popular pulpit orator in the country if not published as his in the public press. The utter blindness to God's revealed purpose, and the disrespectful reference to God's throne (heaven) and the mean conception of its inhabitants, and their improvement, and the possibility of their being swept away with plagues, are an appropriate consummation of a hope begotten of the serpent's lie. No wonder King James' translation does'nt suit him, for it plainly sets forth his destruction in earth, together with all who despise the word. (Prov. xiii. 13.) Where that word says, "The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth," (Prov. xi. 31,) and "the meek shall inherit the earth," (Ps. xxxvii. 11,") and "dwell therein forever," (Ps. xxxvii. 29,) and "such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off, (Ps. xxxiv. 22,) and Matt. v. 5! Can Mr. Talmage deny that he despises the Word when he turns away from it and befools the people with the inventions of men, after the above distinct utterances have been on record for thousands of years, and hosts of collateral testimonies respecting the unity of man and his unconsciousness in death. What ridiculous nonsense to say that those without thoughts can study science and literature, and improve the society of heaven!!

Brethren and Sisters, let us praise and magnify the God of heaven that he has called us to a kingdom and glory UNDER the whole heaven, (Dan. vii. 27,) and that we ever found it in our hearts to believe the record, that he has given of his Son, viz. that "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life," (1 John v. 11, 12,) and so will live nowhere in the heavens above or the depths beneath,—and that through rich grace, by compliance with the condition exacted we cherish that blessed hope, (Titus ii. 13,) and are heirs according to the promise made to the fathers of the Hebrew nation, Gal. iii. 29; Acts xxvi. 6, 7. Yes; let us thank and praise God that we have no need to construct a heaven for ourselves by imagination, but trust the Living Word, that abideth forever.

The Egyptian Sudan.

This term is applied to a somewhat indefinite territory lying chiefly West of the White Nile, and including the provinces of Kordofan, Darfur and Waidai on the North and the very fertile valley of the Bahrel-Ghazal on the South. It has also often been held to cover the section between the White and Blue Niles, now known as the Equatorial Provinces, recognized for a time as in the sphere of Italian influence, and since the Italian defeat claimed by Abyssinia, or rather by a Franco-Russian combination of Prince Henry of Orleans and Count Leontieff, under the general patronage of Abyssinia. This whole territory of Abyssinia on the East nearly to Lake Tchad on the West was ruled by the Egytian government until the rise of the Mahdi, and its reversionary right to the territory as soon as the Arab rule should be conquered has never been yielded. With the general agreement as to sphere of influence, France received as her portion in West and Central Africa an irregular strip of territory extending from the Atlantic Coast between the Congo Free State and the German Kamerun district to a somewhat indefinite boundary on the North. She also held, just below the Red Sea, the small district of Obok, whose chief town is Jibutil. From the very first it seems to have been the plan of the French to utilize these two possessions to secure a transcontinental line East and West corresponding to that planned by England from North to South. It was also apparently her thought that she might by this neutralize the value of England's hold on Egypt and thus recoup herself for her loss of that country.

The importance of this movement on the part of the French to England is threefold. It seeks to deprive Egypt of those fertile and delightful provinces that endangers the value of the Nile valley and introduces an element that has always proved disturbing to peace and industrial development. There is probably no section of Central Africa, if even of the entire Continent, that has received such an unmixed praise as the valley of the Bahrel-Ghazal, and it was esteemed by General Gordon and those associated with him as the gem of the Egyptian provinces. Its rivers also control to a considerable extent the flow of the Nile and tax affect seriously the fertility of the whole Nile valley. Entirely apart from the danger of wanton waste in case of war it is claimed that the water might easily be so employed for irrigation as to accomplish practically the same result. It is the testimony of all who have studied the Nile question that the interests of the whole valley are such as to require a uniform government over the whole in order that all parts may have equitable treatment. Rival if not antagonistic control of the Bahr-el-Ghazal may easily mean loss, even ruin in Egypt. The third point of the political disturbance that would result is self evident.—Independent.

Disquiet in China.

The situation in China gives indications of a clash between the new regime and the foreign Powers. The Empress Dowager, apparently in dread of the foreign drilled force at Tientsin, under command of a general of whose loyalty to herself she is suspicious, has ordered other troops to the capital. The foreign embassies have, it is said, met this by a strong demand that these troops be removed from the province before the 15th of November, and accompanied the demand with a threat that unless it is granted they themselves will assume the protection of the railway communication between Peking and the Coast. Another significant incident in the report that a number of Russian sailors have been prevented from going from Tientsin to Peking. At the same time there appears to be a better feeling between China and Japan, the Japanese Minister having had an audience with the Empress Dowager and the Emperor, for the purpose of announcing exceptional decorations that have been conferred upon them by the Mikado. The reception was by the Empress-Dowager, who was seated one step above the Emperor. She made the complimentary speech and the Emperor, who appeared in good health, followed with a similar address.—Independent.

Norway Plans to Quit Sweden.

Christiania, Nov. 11.—The Storthing took to-day what diplomats believe to be the first step toward a breach of the union of Sweden and Norway. A resolution introduced by a leading member of the Radical party to provide a purely Norwegian flag, without the old emblem of the union with Sweden, was adopted.

The present session of the Storthing has been a stormy one, and for the first time in the history of Scandinavia the champions of Norwegian independence are in the majority. One of the first proceedings of this session was to invest the Storthing with the power to turn the regular troops into the "Landevaern" (militia), the use of which, according to the old constitutional provision, is forbidden beyond the Swedish frontiers. This deprives King Oscar of the last chance to use the Norwegian army for the common defense.

Before the Storthing adjourns it is believed that Norway will demand her own consular and diplomatic service. —New York Journal.

Conference Report.

The Eleventh Annual Northwest Conference convened as pre-announced with our most highly esteemed Bro. Jaquith presiding as President. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Report of Evangelist W. L. Skeels was read and approved. The Treasurer's report was given verbal stating that he had received no money and had not paid out any. After hearing the reports of the churches the election of officers was in order and are as follows: W. W. Jaquith, Pres., Scholls, Oreg; A. J. Mills, Vice Pres., Vancouver, Wash.; John E. McIrvin, Sec., 577 Burnside st., Portland, Ore.; C. H. Seaver, Treas., Scholls, Ore. After which the business needing adjourned.

We met together again at 7:30 and listened to a discourse given by Bro. Eggleston on the "Second Coming of our Lord" which was given in an able manner.

Sunday exercises began with social meeting at ten o'clock, which lasted one hour. After which we had the pleasure of hearing one of Bro. Skeel's excellent discourses on Eternal Life, taking for his text the words of the young rich man, "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Bro. Skeels in closing made an appeal to the audience to be obedient.

Mr. Jaeger and wife of Tacoma came forward for baptism. After partaking of a basket dinner spread by the generous sisters of Scholls we went down to the mill pond near by where Bro. Skeels buried Brother and Sister Jaeger in the all-saving name of Christ. Oh, how it fills one's heart with gratitude to God to see man and wife taking Jesus into their home, what a grand Guest he is.

In the afternoon we spent an hour listening to the young people read papers and recite recitations, and Sister Gronlie's Bible class, her subject being the "Resurrection."

At 7:30 there was preaching again by Bro. Prosser, his subject being the "Gospel." After partaking of the Emblems we extended the right hand of fellowship to Brother and Sister Jaeger. Taking the meeting as a whole it was a grand success. All the brethren present seemed determined to push the work the coming year.

Will say in conclusion the executive committee has agreed on Elder W. L. Skeels to represent the Conference the coming year. As Evangelist Elder Skeel's report shows during the year past that he has devoted 134 days to evangelizing he gave 128 discourses, received 51 into church fellowship, of whom he immersed 45. Whole amount received from all sources $130.25. Expenses of traveling $22.45. Leaving a balance of $107.80. Those wishing to donate toward spreading the Truth will please send all monies to C. K. Smeltzer, Scholls, Ore.

Dear Restitution:

My labors in this part of the country are coming to a close. What has been done? I have endeavored to sow the seed—"the Word of the kingdom"—and had the honor of baptizing three more believing ones into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. So far I have delivered 31 discourses, and trust the truth may cause still others to submit to God and obey him from the heart. The brethren and sisters have shown me much kindness. Be faithful, dear ones; war a good warfare, and let your light shine brightly.

Yours in hope of the glory of God,

A. H. Zumbro.

An Urgent Call,

Is hereby extended to all the churches and isolated brethren and sisters scattered through the State of Illinois, who were neither present at or represented in the State Conference held in Lanark, Sept. 30 to Oct. 2, to kindly report to the Secretary, giving their names and addresses, as he has some printed matter which he wishes to mail to you. Also be kind enough to report the name and address of any other member not likely to see this. Please treat this appeal with earnestness and respond at once.

Lyman Booth, Sec., Ashton, Ill.

Editor Restitution:

I have for 51 years been familiar with the controversy on the Seventh day Sabbath and other Battle-Creekisms, and regard Bro. Joblin's articles the best refutation of them I had seen in print. Carefully revised by the author and put in convenient form for distribution, they will be very useful.

The First Day.

This is the day the Savior rose;
The day that hope revived;
The day he showed his well-beloved,
That he had power to rise.

And then in eight days more he came,—
Entered within closed doors;
And doubting Thomas was within,
He, now, his Lord adores.

And on this previous evening day,
In old Jerusalem,
With one accord, they met to pray—
Aye, Christ had bidden them!

And while they tarried, while they prayed,
The Holy Spirit came;
Convincing many, on that day,
This, God's own saving plan.

And after that, this day was known
The one on which to meet,
That the Disciples may proclaim,
Their Lord's own death they keep.

Now, seems not this a fitting time,
Since he brought life this day:
To meet and keep in memory,
The death which brings us day?

Are Cossacks Destined to Dominate the World?

"In a hundred years," said Napoleon at St. Helena, "Europe will be Cossack or republican."

That was in 1815, and it will be sixteen years before it is known whether the prophecy of the great General will be fulfilled. Yet the prospects are good for its fulfillment, if not within the allotted time, at least before many years after said. Europe may be republican, but the indications today point more strongly to its being Cossack.

Will Russia rule the world is the topic uppermost in the minds of statesmen and scientists today. The former are alarmed at the rapid growth of what is really the newest country in the world. Seldom has there been so rapid a rise to power as that of the empire of western Europe. English and continental newspapers sound vague alarms. Distrustful of the Czar, they yet obey his mandates, forced to do so by the skill of his methods. They do not realize the inevitable result of the present contest.

Sociologists and writers on political science have a better realization of the meaning of the struggle now in progress. The scientific reviews voice the conclusions of the minds most ably trained in the philosophy of history. "Within two centuries, perhaps in one, the Latin races will be in vassalage and Germany, without a foot of foreign territory on which white men can thrive will have been reduced to insignificance by the increase of peoples who have room to grow. Slav and Saxon. It narrows down to these, each of them with room for five hundred millions. Which will rule the world? The Slav is as yet far before the Saxon in industrial efficiency, in everything that can make for success in the struggle, unless it be in his willingness to devote all of his energies to national aggrandizement. His territory is compact and unified, but one in which development must be slow and which is ill adapted to the production of a varied civilization. The Saxon has an ideal territory for the development of a world civilization, but one having little natural unity. Are the physic bonds, the consciousness of kinship and the intellectual perception of interest strong enough to hold the race together? If so, its supremacy is assured by the nature and distribution of its territory, the character of its people, and their enormous start in economic and intellectual development. If not, their fate, too, is vassalage, and America is not exempt." These are the words of H. H. Powers, one of the greatest authorities on social and political science, and they are contained in the annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the leading organ of those sciences. They are not the words of an alarmist striving for sensational effect, but the sober opinion of a man who carefully weighs every word because of the respect with which it will be received.

Whether the people of other nations will admit it or not, Russia is already the dominating power. If the Czar does not exercise sovereignty over all Europe, he at least dictates the policies of every nation except that of Great Britain. Only a few years ago the political supremacy was in the hands of Great Britain. Then Russia found herself without an ally. Today the state of affairs has changed. Great Britain finds herself isolated and Russia is the dictator.

The story of the transfer of authority can hardly be told. It has taken place so gradually that it was scarcely noticed. And today no one asks how or why, but accepts it as an accomplished fact.

RUSSIA'S STEADY GAIN.

There was first the Franco-Prussian alliance. Russia had all to gain and France nothing. Russia found a rich and powerful ally and money for the development of her resources and the increase of her army and navy. Prince Lobanoff, the originator of the policy that Count Mouravieff is continuing with such skill, realized that the Czar could never have a free hand in the East so long as the triple alliance was of great power. The Russo-French entente gave this alliance a staggering blow. Mouravieff followed this by an entente with Germany, and Italy was left to fight its own battles in Abyssinia and met defeat. The young German Emperor fell a victim to the Czar's wiles and today Berlin and Paris engage their foreign policies from St. Petersburg.

Spain has been crushed by the United States. Italy's dream of colonial expansion ended with its defeat in Abyssinia, and Austria has troubles enough at home, finding it no easy task to retain dominion over the many nationalities that comprise the empire. Both Italy and Austria have become subordinate to Germany, and through Germany the Czar rules the members of the triple alliance. Gradually England has lost all her friends; standing alone without an ally she is anxious to welcome the aid of the United States and dreams of an Anglo-Saxon alliance.

This state of affairs has made it possible for Russia to have practically a free hand in the affairs and fate of Turkey. Things have changed greatly since the Crimean war. Then, in 1853, England and France successfully prevented Russian encroachments upon the Sultan's territory. Today Turkey is practically a Russian province. Every one knows that the Sultan obeys the Czar's wishes, and the other powers have allowed Russia to manage affairs in her own way. This was shown clearly in the settlement of the Cretan question, when Russian diplomacy was again supreme. The Sultan is practically the Czar's vassal, and Russians think it is only a question of time when their flag will float over Constantinople.

The Turkish situation finds a parallel in China. There can be no question that the authority of Russia is now supreme in China. The enormous diplomatic and other successes have been so far achieved without bloodshed or ostentation. All along the Russo-Chinese frontier are troops ostensibly for the protection of the Russo-Manchurian railway, but really to hold vantage points from which Russia will never recede. Russia snatched the fruits of her victory from Japan. The grateful Chinese have given them to the Czar.

British newspapers charge that the reduction of China to practically a vassalage to Russia has been brought about by the bribery of Li Hung Chang and the Empress Dowager. However it may have been achieved, there has been no doubt that of late the rulers of China have received their orders from St. Petersburg, and no step is taken in foreign politics without the consent of the Slavs. And a monopoly of China's industrial development has been given to her Northern neighbor.

In Corea the same state of affairs exists. Corea by the Japanese war exchanged a nominal sovereignty by China for one by Russia. The Japanese, however irritated they may be they are unable to check Russian control of Corean affairs, admit that it exists.

Keen observers of international affairs declare that Russia will follow her control of China and Corea by the acquisition of Persia, and India bit by bit. The Shah formerly received orders from London. He now gets them from St. Petersburg. England finds she must keep an ever-watchful eye to preserve the integrity of India, for Russia presses closer upon her frontier. Slowly but surely Russia is becoming mistress of Asia. When that time arrives she will dominate some eight hundred millions of the human race—active, hardy, and intelligent, and requiring only direction to become a formidable force in any competition, whether in commerce or war.

At home the industrial development of Russia has been as wonderful as her diplomatic conquests have been abroad. The vastness of the Russian Empire is scarcely realized by Americans. A quotation from a well-known traveler will aid in such a realization. He says: "You could take the whole of the United States, from Maine to California, from Lake Superior to the Gulf of Mexico, and set it down in the middle of Siberia without touching its borders. You could take then Alaska and all the countries of Europe except Russia, and fit them in little pieces round the edges of the United States as it lay in the middle of Siberia and you would still have more than 300,000 square miles of Siberian territory." The popular idea is that this is a wilderness. But one might as well talk of the climate of the United States as that of Siberia. It extends from the frozen north to the tropics, and everything will grow in some part of it, and all kinds of minerals are found there. It is a country of limitless development.

Russia has annexed only contiguous territory—except Alaska, which it sold after annexation. Within this century Russia's actual acquisitions of territory have been greater in extent and importance than the whole of European Russia before that time. Her frontier has been advanced toward Stockholm 630 miles, toward Berlin 700 miles, toward Constantinople 500 miles, toward India 1,300 miles. Her territory in Europe comprises more than one-half of that continent. Until within 100 years southern and southeastern Russia were infested with hordes of Tartars and Kalmucks, who overran nearly one-third of Russia—wandering tribes without fixed habitation or permanent government, marauders, slave dealers, and vagabonds who came, conquered, burned, pillaged, murdered, and went. The first step of Russia when she determined that her empire should belong to the civilization of Europe was the subjugation of these tribes. This has been accomplished by compelling the Tartars and Kalmucks to live within fixed and permanent boundaries, by enrolling the cossacks into bands of cavalry—and substituting the agricultural for the nomadic life. Many of the tribes, unwilling to give up their roving existence, retired beyond the Caspian Sea, and from those regions continued their inroads upon Russian settlements. Russia, for her own protection, was again obliged to subdue these unruly tribes, and thereby to extend her dominion still farther to the east, until it finally reached the barrier in the Pamir and the mountains of Afghanistan.

SECRET OF POWER.

It is not 200 years since Russia changed from a barbarian power to one of civilization. It is in this sense that Russia is the youngest of the world's great nations—younger perhaps than the United States for the first growth was slower. The vast empire was thinly settled by wandering tribes utterly lacking cohesion. They had no commerce, no manufactures but the rudest, and no softening intercourse with other nations. Peter the Great, a boy of 17, came to the throne at this time. Although wholly without education and encouraged in drunkenness and other vices by his sister, who had usurped his throne, he resolved to learn the secret of the progress of the rest of Europe. First educating himself, he began the movement that has made Russia today a world-power, and, although he lived but fifty-three years, during that time he accomplished more for the development of a nation than any other man had ever done before. He perfected his armies, taught them European methods of discipline, and with these armies extended his frontiers. Then he determined that Russia should have a navy, and himself went to Amsterdam and Deptford, where, as Petter Zimmermann, he learned the trade of a ship carpenter. He picked up blacksmithing, enough of cobbling to make a pair of shoes, and of surgery to bleed and pull teeth.

Upon his return from his visit to the civilized world Peter began his reforms. A formidable navy was constructed. Then he built St. Petersburg as Moscow was remote from European influences. St. Petersburg was built so that as "from a window he could look out upon western Europe." His subjects were forced to give up their long beards and flowing Asiatic robes. The power of the nobles was lessened. Religious toleration was granted. Arithmetic was introduced into the government offices where previously accounts had been kept by a system of balls threaded on wire. He introduced silk and woolen manufactures, the art of painting, and made roads and canals. He established a postal service, began to develop the vast mineral wealth of the country and founded hospitals and medical schools.

Over all these reforms he took personal supervision; for among all crafts he had some knowledge of each which he had gained in England and Holland.

When Peter ascended the throne Russia exercised dominion over 5,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface. Today Czar Nicholas gives the law to territories extending over 9,000,000 square miles. The world has no parallel to this monstrous growth. Since the beginning of the last century Russia has added to its dominions a territory greater than that of Europe, and it is all contiguous territory, not like the African marshes and deserts that England and France have gathered in. And today the Czar gives the law to one-seventh part of the earth's surface, not including China, Turkey, and those whom he influences by diplomacy. His empire extends from the north pole to the Mediterranean Sea, and from the Asiatic coast of the Pacific almost to the Atlantic coast of Europe.

The development of Russia until the Crimean war was largely on military lines. Then, after suffering defeat, she turned her attention to industry. Alexander did much in this direction, and Nicholas, who was educated as much like Peter the Great as is possible nowadays, is following in his footsteps with the aid of his wife Alix, a woman of rare intellectual attainments and herself a master of political science. Lobanoff and Mouravieff, with the other ministers, have been able agents in this direction. Peter the Great invoked the aid of skilled men in all lines of industry, and Englishmen and Scotchmen contributed to the development of the nation's resources. Today they are also employed and many Americans may be found working for the Czar. Already many reforms have been instituted that make the books written a few years ago unreliable today. The liberation of the serfs has made labor more productive, and millions of men are tilling small states that together produce more food than any other country except the United States.

During the last thirty years the industrial development of Russia has been especially great. In this direction its progress has been greater than that of any other country excepting only the United States. In some directions it exceeds that of the United States, and it must be remembered that Russia has a great undeveloped region of contiguous territory in Siberia in which the resource capacities for unlimited growth. The opening of the Transsiberian railroad, the greatest railroad in the world, has laid open to industry a region which the ignorant though civilized world pronounced unfit for human habitation.

Of all nations Russia is undoubtedly the one capable of greatest development. The Bankers' Magazine recently drew attention to the unparalleled influx of private capital into Russia, and this is still on the increase. The Bankers' Magazine says that the opportunities in Russia have been largely responsible for the withdrawal of foreign capital from the United States.

GROWTH A RAPID ONE.

In population the United States tends in increase, for while the population of Russia has doubled in forty-six years, that of the United States has trebled in the same period. Yet in no other nation than these two is the increase so rapid. In Russia this is due to early marriages, which are responsible for the large birth rate. This is increasing in Russia, while in America there is a growing dislike to early marriages. In the past the large death rate has prevented Russia from greater increase in population, but under Nicholas II. there has been an attempt made to introduce sanitary improvements and better the condition of the people, which will result in an increased birth rate. Today Russia has 130,000,000 people, against 78,000,000 in the United States, and statisticians do not believe the United States will ever overtake Russia.

Agriculture is still the chief industry in Russia. The peasants, for the most part, still carry on the industry with crude implements, made in their own furnace. Yet in spite of this there has been such development that Russia now produces more food than any other country in the world except the United States. Food to the value of $2,500,000,000 is produced annually in the Czar's dominions.

The wealth of Russia has nearly trebled in thirty years. Mulhall estimates it as £2,818,000,000 in 1864 and £6,524,000,000 in 1894. The annual product of the manufactories rose from £177,000,000 to £380,000,000, and internal trade from £560,000,000 to £1,080,000,000. From 1850 to 1896 the railways of European Russia increased from 310 miles to 23,308, or seventy fold.

Russian statesmen are bending their efforts to the further development of Russian industry, and it is believed the nation is on the eve of an awakening which will surpass anything ever known. The great Transsiberian railroad will join St. Petersburg with the Pacific, and unites to civilization great districts, which a quarter of a century ago were practically as far removed as the lands which border on the Polar Sea. Frozen wastes and shivering exiles are suggested by the name of Siberia, but to judge of this great region by its northern portion would be as erroneous as to estimate the fertility of North America from an inspection of the Hudson Bay territory. The southern part of Siberia, through which the new road is constructed, is rich and fertile, and when the problem of transportation is solved it will doubtless be one of the world's granaries. If the Russian peasant does not equal our own in intelligence, he knows enough to raise wheat, he is industrious and frugal, and where he works wages are low and land is cheap. Economic writers are already talking of the time when the United States will no longer be the great wheat-producing country of the world. This is the opinion of a correspondent of the London Times who has seen the region.

One of the great aids to the Czar in his plans for the world's domination is that he can preserve peace or bring war at pleasure. It so happens that he desires peace for the development of his empire, and in this lies the true reason for his proposal of a universal disarmament. It is interesting, by the way, to note that last week it was announced that every country invited, even France, would send delegates.

The Czar has the largest army in the world and it is well equipped. His standing army on a peace footing numbers 1,743,214 men, a greater force than those of Germany, France, Great Britain, Austria, and Italy combined.

The development of Russia's sea power is by no means so well known. Since the Crimean war, when Russia was made to feel the need of sea power, one of the chief aims of the Czars has been to increase the inefficiency of the Russian navy. It was England's growing jealousy of Muscovite power that imposed the hard conditions in regard to the Black Sea and the Dardanelles, thus blocking her way to the Mediterranean. Finding herself checked in this direction, Russia turned to the East, and has finally reached the Pacific. She now has great fleets. Her navy is surpassed only by those of Great Britain and France. She has eighteen battleships, twenty-eight coast defense vessels, seventeen armored and protected cruisers, fourteen gunboats, and 230 torpedo boats and destroyers. The Russian naval estimates show a continual increase and she is building ships in the best yards in the world.

Her strength on land and sea makes Russia in many respects the most formidable power in the world. Her ability to feed herself and the fact that her territory is contiguous would make her almost invincible in a defensive war, in the opinion of military critics. The same could apply to a war with a border state, and it must be remembered that Russia's aim is always to acquire contiguous territory.

The knowledge of this fact has been to make Russia dreaded and has given Nicholas the right to be the arbiter of the peace of Europe. The Czar can preserve peace or bring on a war. Emperor William's conservative Germans will not fight unless they are attacked. France cannot go to war without an ally. England fears that she will find no one to help her, and Italy and Austria have no money. The Czar alone need consult only himself in the matter. Alarmists believe that if the Czar sets about it all Europe will become his prey.

It is these conditions of the present, the gradual domination of other European peoples by the Cossacks, together with the possibilities of Russia's future development, that make the students of sociology and statecraft believe that the Slav is destined to be the race that will fight the Anglo-Saxon for supremacy.

"The twentieth century belongs to us," cried the St. Petersburg Novoe Vremya not long ago. And it may unless the English-speaking race prove stronger than the Slav. That a clash will come some day is not unlikely. The threatened conflict in China is an indication of what must happen some day. And the war, if it comes, may go far to determine the future destiny of the world. If there should be no war with arms there will be one in industry, whose influence will be no less potent.—Tribune.

England's Activity.

That England is making every possible preparation for war is evident. The Channel squadron is at Gibraltar, an unusual place for it; an emergency squadron has been formed, and the cruiser squadron is almost ready; while a reserved fleet, relied upon for the regular defense of the Channel, is also ready. All these ships are thoroughly provisioned in every way and the dockyards have been working under high pressure. Orders for volunteer officers are all addressed and ready for dispatch, and the volunteers themselves are well provided with everything necessary for a long campaign. It is said that never since Nelson's time have such efforts been made, and the significance is still greater from the fact that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, who is generally very pessimistic indeed, has lauded it all without a question. At the same time no public statement has been made by the Government. At a dinner to General Lord Kitchener at the Mansion House Lord Salisbury made a speech in which he announced that France had decided not to hold Fashoda, and then added that he must not be understood as saying that all causes of controversy are removed; that there may still be some discussions, but a somewhat acute and perhaps dangerous cause of differences has been removed. All this is watched with great interest in England, and receives the most cordial support of the people, who are convinced that at last the Government has made up its mind to act promptly and effectively for the permanent settlement of the many vexing questions that have harassed English foreign development for some time.—Independent.

The truth cannot be burned, beheaded, or crucified. A lie on the throne is a lie still, and truth in a dungeon is truth still: and the lie on the throne is on the way to defeat, and the truth in the dungeon is on the way to victory. No accidents of position can change the essential nature of things, or the eternal laws which determine their destinies.—William McKinley.

Active solicitors wanted everywhere for "The Story of the Philipines" by Murat Halstead, commissioned by the Government as Official Historian to the War Department. The book was written in army camps at San Francisco, on the Pacific with General Merritt, in the hospitals at Honolulu, in Hong Kong, in the American trenches at Manila, in the insurgent camps with Aguinaldo, on the deck of the Olympia with Dewey, and in the roar of battle at the fall of Manila. Bonanza for agents. Brimful of original pictures taken by government photographers on the spot. Large book. Low prices. Big profits. Freight paid. Credit given. Drop all trashy unofficial war books. Outfit free. Address, F. T. Barber, Sec'y, Star Insurance Bldg., Chicago.

Cheap Cab Service for Washington Visitors via Pennsylvania Lines.

A complete and efficient cab service similar to that in operation at passenger stations of the Pennsylvania System at Broad Street, Philadelphia, and at Twenty-third Street, New York, has just been established at the Pennsylvania Passenger Station in Washington, D.C. The service is satisfactorily performed at very reasonable rates by brand new rubber-tired coupes, victorias and omnibuses. The vehicles will be found at the cab stand at the B Street entrance to the Washington station, and may be engaged by the trip or by the hour. Visitors to the National Capital will find the new arrangement a very convenient one.

Notice of Ministerial Meeting.

After due consideration it is thought best to hold our ministerial meeting at Plymouth, Nov. 21 and 22, immediately following the Conference meeting. We believe this to be an important meeting and much good may result from it. A programme will be arranged and we look forward to an interesting and profitable meeting.

Plan of Work for Ministerial Meeting.

The following are a list of the subjects we hope to discuss at the Ministerial Meeting to convene at Plymouth, Ind., Nov. 21. You notice this meeting will be called Monday morning after Conference closes Sunday evening, Nov. 20. It will therefore serve well as supplement to the Conference. We do not wish it to be understood that this will be a meeting solely for ministers. The practical subjects are such as demand thought and consideration of the minister particularly. One of the primary objects of the meeting is to discuss these subjects. We invite one and all to unite with us in this effort, indeed we shall be disappointed do we not have good attendance of, and assistance from believers generally. The work is arranged as follows: Morning sessions, practical topics: Afternoon sessions, studies in prophecy: Evening sessions, sermons (omitted in outline). The meeting will probably close Wednesday evening.

OUTLINE OF PROGRAMME.

Why we should be encouraged. Short statements by all.

A Minister's duties and opportunities, how to discharge them and improve them.

The duties and opportunities of all believers.

Events of today compared with prophecy, or, Today in Prophecy.

Church Organization. Does the Bible condemn it? The advantages derived therefrom.

Today in Prophecy.

How encourage churches to more active and definite work?

How engage isolated believers in a more hearty co-operation with church and conference.

The advisability of scattering tracts.

Dear Household of Faith:

As I opened my Bible a day or so ago, my eyes fell on these words, "For when they shall say, Peace and safety, sudden destruction cometh upon them." 1 Thess. v. 3. It struck me forcibly. I thought, surely, are we not right there? Russia and all other nations that have given their views, think it far safer to have peace and life, and not so much money spent that is needed for other purposes. It looks to me as if it is the very last sign of the coming of our Savior, who said, when speaking of the slumbering virgins, the cry would go forth, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." It seems to me it is truly midnight. Dr. Talmage has told plainly the condition of the world why did he not use the language of Scripture, but he says, "What it shall be, I cannot say, but it may be the demolition of all these monstrosities, and establishmen of righteousness in all the earth." He says, "He can do it, and he will do it. I am as confident as if it were already accomplished." He seems to have changed his mind very much of late. It seems strange to me that while they desire peace they keep right on hurrying to prepare warships, and swifter vessels if possible, and made with all the dispatch possible. All seem to be afraid of each other. Peace Conferences and War Conferences by the same nations looks strange but it is so. Let us who are looking for our Savior watch for him, for surely he is at the door. Let us be ready to hail the glad day.

Your Sister, in hope of eternal life,
MRS. H. L. ISHAM.

For Thanksgiving Day a rate of one fare and one-third for the round trip has been authorized, to points within 150 miles on the Nickel Plate Road. Good going Nov. 24th. Tickets good returning until Nov. 25th.—Nov. 23.

An elephant is possessed of such a delicate sense of smell that it can scent a human being at a distance of 1,000 yards.

One fare and a third for the round trip, to points within 150 miles from starting point, will be in effect on the Nickel Plate road on account of Thanksgiving Day.—Nov. 24th, good returning Nov. 25th.

Conference Notice.

The First Quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will convene at Plymouth, Ind., Thursday evening November 17, 1898, and continue over the Sunday following.

The Church at Plymouth is desirous of having a good meeting and we hope all who can will come and help to make it one of interest and profit to all concerned. We are all responsible for the result of the effort, and whether it is a success or not depends upon the effort of each individual. Let us come with the true spirit of worship and work together in harmony of purpose and we will surely be blessed with that spiritual strength which will enable us to come off conquerors in the end. Let all the churches be represented by duly appointed delegates. All will be welcomed who desire to attend.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, post-office, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as present for 1899. The cost is only three cents a week.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the literal destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and conversion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Groaning Creation.

"Across the sea I heard the groans
Of nations in the intervals
Of wind and wave. Their blood and bones
Cried out in torture, crushed by thrones,
And sucked by greedy cormorants.

I dreamed of freedom slowly gained
By martyr meekness, patience, faith,
And lo! an athlete grimly stained,
With colored muscles battle strained
Shouting it from the fields of death.

I turned me, awe-struck, from the sight,
Among the clamoring thousands mute,
I only know that God is right,
And that the children of the light
Shall tread the darkness under foot.

I know the pent lie heaves its crust,
That sultry skies the bolt will form
To smite them clear; that Nature must
The balance of her power adjust,
Though with the earthquake and the storm.

God reigns, and let the earth rejoice!
I bow before his eternal plan.
Dumb are the organs of my choice;
He speaks in battle's stormy voice,
His praise is in the wrath of man.

Yet, surely as he lives, the day
Of peace he promised shall be ours;
To fold the flags of war, and lay
Its sword and spear to rust away,
And sow its ghastly fields with flowers."

GOD'S KINGDOM.

"And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break to pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." This kingdom when set up, is to be the fifth and last universal empire, which shall stand forever. It is symbolized in Daniel by the stone, cut out of the mountain without hands. Daniel in the seventh chapter informs us that this kingdom is to be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. Again we read in Daniel 7th chapter, "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the Ancient of Days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

It is evident from the foregoing Scriptures that this kingdom is not yet set up, as Christ must first come in the clouds of heaven, before that event will take place. In the 24st of Luke we learn from the teachings of Christ himself that after giving the signs which are to precede his coming, that when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Hence we know that the establishment of this kingdom will take place when Christ comes again to sit upon the throne of his father, David and to rule over the house of Israel forever.

Referring to Revelation xi. we read: "And the seventh angel sounded and there were great voices in heaven saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Again in the twelfth chapter, the Revelator tells us: "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation and strength, and the kingdom of God, and the power of his Christ; for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night."

From this foregoing Scripture it is evident that this kingdom is not yet set up, for the results growing out of the setting up of this kingdom have not yet been fulfilled. For we learn in the fourth chapter of Micah that when the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, that the law shall go forth from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among many people and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid; for the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoken it. For all people will walk every one in the name of his God and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever, and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever." What a consummation this will be. After so many ages of war and strife to see the corrupt and jealous nations of the world overcome and subdued, and then succeeded by a kingdom of peace and righteousness, whose dominion is to extend over the whole earth.

How our hearts should rejoice when we consider how fast this glad time is approaching, when the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously.

EDDIE RENNER.

MY FRIEND.

I have many friends most faithful,
Who are gentle, kind and true,
I would like to have you know them,
You would surely love them too,
Yet they have their faults and failings,
And they often go astray,
But I have one Friend who never
Wanders from the holy way.

It is to this particular Friend that I wish to call your attention this morning. You have all heard of Jesus and his wonderful works, but will try to do as the Apostle Peter says: "Stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance."

Jesus was a "man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. He was tempted in like manner as we are, yet did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth."

His record is pure and spotless. Then let us wisely accept him as our pattern and guide, that we may make no mistake in our journey through life, but be able to keep in the narrow way that leadeth unto life; "For wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be which go in thereat."

Solomon says, "There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." It is the very same Jesus, for he knows we are poor weak mortals, surrounded with difficulties, with snares upon our right and upon our left, calculated to lead us into the broad road that leads to destruction.

He knows our secret sorrows that no other ear hath heard, and no matter how degraded, how afflicted or oppressed, he will gladly be your helper. He forgets our old time folly, when he sees our footsteps turn. Sometimes our most intimate friends prove false, are enemies in disguise, but his lips never flatter, neither justify a wrong. Do you want to be his friend? Hearken, what he says: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." How important then that we should study to know his will in order that we may become his friend.

He tells us to "love one another as I your Lord and Master hath loved you." To what extent did he love us? "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John xv. 13. Yes, he became a willing sacrifice for the good of others. "Suffered the death of the cross, was buried and arose victorious over death and the grave, and is now alive forever more."

Jesus says, "All power is given unto me, in heaven and in the earth." While he was upon the earth, he went about doing good, teaching the people, preaching the gospel of the kingdom, healing the sick, feeling the hungry, and so on. When he ascended into heaven he left his true followers not without hope, for he says, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also."

He says "heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Matt. xxiv. 35.

His words are true and sure, without change or shade of turning. My blessed Friend is waiting in the courts of heaven today, pleading patiently, come to Christ and come today. This is mercy's golden hour.

Solomon says, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow; for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." "Today if ye will hear his voice harden not your hearts." "As I live, saith the Lord, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live, "Turn ye, turn ye. Why will ye die."

Jesus says the reward for good deeds is to be bestowed at the resurrection of the just. "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give to every man as his works shall be." Immortality is a gift which God offers us through Christ.

Christ says, "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with me." Open the door ere it be too late.

MISS ALMEDA MITCHELL.

The Seven Ages.

1. Antediluvian; 2. Patriarchal; 3. Law; 4. Christian; 5. Kingdom; 6. Little Season; 7. Perfect Age.

About 1650 years were measured off to the Antediluvian age; "And the flood came and destroyed them all."

The Patriarchal age had allotted to it a duration of about 850 years. It closed in judgment on the oppressors of God's chosen people, in the plagues of Egypt, and overthrow of Pharaoh and his army and power over Israel.

The Law Age began at Sinai, with its unflinching requirements, and penalties. The work of "our school master" was accomplished in bringing us to Christ; and the work ended by "Blotting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us; and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." More than 1500 years of Jewish history, and judgments came in the destruction of Jerusalem; and the Jews were sifted among the nations, like as corn is sifted in the sieve." The age closed in just judgments.

The Christian age has had more centuries measured off, and allotted to the little good and much evil of its generations, than any preceding age. Its corruptions increase, and the signs of its eventide, and its coming night of woeful judgments are casting a shadow over the nations, until "men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after the things which are coming upon the earth."

Then, what beyond? The reign of our coming King. "Blessed and holy is he that has part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power: but they shall be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." But even the age to come must end in judgments. "And when the thousand years are expired Satan shall be let out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations:.....and they compassed the camp of the saints about and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them."

This will be followed by a "little season." There is no method by which we may determine its duration. "The books will be opened," perhaps they will contain a record of the requirements of the preceding ages. "And another book will be opened, which is the book of life." Whatever the duration and opportunities of this age, it too will close in a judgment. In this case final and irrevocable; for "death and the grave will be cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever shall not be found written in the book of life shall be cast into the lake of fire."

Let the ages hasten on, even to this judgment, upon the last of the enemies, and to the completion of the redemptive ages. With the completion, and finishing of redemptive work we shall reach the Sabbath of the ages, the holy convention of the feast of the full harvest, the great jubilee. John looking through the mist, and gloom of the ages and wrote: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth:.....And I saw the holy city, New Jerusalem.....And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there was no more death; neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Oh, glorious convention! Oh grand consummation! Jubilee of jubilees! Eternal age of rest! Hasten! ages, hasten! Hasten to the full harvest, even the blessing and salvation, when "the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of the city;" and "the Lamb is the light thereof." Let the cycles roll on, till the blood of seven sprinklings, that stained a shadow of the cross before the mercy seat, on the floor of the Most Holy, reaches the Antitype at Calvary, and its cross, and heaven and its mercy seat, and the blessings of our High Priest; and onward till its seven manifestations of cleansing power shall be completed. Then God's footstool shall rival his throne! Note the following facts:

The first age ended with the judgment of the wicked.

The second age with judgments on the oppressors of God's people.

The third age had its judgments on Jerusalem, and the destruction of a million and a half of its people.

The fourth age will close with impending judgments on the nations.

The fifth age will be "finished," "fulfilled," or "expire," when the rebellious nations are devoured by fire, that "shall come down from God out heaven."

The sixth age will end with the destruction of death, the grave, and those not found written in the book of life.

The seventh age will be unending. It will never change, because, it, and the earth, and the inhabitants will be perfect. It will merit no judgment, because there will be no more sin. To it the ages move progressively forward; and toward it hundreds of predictions, and scores of types point. Shall we gain the ages to come, and life unending? W. L. SKEELS.

The Story of Israel. No. 83.

THE MARCH FROM SINAI TO CANAAN.

Who, who will be the real victors in this Israelitish army? Will it not be those who keep the first and great commandment of the law, to "love the Lord their God with all their heart?" And who keep the second commandment, that is like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself?" "Thou shalt love the stranger." Deut. vi. 5, 10, 12, 19; Lev. xix. 18. That is what the Lord required of them, that they "fear him to walk in all his ways, to love him, and to serve him, with all the heart and with all the soul." Deut. x. 12. The Lord "loved them" and "because he loved them, and because he would keep the oath, which he had sworn unto their fathers, he brought them out with a mighty hand and redeemed them from the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh, king of Egypt.

It would be those who had faith in this God of love, who would conquer, for it is only faith that makes works of any account. They would be the victors in the war, who remembered always, that "the Lord their God is God, their faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him, and keep his commandments, to a thousands generations." Deut. vii. 9.

They must believe that they were to be saved eternally, not by keeping the laws of their country, but by having faith in the promises of God made to their fathers, of a coming Savior, through whom they would be raised from the dead to everlasting life and an everlasting inheritance. The sacrifices, the blood, the prayers, the Day of Atonement availed nothing, if they looked not away unto Jesus. Keeping the laws of our country will not save us with an eternal salvation, not even if those laws were all God's laws, taken right from the Bible. God did not want his people to think that the Government of the State could save them; he wanted them to lean entirely upon him for the future. Many wicked people keep many of the laws of the land, because they are afraid to break them, lest they be punished. They do not keep law because they love God and love their neighbor, nor because they have any hope of any thing beyond; they are not Christians, they have no trust in Jesus. But those who hope for something beyond this life, because God in his great love has promised them something, and those who keep the law of their land out of love for him, for them it will be different: their faith will be known by their works, and will "be counted to them for righteousness."

Only those Israelites of this army could be saved in the everlasting kingdom, who had faith in the power of God to fulfil the promises made to Abraham. You must never forget this as we go on with our studies. It is one thing to belong to a nation that is saved in the present time from all their enemies round about.—just as God has been saving our nation for nearly a hundred years—but it is quite another thing to be sure of endless life for ourselves individually in the world to come.

Some of the Israelites had this faith, for Jesus says, "Many prophets and kings desired to see and to hear the things that the disciples saw and heard." Luke x. 24. And Peter says of "the lively hope" to which we have been begotten again, "By the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away, that this is the salvation about which the prophets enquired and searched diligently. God's Holy Spirit revealed to them the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow. This every thing was told in sign language to Abraham when Isaac was bound and laid upon the altar to be slain. It said just as plainly as words could say, that the dear Savior, the real Son of promise, of whom Isaac was the type, would be actually slain for us, and would be given back from death to his Father, just as Isaac was in figure, given back from death to Abraham. Read 1 Peter i.

Paul said when he stood before the Jewish council, to be tried for his life, "of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." "I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers, Unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night hope to come." Acts xxiii. 6; Acts xxvi. 6, 7.

Many of the Israelitish church "were tortured, not accepting deliverance that they might obtain a better resurrection." Heb. xi. 35. Have I made this plain to you little ones? that some of the Israelites believed in the resurrection through Jesus just as we do? Then we will go on. We are not getting on very fast, but it is better to go slow and understand our lessons, than to go over a great deal and know nothing when we are done. Our object is to link all of our lessons with Jesus. He is what the Jews call "the Messianic idea." The faithful Jews still cling to the faith that the promised Messiah and the kingdom will come, so we want to cling to that thought, in all our our Bible studies.

Dear Restitution:

From this time forward, so long as there shall be contentions among nations, England and the United States will be allied. They will stand together as one nation. The question at stake is the supremacy of the world. In that contest the United States and England will be successful. Russia with those nations which will assist her, will win a victory at the great battle of Armageddon, but his armies will be immediately destroyed, which will leave England and the United States in supreme control of the nations of the world, and thus it will be when Christ comes with his saints. Napoleon Bonaparte said "the world will become either Republican or Cossack." IT WILL NEVER BECOME COSSACK.

Concerted honors never wear well.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the literal destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and conversion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Egypt Under the British.

There are few more interesting and inspiring spectacles among the nations of the world today than that presented by Egypt under British guidance. That country, one of the oldest in settlement and civilization, if not the oldest in the world, is strikingly refuting the idea that the ruined empires of the past can never be rehabilitated. In other cases the rule has seemed to prevail. Assyria is dead and will not live again. Persia is dying, with no hope of resurrection. Modern Greece is scarcely a shadow of the Athens of Pericles and the empire of Alexander. Modern Italy covers scarcely a reminder of ancient Rome. And this is so not merely in respect to political greatness, but equally in respect to numbers of population and industrial wealth. But here is Egypt, oldest of them all, after centuries of prostration more complete than most others have suffered, rising into a newness of life and wealth and greatness surpassing its best days of old.

There is no exaggeration in saying that. Let us begin with population. How many inhabitants the Egypt of the Pharaohs had is problematic, but it is doubtful if it had more than did the Egypt of the Ptolemys, and that was not more than eight millions. A couple of centuries ago, under the Mamelukes, the number had fallen to three millions. Under Mehemet Ali and his successors there was some improvement, and the census roll of 1875 was increased to six millions, at which figure, or a little less, it stood in 1882. Now, after scarcely sixteen years of British rule, the population is about ten millions. That means an increase of 66 per cent in sixteen years, or a little more than 4 per cent a year. It means that Egypt today, Egypt proper, not counting the vast realms of Equatoria and the Bahr-el-Ghazal, is more populous than ever before in all its history. That in itself is a singularly impressive and significant fact.

In industries the growth of Egypt is comparably great. The country is not the granary of Europe, as it once was. Other lands have usurped the place. But if we measure its grain, its fruits, its cotton, and all its products we shall find it is yielding far more than it did even in the fat years of Joseph. It is not building pyramids and sphinxes and Philes. But the barrages of the Nile, one built and one building, are greater works than those. Nor may we overlook its railroads, of which it has some 1,100 miles, or more than Spain, or Portugal, or even Austria-Hungary. Twenty years ago there was scarcely a mile of good wagon road in all the land, and travel and transportation had to be afoot or on muleback or camelback. In the last six years more than a thousand miles of fine roads have been built, and the work is proceeding at a rate that would warm the cockles of Roy Stone's heart.

But at least there is no political revival for the land? We are not sure of that, but rather inclined to the contrary. The talk of a few days ago about the formal proclamation of a British protectorate was, of course, groundless, as all discerning men knew at the time. But if such proclamation was not made it was not merely because it would have been injudicious, but also because it would have been superfluous. The British occupation has long gone beyond a mere protectorate. Egypt is now, and will remain, a part of the British Empire, and that is such an empire as the greatest of the Pharaohs never even dreamed of possessing. So in that potent and vital sense the political renascence of Egypt is fully comparable with its populous and its industrial. And the fact is its own vindication. One has only to ask himself if there would have been any such growth in population and prosperity and wealth, and any such advance in education and order and administration of justice and development of right government if Egypt had remained under native or Turkish control, or, indeed, had passed under any other control than that of Great Britain. The answer is an unhesitating and emphatic negative, and it is the seal to Great Britain's moral title-deed to Egypt and the whole Valley of the Nile.—New York Tribune.

Plymouth, Indiana, Nov. 30, 1898.

The article on the visit of the German Emperor to Jerusalem is sent us by Bro. J. Cameron, of Edinburgh, Scotland. Thanks.

We call especial attention to the article on "Egypt" on our first page. It is one of the most important features of the "signs of the times," that are placing the nations in the positions they will occupy when the Lord comes. Mighty events are "happening" every day.

Owing to the necessary confusion attending the care of our Conference, we decided to drop out last week's paper in place of this week. There are five Wednesdays in this month, and we issue but four papers a month. The papers of Nov. 16 and 30 are consecutive numbers, no paper being issued for Nov. 23.

If the Bible says there is but one hope, (Eph. iv. 4,) and that the hope of eternal life to be bestowed at the second appearing of Jesus Christ, (Titus i. 2, 3; xiii. 3, 7), what right have any to teach that men have eternal life now, and that the coming of Jesus is something that does not concern his disciples?

Ruskin says:—

"That which we foolishly call vastness is, rightly considered, not more wonderful, not more impressive than that which we insolently call littleness; and the infinity of God is not mysterious, it is only unfathomable,—not concealed, but incomprehensible; it is a clear infinity, the darkness of the pure unsearchable sea."

Again we find Ruskin speaking of God's kingdom:—

"The kingdom of God is as a treasure hid in a field; and we are not to put confidence in those who say:—Here is the treasure. We have it and will give you some of it; but to those who say, That is a good place to dig, and you will dig most easily in such and such a way."

Remember that we send the balance of 1898 issues to each new subscriber sent in before Jan. 1, 1899. When sending your renewal try and get your brother who does not take the paper to try it for a year. Or if you can spare the money, send it to some friend. You will never know, perhaps, the good done by such an action, but you can be assured the Father will make record of each item to your credit.

Bishop Leighton said: "The heart may be engaged in a small business as much as in many and great affairs. A man may drown in a little brook or pool, as well as in a great river.....If he plunge into it and put his head under water. Some care thou must have that thou mayest not care. Those things that are thorns indeed, thou must have a hedge of them to keep out temptations that accompany sloth, and extreme want that waits on it; but let them be the hedge; suffer them not to grow in the garden."

Our Indiana Conference was held at this place as announced, and was in every way a very enjoyable and profitable meeting. Bro. and Sister Woodward, Bros. Austin, Wagoner, Driggins, Zilmer and Wince were the speakers, and were listened to with attention. The Ministers Meeting held after the real Conference ended, was also of great benefit to all who attended. The friendly discussion of ways and means, and interchange of thought on various subjects, carried on in a kindly Christian spirit is well, and we are glad to say this meeting was permeated by that loving charity that should always characterize our deliberations. It was a good meeting, if not the best we ever had here. Report will be made by the Secretary later.

We hope all our friends will save us the expense and labor of sending notice regarding renewal of subscription. The time of the expiration of your subscription is known to you certainly, and you must realize that we need the money. It seems to you doubtless a small matter, and to be attended to a little later on, but while each one is but little, when gathered in to us it makes it easy for us to pay our bills. We have to meet our bills, so please be prompt with your renewals.

If Paul said that Jesus Christ shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom, (2 Tim. iv. 1,) how can any one be rewarded or punished before Jesus returns to earth?

The following little paragraph from Ruskin is well worth circulating,—well worth remembering. It contains three or four great truths—truths of vast importance. It says:—

"Anything which makes religion its second object, makes religion no object. God will put up with a great many things in the human heart but there is one thing he will not put up with in it,—a second place! He who offers God a second place, offers him no place."

"Justice is administered every day without the slightest slip. If a man neglects to do the right or does wrong he injures himself. Powers of personality, through which life has its interests and joy, are damaged, just as the taste may be impaired, or hearing, or sight. Other and special retribution will follow, but what can be greater than this, the suicide of man's better self? What doth it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?"

The Power of the Word.

Heinrich Heine, the great German Jew, is said to have sounded the depths of unbelief, and ascended the heights of human cynicism, but we copy from a contemporary Journal the voluntary confession he made at the close of his life to illustrate the transforming power of truth believed. He said:—

"In truth it was neither a vision nor a seraphic revelation, nor a light from heaven, nor any strange dream, nor other mystery which brought me into the way of salvation. I owe my illumination entirely to and simply to the reading of a book. A Book? Yes: a homely-looking Book, modest as nature, and as she herself—a Book which has a work-a-day and unassuming look, like the sun which warms us; a Book which seems to look at us as cordially and blessingly as the old grandmother who reads it daily with dear trembling lips and with spectacles on her nose. And this Book is called shortly, the Book,—the Bible. Rightly do men call it the Holy Scripture. He who has lost his God may find him again in this Book, and towards him who has never known God it sends forth a breath of the Divine Word. Why do the British gain foothold in so many lands? With them they bring the Bible, that grand democracy wherein each man shall not only be king in his own house, but also bishop. They are demanding,—they are founding the great power of the Spirit, the power of religious emotions, and the love of humanity, of purity, of true morality, which cannot be taught by dogmatic formulas, but by parable, and by example, such as are contained in that beautiful, sacred, educational Book for the young and old,—the Bible."

Well Done!

From Matt. xxv. 14-23 we learn that these words or their equivalent will be addressed to faithful servants when the traveller to the far country returns. And it behooves all who have made a covenant with that Nobleman to be looking well to their accounts so that they may be able to render them with joy.

"Well done, good and faithful servant" is said to two out of three, in the parable so full of practical lessons. Circumstances forbid an attempt to get all these lessons before our readers, but will call attention to several of them; and

1st, The Master of the House expects every servant to work for his interest during his absence; and

2nd, That the gifts or talents of each servant are regulated by personal capacity, susceptibility, or natural endowment.

3rd, That one who improves a small capital proportionate to one of a large capital will be proportionately rewarded.

4th, That it is incumbent upon every servant to first ascertain what his capital consists of, and second, how to invest it with most profit to the Nobleman.

5th, That careful protection and honest return of the Lord's money or talent, without profit, will result most disastrously. Something must be done with it. It must not be hidden away in a napkin. The faithful servant will hear the words, "Well done!" Not only done, but well done. It is the will of the Father that has to be done, and only those who do it shall enter the kingdom. Matt. vii. 21. It cannot be denied that God's will is our sanctification; and Jesus has let us into the divine process. We are sanctified by belief in and obedience to God's truth. John xvii. 17. And, if that were all, our sole business as servants would consist of interests which centered in us. But the idea that we have been called out for God for our own special benefit, is wide, yea, very wide of the truth in the premises.—God has an eternal purpose to carry out yet, in reference to man and earth,—and he has ordained that those who accept his invitation by the gospel, shall, in company with his glorious and exalted Son execute that purpose, when the time arrives. But they have, in the mean time to work together with God in taking out the requisite number to rule the world in righteousness. They have to publish the gospel message far and wide and baptize them into the legal Heir to the throne of David. Are we looking after this part of our duty? Are we all doing this? If we are not doing this part of the Father's will and doing it well, can we expect the Son to say we have? Will he reward us for what we have not done? As all of us have received one pound can we expect to evade the sentence of him who hid his talent in the earth, if we fail to improve it?

A Government Needed and Promised.

We think it was Coleridge who, when asked what sort of a government he, personally, would choose for man, said,—

"An angel from Heaven, and a Despotism!" That would be a despotism, administered by a sinless being. He came pretty near making the very best possible choice, under his circumstances; but we would have said, The LORD JESUS from heaven, and a despotism. We know such a Ruler with such a Rule is necessary because it is promised, thus:—"Behold the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold his reward is with him, and his work before him." Isa. xl. 10.

"Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever." Isa. ix. 7.

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

"The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32.

That these, and many more passages refer to earth and not to the distant heavens is patent. David's throne and kingdom was earthly. Christ has no present nor promised throne apart from David's, for that which he now provisionally occupies, is the shared throne of the Father, where he waits until he receives his own throne, and becomes King of kings and Lord of lords. A consummation devoutly to be wished, sure, not until then will earth and man know a righteous and peaceful government.

Current News.

Among the news items of importance we condense somewhat. Representative Hepburn who was chairman of the committee to whom was referred the Nicaraguan canal matter, makes an report that he will favor the building of the canal by the government directly, with the help of no other nation, and with the understanding that it be built on land owned by the United States. Of course this will imply the purchase of the land. He says this is the only safe method as the work is a great and imperative political and commercial necessity for the protection of our national interests.

In view of the fact that this country is to hold and control the Philippines it is necessary that an ocean cable be laid, and the acquisition of one of the Caroline Islands by purchase is now under consideration. This is one step in the work of securing a line of stations to enable our ships to be supplied with coal, while on long voyages around the world. Another important event is the ceding last week of the island of Socotra by England to the United States. Get the map and you will find the island lying right at the mouth of the Gulf of Aden, at the entrance to the Red Sea. This arrangement was unannounced, and no one but the officials in charge suspected any such a concession. But it all works out right, being a prominent place right in the course of the commerce that our nation is to develop and own. Where will the next station be? We need one in the Mediterranean. Will we get it?

German Emperor in the East.

Jerusalem, Oct. 31.—The Emperor William proceeded to Mount Zion this morning, and attended the ceremony of hoisting the German and Turkish flags on the piece of ground known as "La Dormition de la Sainte Vierge," which his Majesty acquired from the Sultan. Subsequently his Majesty formally presented the piece of land to the German Catholics. The Emperor in the course of the day received the deputation of the English Knights of St. John sent by the Prince of Wales to greet him.

After his acquisition of the plot of ground known as La Dormition de la Sainte Vierge, the Emperor William sent the following telegram to the Pope in French:—

"Happy to be able to inform your Holiness that, thanks to the benevolent intervention of his Majesty the Sultan, who did not hesitate to give me this proof of personal friendship, I have been able to acquire at Jerusalem a piece of ground known as La Dormition de la Sainte Vierge. I have decided to place this territory, consecrated by so many pious memories, at the disposal of my Catholic subjects, notably the German Catholic Association of the Holy Land. It rejoiced my heart to be able to prove on this occasion how dear to me are the religious interests of the Catholics whom divine Providence has confided to my care.

I beg your Holiness to accept the assurance of my sincere attachment."

The Pope replied as follows:—

"We are deeply touched by the courteous telegram which your Majesty has been pleased to address to us, informing us of your decision to present to your Catholic subjects the site of La Dormition de la Sainte Vierge, which you have acquired at Jerusalem. In expressing our lively satisfaction, we feel sure that the Catholics will be very grateful to your Majesty, and we are pleased to unite with them in expressing our most sincere thanks."

The consecration of the new Church of the Redeemer, in which the German Emperor and Empress took part today, was attended by ceremonies of a splendid and impressive character. From seven o'clock in the morning a huge crowd of sightseers had taken possession of David and Christian Streets to witness the passage of the Imperial cortege to the porch of the church. The way was kept clear by Turkish troops and a contingent of German sailors, both being accompanied by their bands.

The Emperor and Empress, who drove to the Tower of David, and continued on foot from that point to the church, arrived there at nine o'clock precisely. His Majesty wore the white full-dress uniform of the German Imperial Guard, and the Empress was attired in grey. Both their Majesties wore numerous decorations. The service, which included an anthem, an impressive organ recital, and a sermon by Pastor Hoppe, was a most solemn and interesting one throughout, and as all the congregation were in full uniform, it was attended by all possible pomp and eclat.

In course of the service the Emperor read the constitution of the church, and in a few words expressed the hope that the ministrations in the new edifice would be followed by the divine blessing.

At the close of today's ceremony of consecrating the Church of the Redeemer, the Emperor delivered an address, pointing out how Jerusalem united all Christians, regardless of creed or nationality, in the Apostolic faith. From Jerusalem, proceeded his Majesty, there came the light, in the splendor of which the German nation has become great and glorious. And what the Germanic people have become they became under the banner of the cross, the emblem of self-sacrificing Christian charity. As nearly two thousand years ago, so there shall today ring out from Jerusalem the cry voicing the ardent hope of all—Peace on earth. The Emperor then renewed the vow of his ancestors—"I and my house will serve the Lord"—and called upon all present to make the same vow, concluding with the prayer that God would vouchsafe that confidence in the Almighty, brotherly love, resignation in suffering, and earnest work might remain the German nation's noblest adornments, and that the spirit of peace might ever more penetrate and hallow the Evangelical Church.

It was half-past three o'clock when I arrived on Mount Zion in order to be present at the ceremony in which the German Emperor was to formally hand over to the German Catholics a piece of ground which he has acquired from the Sultan.

The Emperor and Empress drove up at four o'clock, and were greeted by the band playing a march. The Emperor stepped into the open space below the flag, and in a few stirring words addressed the assembled people, telling how the Sultan Aziz had thirty years ago given a piece of land, and how now his successor, Abdul Hamid, had with the greatest kindness (here his Majesty bowed to the Pasha present) given him this plot of land, which he, in turn, was now about to hand over to the German Catholics for religious purposes. It behooved, said his Majesty, all Germans to guard and protect it. Upon a signal given by the Emperor, the German National Anthem was played and the German standard hoisted.

The Catholic Patriarch, Father Schmidt, in the name of the Catholic Union in the Holy Land, in his reply, assured his Majesty that his faithful Catholic subjects in Palestine would steadfastly stand together as firm as Mount Zion itself. He concluded by bestowing upon their Majesties the blessing of the Holy Virgin, who had on this spot fallen asleep.

Afterwards his Majesty personally decorated the Guardsmen who formed the guard of honor, exhorting them in a few brief words to defend the honor of the Fatherland. Three cheers were given for their Majesties, and, to the strains of an inspiring march, the Imperial party withdrew, again passing under the Zion Gate on their way back to the town.

While the Western world resounds with preparation for war, out of the East comes a proclamation of peace. The Kaiser's sermon echoes the Czar's Rescript in its message of good will towards men, and especially towards Christians, "regardless of creed, nationality, or apostolic faith." If the spoken call to practice "self-sacrificing Christian charity"—to ring out the thousand wars of old and ring in the thousand years of peace—be less formal than the written one of three months ago, the place, time, and circumstances of the new appeal are surely far more impressive. The German Emperor lifts up his testimony upon the walks of Zion, at the birthplace of our religion, the center of the most hallowed associations of civilized and Christian mankind. The renewal of the oath of allegiance to the cross and its principles takes place in what has already been known during nearly four millennial periods of history as the "City of Peace." Must we not believe that Jerusalem is about to acquire fresh and less ambiguous claim to its ancient name, when the successor of the heads of the Holy Roman Empire, the War Lord of the modern Teutons, rises up within it not only to conjure now creeds and peoples to unity and brotherly love, but to give example along with precept? For, besides preaching from the text "Peace on Earth" at the consecration of the Church of the Redeemer, has not the Kaiser been purchasing, "through the benevolent intervention of his Majesty the Sultan," a plot of ground on Mount Zion for the housing of German Catholic communities in Jerusalem, and have not telegrams of congratulation passed between him and his Holiness the Pope on the subject? When one beholds this happy co-operation, for a noble and generous purpose, between three such Powers of the world, temporal and spiritual, as the Pope of Rome, the Champion of Continental Protestantism, and the Caliph of the Faithful, may we not conclude that the time not merely for beating swords into plowshares, but for laying aside the differences and disputations on matters of faith and belief, is nigh at hand? How far away seems the "Culture-Kampf" in the light of these congratulatory messages; how far even the Constantinople massacres! The reunion pointed to is one that goes far beyond the polite adjustment of those questions of policy and material interest which in these days chiefly set the nations of civilization by the ears: beyond, too, the removal of those pretensions and prejudices which, more than differences of doctrine, still keep the creeds and sects of Christendom apart in spirit. In the East, if not in the West, men hate and slay each other over points of faith. May not this tripartite agreement in act of benevolence and devotion—this "proof of personal friendship" rendered by the Sultan to the Kaiser, and by the Kaiser passed on to the Pontiff—signify a reign of universal peace and friendship not limited to the bounds of Christendom and civilization, and embracing the whole earth?

No one need doubt the sincerity and earnestness of the Kaiser's exhortation to peace and good will. No one can help admiring the spirit that inflames his words and actions. But it would be rash to conclude, because of anything said or done in Jerusalem, that the questions put abo[ut] confidently answered in the af[fir]mative, either immediately or in the [fu]ture we are shortly about to e[n]ter upon. Have we not the warni[ng] of the Czar's Rescript? Months [have] passed since it was issued, and the [ex]cellent sentiments and intentions [it] met with praise on all hands. B[ut] success has been what our Fren[ch] neighbors call a "succes d'estime." No visible advantage to the cause [of] peace has thus far followed it. On the contrary, the outlook is everywhere more threatening of war. "Unfriendly acts" have been committed by nation on nation, and have not been disavowed; and in consequence fleets are being prepared and armies mobilized. Elsewhere in international politics there are clouded skies and a plentiful lack of the "self-sacrificing Christian charity" which the Kaiser wishes to see. His "personal friend," the Sultan, still seeks to hold out against the removal of the Turkish garrison from Crete; Spain and the United States threaten to break out into new wrangling over the spoils of war; China keeps slipping into the melting pot. We cannot imagine that the Emperor Wilhelm is not keenly aware of all these portents and dangers. He is a man of ideas and aspirations. But he is also, there is good reason to believe, a man of energy and action. He is right to give strong and full expression to his sentiments, especially when they run strongly in the direction of the proclamation of the feuds of race and creed. Preaching peace on the walls of Jerusalem is, perhaps, better employment than shaking a mailed fist in the Further East. But it would be rash to deduce the future course of the policy of Czar or Kaiser, or that of any sovereign or ruler from words spoken in public, even although these may be the genuine and fervid expression of the speaker's desires.

Even as the Emperor was speaking at the consecration of the Church of the Redeemer, rumor was posting abroad over Europe with the news that, in consequence of complications that had arisen in European affairs, his visit to the East was to be cut short. It is now explained that it is in consequence of "the heat" that certain items in his programme are to be dropped. The heat is an excellent reason—or excuse—for not going down to Jericho and the Dead Sea. Whatever the cause, it would seem that he is coming home sooner than was originally intended; and, however great or small may be the effect of his exhortation to the Christian creeds and nations to dwell together in unity, there can be no question that he has already succeeded in making an impression upon the Turk and upon the East generally. With the the insouciance and apathy of his hosts he has brought into contrast his own fiery and relentless energy. The Ottoman officials in Stamboul itself, it is said, had example given to them which they are not likely soon to forget in punctuality, and making a good use of their time; and it was doubtless with this admirable purpose in view, and not for the more sinister reasons that have, it appears, suggested themselves to the minds of the Christian part of the population, that he confined his attention to the Moslem quarters and infidelities. Jerusalem, too, has had its lesson. But then, as the Emperor himself reminds us, Jerusalem had its lesson nearly two thousand years ago, from an infinitely greater Preacher of the Gospel of Peace. It was not remembered or taken to heart; and no spot on earth has stood more in need of an exhortation to brotherly love and charity than the "City of Peace"—the city that has sustained seventeen sieges and has been repeatedly destroyed and laid waste; of which it has been said that there is none other in the world "whose soil has been more often drenched with the blood of its people." Down to the present time, it has been a very rock-pit of furious religious and racial passions, even among peoples and sects calling themselves Christian. Have not the Latin and the Greek Churches been quarrelling for centuries over what is claimed to be the Holy Sepulchre? Was not this question of the "Holy Places" the proximate cause of the Crimean War? And have not Ottoman soldiers to be posted on the occasion of the great Christian festivals to keep the adherents of rival Churches, all owning the authority and professing the principles of the same Master, from flying at each others' throats? One rejoices to hear of the many evidences furnished by the Emperor's visit of subsiding rancour and increasing harmony and brotherly kindness, not only as between Catholics and Protestants, and Greeks and Latins, but among all the many tribes and faiths of Jerusalem—Jew, Moslem, and Christian. But, remembering the long and weary vigil which Jerusalem and humanity have had to undergo, while waiting for the realization of the original message of Peace on Earth, one must not look for any sudden miracle of change in the nature of men or in the ways of nations and churches to follow the Kaiser's prayer.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

A Glance at the Political and Prophetical World.

Let us take a walk along the highway of Time which will lead us to the time of the second advent of the Lord and a little beyond. First let us examine the last will and Testament of Peter the Great, which is one of the most remarkable political documents ever written. Peter the Great was the true founder of the Russian Empire. His will is to the student of history and also to the diplomatist of the present day, what the prophecy contained in the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezekiel is to the student of prophecy. In view of the present threatening complications in Europe and Asia this will is especially interesting at the present time. I therefore give it in full.

THE WILL OF PETER THE GREAT.

"In the name of the most holy and invisible Trinity, we, Peter the Great, unto all our descendants and successors to the throne and government of the Russian nation:

The All Powerful, from whom we hold our life and our throne, after having revealed unto us his wishes and intentions, and after being our support, permits us to look upon Russia as called upon to establish her over all Europe. This idea is based upon the fact that all nations of this portion of the globe are fast approaching a state of utter decrepitude. From this it results that they can be easily conquered by a new race of people when it has attained full power and strength. We look upon our invasion of the West and the East as a decree of divine Providence, which has already once regenerated the Roman Empire by an invasion of "barbarians."

The Emigration of the men from the North is like the inundation of the Nile, which at certain seasons enriches with its waters the arid plains of Egypt. We found Russia a small rivulet, we leave it an immense river. Our successors will make of it an ocean, destined to fertilize the whole of Europe, if they know how to guide its waves. We leave them, then, the following instructions, which we earnestly recommend to their constant meditation:

I. To keep the Russian nation in constant warfare, in order always to have good soldiers. Peace must only be permitted to remit the finances. To recruit the army, choose the moment favorable to attack. Thus peace will advance your projects of war, and war those of peace, for the obtaining of the enlargement and prosperity of Russia.

II. Draw unto you by all possible means, from the civilized nations of Europe, captains during war, and learned men during peace, so that Russia may benefit by the advantages of other nations.

III. Take care to mix in the affairs of all Europe, and in particular of Germany, which being the nearest nation to you, deserves your chief attention.

IV. Divide Poland by raising up continual jealousies within its bosom. Gain over its rulers with gold, influence and corrupt the Diet in order to have a voice in the election of kings. Make partisans and protect them, if neighboring powers raise objections and opposition, surmount the obstacles by stirring up discord within their countries.

V. Take all you can from Sweden; and to effect this isolate her from Denmark, and vice versa. Be careful to arouse their jealousy.

VI. Marry Russian princes with German princesses; multiply these alliances; unite these interests; and, by the increase of our influence, attach Germany to our cause.

VII. Seek an alliance with England on account of our commerce, as being the country most useful for the development of our navy (merchants, etc.) and for the exchange of our produce against her gold. Keep up continued communications with her merchants and sailors, so that ours may acquire experience in commerce and navigation.

VIII. Constantly extend yourselves along the Baltic and the borders of the Euxine.

IX. Do all in your power to approach closely Constantinople and India. Remember that he who rules these countries is the real sovereign of the world. Keep up continual wars with Turkey and Persia. Establish dockyards in the Black Sea. Gradually obtain the command of this sea, as well as the Baltic. This is necessary for the entire success of our projects. Hasten the fall of Persia. Open for yourselves a route toward the Persian Gulf. Re-establish as much as possible, by means of Syria, the ancient commerce of the Levant, and thus advance toward India. Once there you will not require English gold.

X. Carefully seek the alliance of Austria. Make her believe that you will second her in her projects for dominion over Germany, and secretly stir up other princes against her, and manage so that each be disposed to claim the assistance of Russia; and exercise over each a sort of protection, which will lead the way to future dominion over them.

XI. Make Austria drive the Turks out of Europe, and neutralize her jealousy by offering to her a portion of your conquests, which you will further on take back.

XII. Above all recall around you the schismatic Greeks, who are spread over Hungary and Poland. Become their center, and appear a universal dominion over them by a kind of sacerdotal rule, by this you will have many friends among your enemies.

XIII. Sweden dismembered, Persia conquered, Poland subjugated, Turkey beaten, our armies united, the Black and Baltic seas guarded by our vessels, prepare, separately and secretly, first the court of Versailles, then that of Vienna, to share the empire of the universe with Russia. If one accept, flatter her ambition and make use of one to crush the other by engaging them in war. The result cannot be doubtful; Russia will be possessed of the whole of the East and of a great portion of Europe.

XIV. If, which is not probable, both should refuse the offer of Russia, raise a quarrel between them, and one which will ruin them both. Then, Russia profiting by this decisive movement, will inundate Germany with the troops which she will have assembled beforehand. At the same time two fleets, full of soldiers will leave the Baltic Sea, will advance along the Mediterranean and the Levant, keeping France in check with one, and Germany with the other. And these two countries conquered, the remainder of Europe will fall under our yoke. THUS EUROPE IS SUBJUGATED."

It will be observed that in the introductory part of the Will, Peter the Great says the All Powerful, having revealed unto us his wishes and intentions, permits us to look upon Russia, as called upon her to rule over all Europe." Again he says, "We look upon our invasion of the West and the East as a decree of Divine Providence." When we take these utterances and place them along side of Ezekiel's prophecy it is indeed most remarkable. It does not prove that Peter the Great was either a prophet or a seer, but it does prove that God in his wisdom was directing the policy of the Russian nation, which will finally result in the accomplishment of his purposes with reference to that nation as foretold by Ezekiel, as long ago as the days of Peter the Great. Peter the Great says, "We found Russia a small rivulet, we leave it an immense river." So it would seem that God began the work of preparing the Russian Empire for the work he has in store for her to do, during the reign of Peter the Great.

"God works in a myst'rious way,
His wonders to perform."

Having taken a look at the historical side of the picture, we will now turn to the prophetical.

All are familiar with Joel's prophecy which is a command to all Gentile nations to arm and get ready for the coming conflict.

We are also familiar with the prophecy of Ezekiel, which foreshadows the great work to be performed by Gog, the Czar of Russia.

We are also familiar with the fact spoken of by Ezekiel, that Tarshish (British Empire), and the young lions thereof, will interpose to defeat the ambitious projects of Russia, in her attempted conquest of not only Palestine (mountains of Israel), but of the entire Turkish Empire. But the nations which will assist Russia on the one hand and England on the other, is not so well settled. All nations, that is all Gentile nations, are to be engaged in some manner in the conflict. Ezekiel tells us that Russia will be assisted by "Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya, Gomer (which is Germany) and all his bands and many people with thee," which shows that there will be other nations not named. I am inclined to think that Austria-Hungary, perhaps Italy and some smaller nations, will aid Russia.

We are also informed by the Prophet that Sheba, and Dedan, and the Merchants of Tarshish with all the young lions thereof, will oppose Russia. Tarshish is England, or the old lion country. The Merchants of Tarshish refers to India. Many years ago the English Government chartered the East India Company, giving that Company power and authority to trade and carry on business in India. This Company became so rich and powerful that it practically reduced the people of India into subjection to it. Whereupon the British Government stepped in and took possession of that country, and Queen Victoria was made Empress of India. Thus India was made one of the dependencies of England. The young lions include all of England's dependencies, and may be said to include the United States as England is our mother country. If she is the Lion country, and we are one of her children, then we are one the "Young Lions."

In putting France with England I am aware that I cross the track of nearly all statesmen and Bible expositors. Nevertheless, I am firmly of the opinion that France will assist England in the great conflict. I think so for the following reasons, viz:

1. Germany and France will never combine. Germany will fight with Russia, therefore France will be on the other side.

2. Much as France hates England her people would much prefer that England should continue to hold Gibraltar, and thus control the entrance to the Mediterranean Sea and also hold the Suez Canal, which controls the commerce on the Red Sea, Gain to have them both fall into the hands of the "Northern Bear." As proof of this I need only refer to the action of the French nation during the Crimean war, in 1856. When it became apparent that Turkey could not, single handed and alone, contend with the Russian forces, England and France joined their forces and assisted Turkey to drive the Russian Bear back to his northern den.

3. Napoleon Bonaparte, when on the Island of St. Helena, said to Governor Hudson, "In the natural course of events Turkey must fall to Russia. The greatest part of her people are Greeks, who, you may say, are Russians. The powers it will injure are England, France, Austria and Prussia. As to Austria it will be very easy for Russia to engage her assistance by giving her Servia, and other provinces bordering upon the Austrian Dominions, reaching near Constantinople. The only hypothesis that France and England may be allied with sincerity will be in order to prevent this. But even this will not avail. France, England and Prussia united, cannot prevent it. Once mistress of Constantinople, Russia gets all the commerce of the Mediterranean, becomes a great naval power, and God knows then what may happen. She quarrels with you and marches off an army to India, of 70 000 good soldiers and 100,000 Cossacks, which to her is nothing, and England loses India. All this I foresaw. I wanted to establish a barrier against those barbarians by re-establishing the kingdom of Poland, but you imbeciles of ministers would not consent. A hundred years hence I shall be praised. They will say I was right."

Napoleon was right. France will fight against Russia.

The interest of this nation is identical with that of England and we will join her. Japan will do the same, for the same reason. As the effort of Russia will be to overthrow the Turkish Empire Turkey will naturally side with England. Canada, India, Australia all being provinces of England, young lions, will aid her. But the objector will say, why France and England are this very day, October 25, standing with drawn swords ready to fight, and most likely will fight over the possession of Fashoda in Africa. These little tiffs don't signify. The probability is that this trouble will all be settled before these words are in print. Three years ago this nation and England were going to war over the Venezuela question. We did not fight and there never was any probability that we would, although the scare cost millions in the shrinkage of property, however it was all soon recovered.

With the foregoing picture of the nations of the world, arrayed on either side, we can locate the events as they take place.

This nation has been taking her place in the line of battle ever since the thirtieth day of last April, when we stepped to the front, and took possession of the most important place, from a strategic standpoint, on the face of the globe. Having got the possession of the Philippine Islands does any person who has carefully studied the situation, suppose for a moment, that we will give them up? Why did we take possession of them? It was the Lord's doings.

In a former article I have shown how England, the United States and Japan control the entire sea coast of Asia as far north as the fiftieth parallel north latitude, which will give them the trade of more than seven hundred million people.

The route thus controlled is over eight thousand miles in length. To do the carrying trade which this will furnish, and at the same time take care of and look after our new possessions, will require a great many more ships of commerce than we now have. I therefore predict that this nation will, in the near future, adopt the policy of subsidizing all ships which may be registered as American ships, whether built in this country or bought abroad. Our commerce on the high seas will increase enormously, and the policy of the nation will be to build up a powerful marine fleet of the very best ships built, for the carrying trade.

England and the United States united, and they will unite, would have, when the Nicaragua canal is completed, as it soon will be, almost a straight route around the world, not diverging very far from the twentieth parallel north latitude. The route would be, starting say, from Palestine and going east, first through the Suez canal, Red Sea, Indian Ocean, Straits of Malacca, China Sea, Pacific Ocean, Nicaragua canal, Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea to the starting point. By diverging to the north or south of this line all the nations of the world could be reached.

No other nation, except it be Japan, could send their ships over this route, for the reason that they could not, without the consent of England and the United States, run their ships through the Suez Canal or the Nicaragua canal. Neither could they pass through the Straits of Malacca, or the China Sea without the consent of the two nations of England and the United States. These two countries would therefore have a monopoly of the carrying trade of the world.

England could use all ports belonging to the United States, and this country do the same with all the English ports, so that it would not be necessary for either of the two countries to be at the expense of securing more coaling stations or ports of entry. Do we realize what such a condition of things would mean to the business interests of these two favored nations?

But I am asked the question, what has all this to do with the fulfilment of prophecy? The prophets tell us that the Jews and Israelites, that is the two tribes and the ten tribes, are to return to their own land. They are now scattered to the four corners of the earth. How are they to get back to Palestine? Again we look into the prophecies and we learn that the ships of Tarshish shall bring them. Tarshish is England, but it also includes the United States for the reason that England is our mother country.

There are ten million of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin to say nothing of the ten tribes. What an immense undertaking it will be to carry all these people with "their gold and silver, their cattle and goods" back to their promised home.

But why should these two nations have the benefit of all this immense business to the exclusion of all other nations? The answer comes quick and strong "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." How plainly we can see the hand of Almighty Power in all this, leading the nations on to their final destiny.

Only a small part, comparatively, of Israel will be taken back to Palestine before Christ comes. But the business will be continued after his advent, until all Israel shall again be united in their own land.

Here we have an illustration of the lapping over of one age upon the next. The return of the Jews to Palestine has already commenced in a small way. It will continue and in my opinion will very soon increase very rapidly. It will be going on when the Savior comes and will continue until all are restored to their own land.

The nations of the world shall go up to Jerusalem during the reign of Christ, as did Queen Sheba during the reign of Solomon, but they may be convinced of the splendor and magnificence of the temple and of the city, and at the same take lessons of Jesus and his ministers in the art of government.

This pilgrimage by the representatives of the nations of the world to Jerusalem, will take place once each year. To compel obedience to this command, we are told by the prophet that the nation that will not go up shall be without rain. It will require hundreds of ships to carry these people to and from Jerusalem from all over the world once a year. The LORD has directed that they should go up and he will have ships to carry them. The English and United States governments will be his agents to do this business.

After I had this article thought out and partly written, I said to myself, if Russia and all the nations following her lead, shall be shut out of the Japan Sea, China Sea, Indian Ocean, Red Sea, Suez canal and the Mediterranean Sea, by England, the United States and Japan, how will she transport supplies, munitions of war, etc., with which to supply her army when they shall reach the "Mountains of Israel." That she will have an invincible army consisting of many millions of men there is no doubt. That her army will be victorious and take the City of Jerusalem and carry half of the citizens of that city into captivity is clearly foretold by the prophet, but how such an army could be provisioned by the government of Russia, without being permitted to use the Mediterranean Sea over which to transport supplies, I was unable to determine.

The despatches published in the papers on the morning of November 7th, made the matter plain. The Ship Canal which Russia proposes to construct, connecting the Baltic and the Black Seas, will enable Russia to sail her ships right up to the Bosphorus. It is as plain as the noon-day sun now. Russia will be impregnable on the Black Sea. The building of that canal, from a military standpoint, is the greatest scheme of the age.

Conference Report.

Editor Restitution:

The Church of God met at Blackwell, Okla., T'y. The weather was quite unfavorable, but all present felt improved by the papers, Bible studies and the intellectual feasts which Bro. Zilmer has always prepared for his hearers. Owing to a severe wind storm the attendance was so small, that the business meeting was postponed until the second Saturday.

The following officers were elected: Pres., Wm. Hudicke; Vice Pres., J. Butcher; Recording Sec., Ella W. Vickery; Corresponding Sec., Lydia Chaplin; Treas., T. H. Jackson.

The inconvenience of not having a church building was realized, and the desire to have a building of our own was expressed by most of the brethren. All interested are to meet at Crescent school house, Dec. 17th.

The next yearly Conference is to be held in the vicinity of Geuda Springs in the light of the moon before the twentieth of September.

After Conference Bro. Zilmer held a ten days meeting at Geuda, Kan. Preached five discourses at Banner school house, two at Pleasant Valley, three at Oxford, Kan., and one at Crescent school house. There was good attendance and interest. He baptized three, awakened the interest and earnestness of those who came in contact with his mild manner, plain and clear presentation of Bible teaching. A desire to know more of the way and things he presented has been expressed by many of his listeners. He is truly a speaker that can reach the people as well as rightly dividing the Scriptures. We shall miss him from our midst, but trust that we shall remember his admonition for love, unity and well-doing; become more earnest seekers for the glorious reward which is in store for us. Let us set to work to be "more than conquerors."

The Association of Believers of the Church of God.

At the Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Northwest Conference of the Church of God convened at Scholls, Oregon, on the 21st of Oct., 1898, a plan was projected for more effective means of promulgating the gospel. With a membership of seventy-five "The Association of Believers of the Church of God" entered upon its gospel mission.

The following officers were chosen: John E. Melvin, Pres.; J. B. Wolf, Vice Pres.; Mrs. Almira Brooks, Sec.; C. K. Schmitzer, Treas.; and W. L. Skeels, Evangelist. We invite your attention to our plan and solicit your membership. If it meets your approval address name and aid to Mrs. Almira Brooks, Scholls, Ore.

RULES OF THE ASSOCIATION OF THE CHURCH OF GOD.

This Association shall be known as "The Association of the Church of God," and shall be governed by the following rules:

Rule 1. The object of this Association shall be the promulgation of the gospel of the kingdom, and life through Christ, by means of tracts, books, periodicals and evangelizing. It shall act in auxiliary work with the congregations, and conference of the Church of God.

Rule 2. The duty of its members shall be to agitate, and proclaim such truths as relate to our salvation in the kingdom of God; and to discourage the agitation of such theories as may have no bearing on our salvation, or the salvation of those that may be reached by the gospel.

Rule 3. The members of this Association believe, and their object is to advocate the following Bible truths:

The only begotten Sonship of Christ.

The restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began; and as a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with him, in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead, the immortalization of the righteous, and destruction of the wicked; and eternal life only through Christ; also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion for the remission of sins; and a practical Christian life as essential for final salvation.

Rule 4. Believers of these truths may become members of this Association, by giving one dollar towards maintaining its object, and may retain their membership by giving one dollar per annum, to be used exclusively to carry out the object of the Association.

Rule 5. Each member is entitled to an equal voice in the use of any fund that may accrue from membership fees.

Rule 6. The officers shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, and when practicable, an Evangelist.

Rule 7. The officers shall constitute an Executive Committee.

Rule 8. The President, Vice President and Secretary shall act as a financial committee.

Rule 9. The President shall perform the duties usually devolving on that officer, under rules that may be instituted by the Association.

Rule 10. The Vice President shall act under like rules in the absence of the President, or the vacancy of his office.

Rule 11. The Secretary shall keep the minutes, and attend to the correspondence of the Association.

Rule 12. All funds passing through the hands of the Treasurer shall be paid out under an order written by the Secretary, and countersigned by the President, in harmony with the design and wish of the Association.

Rule 13. While this Association is originated for the purpose, and shall act in advancing the gospel work in Oregon and Washington, any believers who may not reside in these States that may desire to co-operate with us, are invited and solicited to unite with us and help in the work.

Rule 14. The Association shall meet at least once per annum, and unless otherwise provided, in connection with the meetings of the Annual Conference.

Rule 15. The Executive Committee shall be empowered to call special meetings whenever in their judgment the cause may require it.

Rule 16. It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee as far as practicable to notify each and all members of any meeting of the Association.

Rule 17. The rules of this Association may be revised or amended by a majority vote of a quorum. A quorum shall consist of any number present, when due diligence shall have been used to notify all members of the stated time and place of meeting.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST OF THE NORTHWEST CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF GOD, SCHOLLS, ORE., OCT. 22, 1898.

During the Conference year beginning Oct. 8, 1897, and ending Oct. 21, 1898, I devoted to evangelizing and other appointments: number of days, 132; number of discourses, 128; received into fellowship, 51; immersed, 45; received from all sources, $133.26; Expense of traveling, $22.45; balance received, $110.81.

Respectfully submitted.

W. L. SKEELS.

The foregoing report will explain the necessity of some financial plan, and "The Association of Believers," giving one dollar each, is the most feasible plan we could devise.

"To Him that Overcometh."

Many are the exceeding great and precious promises to him that overcometh and maketh himself worthy of them. While on the other hand, the reverse would be, those who fail to overcome and fit themselves for the good things promised, are in reality overcome, and will miss all that is worth living for. The important question then is, what does the Lord want us to overcome? We answer, all that is wrong about us. We name some of them, and will let others name others. Of course the Lord in his Word has pointed them out, but we short-sighted creatures are inclined to overlook them. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John ii. 15-17. This is plain and comprehensive; and some of the wrong things that we must overcome, or we are lost, learned of old while on its way to the promised land, were constantly murmuring and lusting after evil things, and in their hearts turned back into Egypt. Paul mentions these things as examples to us, to the intent we do not lust after evil things as they did. If we will not heed the lesson we too will be destroyed. The lust of the flesh ruled and ruined them. How is it with us today? Do we sow to the flesh or to the spirit, which? They turned back in their hearts to Egypt, and lusted after things they loved, that were left behind. How is it with us today? Do we imitate them, and like the dog and sow, turn back to the evil things of the world? Do we in our hearts first, and then in our deeds turn back to the world, and join hands with them and conform ourselves to their evil ways? If so, we cannot be counted as an overcomer. They were in a fearful measure governed and led by their unrestrained natural passions and appetites, and were as a result destroyed. They remembered and lusted after many of the common enjoyments left behind in Egypt, distrusting the Lord and his provision freely provided for their good; just so we today with all the fearful lesson before our eyes, are inclined to distrust the Lord, and want our own ways, and become headstrong about it, and will go where we please and do as we please, and tell our friends they have no right to correct us.

Question. Where would such liberties lead us? And are we striving hard to overcome evil with good? And let us not forget our lesson of old, and that the promises are only to the overcomer. The old man self must be overcome with all his lust in him, he must be slain or he will overcome and slay us. Our unruly tongues must be bridled, and held in check or they will rule and ruin us. Our baser passions must be restrained or slain, or they will overcome and slay us. We all, no doubt, have in our ignorance contracted some bad habits, what shall we do about it, shall we stick to them like a brother, or shall we look for them, and hunt them out, and put our feet on them, and conquer, and overcome and kill them? If we fail to do this, they will not fail to overcome and kill us. Which will we do? Which had we better do? Kill the mad dog, or let the mad dog kill us? We must abhor the filthy conversation of the wicked, like Lot of old. Not only so, but we must put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of our mouth. "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him."

Hear Paul again, "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in fear of God." This is Paul's idea of an overcomer, and if we claim the promises we must do as he tells us, or we fail to be an overcomer, and thus forfeit the promises. No matter if the filthy tobacco habit was unknown in Paul's day; the Lord knew it was coming and directed Paul to use the comprehensive adjective "all filthiness" so as to include it with all other filthy habits when it did arrive: and there is no way to get over it or around it, and be an overcomer, that I can see. Can't we oblige Paul this way, by saying that he is not sufficiently explicit to mean anything, and thus hem him off all around, and then we can have our own way about it. This seems to be our only chance to hold to our idols. And then when it is too late to reform, the consolation will be, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still." Just think of it, a person who claims to be a Christian, a follower of Christ, claiming to be washed clean in the blood of the Lamb, sucking on, and swallowing out the poisonous perfume of incense to offer to, or [illegible] (as they do). I heard a user of the weed call it the "devil's enthusiasm." And another one said it was a good weapon to fight the devil with." Chewing and spitting right and left, and woe be unto your eyes if you come near. Those who use the weed very long, become thoroughly saturated, or soaked in the poison. I wonder if the Lord will have the angels wash them, and sweat the poison out of them, and then say to them, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Or, will the Lord do for us in that great day what he tells us to do today? This is the preparation day. Were Jesus now or appear of your us as it is here? Then put it aside you may, and be an overcomer".

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their names, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Send The Restitution to some poor person as present for 1899. The cost is only three cents a week.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and as no course is laid to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing, all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand when the various engagements will start the nations of the world. Address The Restitution, Plymouth, Ind.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who do not feel able to do their circumstances so call, or whose case is presented by some one they want to help.

Change in Schedule of Washington Limited Pennsylvania Lines.

A convenient and elegant all-rail service similar to that in operation at passenger stations of the Pennsylvania System at Broad Street, Philadelphia, and at Twenty-third Street, New York, has just been established at the Pennsylvania Passenger Station in Washington, D.C. The service is satisfactorily performed at very reasonable rates by brand new rubber-tired vestibule victorias and omnibuses. The vehicles will be found at the cab stand in the B Street entrance to the Washington station, and may be engaged by the trip or by the hour. Visitors to the National Capital will find the new arrangement a very convenient one.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 7, 1898. NUMBER 46.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites for the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

When the Savior Comes Again.

TUNE—"When the Roses come Again."

Earth is groaning, nature moaning,
Crime and plunder everywhere
All the nations de-solations,
For each other now prepare:
Watchmen waiting, now investigating
Sights and signs that fill with pain,
Oh the judgments fast approaching,
For the Savior comes again.

REFRAIN—For the Savior comes, etc.

But the holy, meek and lowly,
Shall be hidden from all strife,
Safe from danger with the Savior,
They shall enter into life:
Do not borrow grief or sorrow,
In the hours that yet remain,
Who shall know a glad tomorrow,
When the Savior comes again.

REFRAIN—For the Savior comes, etc.

Sunshine over crimson clover,
Blossoms on the meadows wide,
Verdant mountains, crystal fountains,
Everywhere on every side:
Angels singing, voices ringing,
Happy hearts that feel no pain,
All their sadness turned to gladness,
For the Savior comes again.

REFRAIN—For the Savior comes, etc.

Judges Chapter 9.

1. And Abimelech, son of Jerobaal, went his way unto Shechem unto his mother's brothers, and talked with them and with all the kindred of his mother's father, saying,

2. May ye have said in the hearing of all the men of Shechem, Is it a good thing for you that all the seventy men, the sons of Jerobaal rule as lords over you, or that one man be to you lord? And remember that I am your bone and your flesh.

3. And the brethren of his mother talked about him in the ears of all the men of Shechem all these words; and their heart inclined after Abimelech; because, said they, he is our brother.

4. And they gave unto him seventy pieces of silver from out the house of Baalberith; and Abimelech hired for himself poor and cowardly men, and they went their way after him.

5. And he went into the house of his father in Ephratha and slew his brothers, the sons of Jerobaal, seventy men on one stone, and Jotham the youngest son of Jerobaal, was left because he was hid.

6. And all the men of Sikimoi and all the house of Beethmaloo were gathered together, and they went their way and made Abimelech king at the foot of the chestnut tree that found a standing in Sikimoi.

7. And it was told Jotham; and he went his way and stood upon the summit of Mount Garizin, and lifted up his voice and lamented, and said unto them: May ye have hearkened unto me, ye men of Sikimoi, and God will hearken unto you.

8. The trees went their way to anoint over themselves a king, and they said unto the olive-tree; Do thou be king over us.

9. And the olive-tree said unto them, Shall I leave my fatness with which men may glorify God, and go my way to move over the trees?

10. And the trees said unto the fig-tree, Do thou be king over us.

11. And the fig-tree said unto them, Shall I leave my sweetness and my good products and go my way to move over the trees?

12. And the trees said unto the vine, Come do thou reign as king over us.

13. And the vine said unto them, Shall I leave my wine that rejoiceth God and men, and go my way to move over the trees?

14. And all the trees said unto the thorn, Come, do thou reign as king over us.

15. And the thorn said unto the trees, If in truth ye are anointing me to rule as king over you, Here, stand back in my shadow; and if not, may fire have gone forth from me and may it have consumed the cedars of the Libanus.

16. And now if in truth and sincerity ye have done and constituted Abimelech king and if ye have done that which is good in relation to Jerobaal and his house, and if ye have done it to him as a repayment for his hand.

17. Because my father strayed himself in your behalf and exposed his life (soul) and delivered you out of the hand of Madiam.

18. And if ye arose against the house of my father today and slew his sons, seventy men namely upon one stone, and made Abimelech a son of his house maid king over the men of Sikimoi, because he is your brother.

19. And if in truth and sincerity ye have done in relation to Jerobaal and his house this day, may ye have rejoiced in Abimelech, and may he also have rejoiced in you.

20. But if not, may fire have come forth from Abimelech and may it have devoured the men of Sikimoi and the house of Beethmaloo and may it have devoured Abimelech.

21. And Joontham fled and ran away and went his way to Baiear and dwelt there away from the face of Abimelech his brother.

22. And Abimelech ruled over Israel three years.

23. And God sent forth a wicked spirit between Abimelech and the men of Sikimoi and the men of Sikimoi revolted against the house of Abimelech.

24. To bring the iniquity of the seventy sons of Jerobaal upon him, and to put their blood upon Abimelech their brother, who had killed them and put their blood upon the men of Sikimoi because they had strengthened his hands to kill his brethren.

25. And the men of Sikimoi set men in ambush upon the tops of the mountains and were robbing every one who passed by unto them on the highway, and it was told the king Abimelech.

26. And Gaal, a son of Joobael, and his brethren came to Sikimoi, and the men of Sikimoi hoped in him.

27. And they went out into a field and were gathering their vintage of their vines and treading it, and they made a festival and brought into the house of their God and were eating and drinking and they cursed Abimelech.

28. And Gaal, son of Joobael, said, Who is Abimelech and who is a son of Shechem that we should do bond-service to him? is he not a son of Jerobaal, and Zebool, his overseer, his head servant along with the men of Emmoor, the father of Shechem? And why should we serve him as bond-servants?

29. And would that some one might give this laity into my hand, and I would remove Abimelech, and say unto him, Multiply thy host and come out.

30. And Zebool, a ruler of the city, heard the words of Gaal, son of Joobeel, and he became wrathful with anger.

31. And sent messengers unto Abimelech secretly saying, Lo Gaal, son of Joobeel, and his brethren are coming against Shechem, and lo, they are environing the city in opposition to thee.

32. And now arise by night, thou and thy laity with thee and lie in wait in the field.

33. And it will be at dawn at right-way when the sun riseth thou shalt arise and extend toward the city, and he and his laity are going their way against thee, and thou shalt do to him whatever thy hand may find to do.

34. And Abimelech arose he and his laity by night and lay in ambush adjoining Shechem in four companies.

35. And Gaal, son of Joobeel, came out and stood at the door of the gateway of the city, and Abimelech arose, he and his laity with him from the ambush.

36. And Gaal, son of Joobeel, the laity and said unto Zebool, Lo a laity is coming down from the tops of the mountains; and Zebool said unto him, Thou art regarding the shadow of the mountains as men.

37. And Gaal talked still more and said, Lo, a laity is coming down at the west from the part near the center of the land, and another company is coming by the way of Hichonnunon plain.

38. And Zebool said unto him, And

[illegible] mouth [illegible] when thou said: Who is Abimelech that we should serve him as bond servants? Is not this the laity that thou didst scoff at? Go out now forsooth, and array thyself against him.

39. And Gaal went out in the sight of the men of Shechem and arrayed himself against Abimelech.

40. And Abimelech pursued after him and he fled from before his face, and many fell wounded even unto the door of the gateway.

41. And Abimelech entered into Aroema; and Zebool cast out Gaal and his brethren from dwelling in Shechem.

42. And it came to pass on the morrow that the laity also went out into the field and told Abimelech.

43. And he took the laity and divided them into three companies and lay in wait in a field; and he saw and lo, a laity came out of the city, and he arose against them and smote them.

44. And Abimelech and the chief-leaders with extended and stood beside the door of the gateway of the city, and the two companies stretched out against all those in the field and smote them;

45. And Abimelech arrayed himself in battle against the city all that day and took the city and slew the laity therein and tore down the city and sowed it with salt.

46. And all the men of the tower of Shechem heard it and went to a concourse in Baitheelberith.

47. And it was told Abimelech that all the men of the tower of Shechem were gathered together.

48. And Abimelech went up, he and all the laity that were with him; and Abimelech took the axes in his hand, and cut a branch of a tree and lifted and placed it on his shoulders, and said unto the laity with him, What ye see me doing, do ye also do quickly as I am doing.

49. And each man cut a branch and they went their way after Abimelech, and put them on the assembly and set them on fire over the assembly, and all the men of the tower of Sikimoi died, about a thousand men and women.

50. And Abimelech went his way out of Baithecberith and encamped at Thecbees and took it.

51. And there was a strong tower in the midst of the city, and all the men and women of the city fled there for refuge, and closed it outside of them and went up upon the roof of the tower.

52. And Abimelech came unto the tower and drew up in battle array along side it; and Abimelech drew nigh to the door of the tower to set fire to it.

53. And a woman cast a fragment of a mill-stone upon Abimelech's head and broke his skull;

54. And he called quickly to his armor-bearer and said unto him. Draw my sword and kill me, lest perchance they may have said a woman slew him: and the young man thrust him through and he died.

55. And the men of Israel saw that Abimelech was dead, and they went their way each man to his place.

56. And God turned back upon Abimelech the wickedness he had done to his father in having slain his seventy brethren.

57. And all the wickedness of the men of Shechem God turned back on their head; and the curse of Jooatham, son of Jerobaal, came upon them.

COMMENT.

We have in this 9th chapter another glimpse behind the scenes as it were into the divine council of the universe and are permitted to see how God can and does overrule the counsels of men, making even the wrath of man praise him. We also have another sample of the inimitable parable teaching with which the Scriptures of the Old and New abound.

The nearest approach to these parables in heathen literature is "Æsop's Fables" which have all the earmarks of their Israelitish origin. It also needs but the eye of the novice to see in old Æschylus and his dramatic portrayal of relentless fate and the pursuing furies, the hen's perverse and God's righteous judgments, which whether swift or slow surely and relentlessly follow after [illegible] of his law to the third and fourth generation of those who hate him and even their own innate sense of right. We learn also in this chapter that there is such a thing as an effectual righteous curse, notwithstanding all the twists and perversions heathendom and superstition have given to this idea. The true curse of revelation is but an invocation of the divine wisdom and power to bring about according to God's inscrutable will and way just requital upon the specified wicked acts of specific wicked men, and the reason we as Christians are instructed to bless and curse not is because we are under a covenant of grace and remission of which we are all common-participants as well as heralds, and because we have a full assurance that the Judge of all the earth and the God of Righteousness will see to it that his law is vindicated, and that justice will be meted out here or hereafter, better than we can possibly do it.

Apparitions which I Believe in.

The above is the subject of a lecture delivered by one called Rev. Dr. S. P. Sprecher of the Presbyterian Church, Cleveland, O. It appears that he has delivered a series of lectures on kindred topics, and in this one sets forth the view as his belief that persons just at death do, on many occasions, actually see the forms of their previously dead friends. In short he is a believer in the usual "death-bed visions" as held by most of immortal-soul supporters. He states that—"It seems likely that in the hour of death many do catch glimpses of the other world before they cross over. In [illegible] cases it is probable that [illegible] ness is not lost during the [illegible] sage from this life to the next. [illegible] is quite possible that such a soul may be able to use its spiritual eyes before it is entirely liberated from the trammels of the flesh, and so catch sight of waiting friends and other heavenly objects. The belief that there are such cases is very widespread, and has been in all ages, especially among Christians."

Bro. J. T. Smith, of Collinswood, takes the case up with him in an open letter published in the Cleveland Leader, which is herewith given to our readers. The whole trouble with the "Rev. Dr." is that he fails to go to the only true source for information—God's Word. Had he done so his lecture would be different. Following is Bro. Smith's reply to him.

"My Dear Sir:

I have read carefully the newspaper report of your lecture—the sixth of a series on apparitions—delivered Nov. 6, in which you consider the 'visions' of the dying and say that 'in these, or in some of these, you are inclined to believe,' and give as a reason that 'it seems likely that in the hour of death many do catch glimpses of the other world before they cross over. In some cases it is probable that consciousness is not lost during the whole passage from this life to the next.'

Now the question arises what do we know of the next life. Is it not true that all we do know about it is what God has chosen to reveal to us in his Word? If what are called the Sacred Scriptures are truly a revelation of the Creator to man the creature, then man may reasonably entertain a hope of a life beyond this, if he complies with the conditions on which such life is promised. To those who do not believe in the Scriptures as divinely inspired it seems to me there is no reasonable ground on which to build such a hope. And yet many such claim to entertain it. This being conceded, I ask can the idea that one may consciously pass from this life to the life beyond find any support in the sacred writings? I think not, for a careful study of them surely teaches that we can only attain to the future life through a resurrection out from among the dead ones, and that death while it lasts is a state of unconsciousness. [illegible]

ENTERTAINED BY THE HOPE

But after he should awake he would see God (margin). He believed that God would have a desire for the work of his hands. 'He will call and I will answer. * * * All my appointed time will I wait, and if I wait the grave is mine house.'

Job believed that he would wait in the grave till God called for him, and during the time if his sons came to honor he would not know it, or if they were brought low he would perceive it not of them.' Take another case. The prophet tells King Hezekiah to set his house in order, for he should die and not live. The king is very sorrowful, 'weeps sore,' and prays to the Lord. The Lord hears his prayer, and adds fifteen years to his life. Then the king rejoices that the Lord has delivered his soul from the pit (grave meant) of corruption, and adds, 'For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee.' They that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do this day.' Now this is tantamount to saying that if the Lord had executed the sentence first pronounced, and put him in the grave, he could not have praised him, but living, he could and did.

But the time came as recorded in 2 Kings xx. 21, when Hezekiah slept with his fathers.

The view of death entertained by these patriarchs is surely sustained by many other passages found in the Old Testament Scriptures, such as, 'For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who can give thee thanks.'

'The dead praise not the Lord; neither any that go down into silence.'

'The dead know not any thing.'

'There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest.'

[illegible] passages need not be cited, [illegible] the above are sufficient to show what the Old Testament teaches as to the nature of the condition called death.

Some of the passages cited are found in the Psalms of David, but the fact that the psalmist says, 'I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness,' shows that he entertained the hope that God in his own good time would awake him out of his unconscious sleep.

So much for the Old Testament. Now do the teachings of the New Testament harmonize with those of the Old on this subject. I think they do fully, but to make anything like an exhaustive examination of the passages bearing on the question would far exceed the limits of a letter like this. I can, therefore, only hastily glance at a few passages.

The Savior at the tomb of Lazarus tells the sorrowing sister that her brother will rise again. The sister having no doubt been taught by the Savior replies, 'I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.' Observe the consolation the Savior first offers is based on a resurrection; and there is nothing said in all the conversation about the death of Lazarus, about a departed soul or spirit, or anything pointing to an intermediate state of existence, which would have been natural had there been any warrant for it.

The conversation of the Savior with the Sadducees when they put the hypothetical case of the woman having had seven husbands is very conclusive. It is sufficient for our purpose to only call attention to the Savior's reply:

'The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage.' 'But they who shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage.'

'Neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.'

Now observe those who obtain 'the other world,' will not just pass over without losing consciousness, but they will be the children of the resurrection.

IN SEVERAL PASSAGES

the Savior declares that to those who would believe in him he would give everlasting life, 'and he would raise them up at the last day.'

He promises rewards at the resurrection of the just, [illegible] Jesus [illegible]

his followers that the Father hath given him authority and power to quicken (make alive) whom he wants.

After his resurrection he declares: 'I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore. Amen, and have the keys of hell (grave) and death.' The teachings of the apostles are in harmony with those of the Savior.

Peter on the day of Pentecost said of the patriarch David: 'He is both dead and buried and his sepulchre is with us unto this day * * * is not ascended unto the heavens.' Meaning, of course, that David was not in heaven, but in his sepulchre. Paul declares that if the dead rise not then they who have fallen asleep in Christ are perished, and asks what advantage it had been to him to fight with beasts at Ephesus if the dead rise not. Paul tells the Thessalonian brethren how to comfort one another who some falls asleep (dies), and the consolation is based altogether on a resurrection: not a word said about passing directly to the life beyond. But it is, if we believe that Jesus died and rose again. Even so (in like manner) those also who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. * * * For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ (dead up to that moment) shall rise.'

I know there are passages that as they are generally understood seem to sustain the popular view. The reply of the Savior to the thief on the cross and the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, but did time and space permit I think I can abundantly show that these Scriptures do not conflict with the general teaching of the Bible on this subject.

How then can we account for the visions of the dying? Is it not probable that in cases where visions occur the mind is in a state of expectancy in harmony with the belief entertained by the individual during life? I have observed that in the aged when dying consciousness or memory of the immediate past dies out first and even in of early life, especially those strongly impressed at the time are retained longest.

May it not be that as a consciousness of the present and immediate past fades away, events of some former time that had made a vivid impression on the sensorium and the forms of those associated with that event might be recalled? At all events, such experiences are visions.

Obituary.

James Baird was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 16, 1852, and died near Attica, Kan., Oct. 31, 1898. When eleven years old he moved with his parents to Missouri, where he married and lived until Oct. 4, 1882, at which time he located in Harper County, Kansas, near the town of Attica, where he resided until his death. He leaves a wife and seven children, a mother and a brother, to mourn the loss which death has caused.

The funeral services were conducted at the home four miles northwest of Attica by the writer. He was taken to Pleasant Valley Cemetery, followed by a large number of sympathizing friends, where we laid him away to await the coming of the Life-Giver. Then he will come forth to die no more.

Some seven or eight years ago he heard the Gospel of the kingdom, the coming reign of the Lord Jesus and kindred truths. They entered into a good and honest heart, when he became obedient by being buried with Christ in baptism, and he lived an exemplary Christian life. By his death the wife and children lose a kind and loving husband and father, the mother and brother a kind son and brother, the church a good member, and the county one of its best citizens. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope. Then in the midst of our sorrow look beyond this darkness and gloom to that evergreen shore, where there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying for all tears shall be wiped from all faces. Come [illegible] Jesus [illegible] CLOVER.

THE friends of Brother B. W. Woodward will be interested to know his condition, no doubt. He was taken down with pneumonia a week ago Sunday night, and has been very sick ever since. He is perhaps a little better now, but will have to be exceedingly careful of exposing himself for some time. He is at the home of Bro. W. D. Thompson in this city.

THE news of the day has many important items, but we cannot give them this week. The treaty of peace with Spain is being drawn up for signing. The old world is in a turmoil. It is not yet a settle with guns, but the statesmen of each nation are keenly alert to their part of the business. All are shaping as the Lord would have them, and though we may not see it clearly the Lord knows and all will come right.

An Address Before Baptism.

PUBLISHED BY REQUEST OF THE CHURCH.

For some time I have been wondering if we would be able, as a Church, to reach any more with the good message before the door was shut. But I am thankful to say that two others have had ears to hear, minds to understand, and hearts to joyfully receive the life-giving Word. And having learned that others were contemplating obedience in the near future, I will try to set forth the truth of God in reference to baptism in as simple and earnest a way as I am able. To commence with, I affirm what all will admit, that the human family is a family of sinners, or rebels against God: God has not sinned against, or wronged man! And that means, of course, that if a reconciliation be desirable it is God's prerogative—God's right to make the and man's duty, or privilege to accept or reject the terms. What is called the Gospel of the favor of God, at other times styled the Gospel of the kingdom, and also the Gospel of God and the Gospel of Christ,—being different names of one and the same Gospel. Yes,—this gospel contains, and sets forth in great detail and exactness the terms or conditions on which men can be reconciled to God,—become friends of God instead of enemies. The gospel offers Eternal Life in a kingdom of glory, which he has sworn to set up on this earth when Jesus comes the Second time. It does not offer men and women the privilege of becoming subjects of that kingdom,—but invites them to live and reign in it as kings and priests, in association with Jesus who is to be King of kings, and Lord of lords. Dan. ii. 44; vii. 18, 27, proves that that kingdom of God is to destroy all the kingdoms of men on earth and take their place, so that all people, nations and languages will be subject to it—and that the saints of God will share its power and honor and glory with Jesus forever, even forever and ever, agreeing with Jesus, Matt. v.: who said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

TERMS OF RECONCILIATION,

To be frank with you, dear friends, if you do not accept of God's offer in good faith, or, if his offer of Eternal Life in that kingdom on earth does not suit you, there is no use of talking with you about upon which you can inherit it. If you do not want what God offers, you have no use for any conditions whatever, be they difficult or easy; and practically that means that you will just let the future take care of itself, if you cannot have your own choice! To be faithful with you, I solemnly aver that God has offered nothing that Eternal Life in that kingdom does not embrace,—as far as God's Book is concerned it offers nothing else. If you are expecting something else, somewhere else, I solemnly say to you, it is time you were examining the grounds for your expectations; for just as sure as that the Bible is the Word of God,—he has not promised anything but Eternal Life in his kingdom on earth. With the hope of reaching the ear of some who believe God's offer means exactly what it says, and would like to inherit it, I will state the conditions. In the first place, God requires men and women to believe what he offers, and not something else. This is such a

VERY REASONABLE REQUISITION

that no one could object to it on reasonable grounds. If it is worth having it is worth believing in. In the next place, God requires men and women to reform their lives,—i. e. turn away from sin, and turn to God and serve him with full purpose of heart. In other words, they must develop a character worthy of the high destiny offered. This is another very reasonable condition. And these two conditions prove conclusively that God in mercy makes the conditions easy because he is anxious for acceptance! But there are other conditions to be noticed yet. Supposing the two conditions named thus far are not found fault with, I now bring forward the third, viz.:—Baptism for the remission of past sin—the forgiveness of the sin piled up before believing the Gospel. Counting the ways of sin today won't change out the sin of yesterday, or last month, or last year, or the whole past life. All the sin of the past still stands charged against a person, after he has ended a bad and mended his ways, what has been done, never can be undone, but the way is open for believers God's gracious offer of life in the kingdom and repented, pleads shown how he can have the

OLD SINS WASHED OUT,

pardoned, forgiven, remitted. These words show that man cannot work it out, or get out of it by leading a better life, or any other means of his own devising; and therefore he is freely forgiven when he proves his faith in the Gospel by being baptized for that purpose. But while this provides offer of pardon for past sin is offered on terms so amazingly simple, the price is not regulated by its value, but is made so low as to suit the poverty of the believer of the Gospel. I solemnly aver that God only offers to pardon those who are baptized with a view to pardon, or in order to be pardoned, after belief of the gospel of the kingdom. But strange to say, many will accept faith and repentance utterly REJECT BAPTISM as a condition of salvation. It is such a trivial thing they think—yes altogether too small for such tremendous consequences, or results. They think they themselves can do something more in keeping with matters of so great importance. To all such I would say, Baptism for is part and parcel of the gospel of the kingdom to be believed, just as a penalty is part and parcel of a law. You may ask any one present who knows the blessedness of iniquity pardoned and sin covered, if baptism for the remission of sin—not a most precious item of the gospel. Where would we all be today without it? We would be in the gall of bitterness, and the bonds of iniquity. As I have said unbelievable without the proof. I will now ask a question or two, and answer them in Scriptural language:

What is the blood of Christ shed for?

Answer, Matt. xxvi. 28: "For this is my blood of the New Testament, for many, for the remission of sins."

What are Repentance and Baptism for?

Answer, Acts ii. 38, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."

On every hand we hear of the blood of Jesus being shed for sinners, and to popular religionists of today of the VERY BEST TYPE, this is the sum and substance of the Gospel. And I would not object to that, if it were God's purpose that the mere fact of the blood being shed would save all men. If that had been his purpose, he would have attached no conditions to it! As he has attached conditions, we have infallible proof that it was not his purpose that the mere shedding of blood should remit the sin of all mankind. A child can see that the command to be BAPTIZED for the remission of sin would never have been given if the shed blood of Jesus was for remission or pardon for all. You observe, that there are at least three things to be done in order that sin may be remitted, besides belief of the gospel. 1. Christ's Blood must be shed. Man has nothing to do with that. 2. Man must repent,—quit sin,—reform his life or conduct God-ward. 3. He must be baptized for the remission of sin. If any one fails to see why it is necessary to be baptized for the remission of sin, after the blood of Jesus has been shed for that purpose, I would first say that it is a principle of the divine economy that there is no remission of sin without the shedding of blood. This is so,—and we have no right to ask why this principle was established: it was God's prerogative to establish it. But some one may wonder why anything in addition to this is necessary for remission to sin. In reply to the I would say, there is nothing lacking on God's part, nothing wanting in the efficacy of the blood; but as we have seen from Matt. xxvi. 28 it was for the remission of sins," not for remission of the sins of all men. Now then, how shall we know who receives the mercy referred to? Does God predestinate certain ones whose sins shall be remitted and leave the rest out? No! that is not like a God of love! That is not like a Holy God who has declared that only the pure in heart shall see him! That is not like a God who has organized man as an accountable creature, who will be rewarded according to his works! How could a creature of his own free will, and out of faith and love to God develop a right godly character,—if he be predestined to be, and to do, just what he will do! You will see in a moment that God does not work along those lines at all. He places life and death before man with the conditions of both destinies attached. All down the ages have seen, let out the solemn facts, that "the wages of sin is death," and the soul that sinneth shall die." And, on the other hand, "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." And to all intents and purposes the language of Yahweh Israel was drawn the same "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." Now what remains to complete this part of our subject? Why, we want to ascertain how men are to manifest their choice—how they must show they are fit and proper persons to receive what God proposes to give. We want to know by what they are whose sins are remitted through the shedding of the blood of the Anointed Jesus. And it is here that Acts ii. 38 comes to us in tremendous power—"Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, FOR the remission of sins." If the Scriptures of God we now know who the many are for the remission of whose sins Christ shed his blood. This is only one of many reasons why the blood of Christ was shed; but it is the one of paramount importance to the dear ones who today come to take upon them that sin covering name—Jesus. I trust they especially, and all others, will see distinctly why Repentance and baptism are equally essential to them with the shed blood of Christ. There is still another condition yet, just as essential to remission as those already named. In other words, all the foregoing—ever so sincere and genuine repentance toward God,—and ever so heart-felt an obedience in baptism ALL TOGETHER, will not ensure one of the great salvation God offers, unless another condition be fulfilled!! What we have been discussing is the

"SHED FOR MANY

THE DIVINE RULE

BEGINNING OF WELL-DOING;

the faith must hold out to the end; the reformation of life and conduct toward God must be permanent; this obedience begun at the waters of baptism must be followed every day by obedience to whatsoever Jesus has commanded. It will be no excuse for you to plead the baby-act by saying you didn't know it was wrong to do this or that or the other. His commands are all been published, and if the truth of God and the love of God have taken full possession of you, you will make it the chief business in your lives to find out the commands of Jesus, so that you will know what will please him, and what will displease him. I entreat you to remember that neither the blood of Christ, nor faith and repentance and baptism will avail anything without patient continuance in well doing. The confidence you have today must be held fast to, steadfastly unto the end of life's journey, and then you will be invested with Christ's divine nature of existence, and then it will be impossible to sin any more. It is proper to place remission of sins at the head of the list of reasons for baptism. But baptism is also the adopting ordinance: God has only one begotten Son, and he is heir of all things, and in order to become children of God and brethren of Jesus and to be adopted and become joint-heirs with the only begotten Son, we have to obtain his name and this can only be done by baptism into it. When we take his name according to that divine formula he becomes our sin-covering. Baptizing them into the name of the Father, Son and Spirit, is the instruction of Jesus in the great commission, Matt. xxviii. 19. It is not merely baptism by the authority of the Father, Son and Spirit's name, but INTO that name; the name must be taken, and borne; and we say from Acts ii. 38 already referred to frequently, that JESUS is the name, the one name which endorses the name of Father, Son and Spirit.

WE HAVE TO BE ADOPTED,

IT IS NOT IMPORTANT

that we should be able to explain the mode of baptism, but it is important that we should be able to explain what baptism is for. Baptism is for a person who has believed the gospel and repented

TO REMISSION OF SINS.

He is commanded to be baptized. The action expressed by the word baptize falls upon the person baptized, not on the water. In sprinkling, the action falls on the water or the substance sprinkled. That is the WATER is said to be sprinkled, and about is said to be sprinkled; but "sprinkle" is not used of the person baptized. In baptism, the water is never said to be sprinkled, but the person is said to be baptized. The Holy Spirit is said to be poured out, but the Holy Spirit is never said to be baptized. The word is used in the Scriptures to show that spiritual influences and baptism. To sprinkle a man is to mark him with a sign or token. To baptize is to immerse, submerge or overwhelm. Baptism is a burial, a going down into the water, a coming up out of the water. Sprinkling is not burial, pouring is not burial, neither is burial a symbol of one or the other. In sprinkling, the person is left under water he is cut off from his natural being, for the meanest object is under water he is cut off from his natural being, for the meanest object is under water. There must be a symbol of separation,—and what is more appropriate than burial? Sprinkling is not burial, pouring is not burial, neither is burial a symbol of separation. In sprinkling, the person is left

Free, oh free, the native cherubs,
Held by this our tender love,
Clear in the glad redemption,
Free from sorrow, pain and woe.

When sweet peace shall be our portion,
And beside Zion's crystal stream
We shall walk with bowed and blest ones,
Where sweet flowers rest our dreams.

So farewell, my little loved one,
Precious little sweet Marie;
I must leave you a little while,
Jesus holds the prison keys.

Precious in his sight, the children.
They are safe in Jesus' bosom;
He will call and you awaken.
Farewell, sweet one, 'til that day.

The Gospel.

We should first learn what the gospel is. What does it embrace? What is to be believed and preached? The gospel of God, the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the gospel of the grace of God, the gospel of the kingdom of God, are expressions of frequent occurrence in the New Testament. The word gospel means "good news." It includes all that God has revealed concerning his plan to redeem and restore a lost world through our Lord Jesus Christ, his Son. It embraces a system of grace, favor, unmerited to a race of intelligent beings, whom sin had brought under the power of death, doomed to dust, from which man came.

The angel who came to the shepherds of Bethlehem and said, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord," was not the first who preached the gospel. This was but an announcement that one portion of the gospel which had been preached in former dispensations and recorded in the Old Testament was now fulfilled. It was an event of great importance to all the race of mankind and that generation of men was called to witness the miraculous literal, visible fulfillment of a class of wonderful promises of God contained in the prophecies of the four thousand years then passed, and which had constituted the foundation of the faith and hope of the people in the patriarchal and prophetical dispensation. It was the opening bud of hope demonstrating that that promise on which hung the final destiny of the human family, that of the "Seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head," Gen. iii. 15, would be fulfilled and the world redeemed. It was an appropriate occasion for great rejoicing among the angels and a host of the heavenly sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Man being sinful, morally depraved and having no help in himself, no price to redeem himself from the grave, death brought all within its grasp and would make a final end of him apart from the gospel plan; but early in the career of sin, the Lord began to reveal to man a system devised in mercy and divine wisdom to redeem him out from death and to accept the gift of eternal life beyond, and to restore his forfeited and ruined homestead, for an eternal inheritance.

The gospel is the good news of this plan of grace, and has been proclaimed to our race in several parts and forms by promises, by covenants, by symbols, by parables, and thus in Gen iii 15, we have the statement already quoted which generated hope. Then in Gen iv 4, an [illegible] of animals is given when the Lord made [illegible] of animals and provided coats of the skins for a covering for Adam and Eve.

According to Jude a portion of the gospel was preached to the antediluvians by Enoch who proclaimed that the Lord would come to execute judgment upon all the world. Jude 14, 15.

To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. "He saith not and to seeds as of many, but to thy seed which is Christ." Gal. iii 6; viii 16. So the covenant and promises made with and to Abraham and his seed, Gen xiii. 14, 15; Rom. iv. 13, are parts of the gospel, good news concerning Christ and the blessings of the great redemption of those who live with our father Abraham, and the restitution of the earth.

Jacob preached the gospel in these words, "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a law giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the people be," and Job declared the gospel in these words, "For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms shall destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold and not another, though my reins be consumed within me." Job xix. 25, 21.

Moses wrote this gospel covenant of mercy and grace in Deuteronomy "For this commandment which I command thee this day is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off, but the Word is very nigh unto thee in thy mouth and in thy heart that thou mayst do it. See, I have set before thee this day life and death, and good and evil, therefore, choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." Paul quotes the above and applies it to the New Covenant of eternal life in Jesus Christ. Rom. x. 6, 10.

The Lord communicated a portion of this gospel to the prophet David in these words, "I will set up thy seed after thee which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom, he shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever and thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever." 2 Sam. vii. 12, 16, on this promise David trusted for eternal life and an eternal kingdom through his lineage, he says, "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever, with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations, then thou spakest in vision to thy holy one and saidst, I have exalted one chosen out of the people, also I will make him my first-born, higher than the kings of the earth, and my mercy will I keep for him forevermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him, his seed also will I make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven." Psalm lxxxix. 1, 19, 27, 29.

When Gabriel visited a virgin of the lineage and house of David, to speak to her, he preached this gospel of the Kingdom of God, saying to Mary, "Thou shalt bring forth a Son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 26, 31, 33. Isaiah had preached much this gospel of grace, and also the kingdom of God. "Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a Son and shall call his name Immanuel." "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given." "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed."

The prophets and apostles were constantly proclaiming the two advents of the Messiah, and the work of redemption and restitution through him.

Although the children of God are now bound in death, it is but a sleep, for they have not perished, they shall awake to everlasting life. Hear him convincing the Sadducees out of the teachings of Moses whom they claimed to believe. That there is to be a resurrection of the dead saints to live forever, but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more for they are equal unto the angels, being the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; for he is not a God of the dead but of the living, for all live unto him. God recognizes death as a sleep from which all shall awake, so he calleth things which are not yet done as though they were. Says Paul, "Christ both died and rose and revived that he might be Lord both of the dead and living." Rom. xiv. 9.

We have not only all these plain and positive Scriptures which we have quoted on these points and a hundred others of the same class over all of which many modern teachers stumble in their unbelief, but our Lord demonstrated his power to fulfill all these promises by raising Jairus' daughter and the widow's son, and Lazarus from death. He then uses this fact to teach that he will raise up all. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation. John v. 28, 29. My dear brothers and sisters, can we all say with Paul that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Who would be ashamed of such a gospel and such results. If the gospel is having this effect upon you. If you believe it then it will surely lead you into the glorious everlasting kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is very soon to come. All signs show that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

Mary E. Howard.

Evangelist's Report.

After the Conference at Rensselaer I went home for a few days, preparatory to going to Fonthill, Ont., where I had an engagement to conduct a short series of meetings. I arrived at Welland, Ont., on the morning of the 9th of Sept., and was met by Bro. P. H. Bonk, who conveyed me to Fonthill. I remained at this place from the 9th to the 17th, delivered 10 discourses, and baptized 1 persons. On Sunday the 18th I went to Niagara Falls, N. Y., where I remained until the 22nd, speaking to the brethren there 5 times. On the 23rd I took passage for Randolph, Pa., where I remained until the 28th, and delivered 6 discourses to attentive audiences. I arrived at home the 29th. On the 30th I took the train for Vicksburgh, Mich., to meet an engagement with the Michigan Conference. I delivered 4 discourses for the brethren at Brady. The time from Oct. 4th to 11th I spent at home. On the 12th I started for Blackwell, Okla., where the Kansas and Oklahoma Conference held its session from Oct. 14-23; at this place I spoke 17 times. After the close of the Conference we began a meeting at Geuda, Kan., where I remained 10 days and delivered 12 discourses. From this place we went to the Banner school house, 7 miles southwest of Newkirk, Okla., at which place I spoke 5 times. Here it was my privilege to baptize three who professed faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Christ. The gospel is still, even in these days of abounding iniquity, the power of God unto salvation. It was our intention after the last named meeting to deliver a number of discourses at the Pleasant Valley school house, but on account of a series of Western windy days could hold only one meeting. The place I next visited was Oxford, Kan., where we have a number of brethren. I spoke for them three times. The last meeting was at the Crescent school house, on Sunday evening. This ended my labors in this part of the country. During this trip I delivered 39 discourses, and baptized 3 persons.

I am pleased to say that in my judgment we have a bright future in this Western field. In the first place, we have quite a number of excellent young people. It afforded me genuine pleasure to listen to a number of papers read by them at Blackwell and Geuda. The productions evinced not only a high degree of intellectuality, but also a commendable interest in the truth as it is in Jesus. May their zeal never lag, but may they ever be active. And let me say, I hope those profitable young peoples' meetings may be continued. I was glad for the movement which was started at the Blackwell Conference to erect a house of worship in the vicinity of Geuda. No doubt this would do much to strengthen the work. Altogether this was a pleasant trip to myself, and I trust that good has been done. Brethren, everywhere, let us be faithful in the service of God. It will pay.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

A. H. Zilmer.

Conference Report.

Report of first quarterly Conference of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith in Indiana, held at Plymouth, Nov. 17-20, 1898.

The business meeting was called on Saturday morning by F. L. Austin, President, after song and prayer the ministers present were heard. The secretary not being present D. E. Van Vactor acted until he arrived.

Bro. J. L. Wince gave verbally a report of his labor, but the items were not taken down.

Bro. A. Drew reported 15 sermons preached at Germanschaal house and other points, and interest in the cause at many places.

Bro. H. F. Cordill reported having delivered during 1898 23 discourses, and baptized 8 persons.

Bro. B. W. Woodward gave report of the church in Warren Co. They have engaged him for another year. This church is becoming more united. He and Sister Woodward held a series of meetings and baptized one there. He thinks this church will be in better condition at the end of next year.

Bro. A. H Zilmer reported 65 sermons since the September meeting, 7 baptisms. Was at Roll and found them wanting meeting and needing it to get them on an independent basis. Had just received a letter asking for meetings at another place, and spoke of isolated ones near Maxinkuckee who should be visited. He makes report of work done outside the State with receipts of $141.57 and expenses $41.12.

Bro. F. L. Austin is engaged by the Rensselaer church for the year. Reports an impetus in church and Sunday school work in the last two weeks, and says this church is doing all it can financially. He reports an opening at Remington for evangelical work, also at Hedrick.

North Salem was reported as having about 35 members, but of much interest in spreading the good news.

Plymouth reported preaching once each month during past year by Bro. Wince, with occasional labors by Bro. Zilmer, Bro. Ramsay, Bro. and Sister Woodward. Meeting every Sunday led by some member, prayer meeting every Thursday night, and a flourishing Sunday school. Interest in each steady and good. Nine additions and four losses during the year.

Argos reported preaching [illegible] month by Bro. Wagoner [illegible] meeting every Thursday [illegible] an interested Sunday school. [illegible]

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and accepted.

The secretary reported $65.58 on hand at beginning of the quarter; received since $114.68. Paid out $46. Amount on hand $134.26 evangelical fund. Tent fund at beginning of quarter $67, received $6, amount on hand $73.

Fifty song books were purchased at an expense of $10, to be used by the evangelist.

No other business being presented Conference adjourned.

The meeting was fairly well attended with good interest. The good seed was sown and we hope some fell on good ground, and will in time bring forth much fruit. Four came forward for baptism, Bro. Rouse and wife from near Bremen, and two young sisters from the Sunday school. May they prove faithful is our prayer.

The ministers present were F. L. Austin, J. F. Wagoner, J. L. Wince, A. H. Zilmer, B. W. Woodward and wife, R. S. Duggins, F. C. Myers, A. Drew, and H. F. Cordill. Among the others from abroad who attended we mention Sister M. E. Thompson of Rensselaer.

The Ministerial meeting held Monday and Tuesday after the Conference was very interesting and much enjoyed by those able to attend. The subjects presented in the programme were discussed, and were unanimous in saying that good may be derived from interchange of thought, and the board was authorized to call such meeting whenever it seemed best.

Bro. and Sister Woodward remained in Plymouth to continue the meetings indefinitely. May the good work go on, and may we all take new hope, double our diligence, and be able to stand to the end, God helping us, is our prayer.

F. L. Austin, Pres.
A. C. Roberts, Sec.

Remember that we send the balance of 1898 issues to each new subscriber sent in before Jan. 1, 1898. When sending your renewal try and get your brother who does not take the paper to try it for a year. Or if you can spare the money, send it to some friend. You will never know, perhaps, the good done by such an action, but you can be assured the Father will make record of each item to your credit.

Obituary.

Asbury Herrold was born in Athens County, Ohio, Feb. 9, 1843. Died Nov. 24, 1898. He was the Son of David and Mary Herrold. He moved with his parents to Laporte County, Ind. in 1853. Married Margaret Allison in 1866. Removed to Sac County, Iowa, in 1871. There are two children living.

Brother Herrold for many years has been a firm believer in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. He formerly was associated with a branch of the Methodist Church, but when he found that man is mortal and that eternal life is to be obtained by faith in the gospel of the kingdom he accepted it with joyful heart. His faith in the covenants of promise, the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead the setting up of God's kingdom upon earth, and eternal life beyond the resurrection was clear and strong. He never lost sight of the glories of the future ages. Our last visit with him was indeed pleasant and the time was spent in talking about God's promises and the things concerning Jesus.

His death was sudden and unexpected. He had been shoveling snow during the forenoon of thanksgiving day and ate his dinner as usual. After dinner he went out to finish the nearly completed work. The evidence of circumstances showed that he had only shoveled two or three shovels of snow when he fell back and died without a struggle.

The funeral was on Sunday. Psalm cxxi. was read and a prayer at the house, when we went to the church, which was crowded. The discourse was from John xi. 25, 26.

We endeavored to show that Christ is the Resurrection and also the Life, and the believer in Christ who has died, can only reach the life of promise through resurrection. That the resurrection is a re-living of the dead. That the dead will come out of the graves, and judgment and reward will follow Resurrection. (John v. 28, 29; Rev. xx. 12, 13; Isa. xxvi. 19.) The text not only refers to those who have died and will be subjects of resurrection to the life promised, but it also refers to another class, of God's children, viz., to those who will be alive at that time. Jesus says of them that they "shall never die." verse 26. Paul also explained this; he says that they [illegible] pass through a change and will not see death. His words are "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them (the raised ones) in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. iv. 13-18. And again he says "We shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed..... the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. xv. 51-55. What glorious promises concerning the dead and the living.—If dead the believer shall live, if alive and believes in Jesus he shall never die. The resurrection and life eternal is our hope through Jesus our Lord.

A. J. Eychaner.

Dear Restitution:

Death has again entered our little flock at Salem, Ohio. This time it claimed as its victim, Sister Harriet Cook. She was stricken over a year ago with a light stroke of paralysis, from which she never recovered, but was some better than at first, and continued so until the 16th of this month, in the morning she was taken again th same way and continued to grow worse, and died just before midnight of the same day. She was in her 67th year. She was a noble woman. We would all do well to follow her example in this mortal life. I believe that when Jesus comes to raise the dead, that she will surely have a part in the first resurrection.

W. O. Townsend.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to write a few lines in memory of my dear companion, Thomas S. Case, who sleeps in Jesus. He was born Sept. 18, 1876. We were married by Eld. J. Waters on Jan. 4th, 1896. He was taken sick June 13th, and died the 23d of fever. Aged 21 years, 9 months and 5 days. He was buried in Old Refuge graveyard, there to await the summons of our Savior, come forth, ye that have done good unto the resurrection of life.

Funeral services by Eld. J. M. Lydic. He leaves a father, mother, four brothers, a sister, a little son and daughter and myself, besides many friends, who mourn his loss. We mourn not as those who have no hope, for he embraced the truth and was baptized by my father when young, and was ever a firm believer. He told me a few days before he died not to grieve about him as it would only be a short time till I should see him at the resurrection.

He was a loving husband and father, and a Christian brother. It is hard to give him up, and how sad I feel to think of the happy hours we spent in our little home by the river side. Oh, how sad to know I shall never hear his loving voice again, or see his eyes look into mine as before.

Thank God for the blessed promise that he shall live again. Yes, praise the Lord, I expect to meet him at the King's right hand some sweet day.

Pray for me dear ones in Christ that I may be faithful until death.

Your sister in Christ.

Flora Case.

MARRIED.

On Thanksgiving Day at the home of Brother E. E. and Sister Almira Brooks of Schoolls, Ore., their daughter Orilla was united with J. L. Lawrence in marriage by the writer. The day with its fountain-thanksgiving feast was highly enjoyable to all the guests.

The tastes and religious sentiments of Sister Orilla and her companion are such that we anticipate for them a happy and united journey through life.

As Brother Brooks' family have for years been our nearest neighbors, we felt a special interest in seeing one of the esteemed members of the family change name and relation to start a new home. The presents to the bride displayed a tendency to utility rather than display.

W. L. Skeels.

Dear Restitution:

Through the liberality of the Weal thy Avenue Baptist Church in Grand Rapids, on Sunday, Nov. 12, I baptized in their church fountain, six members of the family of Brother and Sister Chamberlain. Their son-in-law, Brother Gerrish and their daughter, —his wife and another daughter, two sons and a neice. Brother Gerrish has poor health, and every winter has to go to a warmer climate—last winter to Los Angeles, Cal., and I suppose to spend this winter on an island in the Pacific Ocean, west of Angeles. I did not rantize the friends spoken of but baptized them. My Greek Lexicon, published in 1829, says used "in the colleges and schools of the United States," says rantize means to "sprinkle," "shed upon." That baptize means to "dip, to immerse, to submerge, plunge, sink."

E. Hoyt.

An early Anglo-Saxon custom, strictly followed by newly-married couples, was that of drinking diluted honey for thirty days after marriage. From this custom comes the word honey-moon, or honey month.

The Beatitudes.

Methinks I can see
The Lord on the mount,
When he uttered of blessings,
So wondrous a number—
To the poor now in spirit,
This blessing is given,
(If contrite and submissive,)
Theirs the kingdom of heaven.

And of those that here mourn,
Does the dear Savior say,
That they shall be comforted,
Aye, blessed in his day;
For when he shall come,
To call those his own,
Tears, sorrow and mourning,
Will no more be known.

Of the meek he hath said,
The earth shall be theirs—
'Tis their promised possession—
(Through Christ are they heirs)
He will reign on Mount Zion,
As ruler of all;
He the head, they the body,
When matter this call.

To be fit for that Kingdom,
They hunger most for,
Like the child "in the midst,"
For example we see
Like Jesus, the lowly,
Submitting to God's will.
Unto all that were neglected,
To righteousness ill.

And those who for righteousness,
Do hunger and thirst,
Shall be filled with true wisdom,
Oh his saints to be first,
For to know, and to honor,
To do God's own will;
Will make them his chosen,
With righteousness fill.

The merciful, too,
He says shall be blessed;
Aye, they of their kind,
Shall obtain perfect rest.
As they sow, so they reap;
As they give, so receive,
Thus the heavenly Father,
Will mercy them give.

The pure in heart,
Their God they shall see;
O how my soul yearns,
Of those blessed ones to be;
To be chimed by our Savior
As his loved and his own—
To see that glad day,
When we know as we're known.

Blessed peace-seekers,
Called the children of God;
Because, in obeying,
His way they have trod:
Their calling in Christ,
Their peace they make sure,
To obey from the heart,
His love they secure.

If for righteousness sake,
Persecution you bear,
You are blessed, since the kingdom
Of heaven you'll share;
And if men shall revile,
And falsely, evil shall speak,
This will bring you a blessing,
If borne for his sake.

These thirteen precious words,
Do a blessing become;
To make us pure and meek,
Like Gr. Us own dear Son;
To walk in his footsteps,
To sit at his feet,
And learn of him daily,
For his kingdom he meet.

Harvest Work.

Christ in his explanation of the parable of a man that sowed good seed in his field, as given in Matt. xiii. says, "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one. The enemy that sowed them is the devil: the harvest is the end of the world: and the reapers are the angels." The reapers first gather out the tares from among the wheat and bind them in bundles to be burned. And after this part of the harvest work is done, then the reapers gather the wheat into the barn. The language here used "The end of the world" is nearly if not quite synonomous with "The last days" as used in other parts of the Holy Scriptures.

In 2 Tim. iii. 1. we read, "In the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, etc." Now every Bible student knows that this prophecy is now being fulfilled. And the prophecy in James v. 1-5, "Ye (the rich men) are heaping treasures together for the last days." And how are they doing it. Just as James says they would. By keeping back by fraud the just wages of them who perform the labor. Every intelligent Bible student knows that the rich men of the world have united, and have formed trusts, syndicates, and various combinations for the purpose of increasing their business. And they have become so anxious to lay up treasures fast, that by their united power they can, and have kept back too large a per cent of the fruits of labor from those who perform the manual labor. And thus we see that this prophecy is now being fulfilled. And the prophecy in 2 Peter xxxiii., "There shall come in the last days scoffers, saying, where is the promise of his coming, etc." The fulfillment of all of these prophecies prove conclusively that we are now in the last days, or the end of this world, or age. And we see that in these last days there is an influence at work among the people gathering together the people and binding them with bands into bundles or organizations all over the world or field. And organized capital and organized labor have become so heated over their controversy that fires of destruction have already been kindled in several localities, and the first spasmodic struggles of organized labor (as symbolized by the woman in travail.) Thus v. 3, are already upon the people as seen in strikes and contests between organized labor and capital. And men are not infrequently shot down because they are thus organized and remonstrate against those who are keeping back by fraud their just wages. And these strikes are growing more serious and threatening. The labor organizations are heavily in the minority in numbers and strength, but long we may expect them to put forth a united effort to bring forth a new order of things. When this trial of the strength of these two contesting parties comes it will bring upon the latter the fire of God's destruction. The sword of God's wrath upon all the inhabitants of the world. See Jer. xxv. 33.

Those in the field shall die with the sword and those in the city by the famine and pestilence, which the condition of things will then force upon them. See Ezek. vii. 11, 19.

Every thoughtful and candid observer knows that the fulfillment of these prophecies are now before us, and that we are in the last days. If we are now in the last days, in the harvest of this world, what ought God's children to be doing? Sowing more seed in the field while the reaping of ripe grain is in progress? It takes time for wheat to mature and ripen, so also with the children of the kingdom. It takes time for them to grow in grace and knowledge of God's Word and will. And to perfect a character that God knows that he can trust with the great responsibilities that he will confer on all those who are to rule the nations. See Rev. ii. 26. If it takes time for God's children to perfect a character, when should the work of choosing out a people for the name of the Lord end in order to give the last ones chosen a sufficient time to perfect a character? "Who then is the faithful and wise servant whom his Lord hath made ruler over his house, hold to give them meat in due season." Matt. xxiv. 45. Amen.

Submitted in love,

J. B. Caton.

Was Jesus' Prayers Always Answered?

"Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. I knew that thou hearest me always." John xi. 41, 42.

Teacher. I wish to ask some questions which at first may not appear to apply to the subject, but you will see where they fit in before we conclude the investigation. I will ask, was there a set time for the Messiah to die, before which he could not die, and beyond which he could not go?

Arlon. Yes, the time for his cutting off, was definitely fixed, and God revealed it in his Prophetic Word, many long years before Jesus was born.

Teacher. Are God's decrees always immovable, and cannot be changed by prayer, or any other cause?

Arlon. This is the case, prayer made contrary to his revealed Word, would be contrary to his will.

Teacher. Where can the prophecy speaking of his cutting off be found?

Arlon. In Dan. ix. 25, 26: "Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, unto Messiah, the Prince, shall be seven weeks and three score and two weeks; * * * and after three score and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself."

Teacher. I wish to ask some one else, Was Jesus aware of a set time, until the accomplishment of which, his enemies could not take him?

Lud. Yes, he was. See John vii. 29, 30: "Why go ye about to kill me?" "Then they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him

BECAUSE HIS HOUR WAS NOT YET COME."

See also John viii. 20: "And no man laid hands on him; for his hour was not yet come."

Teacher. Did Jesus know when the hour did come?

Lud. Oh yes, he was keenly alive to the fact, when his time came. See Jno xiii. 1: "Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his that he should depart out of this world unto the Father." See also Matt. xxv. 45: when Jesus saw the mob coming to take him he said:

HOUR WAS COME

"BEHOLD, THE HOUR IS AT HAND, and the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand, that doth betray me." He was now conscious that the cutting off prophesied of in Daniel was about to be accomplished.

Teacher. Did he pray when he realized his "hour was come?"

Lucy. He did, he prayed earnestly.

Teacher. What did he pray for?

Lucy. See Matt. xxvi. 39: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt."

Teacher. Was his prayer answered?

Lucy. It was.

Teacher. How? Was he not cut off just as Daniel prophesied?

Lucy. Exactly. His prayer had no reference to that event.

Teacher. What is your opinion Carrie?

Carrie. I agree with Lucy. It would have been an inconsistency altogether unlike our Savior to pray to be delivered from that which he knew from prophecy was his manifest destiny and upon which the salvation of others depended. See Luke xxiv. 13, 25, 26, 44-47. This relates to two disciples on a journey to Emmaus, they were down cast, and said, "We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel."

Teacher. What did Jesus say unto them?

Carrie. "Oh, fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?"

Teacher. After rebuking them for not believing what the prophets had said concerning him, what did he do?

Carrie. "And beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself."

Teacher. Did Jesus have any idea that the prophecies concerning himself in Moses and the prophets could be set aside in answer to prayer?

Carrie. Never! He says:

"ALL THINGS MUST BE FULFILLED, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me."

Teacher. What were those things thus written?

Carrie. He said: "Thus it is written, and thus it

BEHOOVED CHRIST TO SUFFER,

and to rise from the dead the third day."

Teacher. For what purpose?

Carrie. "That repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Teacher. If Jesus had prayed to be delivered from the cross what would be the result of such a prayer?

Carrie. It would have in effect been a prayer for the Father to set aside the prophecies written in Moses and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, and defeat God's purpose "that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name." We can be positively certain that Jesus never prayed for any such thing.

Teacher. What cup did he pray to be delivered from? Albert, what have you to say?

Albert. I am under the impression that it was God's final test, or trial put upon him, even as he so severely tried Abraham's faith, when he required him to offer up Isaac, the son in whom all his hope centered.

Teacher. What was Jesus' trial?

Albert. Jesus said his "hour was come," of which the prophets had spoken, but he found himself dying in the garden of Gethsemane, and unless divine power intervened, he would pass away, and the things prophesied of him in Moses and the prophets would fail, and hence he prayed in agony for the Father to let the cup pass which would seemingly defeat the predictions of the prophets concerning him. Nevertheless he like Abraham could submit to God's will, believing he would still work out his purpose concerning him in ways he did not know of.

Teacher. What intimations have we that he was threatened by death from some malady?

Albert. I quote from Matt. xxvi. 37 (Diaglott "My soul (psuche—person or life) is surrounded with a DEADLY anguish," or in other words, death was imminent on account of anguish which was deadly.

Mark xiv. 34: "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful UNTO DEATH." Death on account of sorrow was just upon him.

Teacher. What kind of malady did this excessive sorrow produce?

Albert. See Luke xxii. 44: "And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly and his sweat was great drops of blood falling down to the ground."

This malady is produced either by excessive sorrow or joy, and is known to medical science, both ancient and modern. On this point I quote the following from Smith's Bible Dictionary:

EXTRACT.

"One of the physical phenomena attending our Lord's agony in the Garden of Gethsemane is described by Luke (xxii. 44): "His sweat was as it were great drops (lit. clots) of blood falling down to the ground." Of this malady, known in medical science by the term diapedesis, there have been examples recorded both in ancient and modern times. The cause assigned is generally violent mental emotion. Dr. Millingen (Curiosities of Medical Experience, p. 489 2d ed.) gives the following explanation of the phenomenon: 'It is probable that this strange disorder arises from a violent emotion of the nervous system, turning the streams of blood out of their natural course, and forcing the red particles into the cutaneous excretories. A mere relaxation of the fibres could not produce so powerful a revulsion. It may also arise in cases of extreme debility, in connection with a thinner condition of the blood.'"

This malady was produced in our Lord by a "DEADLY anguish." "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful UNTO DEATH." There would be no force in such language if he was not afflicted with a malady which was rapidly producing dissolution. He prayed to be delivered from THIS CUP, and his Father heard his prayer, and sent an angel to his rescue.

The old view dishonors our Lord, and makes him lacking in both manly and moral courage. I don't believe it. His courage was equal to the emergency. I believe God permitted the trial, like he did that upon Abraham. He was tried in all points.

Teacher. I will now ask George if he knows of any passage of Scripture, which says how "he was delivered from death?"

George. Yes, sir, it is this: "And there appeared an angel unto him strengthening him."

Teacher. Can you give us a plain positive Scripture saying his prayer was heard?

George. I can. See Heb. v. 7: "Who in the days of his flesh, when he offered up prayers, and supplications, with strong crying and tears unto him that was ABLE TO SAVE HIM FROM DEATH,

and was heard in that he feared."

There was no occasion during the "days of his flesh," when "he offered up prayers, and supplications, with strong crying and tears," like the tragic scene in the garden, "unto him that was able to save him FROM DEATH" with the assurance that he WAS HEARD," and delivered by the ministration of an angel.

He never in all his life shrank from the accomplishment of that which the prophetic Word said, "Must be fulfilled." Every prayer of the blessed Christ was answered.

Infidels deride him as playing the baby act, in praying to be delivered from the cross: but I trust you will see by this explanation that he never prayed for anything of the kind. Our Lord's courage was always equal to the trial on every occasion. I love to honor the noble and courageous character of our Redeemer. He says the predictions concerning him in Moses, the prophets and the Psalms "MUST BE FULFILLED." Now, whatever "must be," he submitted to without a question.

W. H. WILSON.

Repentance.

The Scriptures affirm that God repents and that man repents. The command to repent is addressed to every sinful human being to whom the gospel message comes. In the New Covenant Scriptures there are two Greek words which, in its judgment King James' committee rendered by the English word "repent." This fact every one, who can read, though, wholly ignorant of Greek can settle to his or her satisfaction by turning to the word repent in Young's Analytical Concordance. "Metanoeo," and "metamelomai" are the words. Mr. Young gives a short definition of both—the former word defined—"to have another mind," the latter—"to be careful or concerned with." The two words occur sixty-two times in the Greek of the New Testament—the former fifty-five, and the latter seven times. Although these words have nearly the same meaning as defined by Green, the Holy Spirit discriminated between them favoring the use of the former in the ratio of nearly eight to one of the latter, and giving it the special office of embodying a command addressed to the sinner, a command demanding, at least, to begin with, a change of the entire mind—judgment, will and affections: and in its broader sense, as defined by Green, a change of practice—in a word, reformation of conduct: So, in many of the later translations it is rendered by the word "reform" and this means, to build a new character, to make oneself a new creature in Christ—or being made such by the means God employs, looking to it from the divine side. Daniel [illegible] to the Babylonian king's point here, "Break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor." Dan. iv. 27. Looking at the new or reformed character in Christ John says: "He that doeth righteousness is righteous." 1 John iii. 7.

GOSPEL REPENTANCE IS GODWARD.

Paul at Miletus, reviewing his ministerial life says: "Testifying both to the Jews and also to the Greeks repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." Acts xx. 21. Drunkards often repent but without reference to God, his will and his ways. The repentance to be preached in Christ's name is commanded by the Great Jehovah, the Sovereign of the universe. Paul addressing the refined and philosophic but sinful Greeks who were ignorant of the one true God who "gave them life and breath and all things," says: "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent." Acts xvii. 30. The awful majesty of Jehovah's name is back of this command. The reason—"Because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteous by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead." ver. 31. Jesus affirms that "the Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son." John v. 22.

Think of this, my unbelieving friend! Consider and be wise! God's name! with all this implies back of the command making it solemnly authoritative! It is addressed to you personally! Before you is the judgment and God's Son the Judge who is to render to every man according to his works. Your final destiny is in the balance! What would you have it be? Eternal life? or—Eternal death? The repentance commanded is not a trifling matter that may be set aside or spurned with contempt and no serious consequences follow. The majesty of God's law will be vindicated. Mercy persistently spurned must result in eternal loss. Jesus said "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Paul—"The end of those things is death." This Apostle to the nations burdened his great heart with the question of rejected mercy on the part of those to whom he bore the message of love and reconciliation. He says, "Knowing the terror of the Lord we persuade men." 2 Cor. v. 11. "Our God is a consuming fire." Heb xii. 29. Speaking of a cross which had once been highly favored with the light of divine truth, had shared with all the churches of that day the gift of the Holy Spirit, but had turned away from the truth in willful transgression, rejecting the entire system of mercy, he says for such, "There remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries." Heb. x. 26, 27. In verse 31 he adds "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." The punishment named here as awaiting these willful rejectors of grace and mercy is a sorer (worse) punishment than that inflicted on the violators of the law, who died without mercy by two or three witnesses. The penalty of the law was death—not purgation or purification. It fell upon the transgressor in vengeance for sin. Will the punishment threatened against the violation and rejection of the higher law, "the law of the Spirit of life," be less than death, Who will affirm? The Apostle's language, though in the form of a question carries the idea that it may be more or worse, than capital punishment under the law. If his language here is in fact an affirmation in an interrogative form then does he affirm in fact a worse punishment to meet these cases of sinning against overwhelming odds of opportunities for good. Death then—not temporal but eternal—awaits those who reject and set at naught God's council of love and mercy.

The constraining power to gospel repentance is the love of God as set forth in his Word. The great Teacher said, "God so loved the world (human kind) that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," John iii. 16. The Father's love is first "We love him, because he first loved us." 1 John iv. 19. "Christ died for us while we were yet sinners." Rom. v. 8. The repentance commanded is not sorrow for sin. From early childhood up to maturity I was taught that repentance and sorrow were interchangeable terms: that what the one meant the other meant. I carried this impression into my reading of the New Testament. I think the religious world (Christian so-called) labors today, in a large measure, under this false notion. Paul taught differently. In 2 Cor. vii. he employs the two words—not interchangeably, but in the relation of cause and effect. "Now I rejoice," he says, "not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance." 9 ver. 10 ver. "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of." Paul's first letter to the Corinthian church had the desired effect and brought about a change in the mind and conduct of that part of the church which was boasting over the shameful relationship of one of the members of the body instead of "putting away from among themselves one so wicked," ver. 13. The Word of God reveals sin in us, and shows in what light sin is looked upon by the Great Being we have offended against, and at the same time sets before us God's love and mercy, pity and compassion. Having faith in the message we are convinced of our helpless condition: and here the love of God as portrayed in the gift of his Son, touches our hearts—stirs our emotions. We feel sorry that we have been living in continual violation of his law and in utter disregard of his claims upon us. This is godly sorrow that works repentance or reformation to salvation.

Helpful Queries for Sabbatarians.

If the Sabbath be binding now, is it binding as it once was? If so, who keeps it? If not, why not? If not as it once was, is it binding at all? If binding, how binding is it, and how do you know it is binding? If the original regulations be removed, who by, and when, were they removed? And where is the new code of regulations, and who is their author? Give chapter and verse. Again. If the Master kept the Sabbath, (which is an inference at best, as there is no positive proof) and it be the great sent of the living God, and "pivot" of life and death, through all time, and for all people, why did he omit to preach and comment and tell the people all about it? If it was an eternal institution, Jesus knew it, then why did he touch it to modify it, so that his people could have much liberty and keep it as they see fit? Did Jesus do this, if so, where is the record? If the Sabbath be binding, why did not Jesus enforce it, and tell the people they would be lost if they did not keep it? Was Jesus behind the time, or have you outstripped Jesus? If the Sabbath be an important factor in the plan of salvation, why have all the able, honest ministers of the New Testament failed to tell the story? If Peter and Paul kept and preached the Sabbath, why does not the record say so? Paul preached, reasoned and argued on the Sabbath day, but why is it he never expounded the question, nor urged its claims? Ah, the question is easy from a Bible stand point, he was a follower of his Master, and his message was the gospel of the kingdom of God, and not the Law. Read Acts xxviii. 23, 30, 31: 2 Cor. iii. 6: Gal. i. 6 9. If Jesus and all his Apostles saw fit to leave the Sabbath in the background, when preaching the gospel plan of salvation

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 14, 1898. NUMBER 47.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ as remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

—the "new and living way;" is it not our wisdom and our life to follow them? If we fail to follow them and still insist for the Sabbath and the Law, then are we not disciples of Moses, wandering in the mazes and fog that envelopes blind Israel?

When "it"—the heart—shall turn to the Lord the veil shall be taken away. Praise God. You claim to be the true Israel, and talk about keeping all the commandments, meaning only the ten, but Israel of old entertained much broader views about the commandments. Look well. There are some things that helped the writer many years ago to get out of the mournful shadowy vale, into the pure clear life-giving rays of the Sun of righteousness, who has life, light, rest and healing in his wings. And if we can only aid some poor tempest-tossed soul out of the dim shadows and labyrinths of the old school master—the legal system, into the glorious liberty and life-giving system—the gospel of Christ, and power and plan of God unto and for salvation to, and for every one who believes and obeys, and remains steadfast and unmovable unto the end, we shall be satisfied, and ascribe all the praise unto him who has loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood by or through the washing of regeneration—the washing of water by the Word. Amen.

T. E. ADAMS.

Dear Restitution:

I ought to have taken the time long long ago, to tell you that I had sent the last of the money collected through the RESTITUTION, to Sister Heyes, and received her receipt therefor. There was only $22 10 which I reported through the paper, but the two which were received from Bro. J. Anthony, of Des Moines, Iowa, was inadvertantly credited in the wrong place. The whole amount was sent to Sister Heyes, in three instruments, always waiting until the last had been received and acknowledged, before sending again.

God's "little ones" are his heritage to his church and if we would live near to the Master we must be loyal to those whom he loves.

Thanking you all again, and regretting that an extraordinary pressure of a multitude of duties, has made me so dilatory in making my final report.

I remain yours in the blessed hope.

ELIZABETH A. REED.

An Appeal.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I thought I would make an appeal through THE RESTITUTION, in hopes that we may secure a preacher here at Wenatchee, Wash. We meet every Sunday, at 10 A. M. for Sunday school, and 11 A. M. for preaching service. We have prayer meetings on Wednesday evenings, but think much good could be done if we had a good preacher. We want one that is an all-round Christian, and would like to correspond with any one that would like to come. Address Harry W. Patterson, Wenatchee, Wash.

We hope all our friends will save us the expense and labor of sending notice regarding renewal of subscription. The time of the expiration of your subscription is known to you certainly, and you must realize that we need the money. It seems to you doubtless a small matter, and to be attended to a little later on, but while each one is but little, when gathered in to us it makes it easy for us to pay our bills. We have to meet our bills, so please be prompt with your renewals.

'An Indictment of the Bishops' is a book just issued by the Church Association with the object of opening the eyes of the British public as to 'how the Church of England is being corrupted and betrayed.' The frontispiece shows the two Archbishops and Dr. Creighton in copes and croziers, and subsequent plates exhibit the 'Anglican Confessional' in full action, and a 'Modern Mass in the Church of England' at the moment of the Elevation. Yet these illustrations are as nothing to the tremendous array of Romanizing practices which are alleged in circumstantial detail against almost every diocese in England.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 14, 1898.

BRO. R. W. Woodward and wife are still here, though he is somewhat improved since last week. They think if he gets no worse they can go home in a few days.

THE character of the Bible is clearly perceived in the words uttered by Jesus:—"Thy Word is Truth." It is truth unadulterated—Truth without any admixture of error. There is nothing in it, and we may accept all its teachings,—its source is divine.

REMEMBER that we send the balance of 1898 issues to each new subscriber sent in before Jan. 1, 1899. When sending your renewal try and get your brother who does not take the paper to try it for a year. Or if you can spare the money, send it to some friend. You will never know, perhaps, the good done by such an action, but you can be assured the Father will make record of each item to your credit.

STATEMENTS have been sent to a number of our subscribers who are in arrears. We must insist on having a prompt response to this call, and hope all will pay attention and answer. If errors have been made we want by all means to hear from you, and we will gladly correct them. If you owe, then we kindly ask you to please send us a remittance without delay. We ask this for the very simple reason that we need it. Do not think because you are only one and your amount small, that you can take time, and it will make but little difference. If each one does so then it will make a very great difference, but if each one will send a small sum the aggregate will be the means of making our work very much lighter indeed. Please give this your earnest heed.

A RUSSIAN Jew, resident of Mead'ub, gives information concerning a great number of Israelites inhabiting the oasis of Sahara and dwelling at Bu-ther, Bis Arabi Tuggart, Bousra Bein, Ueab, Loquaz, etc. There are in each of these places as many as a hundred families, and in some even more. In one place there are six hundred families, with numerous synagogues and about one hundred copies of the Law written on parchment, some of them were older than any he had before seen. But this is not all. A Jew who had accompanied a traveler to Timbuctoo, found near Barbary a large number of Jewish negroes, nearly every family of them possessing the Law of Moses written upon parchment.

WE are having calls for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some too poor to pay. We can do some of this good work, but not all of it. A few have aided us, but there is a large field unworked still. The managers of this paper do not want a single cent of free donation—all money sent is applied at once as directed. A poor widow in Kansas is reported to us as wanting the paper. Who will send it to her? An aged brother in Canada cannot pay for his paper longer. Can any one spare money enough to supply him? What is done should be done promptly. We are compelled by the limits of our purse to stop some who we know are worthy—unless our good friends will aid. Brothers and sisters, do please consider these poor ones of the flock. Their appeals are indeed pitiful. Isolated, with no one to talk with often. The Lord will bless your gifts.

Bible Questions.

If Paul said that "Jesus Christ shall Judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom," 2 Tim. iv 1, how can any one be rewarded or punished before Jesus returns to this earth.

If the Thessalonians, when converted by the Truth, turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, 1 Thess. i. 9, 10, how is it that Protestants and Catholics are waiting to be taken to God's Son in heaven?

If the Bible says there is but one hope, Eph. iv. 4, and that the hope of Eternal Life to be bestowed at the Second appearing of Jesus Christ, Titus i. 2; ii. 13 & 17, what right have any to teach that we have Eternal life now, and that the coming of Jesus is something which does not concern his disciples?

Bishop Foster of the M. E. Church arraigns that Body after this fashion, he says:—"Its members are trying to bring it down to the level of the ungodly. The ball, the theater, nude and lewd art,—social luxuries, with all their loose moralities, are making inroads into it, and as a satisfaction for all this worldliness, they are making a great deal of Lent, and Easter, and Good Friday, and Church ornamentations." On reading the above we were led to wonder whether or no the lack of zeal for God as manifested by the neglect of established agencies for the dissemination of his truth could be explained upon those lines? If so, there will be some fearful surprises by and by. The words of Jesus, "what I say unto you, I say unto all. Watch!" were never more pertinent than at this time. After even most vigilant watchfulness our environments may stealthily influence us. Let us add prayer and close attention to the Word of Truth, and then we will stand unmoved from the hope.

News Items.

Congress is in session, and the President's message is before them. He recommends increasing the regular army to 100,000 men, and approves the Secretary of the Navy's list for 15 new battleships. He wants definite action to be taken by this congress regarding the Nicaragua Canal, which he deems necessary, and says that it is absolutely essential that it be owned by this government exclusively. He sees an increasing trade with China, and asks that a commission be appointed to study Chinese trade and markets. This will call for the upholding by this country of the policy of England in keeping the ports open, and of course will antagonize Russia's closing schemes. Our envoy in Turkey is ordered to press our claims for property of missionaries destroyed in 1895.

The treaty of peace is signed, and America gets all she asked for. It remains to be seen whether or not the Senate will ratify the action of the Peace Commission.

It is reported that the United States has now secured a coaling station at Chiriqui Lagoon on the east coast of the Panama Isthmus.

Carlism seems to be the greatest danger that now overshadows Spain. The authorities fear that with the signing of the peace treaty the Carlists will make a stir.

France is disturbed by the question whether the military or civil authority shall rule the nation, with the military in the lead just now.

The Triple Alliance—Germany, Austria and Italy—that has held Europe in peace for so long is near its end, and who can tell what will come once this bond is removed. Italy is so badly in debt she can scarcely keep alive, Austria is composed of so many small states each wanting to be first, that she is almost as near disruption as is France.

Russia is looking on at the growing breach between Norway and Sweden, ready to play "peacemaker" and take pay as usual from both.

Russia is trying to get into the good graces of the Sultan again. It seems the Turkish ruler was very indignant that his flag was so unceremoniously hauled down from Crete, and protested when Russia named Prince George as Governor of the island. The Czar, to conciliate the Sultan, arranges that the flag of Turkey shall be raised, not where it had been removed by the Admirals, but on a little island near by, where there are no Christians. This seems to have pacified the Porte.

There are rumors of more massacres by the Turkish troops in the outer provinces.

It now apears that Major Marchand is to retire from his position in Africa, and gather up his row of French flags, so quitting the country claimed by England.

The war cloud is again seen rising in India, the Mad Mullah having beaten the tribesmen and advanced to a position where he expects to cut off the British communication with Chitral. It is likely that the Indian government will have to use sufficient force to put down this rising, and then assume charge of the whole section of the Pamirs. This will extend through to Chitral, and will bring the British and Russian frontiers together with no barrier between them.

Christ's Coming—1 Thessalonians.

1: 10. To wait for his Son from heaven.

2: 19. Even ye, in the presence of our Lord at his coming.

3: 13. Stablish your hearts at the coming of our Lord.

5: 23. Be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord.

The Little Flock.

It is surprising how any one who is at all acquainted with the Scriptures, can have the idea that the majority are certain to be right. An idea seems to prevail that people will go where they hear the truth proclaimed, and that the masses love truth rather than error. If such is the case, then we must class Jesus as one of the false prophets, for he said, "Wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go in thereat: because strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matt. vii. 13, 14.

We know that when Jesus uttered those words, he spoke, as he always did, that which was true, and instead of men loving the truth, they hate it, and not only so, but they hate him who proclaimed the truth and those who follow him. As Jesus said to his disciples, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me, before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own, but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you" John xv. 18, 19.

The test to be applied to those who profess to know the truth and follow Christ is not their popularity, or the crowds that speak well of them, and who flock to hear them, but it will be found that the believers of the gospel which Christ and his apostles preached, are, like their Master, despised and neglected of men. (Isa. liii. 3,) and hated both by the Christian world, so called, and others, Mark xiii. 13.

That professing Christians should be among the persecutors of the children of God, may seem strange to those who know not the truth, but that it is so any one who professes the faith once delivered to the saints, Jude 3, knows by experience. In fact, the very persecution which they suffer is only a fulfillment of the words of the Master, who said, "they shall put you out of the synagogues; yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think he doeth God's service." John xvi. 2.

Instead of repining at this treatment, the disciples of Christ are to rejoice. "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company and reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake: rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy, for behold your reward is great in heaven, for in like manner did their fathers unto the prophets." Luke vi. 22, 23.

How absurd, then, for the world to be flung at those who know the truth, that their numbers are so small, or that the sect is so unpopular! The sect is now as it ever has been, "every where spoken against," Acts xxiii. 22, and until the day of Christ's power and dominion, it is likely to remain so. But, we can wait, and amid all the reproach which the profession of the truth brings with it, we have the assurance that in the future age we shall reign as kings and priests on the earth Rev. v. 9, 10, and be made equal unto the angels, and die no more. Luke xx. 36

The few are generally on the right side as the Bible amply illustrates; and what was said to the Israelites might be said to the few who believe the truth in the present age, "The Lord did not set his love upon you, nor chose you, because ye were more in number than any people, for ye were the fewest of all people" Deuteronomy vii. 7.

Then let not the illusion of numbers deter any from believing and obeying the truth, and associating with those of like precious faith, 2d Pet. i. 1, to wait in patient hope for the day when their salvation and redemption shall come. To such are the words of Christ addressed—Fear not, little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Luke xii. 32.

"So few there be
That choose the narrow way, or seek the right;
All keep the broad highway and take delight
With many rather to go astray,
And be partakers of their evil plight,
Than with a few to walk the rightest way.
O! foolish men! Why haste ye to your own decay?"

Forgiveness of Sin.

Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us.

"Our sins to God we now confess,
That they may be forgiven:
As we to others mercy show,
We mercy beg from heaven."

In all our ways and works, let us ever remember that we are compassed with infirmity, and that our best endeavors fall short of perfection. In the flesh inherently dwells no good thing. The natural mind is alienated from God, and all its desires tend earthward, for the thinking of the flesh is at enmity with the mentality developed by the inworking of the Word of Truth. The flesh wars incessantly against the Spirit. The conflict is keen and the victory is not continuously on the side of God. "For if we say we have no sin we deceive ourselves." But let us not be discouraged because of this. We are not to depend upon our works, for they are not perfect, but to the pardoning mercy of a loving Father. None can reach the standard of perfection set before us in the character and person of the Lord Jesus Christ. There remains, therefore, much to be forgiven, and for this we are taught to rest solely upon the intercessory power of our great High Priest.

Oh, how we do long to see and cring children to know that their gracious and ever-loving Father is ever willing to hear and answer petitions through the dear name of Jesus, and that even the unuttered breathings and longings of unfeigned hearts are already known to him, and that their Father knows what things they have need of before they ask him. And they may be sure that he who is ever ready and willing to hear the cry of his sorely tried and suffering children, will reject no prayers which are presented by sincere and humble supplicants. He will not despise the cry of a broken and contrite heart; bless his holy name.

It is the disposition God delights in, and this is what we are called upon to cultivate, trusting in his abounding love and Fatherly care, ever remembering that when through frailty we stumble and grow faint, he has graciously provided a merciful and faithful High Priest, who is ever waiting to help, being touched with the feeling of our infirmities, having himself suffered, being tempted. Oh, let us, then gladly avail ourselves of this divine provision for the children of a mortal race who have undertaken the tremendous task of keeping the body under. Let us come with a humble boldness to the family throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

But let us bear in mind the essential attitude. We must exercise clemency and forbearance toward others, or else we cannot expect the same to be extended to us. The trespasses of fellow mortals against us are nothing compared with our trespasses against the great Jehovah. What we sow, that shall we reap. "And if we forgive not men their trespasses, neither will our Father forgive our trespasses." Matt. vi. 14, 15.

Death's Doings.

For months we have had many vacant seats in the Assembly of God's saints in Cleveland, and we have often wondered what havoc the enemy was contemplating amongst Beloved ones of the only faith and hope of the gospel,—fearful that the ranks of witnesses for Jesus would be thinned out before he would cease his attacks. Presently the recovery of one and another cheered us, and we began to hope that it would be better with us than all our fears. But, while hoping the worst for the present was over we were sadly apprised that our aged had fallen a victim to his dart. Our beloved Sister ten years ago laid away the husband of her youth, after a protracted affliction, and this blow together with the long and anxious watching that preceded it shattered her constitution, and for a time it appeared doubtful if she would ever be herself again. And before time had fully relieved the poignancy of her sorrow, and revived her strength, she was called to part with her naturally lovely daughter Hattie, but whose loveliness was heightened by communion with the one altogether lovely. This was more than her shattered nervous system could bear and she has been failing and failing ever since. At last a severe cold ending in pneumonia put a period to her sufferings.

The funeral services were held at the old homestead on Hough Avenue on Nov. 13th, where we had the privilege of addressing many of her old friends and acquaintances on the subject of death and after life. Since that date we have watched with mingled hopes and fears the grounds of disease upon our dear whom it was our privilege to assist in putting on the sin-covering mone of Jesus in 1865; at which time she was in anything but robust health. And although much of the time since she has attended to household duties, she always bore on her face the sign of suffering. About six weeks ago she met with the Body of Christ the last time, although suffering with severe pain in the head. This trouble continued to increase till it baffled the skill of her physician and after lingering unconsciously several days, the lamp went out at 3 P. M. Sunday Dec. 6th.

Happily she took steps to secure an endless life free from sorrow, pain, sighing and parting when God's beloved order was made known to her,—and the sustaining power of the gospel hope, and entire submission to God's will was testified to just before deprived of consciousness. And while we weary of these sad scenes and long the apocalyptic welcome, "Come Lord Jesus," we sorrow not as those who have no hope; believing that she sleeps in Jesus, we brush aside our tears, brace up for the conflict with error and evil, and endeavor to keep busy in the vineyard, if perchance we may yet snatch others as brands from the burning.

The funeral services were held at the residence, 79 Woodland Court, where a large audience listened intently to the gospel of life,—with what result God only knows, save that one lady expressed the determination to search and see if these things be so. We then repaired to the city of the dead and laid the dear one to rest, in sure and certain hope of a better resurrection.

Watching.

"And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." Mark xiii. 37.

Many times the Savior enjoins this upon his church as they should draw near the time of his return, and the fact of his repeating it so often proves the great importance of our heeding the command. He saw the many dangers and temptations that would surround his people in the last days, and knew their need of watchfulness. After giving the signs that should precede his coming, he says, "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell (dwell securely) on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man" Luke xxi. 34-36.

We are plainly taught that there will be two classes of "servants" when the Master returns. Of one class we are told, "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." Verse 37. Of the other class Jesus says, "But and if that servant say in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken: the lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers." Verses 45, 46. All these represent professed followers of the Master, but some are "watching" for his coming, while others are not. It is a sad fact, but we can see clearly these two classes today. Very many who claim to love the Savior are indifferent to his return and are persecuting those who see its approach, and endeavor to warn others.

This, however, is but another evidence that we are very near the end, and we will continue to prayerfully watch and wait and "abide in him: that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming."—Wm. Wolcott in Herald of Life.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT.

We are pleased to announce that we can offer our subscribers this valuable reference book at the very low price of only THREE DOLLARS. This work is so well known that it needs no introduction. It contains the Original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation: a new Emphatic Version, based on the interlineary, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican Manuscripts. Also illustrative and explanatory foot notes, and a selection of references. By Benjamin Wilson. We have these books now in stock, and can mail at once. Send to this office.

A most excellent and appropriate present for any Bible student.

Poetry.

Hour by Hour.

One single day
Is not enough to look upon. There is some way
Of passing hours of such a time. We can face
A single day; but please
Too many days before our eyes—
Too many days for unthrived sighs—
And we lose heart
Just at their call.
Years really are not long our lives
The longest which survives—
And yet, to look across
A future we must tread bowed by a sense of loss.
Bearing some burden we long down so low
That we can scarcely go
One step ahead, that is so hard.
So stern a view to pass, unstirred.
Unmercifully light, so marked with dread.
How would it take a step ahead.
Be brave, and keep
The feet quite steady; feel the breath of life
Ever on our face again
We must not look across—looking in vain—
But downward to the next close step.
And up. Eyes which have wept
Must look a little way, not far
Lest broken vows to hours and days, that hour by hour.
And day by day
Just going on a little way
We might be told all things
To keep quit courage
Should all the weight of life
Be laid across our shoulders, and the nature, rite
With woe and struggle, meet us face to face
At just one place.
We could not go
Our feet would stop, as two
Gaolings a little on us every day,
And never I believe, on all the way
Will burdens bear so deep,
Or pathways lie so steep,
But we can go, it, by God's power.
We only bear the burden of the hour.
—George Eliot.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Household of Faith:

We are closely watching the signs of the times, and when we see the different nations in so troubled a condition, we feel to rejoice to know that our redemption draweth nigh, and that the coming of our King is not far distant. I am trying to so live that when he comes I may be found worthy of an entrance into his glorious kingdom. Yours in hope.

MRS. F. W. CRAVEN.

Editor Restitution:

There are a few words I would like to say. I am alone here in the faith. I watch the signs and look for war, the war spoken of in Ezekiel. All nations will have a hand in that war, and Christ will also be in the great battle and come off victorious. I want to fight with Christ. Watch and pray, is my prayer. If any of the dear brothers and sisters of the one faith and one baptism come to Hampton, Neb., please call on me. I preach at this place. Let us all try to spread the gospel of the kingdom. May God be with all is my prayer.

P. L. WATKINS.

Dear Restitution:

I will now tell you what a good meeting we had here when Brother Zihner was here in the fall. We were edified and encouraged by hearing him preach, and there was a good impression left on the minds of the people. We consider him a workman that needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth. We would be much pleased to hear him again, and we hope he will be successful in the work of proclaiming the glad tidings concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Anointed One. We are pleased to read the letters from the dear ones scattered abroad, hoping they will live in harmony with the grand truths taught by the blessed Master who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth. May we all live in that humble frame of mind as to say, "Not my will, but thine be done," is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

A. RAILTON.

Dear Restitution:

I see you have begun the love-feast again, which I so much enjoy. In first running over the paper I read of those with whom I am personally acquainted, which brings to memory their very features. Next I turn to those whose names I have often read, and seem to be near of kin to me; yes, even the new ones seem as kin, for we are all one in Christ by being adopted into the Abrahamic faith through baptism, which makes us heirs and joint-heirs with Christ, and we are called God's children, or sons of God. Then may we well say, brother and sister. When I look forward to the coming of our Elder Brother, Jesus, when we shall all meet face to face and greet each other with joy, then turn and see father Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, then see Jesus seated on the throne, and saying, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," surely we can rise up with new courage to fight through this wayfaring age and condemn the very first influence of evil. Now dear ones may I give you a warning by telling an incident of one of my neighbors. They were living happily with the wife's invalid mother and to pass away the time they played simple games, but, by-and-by in came a deck of cards to be played for fun, but next came the drink, and soon the oldest son was selling it, and the law took hold of him and he is now looking through the iron bars. Next the father was found guilty of the same crime so he too stands behind the bars and poor invalid grandmother and wife and little ones have to drag through life the best they can, all because the wife allowed simple game playing for pastime in her home. I say, dust from your houses all games; yes, burn them up, and never allow such things to enter your door.

Future Home of the Saints

We learn from Isaiah that "God who formed the earth and made it, he hath established it, he created it not in vain he formed it to be inhabited." Isa. xl. 18.

The above tells us the earth is to be inhabited, but whether by angels, men, or demons, it does not say, but the Psalmist says the Lord has reserved the heavens, "But the earth hath he given to the children of men." Psa. cxv. 15.

Solomon tells us what class of men will inhabit the earth. In Prov. x. 30, we read, "The righteous shall never be removed, but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth."

According to the above three witnesses we have the promise of him who created all things, both in heaven and earth, of him who said, "Let there be light," and the sun, moon and stars sent forth their glorious rays in obedience to the divine command of their Creator.

It is this great Creator who brings forth light and hide darkness; he, who decrees "The wicked shall not inhabit the earth, but the righteous shall never be removed," and we believe that he who has performed such wondrous works will fulfill his promise to the righteous. Believing this earth is to be our everlasting home, we are naturally interested to know what will be the positions of its inhabitants, in the future age, and who can better tell us than he who created him?

We will therefore take his word which he has spoken by the mouth of his apostles and prophets to satisfy our longing to know of his will concerning our future.

Concerning the future government, Daniel tells us "The God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these (earthly) kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Isaiah speaking of the Son of God, says, "The government shall be upon his shoulders." Zachariah tells us, "The Lord shall be King over all the earth."

According to the promise of the angel to Mary, Christ is to occupy "the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever." In this universal kingdom which is to subdue all other governments, there will be subordinate rulers who will be subject to the King of kings. Jesus promised, "To him that overcometh, and keepeth my works to the end, to him will I give power over the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron, as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers."

David in referring to the breaking up of the heathen governments says, "To bind their kings with chains and their nobles with fetters of iron, to execute upon them the judgments written this honor have all the saints." Psa. cxlix. 8, 9.

When the twelve Apostles wished to know what would be their positions in the kingdom, Jesus told them that when he should take possession of his throne (the throne inherited of his father David, he is now seated with God on his throne) "They also should sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." From the foregoing we learn that Christ is to be King of kings, and the twelve Apostles are to have authority over the nations of Israel, and the saints (that is those who keep the works of the Lord unto the end and are deemed worthy of immortal life at Christ's coming) shall have power over the heathen nations. According to Bible use that includes all nations except Israel. Then will the redeemed sing the new song saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation. And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. Rev. v. 9, 10.

Then will be fulfilled the national blessing which is promised through Abraham and his Seed, which is Christ and his followers. Gal. iii. 27-29. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch and a King shall reign and prosper and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." Jer. ii. 5, 5. According to Jeremiah Jerusalem shall be the capital city of the universal kingdom, he says, "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord and all nations shall be gathered unto it."

Isaiah says, "For out of Zion shall the law go forth and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Isa. ii. 3. "Then the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously." Isa. xxiv. 23.

Let us see the result among the subjects of this righteous reign. Isaiah says, "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. They shall build houses and inhabit them, they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build and another inhabit, they shall not plant and another eat, for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands; they shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble." Isa. lxv. 21-23.

"The Lord hath sworn by his right hand and by the arm of his strength, surely I will no more give thy corn to be meat for thine enemies, and the sons of strangers shall not drink thy wine for which thou hast labored, but they that have gathered it shall eat it and praise the Lord, and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness." Isa. lxii. 8, 9.

From the above we might infer that mortgage holders, speculators and lawyers will not flourish much under the rule of the righteous King. There will be employment for all. God would never have created man with the ability to do wonderful works, if as soon as he comes into possession of immortal perfection he is to do nothing but sing hallelujah throughout the ages.

Let us now consider the position of the wicked. David tells us, "Yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be." Psa. xxxvii. 10. So we see there will be no place for the wicked in the future kingdom. Therefore they will be converted into ashes and trod under the feet of the righteous. Mal. iv. 1-3.

Recent Archæology and the Bible. No. 4.

The subject of the fourth of the Croall lectures on "Recent Archæology and the Bible," at present being delivered by the Rev. Dr. Nicol in Tolbooth Parish Church was "Egypt and the Patriarchs, including the Exodus." Starting with Menes the founder of the First Dynasty of kings, the recovery of whose tomb and calcined bones has restored to us a historical figure up till recently discredited by Egyptologists, the lecturer briefly sketched the early history of Egypt, referring to the Pyramids and the sphinx as among the oldest and most wonderful creations of human genius, and mentioning the proverbs of Ptah-hotep which go back to about 3500 B. C., when the hieroglyphic system of writing was already perfected and in use. The Twelfth Dynasty which saw the Old Empire closed, and the New Empire begun, and the seat of government transferred from Memphis to Thebes, was described as a highly cultivated and brilliant period some centuries before the time of Abraham. The lecturer gave some account of the temples and pyramids built during this period mentioning Amenemhat's engineering works in the Fayoum, and the recent recovery in the neighborhood of the brick pyramid of Dahshow of jewelry which had belonged to the Princesses of the Royal houses of Amenemhat and Usertesen, exhibiting an artistic skill, and an exquisite workmanship, marvellous in an age still some centuries before Abraham's day. Special notice was taken of the famous pictures from the tombs of Beni-Hassan representing the arrival of a party of Semitics strangers in this period, the wives unveiled, and admitted along with their husbands, in some such fashion as Abraham arrived at a later time, when the Princes of Pharaoh saw Sarah, and commended her for her beauty to the King. It was in time of the Hykos rulers that Abraham went down into Egypt, and it was most probably in the reign of Apopi II., one of the last of those much discussed and still perplexing sovereigns, that Joseph was sold into Egypt, and the close relations between Israel and Egypt began. The lecturer here discussed the silence of the Egyptian monuments, and the absence from their inscriptions of all reference to the residence of the Israelites in the land, pointing out, among other things, that it was contrary to the usage of all nations in ancient times to take notice of incidents or individuals that had been the cause of national disaster and humiliation in their records. At any rate, to argue from the silence of the monuments, as the more extreme adherents of the newer criticism had done, that there was no settlement of Israel in Egypt, no oppression, and no exodus, was a line of which the dangerous and hopeless inconsistency was shown by the discoveries that have recently been made, and were still being made. He maintained that it should go far towards establishing the historical character of the Scripture narrative and of Joseph's career, if we could show that the details of the Bible story are thoroughly consistent with all that the inscriptions had revealed to us of the manners and customs and life of Egypt in the times assigned to him. Not only would this establish the veracity of the record, but help also to establish contemporary authorship. He did not think remembering the blunders Herodotus had made when dealing with strange countries and remote times, that an Israelitish writer, in the times of the Hebrew monarchy, could possibly have had the exact knowledge of the Egypt of the patriarchs required for the narrative. He then proceeded to give details of what Ebers has called the "Egyptiety" of the Bible narrative, showing how the descriptions of land and people, of manners and customs, the ways of peasant life and the ceremonial of the Egyptian court, correspond in all particulars to what is known of the Egyptians from their monuments and inscriptions. He referred in particular to the land of Goshen, the limits of which have now been defined by the discoveries of Naville and others, and the residence of Rameses II., the Pharaoh of the oppression, in it, proved by statues discovered at San, and bricks stamped with his name. The significance of the discovery of Pithom, one of the store cities built by the Israelites for Rameses in the sand hillocks of Tel el Mashhuta, was dwelt upon, and the layers of bricks for which the builders had had to seek reeds or stubble, and then layers of bricks made without anything to bind them together, actually found in succession in the ruins of ancient Pithom, were regarded as an undesigned but most striking proof of the historical character of the incidents recorded in Exodus. In dealing with Merenptah, the Pharaoh of the Exodus, the lecturer discussed the appearance of the name of Israel upon a stele of this monarch found in 1896 by Professor Flinders Petrie, the only occurrence of the name yet discovered on the Egyptian monuments, and criticised the explanations of it that had been offered by Professors Hommel, Strack, Sayce, Orr, and others. Without professing to have reached any satisfactory conclusion on the point, the lecturer expressed the hope, which there was reason to cherish, that new discoveries might clear away the ambiguities and perplexities still besetting the question. He concluded with an account of the elucidation which these discoveries and recent surveys of the ground by Sir William Dawson, Sir Colin Scott-Moncrieff, and others have furnished of the Exodus of the Israelites under the leadership of Moses for the great part they were to play as the people of Revelation and Redemption.—Edinburgh Scottsman.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to any P. O. for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Presents for Friends.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding, fifth edition; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of "Early Lessons;" and one of "Honoring the Son,"—all five for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth.

WILEY JONES, Manchester, Va.

SEND THE RESTITUTION for 1899 to some friend. We send all the remaining issues of 1898 free to new subscribers for the new year.

Low Holiday excursion rates are in effect via the Nickel Plate Road on Dec. 23rd to 26th, 30th and 31st, 1898 and Jan. 1st and 2nd, 1899 with tickets good returning to and including Jan. 3rd, 1899.—dec. 30.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

With their Peerless Trio of Fast Express Trains Daily, Low Rates, Unexcelled Dining Car Service and Magnificent Vestibuled Sleeping Cars through to New York City and Boston, the Nickel Plate Road offers the traveler to those points every comfort and convenience demanded by the exacting American public.—dec. 30.

How Two-Cent Fare Will Affect Business.

Notwithstanding the continual increase in expenditures for improvements demanded by this progressive age, there has not been a perceptible increase in the net revenue collected by railways. On the other hand it has required careful financiering and shrewd business tact to carry on the business successfully, particularly in recent years when depression in trade has affected business circles generally. It will be lamentable, indeed, if the Legislature enacts a law compelling railways to make passenger fares two cents per mile and thereby strangle an industry which gives employment to thousands of citizens and which annually pays into the State funds an enormous amount of money.

A two-cent fare law can not result otherwise. If railway profits are now at a low ebb, a compulsory reduction in revenue will sink them still deeper. Less revenue will necessitate the curtailing of expenses which will naturally affect the list of employes, number of trains and standard of service. Improvements will not go on, and the salary list will be shortened. Nearly every railway city, town and hamlet in the State has one or more railway employes in its population, and one or more families dependent upon the pay car of some railway. Less revenue for the railway means the disbursement of less money through employes. The effect will be felt on all sides; decreased salaries and idle men will lessen the demand for various articles and an era of business stagnation will result.—I. t.

Special Inducements

Are offered by the Nickel Plate Road to students desiring to return home for the Holidays. Inquire of Agents relative to rates and limits.—dec. 29.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances to need, or whose case is represented by some one known to be trustworthy.

One, Two, Three.

Have you ever noted the evolution and progress of a great trunk line, how it begins with one through train each day, then as its business increases it adds one more, and still another? It is an ascending course in numerals—one, two, three. Each figure represents a notch of progress; each indicates the high water mark of success. Three through trains each way daily is a distinguishing mark of success for any railway.

Such has been the success of the famous "Nickel Plate Route." It began with one train; the popularity of this demanded another. And still the people increased their patronage until a third train was imperative. And now across the rich plains of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, from Chicago to Buffalo, aye, to New York and Boston, three swift and elegantly appointed trains pass each way daily over the finely graded roadway of the Nickel Plate Route, each carrying a large contingent of happy travelers. That is the moral of the story. Remember the significance of One, Two, Three.—dec. 21.

When you are planning to spend your winter in a milder climate, do not overlook the advantages offered by California. Low rates are in effect via the Nickel Plate Road, and each of their Peerless Trio of Fast Express Trains makes direct connections at Chicago with all lines to California. Inquire of Agents of the Nickel Plate Road for additional information.—dec. 30.

Cheap Cab Service for Washington Visitors via Pennsylvania Lines.

A complete and efficient cab service similar to that in operation at passenger stations of the Pennsylvania System at Broad Street, Philadelphia, and at Twenty-third Street, New York, has just been established at the Pennsylvania Passenger Station in Washington, D.C. The service is satisfactorily performed at very reasonable rates by brand new rubber-tired coupes, victorias and omnibuses. The vehicles will be found at the cab stand at the B Street entrance to the Washington station, and may be engaged by the trip or by the hour. Visitors to the National Capital will find the new arrangement a very convenient one.

"What do I fear?" is a question worth asking by each man or woman. Perhaps without recognizing it the reader of this paragraph is being influenced in his or her daily life by groundless fears that are ruinous to character. The Cosmopolitan Magazine has taken up this subject and is obtaining the views of a great many prominent people, who they are willing to open their minds frankly. A great many other prominent people have refused The Cosmopolitan's request, being afraid to tell the public what they fear—perhaps even afraid to confess to themselves what they fear. The December issue includes statements from Wm. Dean Howells, Richard Croker, Admiral Oberardi, Chauncey M. Depew, Viola Allen, Mme. Janauschek and Ella Wheeler Wilcox. The second series will, it is promised, be even more interesting.

Julian Ralph who has for some years been in England, writes for the December Cosmopolitan a very clever analysis of what seems to him the English idea of a gentleman; and Mr. John Bridges Walker attempts to consider the American ideals. We are in the formative stage of American manners, and too much stress can scarcely be given to the dangers of introducing those ideas which are least admirable in the character of our English cousins.

Holiday excursion tickets via the Nickel Plate Road are on sale Dec. 23rd, 24th, 26th, 30th and 31st, 1898, Jan. 1st, and 2nd, 1899, and are good returning to and including Jan. 3rd, 1899. With their splendid train service and low rates the Nickel Plate Road adds a pleasing feature to the enjoyment of Holiday travel.—dec. 30.

For Our Children.

December.

When the winds of winter blow,
And the air is thick with snow,
  Drifting over hill and hollow,
Whitening all the naked trees—
Then the bluebird and the jay
And the oriole fly away.
  Where the bobolink and swallow
Flew before them at their ease.

You may look, and look in vain,
For you will not see again
  Any flash of blue or yellow
Flitting door and window by;
They have spread their dainty wings,
All the sunshine-loving things,
  Gone to pipe away their mellow
Tunes beneath a southern sky.

But we are not left alone,
Though the summer birds have flown,
  Though the honey bees have vanished,
And the katydids are dead;
Still a cheery, singing note
From a dear, melodious throat
  Tells that winter has not banished
"Little bird with bosom red."

Pipe away, you hearty bird!
Sweeter song I never heard,
  For it seems to say, remember
God, our Father, sits above;
Though the world is full of wrong,
Though the winter days are long,
  He can fill the bleak December
With the sunshine of his love.

The Story of Israel. No. 84.

MARCHING TO CANAAN. NUM. X. 11-36; XI. 1-15

Shall we imagine we are at Sinai this morning, looking down upon the camp of the Israelites? See! the cloudy pillar is being "lifted up from the tabernacle." That is the signal to move. What a stir there is! Trumpets blowing and each tribe falling into line. One month and nineteen days of the second year have gone by since they ate the Passover on that awful night when the first-born of the Egyptians were slain. They were 45 days in reaching Sinai, on the fiftieth day, the Lord descended upon it in fire, and answered Moses by a voice. Ex. xix. 1-20.

They have been in camp a little more than a year, and they are glad to take up the line of march, even though it be in soldiers' garb, to battle for their promised home. It is now far now to Canaan. They can reach Kadesh in eleven days of actual marching. Deut. i. 2. But there are two Sabbaths to be kept, for this is Friday. So they cannot get there short of two weeks. They are leaving the valley of Er Rahah by way of the Wady esh Sheik. They will not move far this first day, for it is the day of preparation for the Sabbath, and besides, they are unused to travel, and would not be able to stand a forced march. They halt, when outside the mountains of Horeb, and when almost due north of Mount Sinai,—the highest peak.

But we must stop here to think, what a year of schooling this has been at the awful Mount! What wonderful experiences, what grand revelations have come in its swiftly passing hours! Laws and influences have been set to work, that will never have an end. These Israelites may rebel; they may forget God; they may worship idols; yet, wherever they may go, these laws and influences will follow and reclaim them, and will mould them into a righteous, liberty-loving, God-fearing nation, that is destined to take precedence of all other nations. It will take a long time but God's precious Word will accomplish the work at last.

But while we are talking about the schooling that the grown people have been having in this wilderness college, we must not forget the children. We think some of the little Israelite boys and girls have learned lessons here that will never fade from memory. They never have had such outings in Egypt as they had here. No such great crowds gathered there for the worship of God. There were no sights of fire, no voices from heaven, no tabernacle, no sacrifices. It must have impressed their tender hearts with feelings of wonder, of reverence and of awe. But will they be true to God through all the trials that are coming? We must wait and see. Some of them at least will live to go into the land of Canaan, and will take the knowledge of God with them.

Is there anything in this camp to make you think of our own people? "Yes," you say, "our people protect the Holy Bible and its ministers, just as the armies of the Israelites protected the tabernacle, the priests, and the holy things. Our battleships and our soldiers, encompass it were around the missionaries who carry the gospel to far-off lands. The nation's army goes with the church and helps her in many ways to prepare for Christ's coming and reign, just as the Israelite army went with the church and prepared the way for the reign of their kings. Do you remember the order in which the tribes of Israel marched? "The ark of the covenant of the Lord went before them * * * to search out a resting place for them." So Moses, Aaron and the priests must have taken the lead. Then Judah with his lion banner and his two tribes. Following Judah are the Gershonites and Merarites with the wagons that bear the boards and staves of the tabernacle. Would you like to see the wagons? They were not like ours, but they must have been strong and durable.

Reuben came next with his two tribes. The standard, with the ox or bull upon it, floated over them. Jacob said Reuben was "the beginning of his strength," and the ox is the symbol of strength. The Kohathites, with the sanctuary borne on their shoulders, come after Reuben. Then Ephraim and his two tribes, with the banner of the man, and last of all, Dan and his two tribes, with the eagle standard. We have enjoyed looking at the imposing scene, after having studied so much about it in our former lessons.

But we said the army had halted, so it has, but it will not form a regular encampment here, because it is to stay such a little while. Do you know the name of the place? Moses called it Taberah, and Taberah means burning, some of the people are getting frightened at thought of the rough and tiresome road that is ahead of them, and of the fierce battles that must be fought at the journey's end. "It will be hard," they think, "to drive the sheep, the goats and the cattle over such a road, and to get the little children along." They begin to fret and worry. They do not think now God will go before them and help them. They have been poor learners in his school. There is no faith in their hearts. Never fret, dear children, at the hardness of your lot, for you too are marching to Canaan. It will displease the Lord if you do. He was displeased with the Israelites. He sent a fire that burned many of them up. It broke out in the farthest part of the camp, perhaps among the "mixed multitude," that had followed the Israelites out of Egypt.

Then the people cried to Moses, and Moses prayed to the Lord and the Lord forgave them, and the fire was quenched. It was on this first days' march that Moses asked Hobab, his brother-in-law, to go with them to the promised land. He refused at first, but some think that he finally yielded and went. He knew the way. It says in Judges i. 16 that "the children of Jethro went up from the city of palm-trees with the children of Judah, into the wilderness of Judah, which lieth in the south of Arad; and they went and dwelt among the people."

You think that burning was an awful punishment to send upon the Israelites? It was, but you must remember, that they form an army; and each soldier has promised, that "All the Lord hath said will I do, and be obedient." They are in the enemy's land, and are to keep the covenant that they have made. If they do not they are traitors, and under all governments, DEATH is the punishment meted out to the traitorous soldier. If such soldiers were spared, the whole army might be lost to rebel, and the holy cause of freedom and righteousness would be lost.

It is the first day of the week and the Israelites start out again, crossing a valley called Derbet er Ramleh, and stop near a pass that will take them into another valley beyond. They are at the edge of little Paran now. No name is given here, but Moses in Deut. ix 22 seems to call it Massah, or "temptation," as he did Rephedine where the people chided him because there was no water to drink. The text says "And at Taberah and at Massah, and at Kibroth,—hattaavah, ye provoked the Lord to wrath." They must have kept on murmuring in spite of the lesson at Taberah. Their next stopping place is Kibroth—hattaavah. Num. xi. 34. But we can talk no more tonight; it is too late.

AUNTIE WISE.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory, and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

ON TRIAL

Three Months For 25 Cents.

WILL YOU TRY IT?

Merit Always Wins.

The hard times of the past three or four years have been very destructive to all industrial affairs, and the railways have had an unusual amount of difficulty in making both ends meet. Roads that have, during this trying period, earned dividends while at the same time affording high class transportation facilities to their patrons, have, indeed, been fortunate. And such an event speaks well for the management of the roads.

The record of the Nickel Plate road during the recent period of industrial depression has indeed been remarkable, and it speaks most eloquently of the conservative judgment of the managers. For this road has made great and steady progress in the material improvement of its roadway and appliances, and in perfecting its equipment. The interests of the public have been in no wise neglected; in fact, the success of this road has tended to the benefit of the public as much, if not more, than to the stockholders. The condition of the road today shows this. Great and valuable improvements of a permanent character have been made—in the shape of the roadway, bridges and other necessities, and procuring new and improved safety appliances; new rolling stock has been added, elegant Wagner sleeping cars put on, new and powerful engines have been placed in service, and every thing has been done to raise the standard of the road, to perfect its service, and to give it a leading place among the best roads in the country. The result has been obvious. The people have observed the progressive spirit of this road, have given it a liberal patronage, have enjoyed its excellent facilities, and that tells the whole story of a highly successful enterprise.

Among the most noteworthy improvements effected by the Nickel Plate route is the introduction of a first-class dining car service which has won the approval of the best class of patrons. Then the coaches have been illuminated by the brilliant Pintsch gas, heated steam, and placed in the care of a colored porter. So the passengers have had the best that money can afford, at the lowest rates.

The through train service of the Nickel Plate, running in connection with the West Shore and Fitchburg railroads—over the great Hoosac Tunnel Route, between New York, Boston and Chicago, ranks with the best in the country, and has become deservedly popular. Elegant new coaches, and palatial Wagner buffet sleeping cars run through without change; the service is unexcelled, the time fast, the scenery most fascinating.

Located along the south shore of Lake Erie are many substantial and attractive summer resorts that are yearly growing in popularity, and this class of travel promises a continually increasing source of revenue to the Nickel Plate road.—Dec. 21.

The Gospel Recovered. No. 14.

DRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That all may be [illegible] that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

In the preceding article (No. 13) in RESTITUTION, September, I mentioned the termination of Dr. Thomas' "Herald of the Kingdom," in 1861 (11 volumes), and the issue, in same year of Eureka, Vol. I. Certain drawbacks which the gospel met with chiefly from divisions among its own friends were pointed out. I also referred to certain facts showing the partiality of Dr. Thomas for speculative questions. The discussion of such questions by believers, and the Doctor's opinions adopted by many, became a fruitful source of dis-union. Hence no extensive literature was called into existence both in periodical and book form. It was also stated that Dr. Thomas was not directly responsible for this state of matters although he afterwards sided with those who adopted his opinions, by which no doubt discussion was perpetuated.

It seems fitting here to notice a very expressive term which Dr. Thomas applied to himself—namely "Theological Gladiator." In enclosure of the previous article it was stated—"In his Confession and Adjuration (1847) speaking of the works of A. Campbell, and W. Scott, he says, 'We required a taste for theological gladiatorship, for which we have not been altogether unblamed.'" Life p. 206. This term "gladiator," which is borrowed from the contendings in the Roman amphitheatre, and the Grecian Olympic games, indicates what is, in a very important respect, a noble characteristic. The Apostle Paul refers to this quality when he says "Fight the good fight of faith." This was the Apostle's own mission, not, however, in defence of "Theology," but for something more solid and certain, namely "the faith." Again he says, "I have fought a good fight.....I have kept the faith." The Apostle also gave a warning which has an important lesson for such as contend for anything short of real gospel truth. "Of these things put them in remembrance charging them that they strive not about words to no profit," etc. It was but natural that Dr. Thomas' example as a "theological gladiator" should have been both admired and copied by a certain class of minds; a course which it was easy to pursue with little regard to the Apostle's example and warning. With all the plausible appearance of cultivating growth in little knowledge, the ball need been set rolling, and it is sad to see that the rolling was allowed to go on during subsequent years without let or hindrance. It goes without saying that with a certain class of believers this "theological gladiatorship" is on behalf of secondary questions, still holds its old place. Apart from Paul's warning a little knowledge of human nature might teach any one of even ordinary experience, that "gladiatorship," unless employed in a good cause, is a dangerous practice.

A glimpse of the Doctor's "gladiatorship," at no early period, may be obtained from the intimate association of the friends of Sir and A. Campbell formed respectively regarding truth. In a letter written by the Doctor to Mr. James Wallis, dated Oct. 20, 1858, he says, "Some think my writings all chaff and A. Campbell's all wheat, and vice versa. Now I don't think our friends are right on either side. The truth lies in the medium. I think there is chaff and wheat in the writings of all infallible men. Who bears the palm of having most chaff must be left for the Judge of all to determine at his coming."

The evil of "gladiatorship" in the advocacy of secondary questions, whether Bible truths or otherwise, is twofold. There is the effect produced on the disciples themselves both as individuals and as communities in church fellowship. Heart burnings, bitter feelings, and actual estrangement, are the results liable to be entailed, which must be far from conducive to spiritual growth. Then the want of co-operation, thus resulting, causes the promotion of the gospel itself to suffer in a corresponding degree.

Again there is an amount of reproach endured from outsiders being needlessly prejudiced against the gospel arising from its admixture with secondary matters. Such questions have "given occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme." In many cases this has taken the form of sectarian professors speaking evil of the truth and its advocates. Many instances of such could easily be given. For example, when "Elpis Israel" was published, many were offended because it contained matters beyond the scope of the lectures delivered in Britain, during 1848.

The requisition to print was expressly for the publication of those lectures, and influential subscribers in the principal towns felt disappointed. One at least went so far as to commit the book to the flames.

The "Quarterly Journal of Prophecy," edited by the late Dr. Horatius Bonar, had notices of the work, which were chiefly directed against alleged errors; while the gospel of the kingdom was quietly ignored. A first brief notice has the following:—"That there is much truth in this volume forcibly put forth, we do not deny; but there are so many serious counteractions.—both in the errors which it contains and the tone in which it is written, that we cannot but disapprove and discommend it. The author's contempt for other men, other churches, other sects, is quite unbounded. To differ from Dr. Thomas is to be a fool if not worse." Vol. II. 1850 p. 232. At page 379 is a longer notice extending to upwards of a page. The editor says, "What we have been accustomed to call a soul is nothing but refined galvinism, or electricity." Then he quotes the Doctor's words from p. 30. "These three together, the oxygen, nitrogen, and electricity, constitute 'the breath' and 'spirit' of the lives of all God's living souls." Then the editor says, "Still further he holds that it was in the image of angels and not of God that man was made * * * makes use of most revolting language in reference to the Son of God. He seems to disbelieve entirely the existence of Satan."

The leader of the "Reformation" in England was not slow to take advantage of the speculative points made so prominent in Dr. Thomas' writings. In the organ of the party in England, the "British Millennial Harbinger," for October, 1864, an article of upwards of six columns is devoted to "Thomasism." A brief extract is here given. "It is announced that 'the head quarters of the testimony of Antipas in America are on Sundays at Cooper's Institute, New York City, where the Word is expounded by the author of 'Elpis Israel,' where is most faithfully preached the glad tidings that the soul is not immortal—that there is no devil—that all infants dying in infancy perish—that Christ will shortly appear to raise the saints, establish them in Jerusalem, and arm them with sword and gunpowder to execute vengeance upon the nations, or something of this sort, which is the hope of Israel.' One of the recent discoveries for which the church is indebted to Antipas is that the saints will not be raised with spiritual bodies. We used to believe Paul who wrote, 'It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body.' But not so, says Antipas. He must have it raised a natural body, and subsequently when the natural body has done its work, the spiritual body shall be given."

A remark which occurs here, is that even supposing Dr. Thomas' opinions and its obedience on such points could be established, is not the advocacy of "the gospel of the kingdom pure and simple" a sufficient ground of reproach from the sectarian religious world, without adding to this so many other points, some of which are open to question even by true believers of the gospel? These appear to me to be examples of "theological gladiatorship" which a due regard to the warning of the Apostle Paul, already quoted, would have avoided. "Calvinism" and "electricity," may or may not explain human nature, but a close adherence to the Scriptures on that subject, can dispense with both. And, singular to say, in "Elpis Israel" itself the Scriptures alone find fitting advocacy. At p. 177 the author says, "O that men could be induced now to devote themselves to the study of the Scriptures without regard to articles, creeds, confessions, and traditions! These things are mere rubbish; monuments of the presumption and folly of former generations indoctrinated with the wisdom from beneath. If a Berean spirit could be infused into them; if they could be persuaded to 'search the Scriptures daily' for the truth as for hid treasure; they would soon leave their spiritual guides alone in all their glory of mysticism and patristic lore; and rejoice in the liberty of that truth which can alone make men free indeed."

A note here in closing this article. Many who had received enlightenment from the teaching of Dr. Thomas, both from his lectures and from reading "Elpis Israel," had previously left their spiritual guides, if ever they had such; such persons were not likely to feel disposed to accept Dr. Thomas in a similar capacity. No allowance, however, was made for such a contingency as this. Differences of opinion on certain points inevitably arose, and a corresponding lack of forbearance on the part of many who had adopted the Doctor's opinions on secondary questions.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVII. Year PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DECEMBER 28, 1898. NUMBER 48.

Born of the Spirit.

"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 5.

Teacher. Have you not heard people claim that they are at the present time already born of the Spirit?

Arloa. Yes, quite frequently.

Teacher. What do you think about it?

Arloa. I think they make a mistake.

Teacher. What reason have you for thinking so?

Arloa. Because the birth takes place under the sounding of the seventh trumpet, which as yet has not sounded, but is about to sound its dead awakening blast.

Teacher. Please quote Scripture proof.

Arloa. See Rev. xii. 4, 5. "The dragon stood before the woman (the formal church) which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as SOON AS IT IS BORN. And she brought forth a man child who was to RULE ALL NATIONS with a rod of iron: and her child WAS CAUGHT UP unto God, and to his throne."

"As soon as it is born," (raised from the dead) the dragon seeks to devour it, but is immediately "caught up."

Compare this language with 1 Thes. iv. 16, 17: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the TRUMP of God: (the seventh trumpet) and the dead in Christ shall rise first: (man child born) then we which are alive and remain, shall be CAUGHT UP together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord," BECAUSE BORN OF THE SPIRIT.

Teacher. Have we further Scripture to show that the man child born under the seventh trump, are the first fruits raised from the dead?

Carrie. Yes, while Arloa quoted, "who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron," my mind was taken to Rev. ii. 26, 27: "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. And he shall RULE THEM WITH A ROD OF IRON." Rev. i. 5, 6, shows that the man child who is to "rule all nations with a rod of iron," are those who have been "WASHED" (born of water) in the blood of the Lamb "Unto him that loved us, and WASHED us from our sins (baptism for the remission of sins) in his own blood, and made us kings and priests unto our God and his Father."

Again, immediately following the account of the birth of the man child, in Rev. xiv. 4, we read: "These were redeemed from among men, being the FIRST FRUITS unto God and to the Lamb."

Jesus is the first fruit, or FIRST BORN of the Spirit, and the above are the first fruits, or the ecclesia of the first born. These are the firstfruits, or the first born from the dead, after the power of an ENDLESS life.

Teacher. Should a person ask you how he might be born of the Spirit, or be a portion of the man child, so soon to be born, what would you tell him?

Lucy. I should tell him he must enter covenant with God, and ratify and seal that covenant by circumcision.

Teacher. What kind of a covenant?

Lucy. The covenant referred to in Eph. ii. 11, 12: "Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh,' (uncircumcised Gentiles) who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were WITHOUT CHRIST being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the COVENANTS OF PROMISE, having no hope, and without God in the world."

These "covenants of promise," relate specifically to the restoration of "the commonwealth of Israel, as the disciples asked Jesus, just before his ascension, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Paul said, "For the hope of the promise made of God unto the Father I am bound with this chain."

Teacher. To what fathers were the promises made?

Lucy. Abraham. Isaac and Jacob. God made a covenant with Abraham, and confirmed the same unto Isaac and Jacob. Paul in Gal. iii. calls it the "Gospel preached before unto Abraham."

Teacher. Lucy said if we wish to be born of the Spirit, we must not only enter into the covenant, but seal it by circumcision. Now, George, how about that?

George. She is right.

Teacher. What circumcision is that?

George. The circumcision of Christ.

Teacher. What does the Bible say about that?

George. Col. ii. 11, 12: "In whom also YE ARE CIRCUMCISED with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ: BURIED WITH HIM IN BAPTISM, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

Teacher. What does the circumcision do for us?

George. It puts "off the body of the sins of the flesh."

Teacher. Suppose we refuse to be thus circumcised? What is our condition?

George. We are unclean, uncircumcised Gentiles. "Gentiles in the flesh," the "sins of the flesh," are still upon us.

Teacher. When the Jews were convicted of sin at Pentecost, what were they told to do?

George. "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins." In other words, receive the "circumcision of Christ," by which means "the body of the sins of the flesh," are "put off." And Jesus in John iii. 5, distinctly says, we cannot "enter into the kingdom," unless we are "born of water."

Teacher. I want to ask Lud, when do men seal the covenants they make with each other?

Lud. They first make a covenant with each other, and agree as to its terms, and then an instrument or paper is drawn up, containing the covenant and its terms and to this they attach signatures and seal.

Teacher. God made a covenant with Abraham, when was the seal attached?

Lud. After Abraham accepted the covenant.

Teacher. What was the seal?

Lud. "The sign of circumcision, a SEAL of the righteousness of the faith." Rom. iv. 11.

Teacher. Does God offer to make a covenant with us?

Lud. He does.

Teacher. What covenant?

Lud. The same that he made with Abraham.

Teacher. When does the covenant take effect?

Lud. When we enter into it, and affix the seal.

Teacher. What is the seal?

Lud. "The circumcision of Christ, buried with him in baptism." Col. ii. 11, 12.

Teacher. Of what value is a covenant without seal?

Lud. It is of no effect.

Teacher. I want to ask Albert, Did you ever know of any one professing to have made this Abrahamic covenant with God, and refuse to affix the seal?

Albert. I have.

Teacher. What reason did they give for their refusal?

Albert. They say they were baptized before they knew anything about the Abrahamic covenant, when they thought the covenant insured their supposed immortal soul a home in a sky-kingdom.

Teacher. Was such a thing ever known as sealing a covenant, before the covenant was even thought of?

Albert. Of course not, yet religiously men commit just that same foolishness.

Teacher. What will be the result if they persist in such folly?

Albert. When the time comes to receive the things covenanted, they will find themselves out in the cold, no valid covenant existing between them and God.

Teacher. I will ask Carrie, Is the acceptance of the terms of the covenant, a preliminary step to the birth of the Spirit?

Carrie. Yes. The birth of the Spirit is one of the blessings contained in the covenant.

Teacher. What is the birth of the Spirit?

Carrie. It is a change from the flesh and blood nature, to that of the Spirit, a nature that is proof against death.

Teacher. Why is the change necessary?

Carrie. Paul says: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." 1 Cor. xv. 50. Mortality cannot inherit immortality.

Teacher. In view of this, what do you think of Christ's words in John iii. 5: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?"

Carrie. It is perfectly reasonable and harmonizes with the nature of things. The steps are:

1. Learn the covenant.
2. Agree to it.
3. Seal it by the "circumcision of Christ," "born of water."
4. Strictly live up to the agreement or the terms of the covenant.
5. Born of the spirit. "It is sown a natural body: it is raised a natural body." 1 Cor. xv. 44.

Teacher. What is the condition of those outside of the bonds of the covenant?

Carrie. "Ye were without Christ being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Eph. ii. 12 Therefore let us be content enough to allow human wisdom to set aside the wisdom which is from above. Jesus meant what he said when he said: "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

STATEMENTS have been sent to a number of our subscribers who are in arrears. We must insist on having a prompt response to this call, and hope all will pay attention and answer. If errors have been made we want by all means to hear from you, and we will gladly correct them. If you owe, then we kindly ask you to please send us a remittance without delay. We ask this for the very simple reason that we need it. Do not think because you are only one and your amount small, that you can take time, and it will make but little difference. If each one does so then it will make a very great difference, but if each one will send a small sum the aggregate will be the means of making our work very much lighter indeed. Please give this your earnest heed.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, DEC. 28, 1898.

OUR paper is late on account of sickness in the family of the Editor, who is himself at this time, quite ill. This number completes the year 1898. May the New Year bring new blessings to all our subscribers and friends, and may the time soon come when we can say, "I am no more sick."

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

"The Cretans are at last free from the thralldom of Turkish misrule. The Ottoman troops were ordered away, and in one or two cases had to be forced on board the transports. The administration of the island has been taken out of Turkish hands. Prince George of Greece is to be the Governor General."

"It is difficult to follow the course of events in the far east. They are a veritable Chinese puzzle. But it seems clear that China is gradually coming into the clutches of the Russian octopus. News from Odessa shows that the Russian troops in China are to be vastly increased in the Spring. The Russian government has given orders for the building of twenty-three torpedo-boat destroyers, five of which are for Port Arthur and Vladivostock. But England is not inactive. One thousand Chinese soldiers are to be enrolled and stationed at Wei-hai-Wei. They are to be drilled by British officers as was done with the Egyptian army."

"The first meeting of the Anti-Anarchist Conference has been held in Rome for the purpose of arriving at a common understanding with respect to the action to be adopted against Anarchists.

Owing to the presence of a French expedition at Fashoda Great Britain and France were on the verge of war. Britain declined to discuss the matter until the expedition was withdrawn. Fashoda in itself was not worth fighting for, but the Secretary of the Colonies in a speech at Manchester, stated that the occupation of Fashoda was the climax of a series of acts which Britain was obliged to consider unfriendly. He pointed out that unfriendly acts had been done by France in Egypt, Newfoundland, West Africa, Madagascar, Siam, Tunis, Abyssinia, China and South Africa.

"The preparations of the British Government were enormous, and they still continue, although Lord Salisbury was able to announce at the banquet of the Lord Mayor of London in honor of Sirdni of the Egyptian Army, that the French Government had decided to withdraw the Expedition from Fashoda. But the feeling of statesmen and the press throughout the country is that the passing away of the war-cloud is only a momentary respite.

One clear result of the Soudan Campaign and the Fashoda incident is that Britain is more firmly than ever rooted in Egypt. The conservative policy has all the time tended in that direction, but The Speaker, a liberal organ now says, "No one can take note of the signs of the times without feeling that on all sides and among all parties, men have been quietly but resolutely making up their minds that the time has arrived when the world must be told plainly that we are in Egypt to stay, and that we shall never, while our strength and nation lasts, allow ourselves to be ousted by any rival Power from the Nile Valley."

The Last Hours of 1898.

Brethren of the one faith and hope of the Gospel,—the last hours of the year 1898 are but a little way in the future. All its blessings and privileges, and opportunities will soon be things of the past. We will never travel the same road again. If we have not appreciated privileges accorded to us as the Household of Faith, or as individual adopted sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty, it is an irretrievable loss. If we did not embrace the opportunities that offered themselves during the year, for testifying of the grace of God, or of witnessing for the truth as it is in Jesus, by showing others what a glorious and sustaining hope we have, and inviting them to come and share the glories of God's kingdom so freely offered, they are eternally lost; nothing we can do to life's latest hour can make amends for this remissness. If permitted to live on in another year we shall only be able at the best to render to God what is due to him each day. This fact should make closer to us that a second account stands against us, unless we have mended our ways and sought pardon, through the mediation of our great High Priest, Jesus, at the right hand of the Father.

These are solemn considerations, indeed; and trust all will realize that if we are still indolent, still careless, still lukewarm, still indifferent to the interests of him who called us,—this is positive evidence that the past is not repented of, for, as the old hymn truly explains:—

> "Repentance is to leave
> The sin we loved before,
> And show that we in earnest grieve
> By doing so no more."

Yes; it is a serious time to be living on the border of the old year and close to that of the new. It is doubly serious to be living now, because we are also living very close to the time when two dispensations meet, and one of them will for ever disappear. One, believed in the Lord, he intended of us to take an active story of the spirit and stock on hand, as the closing hours of the year approach.

We deem it to be an impossible thing that we now stand before God as we did twelve months ago. We must have all risen higher and higher in the divine life, or have sunken lower. We must be more Christ-like, or more unlike him;—more prayerful or less so;—more watchful or less so;—the flesh is more subject to the Spirit or less so; we have more zeal for God and his truth or less. There is no such thing as standing still; we have to walk with God,—we have to grow in favor; and, once more another significant figure, which shows what exactness the hope of the calling set before us is capable of inspiring in one whose eye is fixed on the mark of the prize, we are to run with patience the race set before us.

God's loving foresight is everywhere manifested in his Word, in behalf of that portion of this mortal race which now listen to his gracious overtures, and complied with their conditions. Infinite stores of spiritual food are stored up for them, and freely offered; but like all meat for the physical frame it must be eaten, digested, and assimilated or there is no growth in it for us.

The variety of the divine bill of fare is wonderful to contemplate. There is something laid up to suit every person, and every condition of every person in Christ Jesus, and every circumstance such objects of his care can be placed in. And not only is it food in the common meaning of that term. It is medicine as well as food,—it cures all moral ailments as well as promotes the growth of the new man.

We are wondering if our readers have become very familiar with the Holy Father's great storehouse? Do they know on what shelf to look for any particular food or medicine they may need? Do they know how to feed themselves, or do they need some one else to feed them? The proper answer to the questions will go along way toward showing what their present status is.

The last words with you this year, brethren and sisters, are these:—Never forget that you have been taken out of the world, and now belong to a divine community, with divine pursuits, divine mind and aims. Remember too that the book you have taken as the rule of your faith and practice, says that "Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savor;" and be careful to harbor no dead flies. "As any putrefaction spoils perfume, so a foolish or sinful act, will ruin one's character." Let each of those who have the name of the Anointed be a reflector of the light of divine truth, as with open face they behold the glory of the Lord and reflect the same as mirrors. May you all open your hearts to his holy influence, and by degrees be changed into his image from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord, and then in due time that glorious and physical change for which you wait, and which will result from the moral and spiritual change now in progress, —will come to pass. Your bodies of humiliation will be transformed and made like the body of his glory by his divine energy, and then you will shine forth as the Son in the kingdom of our Father and his Father, of our God and his God.

Glorious consummation. May the glad day soon come, and may readers and writer, by diligence to make our election sure, and by contemplating God's faithfulness and goodness, increase our faith, so that we may see the King in his beauty and be forever with him.

The New Covenant—What Is It?

Thinking some might want to hear from me again on this important question, I now write. The question is whether, or not, the Jer. xxxi. 31, new covenant has been make, or is a future event? The readers of THE RESTITUTION will all know who I refer to, when I use the letter J., in this article. Bro. J. in RESTITUTION of Oct. 19, 1898 writes his reply to me. In my article I claimed the Jer. xxxi. 31, covenant was the covenant of Paul in Heb. viii. and ix. Also 2 Cor. iii. 6. was the new covenant spoken of in Jer. xxxi.

I can hardly understand Bro. J., when he starts out he says, "This is very encouraging indeed, and we take pen in hand earnestly praying to be illumined by the spirit, that we may present the truth as it is in Jesus. So that we may ere long rejoice together in the bonds of the same covenant," then in almost the same breath, he says:

1. We believe with the writer of the article that the new covenant is NOW in force.

2. Like him we show that we believe it to be in force when we commemorate the Lord's death, and endeavor, by Scripture citations so far to the new covenant now in force, except Jer xxxi. 31. Then certainly we must be joining in the same new covenant." Unless Bro. J. is rejoicing in a covenant not yet made. I understand Paul in Heb. viii. 13; ix. 4; 2 Cor. iii. 14, to refer to the "Sinai-bond woman covenant." Gal. iv. 24-25. And the new covenant which Christ ratified with his blood, Matt. xxvi. 28, takes the place of the "old."

Now I want to ask Bro. J. a question. Was, or is the Abrahamic, or free women of Gal. iv., covenant, the one NOW in force, which Christ ratified with his blood, called the new covenant? Bro. J. seems to teach that it is, and that it is not. In paragraph 27, he says. This covenant was confirmed to ABRAHAM typically with the blood of beasts, which pointed to the Blood of the LAMB of God; but it did not bring the covenant into force, it "required a better sacrifice—the spotless blood of one of our own race." Evidently he refers here to the new covenant Christ in Matt. xxxvi. 28, and Paul in Heb. viii. ix., speaks of which Bro. J. has acknowledged was now in force. Yes, for he says in par. 28, his blood being accepted as the ratification of that instrument, it WAS brought in full force, power was imparted to it (Abrahamic covenant,) to give, not only life after death, but everlasting life, teaching positively that the Abrahamic covenant was ratified with the blood of Christ, and is now in full force, and the new covenant of Matt. xxvi. 28 which I freely admit, and teach. Now we will quote Bro. J. again, and see if he does not connect the Abrahamic covenant with the Jer. xxxi. 31. covenant. We will commence at par. 8. Zacharias filled with holy spirit, in expounding this matter to us in Luke i. 67, says: "The Lord God of Israel has raised up a horn of salvation.....To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant." What holy covenant? Was it the covenant he promised to make with the house of Israel and the house of Judah through Jer. xxxi. 31-34? Our correspondent wants the truth, and we are glad. The spirit's answer to the question, what holy covenant Zacharias spoke of, is found in next verse, viz.. "The oath which he sware to our FATHER ABRAHAM." The spirit's word for it, that is the mercy promised (v. 72); that is the HOLY COVENANT he is to remember, and does remember. That being settled beyond doubt, verse 74 happily shows the glorious final result of remembering his HOLY "COVENANT to ABRAHAM;" Listen, "[we] is to be delivered out of the hand of their enemies, and they will serve God without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of their life." Readers, do not forget that all this is to obtain under the Holy COVENANT to ABRAHAM, and sworn to by God: and then consider that no such results have been achieved by Christ's teachings.

(a). They have not been delivered out of the hands of their enemies by Christ's teachings.

(b). They do not serve him in holiness and righteousness all the days of their life.

(c). They were delivered unto the hands of their enemies.

(d). They do wickedly all the days of their life. Showing conclusively that the new covenant TO BE made with the house of Judah and Is. [sic] promised in Jer. xxx. 31 [sic] the one under which they shall all know the Lord as there described. I have quoted paragraph 8 and 9, here of Bro. J's. reply. Reader, you can easily see that Bro. J. has joined the Abrahamic covenant, and makes it the same new covenant Christ ratified with his blood, and is now in force, also, he makes the Abrahamic covenant the Jer. xxxi. 31 covenant, and is not made yet. Bro. J, how is that? Seems you have the covenants mixed up. Certainly, I believe in Israel's restoration, and the apostles will sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel, but if Mr. Jew doesn't serve the Lord NOW in holiness, it's his own fault, as the commission in Matt. xxviii. 19; Mark xvi. 15, 16, Applies to Jew as well as Gentiles. Christ breaking down the middle wall of partition, Eph. ii. 14. "All one in Christ Jesus." The Jews must be grafted in the true olive stock the same as Gentiles. Rom. xi.; Gal. iii. 26-29, is the way. There is neither Jew nor Greek, they are all one in Christ Jesus. The Jews since the cross, are Israel no more according to the flesh. To sum it all up, if as Bro. J. says, the Abrahamic covenant is the Christ ratified covenant of Matt. xxvi. 28, and is the Jer. xxxi. 31. covenant, I am right after all this shrinking. Yes, and Paul was right when in Heb. viii. 8, he quoted almost verbatim the Jer. xxxi. 31 covenant, now I trust my Bro. J. will not get offended at my audacity. Truth is what we want, and this has been written with much respect for our brother.

M. L. ADAMS.

REMARKS ON THE ABOVE.

When we were asked to explain something in reference to the covenants we did so as respectfully and plainly as we could; and the correspondent owed it to himself, to our readers, to us and to God, to study carefully what we said, before writing; again, because paragraphs 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 26, would have explained most of the difficulties, and if these explanations did not suit him we did not wish to force them upon him or others. If the subject matter of these paragraphs are not in harmony with revealed truth they should have been refuted, not ignored, and necessitating their repetition. As the matter stands we do not feel under obligation to write more, but will do so, with the hope that it may help others. To our mind, the question, "If the teachings of Christ, and confirmed by the apostles was not the new covenant what is?" is one of awful importance! And the thought that two of those who profess to SPEAK FOR GOD should differ as to what it is, makes us tremble! One says it is one thing, and the other says it is something else, proving that one or the other of them is ignorant of the alphabet, or first principles of the gospel. The spirit in Eph. ii. 11, 12, teaches that ignorance of, or being strangers to the covenants of promise, constitutes people aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, having no hope, and without God in the world; and as the fearful doom for speaking lies in the name of the Lord comes over us, we assure our readers we do not feel like "skirmishing" but would to God that some one better able to present God's truth in the premises, had to do it; and, only the deep down conviction that we have the correct outline of God's revealed purpose encourages us to try once more, to make it clear to others.

We remark, in the first place, that it is useless to expect to arrive at the truth of this great subject from an isolated text here and there. It is necessary to begin at the beginning, and mark the unfoldings of God's redemptive scheme step by step. If we begin in the middle we end nowhere. When man by disobedience incurred the penalty of the law,—death, that would seem to be the utter end of him, if left to himself. But having a desire for the work of his hands, God revealed his purpose to redeem from death on the principles of faith and obedience, all who develop those characteristics. As an object for faith to take hold of, a promise was made of a Redeemer, in the person of the woman's seed which, as to speak contained the germ of all other promises. We hold that faith in the promised One, would justify the guilty pair, and a life of obedience would enable them to maintain that justified standing and secure redemption from death.

The next development of the redemptive scheme took place when God selected Abraham to be the founder of the particular race of mankind through whom the promised seed would come, see Gen. xii. He was told to leave his country and kindred and go to a land Gen God would show him,—"and," says the Lord, "I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing,—and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee,—and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." All the families of the earth SHALL be BLESSED IN ABRAHAM. This was God's covenant to Abraham, that embraced the whole range of blessings, but did not give the details. It was God's revealed purpose that there should be no redemption except through Abraham and his seed. "Salvation is of the Jews."

On arriving at the land of Canaan whither God had directed him, the Lord appeared to him again, and said, "Unto thy SEED will I give this land, and there builded he an altar unto the Lord, who appeared unto him. Happily Paul in Gal. iii. 16 explains who this seed is, which is to have the land. It is not seeds, a plurality of Abraham's descendants, but seed, a single person, and tells us also who that one person is,—viz. CHRIST. Turn at once to Gal. iii. 16 reader, if you care to verify this, before you go further. In Gen xvi. 11, 15 God repeats the promise of the Lord, but mentions both seed and his seed, this time, and also tells size how long this grant of [illegible] EVER.

In addition to this, in the next verse, the Lord makes a condition in his respecting his other children [illegible] the one seed Paul speaks of, and [illegible] shall be innumerable. Then he is told to walk through the land in the length of it and the breadth of it to see what he was getting for his ever lasting inheritance,—"for," says the Lord, "I will give it unto THEE," Abraham.

Again in Gen. xv. 1 God says to him "fear not, Abram, for I am thy shield, and THY EXCEEDING GREAT REWARD. At verse 5, the Lord is said to have brought him forth and told [illegible] to go out to try to count the stars, and if he was able to count them, so should his seed be. And Per 6th verse adds: And he believed in the Lord, and he, [the Lord] counted it to him, [Abram] for righteousness.

At the 7th verse the Lord says to Abram, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land to inherit it." And to this Abram said, "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it,"—and he was then told to take a heifer of three years old, and a she goat, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle dove, and a young pigeon, and he took all these and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another, but the birds divided he not; and when the fowls came down upon the carcasses Abraham drove them away. And when the sun was going down a deep sleep fell upon Abraham, and lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him." Not to quote more we refer the reader to the chapter, and merely say, that he was told that his seed should be slaves in Egypt 400 years, and he himself should go to his fathers and be buried in a good old age; and when the sun went down a smoking furnace and a lamp of fire passed between those pieces. And the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abraham, saying, unto THY SEED (singular) have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river Euphrates."

In Gen. xvii., when Abraham was 99 years old the Lord appeared to him and told him to walk before him and be perfect, and he would multiply him exceedingly, and establish his covenant with him and his seed after him in their generations for an

and I will give unto thee and thy seed after thee, the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession, and I will be their God." This is proof beyond question that every thing pointing to Abraham's seed, the Christ, and those in Christ by faith, and the multitudinous or natural seed and all the families of the earth.—every blessing comes from God through the several Abrahamic covenants, consolidated into one covenant, but referred to by Paul in Eph. ii., in their individual or separate aspects as covenants of promise.

In addition to all this God promised Abraham in Gen. xvii. 19 that he would also establish his covenant with his Son of promise, Isaac not yet born, for an

EVERLASTING COVENANT.

Let us now listen to David in his sublime Psalm of thanks in 1 Chronicles xvi 14-18, "He is the Lord our God; his judgments are in all the earth. Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations,—even of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath to Isaac, and hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an saying, unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance, when ye were but few, even a few, and strangers in it." The importance of the above announcement may be seen from the fact that it is inserted again, verbatim, in Psalm cv.

But all the details of God's purpose as continued in the covenant to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are not recorded in it. The covenants to David are additional revelations of good things contained in the original document, and each additional promise made related to everlasting things, so that the throne and kingdom and king, and Son of David, which explains what the land was covenanted for, are to be coexistent with the land grant. See 2 Sam. vii. 16, "And thine [David's] house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee, [David] thy throne shall be established for ever. And Psalm lxxxix. 35, "Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed and his throne as the sun before me,—it shall be established for ever as the moon, and a faithful witness in heaven." Compare this with Gabriel's promise to Mary respecting her to-be Son, and Son of David and Son of God, and a glimpse will be had of the divine method of blessing all the families or nations of the earth through Abraham's seed, as covenanted to Abraham.

SHALL ENDURE FOR EVER,

All the beautiful pen-pictures of the future of Israel and all nations, given in the Psalms and the prophets are founded upon the

made to Abraham, and reveal more and more of the benificent provisions of that precious document. And when we reach Malachi, even, the sum of those provisions was not told. Paul in Col. i. 25, 26 shows there was something kept back for him to reveal, viz., "the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations," etc., which is explained in Eph. i. 5, 6 as follows:—"Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the spirit. [Well, Paul, what is this great, hitherto unrevealed truth? Hear him]:—That the Gentiles should be fellow heirs and of the same body and partakers of his promise [God's promise] in Christ, by the gospel, whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the favor of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power." This is the last unfolding of his purpose,—and praise his name, it admits Gentiles to share his promise in Abraham's seed.

What, now, is the sum of our findings?

1. That one germinal promise of the "woman's seed" was made in Paradise, before man was expelled.

2. That Jehovah made a number of promises to Abraham and called them covenants, and everlasting covenants,—the substance of which were, that in [or by] and his seed, Christ, all the families of the earth shall be blessed; and that he, and Christ, should possess the land of Canaan as their everlasting inheritance in a future life; and besides this, promises relating to Abraham's multitudinous seed, or natural descendants; all of these promises being comprised in one grand covenant called "The everlasting covenant."

3. That the same everlasting covenant was confirmed to Isaac and to Jacob.

4. That Jehovah further revealed his purpose by making other everlasting covenants to David, but which are only parts of the Abrahamic covenant, not previously disclosed. But were to David all his salvation and all his desire. 2 Sam. xxiii. 5.

5. That the prophecies and Psalms most abundantly prove the existence of the everlasting covenant from Abraham down through the Mosaic dispensation.

6. That not only were Gentiles excluded from the provisions of that everlasting covenant during the ages and generations preceding Apostolic times, but even the fact that it was God's purpose that they should ultimately share his promise was kept secret till the spirit by Paul fully revealed that they could be fellow-heirs, if they would. This is a brief summary of divine teaching,—not human.

Now we will reason with our readers a moment. Abraham was justified by faith in the covenants of promise, and became an heir of the world, (as we learn by the spirit in Rom. iv., and this was far more than appears on the face of the covenant,) and everlasting life, after death. Paul in Gal. iii. 13, 14 says these blessings of Abraham are what the death of Christ made possible for us. Can we obtain them without believing the promises of them, as Abraham did? Can we believe those promises if we are strangers to them? See Eph. ii. 12.

As it was the everlasting covenant that promised Abraham the inheritance and the future life to enjoy it, was it not that everlasting covenant that required ratification by the blood of Christ?

As Christ is said in Heb. xiii. 20 to have been brought again from the dead through the blood of the everlasting covenant it proves that that covenant promised Abraham's seed, the Christ, life, after death as well as the inheritance, as it did to Abraham.

Should not this, together with the preceding testimony, for ever settle it with the intelligent and honest mind, that the Abrahamic covenant is the everlasting covenant? We leave it with you, reader.

As the spirit in Heb. xiii. 20 says the Lord Jesus was brought from the dead through the blood of the everlasting covenant, which all admit was the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ,—and as that same Lord Jesus Christ in Matt. xxvi. 28 and Mark xiv. 24. says his blood is the blood of the new covenant, have we not infallible evidence that the everlasting covenant is that which he calls the new covenant? One covenant differently designated?

But now as to the claim that the new covenant was the covenant promised in Jer. xxxi. 31, we remark, that while Abraham was justified by faith in the everlasting covenant, his descendants on coming out of Egypt were heathen, and therefore had no faith either in God or the covenant, and so were placed under law as a school master till the promised seed should come, without interfering with the everlasting covenant for those who may have faith. This law held them as a nation, instead of a household of faith. When the seed came the law expired and the covenant remained as from the beginning, waiting for the antitypical ratification by a better sacrifice than that of bulls and goats.

As the Jews rejected Christ they as a nation, were blinded—only a few individuals comparatively, believing, the masses were scattered everywhere, as at this day; and still are, and will be faithless till the Believer comes and turns ungodliness from Jacob. Rom. xi. 26.

All peoples, nations and languages and tongues are to serve Abraham's seed. Dan. vii. This includes the house of Jacob. It is to be ruled by the twelve apostles, under Jesus the King of kings, a new covenant with them as a nation of mortals, as SUBJECTS of God's kingdom, will be made, unlike the national law from Sinai which said do this or die; and Jeremiah xxxi 31 gives us the text of that covenant,—it reads as follows—

"I will put my laws in their (Israel's and Judah's) inward parts, and write it in their (Israel's and Judah's) hearts, and I will be their (Israel's and Judah's) God,—and they (Israel and Judah) shall be my people; and they (Israel and Judah) shall teach no more every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying know the Lord, for they (Israel and Judah) shall know me from the least of them unto the greatest, of them saith the Lord. For I will forgive their iniquity and I will remember their sin no more."

So that Jer. xxxi. 31, and every word of the whole chapter is Israelitish and national. Compare this code with that prescribed for other nations in Rev. ii. 25–27. Are we asked why this difference? Not for their own sake. They will be loved for their fathers sake, and for his own name's sake, which the heathen had blasphemed, and that they may know that the God of Israel is Jehovah Ezek. xxxvi. 32–36. Having briefly set forth the truth as we believe and teach it, we now attempt to what he believes. He claims to believe that the new covenant ratified by the blood of Christ was the covenant promised, and recorded in Jeremiah.

From the testimony in relation to God and Abraham already adduced we know that when God makes a covenant it is a promise to give or do something. Sometimes conditions are attached, as in the case of Abraham, of whom faith and a walk with God were exacted. In other cases, as for instance, the covenant to Noah and all flesh that there should be no more a flood, was absolute, without conditions.

We now proceed to examine the foundation of our correspondent's faith and hope. If Jer. xxxi. 31 be the covenant ratified by the blood of Christ that is the gospel to him, the exceeding great and precious promises Peter speaks of, by which he must become a partaker of divine nature, and which, in order to be saved, must be believed in connection with the things concerning Christ in all his offices and work. But only what is or any other covenant, can be believed in, or hoped for, or claimed. Is it not a serious matter to turn to that passage and find no promise of life and immortality, or glory or honor or power or kingdom of God? If that had been the covenant Christ had intended to ratify, would he not have preached it, and sent his apostles to do the same? He preached the kingdom of God coming. A kingdom requires territory, and a throne, and a king and rulers, and laws, and subjects, and capital city and this had all been provided for, that is covenanted to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David in the covenants of promise, and attested, by amazing condescension, with

THE OATH OF JEHOVAH.

And when we bear in mind that Abraham by faith saw the day of Christ and rejoiced, knowing that if he ever lived to take possession of his inheritance, it must be through his seed, the Christ,—who can doubt that Christ, who knew his Father's will perfectly, knew that the grand instrument of long ago promising life and all else had to be ratified by his blood, or there would be no life or kingdom or blessing of all nations.

Our correspondent would scorn to take and open a letter addressed to another and appropriate its contents, but he seems to have no compunctions of conscience in taking a will or testament, or covenant addressed to the house of Israel and the house of Judah and appropriating what is promised, and distributing it to other Gentiles. Strange to say he virtually acknowledges it was for Israel and Judah by his claim that the covenant was actually made with Israel by Christ, but no mention of a covenant is made in the passage offered as proof of the claim.—Matt. x. 5–7. The correspondent would never have made that assertion if he had turned to Rom. xii., and Ezek. xxxvi., and seen that the time when the Jer. Covenant is made, with the promised results, is after their gathering, and the Deliverer comes and turns away ungodliness from Jacob. Jer. xxxi 31 shows it will be done in the manner before explained.

Our correspondent does not seem to know that at the time of the events recorded in Matt. x. 5–7, one of the two legatees mentioned in the covenant of Jer. xxxi 31, viz: the house of Israel, had been put out of God's sight 600 or 700 years before. Did Christ and Paul and Ezekiel make a mistake, or our correspondent?

When our correspondent does what Jesus told his apostles to do, preach the coming of God's kingdom, does he make a covenant with the people as he alleges they did? If made at all, it was by the message? We showed him in our first article the promised results did not follow, and that should have shown him his mistake. He has had two opportunities to prove, and not say, "I always consult," "and if it is not, what is," etc. But one proof would settle it. As it nowhere says that Jer. xxxi. 31 is the covenant ratified by the blood of Christ it only rests upon human deduction, and that is a very sandy foundation for faith to rest upon.

If the correspondent will carefully study Jer. xxxi., from beginning to end, he will see that every word of it relates to Israel and Judah,—and amongst many other things said, we mention a few to support this statement:—

At the beginning of the chapter it tells that the Lord will be the God of all the families (12) of Israel. Then, that a day shall arise when they shall say, let us go up to the heights of Zion. Then God says he will bring them from the north country and the coasts of the earth. Then that God will be their father. Then God calls the nations and the islands to hear that he who scattered them will gather them. Then that they will come and sing in the height of Zion. That in Judah men shall go forth with flocks. That God will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah [with whom he presently promises a new covenant] with the seed of men and beasts [so that both shall be prolific] then that children shall not suffer for sins of parents as now. Then comes the much quoted 31st verse promising a new covenant, before quoted in full, in which the house of Israel and house of Judah as mentioned in their pronouns no less than six times, besides twice in their proper names in the immediate context.

Then follows a graphic description of the result of the promised covenant, and God's most solemn and emphatic pledges to do all he said he would in this chapter, so far,—he then proceeds to say that the city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hummel to the gate of the corner, and the measuring line shall go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath, and the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook of Kedron, unto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, shall be holy unto the Lord; "it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever."

And the whole account is so topographic and circumstantial that it would seem no mortal man would have the audacity to wrest one verse out of the centre, and all its logical connections, on which to found a gospel nullifying theory. Before Almighty God and the Lord Jesus Christ, we affirm the solemn conviction, that the theory in question is as baseless as the fabric of a vision, dishonoring to God, and most cruel to other mortals.

The reader must remember that Jer. xxxi. throughout contains all the blessing to be desired under the covenant promised in verse 31. And we challenge the whole of apostate christendom to prove anything in it beyond a happy, peaceful, prosperous, loving, prolific holy nation of mortal men, who will continue to die as long as they continue to be born. Instead of being kings and priests and reigning with Christ, they are only preferred subjects.

Near the end of his article our correspondent says:—"There is neither Jew nor Greek,"—they are all one in Christ. Very true; all in Christ are one, surely. But we cannot pass the next sentence without a decided protest. It says:—"The Jews since the Cross, are Israel no more according to the flesh."

Is that so? What then, are they? Are they Israel according to the spirit? Impossible, inasmuch as the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus is rejected by them. Have they become Gentiles in the flesh? We reckon he has become "mixed" somewhat, because Paul will have to take a back seat if the correspondent be correct, for he says in Romans ix. 2, 3, 4 he is in great heaviness about his "kinsmen according to the flesh, who are Israelites." This was some 30 years or so, after the cross, and on that hypothesis the apostle makes a similar blunder in 1 Cor. x. 18, for he exclaims: "Behold Israel after the flesh," etc. He tells us in Romans xi., that God has given them (Israel) the spirit of slumber, even that they should not see and ears that they should not hear in verse 8, but notwithstanding all this, he informs us that he himself is a proof that some of his countrymen can be accepted, and so says practically what God by Isaiah said should be done, provoke them to emulate the Roman Gentiles who had been grafted into the good olive tree. See v. 14. We prefer Paul as authority in this matter. It is evident from the expression "Israelite indeed" in John i. 47, and Jew outwardly, and inwardly Rom. ii. 28, 29 that the words Israel and Jew are used in two senses,—and these two senses are explained by the same apostle in Rom. ix. 6–9 where we find that descent from Abraham merely, does not constitute them the children of God, but belief of the promise does, and this, thank God, shows us yet once more what promises, see verse 8, and Gal. iv. 28–31.

Before closing this long article we want to add another thought or two for those seeking to know the truth. And first, when the Master rises up and shuts the door to the kingdom, that is the sign that the everlasting covenant has taken out of the Gentiles as a Jews all who will share the glories of God's kingdom in the age to come, and when the dead and living saints are all made the Christ's glorified body through faith and obedience to the promises and putting on of Christ and becoming Abraham's seed, then the everlasting covenant will have accomplished the work assigned it.

Faith in promises then seems to give place to sight as the moving principle, after the kingdom has come, judging by Isa. ii. 3 and other like Scriptures. What the covenant promised will then have come, and Jer. xxxi. 31. shows that the particular discipline for national Israel will resemble that now enjoined on the household of faith.

We are charged with joining the Abrahamic covenant with the Jeremiah covenant. Could we have been so stupid in foolishness? We have heard men speak of the tail wagging the head, but we never saw such a striking illustration of the idea as that would be. One might as well say one link was a chain, or one drop an ocean. The passage in Luke i., relating to the deliverance of Israel from their enemies is a result of the Abrahamic covenant as we stated. But how? It promised the kingdom, promised the king, promised the rulers, promised the subjects, viz.—the Israelites. The kingdom will be a result of the Abrahamic covenant,—the king will be a result of the covenant, the rulers will necessarily be a result of the covenant,—and the delivered Israelites will be a result of the covenant to Abraham, and the new covenant to be made with the delivered Israelites, and promised in Jeremiah xxxi 31, and brought into force when the Deliverer comes and turns ungodliness from them by means of it, will be a result of the Abrahamic covenant,—but I trust the reader will see that as none of these constituents of the kingdom will be parts of the covenant they grew out of, neither will the promised covenant when it is made, be any part of the Abrahamic covenant it was the result of, and also that the idea of the Jeremiah covenant is without foundation still.

Let Paul settle the matter for ever. Instead of Christ coming to make a new covenant with the house of Israel, he came, says the apostle, "To confirm, [or ratify] the promises made unto the fathers." So what Jesus called the new covenant in his blood was composed of those promises, and would BEGIN ITS REDEMPTIVE WORK in about three days, by giving him self life from the dead, while the OLD Sinaitic covenant, would be nailed to the cross with him.

In the fear of God we have declared what we understand to be his eternal truth, and taxing it good faith the avowal that truth was the object of the correspondent, we have written strongly and pointedly, for we aimed to hit, not persons, but what we judge to be erroneous ideas. Trusting it will be received in the same spirit, and may prove helpful to some, we dismiss the subject and send it on its mission.

The Star of Bethlehem.

There, in the silence of the night,
Hermon in snowy splendor towered;
And Hebron's hills and hill in the light
Which on her sunset brow was showered.

Low couching, in the sacks his say,
A new-born orb reposed—not alone.
The light of Jove was pale thereby,
And Venus into shade was thrown.

Not as some blazing meteor flies,
But seemed majestically slow,
It sails along the Orient sky,
And gives the night a morning's glow!

The travelers on the pathless lake
With bold surmise the star survey;
And cry, while joy each heart doth quells
"It leads the way! it leads the way!"

While thus their road in heaven they found
Chosen, bright angels o'er them bent.
The Morning stars in music moved,
And that spheres Light beams them went!

Above the Syrian plains it passed,
And rested upon the Land of Saul
Of all by it, dearer than that
O'er Bethlehem's white-robed shores it stood.

The Magi,—with their gifts of gold,
And frankincense and myrrh,—then sought
The heaven's Babe, by heirs so old
Foresaid in strains from seraphs caught!

They found him in a manger laid;
They knelt before him, and adored;
The regal look his brow displayed
Told plainly here was Christ the Lord!

Obituary.

Leonard Adams was born in the year 1809, in the village of East Bloomfield, Ontario Co., N. Y. He came to Michigan with his parents in 1826, where they located one mile west of Rochester. Here he began his pioneer life by taking up one-fourth of a section of land from the government, and laid the foundation of his home, with his own hands he built a house, and in 1835 was united in marriage to Miss Martha Morrill. He was the father of six children, four surviving him, Mrs. Leonard Lawrence of Battle Creek, Mrs. Webster Williams of Ypsilanti, Mrs. F. H. Brotherton of Escanaba, and James Adams of Oakwood, with whom he had made his home for the past twenty-seven years, and where he died Dec. 12, 1898. He was a member and deacon of the Congregational church of Rochester for some time, but after much thought and study he changed his religious views, and became a firm believer in the second coming of Christ, and his personal reign on earth, and immortality only through faith in Christ and the resurrection from the dead. "For it is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." The study of God's Word and the prophecies, were a great comfort and solace to him in many lonely hours, and his faith was unwavering to the end. The last four weeks of his life were weeks of intense suffering, yet midst the gloom and when in an almost semi-conscious state, he was heard to quote, "Go thou thy way till the end be, for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." The following poem was written by him, and is the embodiment of his perfect trust in the divine will of his Creator.

WHERE SHALL I GO?

Where shall I go to find relief,
When pressed with care and filled with grief;
Where shall I go for counsel true,
To guide me, all my journey through?
When friends forsake and foes assail,
To cause my trembling heart to quail,
Where shall I go to find relief,
To calm my mind to perfect peace?
Can I expect from human aid,
Though kind of heart and wise of head;
A full supply of all I need,
To feed my heart with heavenly bread?
Ah no, no, no, their power is weak,
'Tis like the brittle, broken reed;
When sorrows like the billows roll,
And overwhelm the stricken soul.
Where shall I go? Go to the Lord,
Who's promised in his sacred Word,
To keep that soul in perfect peace,
Whose mind is ever on him stayed!
There you may find a full supply,
For all your wants, he'll not deny;
Just ask in faith, be trustful, true,
He'll guide you all your journey through.

—L. Adams, Dec. 17, 1898.

Report of Meeting.

The undersigned conducted a two week's meeting at Roll (Dunlee), Ind., with good results. Two young men obeyed the gospel in baptism. Others were prompted to a more earnest study of the Scriptures which are able to make wise unto salvation."

On the 14th day of Dec., the writer united in marriage Mr. Arthur M. Kelley and Miss Minnie L. Roby, both of Roll, Ind. The latter is a member of the church of God at above named place. May the blessings of God be with them, and may their matrimonial life be a happy one.

An Exhortation.

Dear ones of like faith.

"The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." Romans viii 22.

This passage is used in singular and plural; in the singular as an individual, in the plural as a nation. The Apostle in this chapter clearly sets forth in his letter to the Romans and endeavors to show to the world that there would be sorrow, pain, sickness and death, and the earnest expectation of each creature of God's children must wait for the manifestation of the sons of God. Then if we have been faithful to his trust we will be excluded from all these things and be transported into his everlasting kingdom, at the revelation of Jesus Christ our Lord. But until then we will meet with disappointments in this life. Oh, if it was not for the glorious hope the child of God has as an anchor sure and steadfast in his soul, which hope causes us to lift our drooping heads and raise our feeble voices with praise to God. Though in this life we may almost give up and all looks dark, and our life a failure, must I give up? No, no dear ones, do you have any emptiness, any real enjoyment out of Christ? No, we will not give up hope, for we have a more sure Word of prophecy to which we do well to take heed as unto a light which shineth in a dark place until the day dawn. We are still in a dark place, sin and sinfulness do abound. The golden rule was broken near six thousand years ago and nation has been rebellious toward God and has been in wars, tried to conquer and subdue by the sword, to bring about a peaceful form of government, but there are days of darkness and man can never bring about a perfect form of government. No, they will deceive and be deceived and wickedness shall wax worse and worse.

The cause of all creations' groaning and pain is sin. All the moral as well as the physical degradation which directly or indirectly cause the pain and groaning of the human family is their's under a blight and suffers both individually and as a whole. Its own imperfect and unjust government has brought many nations in pain and has as a natural recourse drifted in this direction because of man's fallen and imperfect condition, though man can and does in some way enact laws that have helped to form a better government and make some improvement, but at best they are feeble and spasmodic; they are utterly incapable of releasing themselves from difficulties, though man has tried it for nea. six thousand years and is not successful in the experience. They have not succeeded in establishing a perfect form of government, nor can man in his efforts stop the groans and wipe away the tears that have so often trickled down our cheeks as we have stood by the side of our loved ones who were suffering in agony of death. Nor can we bring them mentally or physically to the image of God, all we can do is to point them to the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world, then to offer themselves a living sacrifice to God which is our reasonable service, and Christ in due time will make us perfect in himself: but until then disease of all descriptions will prey upon us physically, we see burning fevers, wasting ulcers, cancers, poison of blood, broken limbs and other deformities of all descriptions; and mentally their condition is worse, some are crazed, others are partially so, and in all the human race not one is perfect; morally their condition is no less deplorable, selfishness and greed, pride, evil-speaking and deceit, hatred, malice, envy and contention, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, distress of nations with oppressions of the poor, the cry of the needy from the lips of the desolate. But no help comes, all our fond hopes seem buried. Truly it is a groaning creation still, and yet as the Apostle suggests they are not altogether hopeless: they are waiting for something they know not what; they are looking forward toward the glorious day that is fast approaching by the agency of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, that blessed messenger of Jehovah, who nineteen hundred years ago promised to redeem his people by laying down his life to redeem it from the curse. Oh, may the time hasten on when he will come and set up his kingdom. He will not oppress the people to exalt himself as man often does, but will bless all the families of the earth, through a wise and righteous administration, then he, Christ, will judge the world in righteousness, and will thus give life everlasting to all who shall prove themselves worthy of it. The earth will then be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters that cover the sea.

The gospel age has been the age in which God has been calling out a people for his name's sake by declaring, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." But the gospel age will soon close, then will the golden age be ushered in. At the close of the gospel age nation shall rise against nation: all Europe looks as though it would soon be plunged in war, and in this the United States will be drawn in when the crisis does come, and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation. Some set up the claim that Christ has already set up his kingdom, while others claim the kingdom is in their hearts. But did Christ say so? Let us see. "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth, as it is done in heaven." Has his will been done in earth yet? I for one say no, for if it has heaven must be a deplorable place. Even the church has drifted away from the Word of God in the fashion of the world and rudiments and elements of men: they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. It is very true that the kingdoms of this world are under the power of the invisible Prince, Satan who has taken the advantage of the darkness of human ignorance and depravity, as we expect to have any better form of government as long as selfishness is the rub of nations. In finance affairs we find selfishness there for the rich men only, to be the result of action for rich benefit. James says, "Go now ye rich men weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you, your riches are corrupt and your garments are moth-eaten: your gold and silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire; ye have heaped treasures together for the last day." James v. 1-3. Today we see the poor man taxed to his utmost capacity, and the cry of distress is heard all over the land, but no general has this tendency of the people become that the favored aristocratic classes, who have long enjoyed a monopoly of this world's goods, are in fear lest their glory may suddenly depart, and indeed they may be for the struggling masses are determined to reach the top rounds of the ladder of fortune, no matter how many homes they make desolate. The struggle has already commenced and the threatening aspect of things foretokens an early fulfillment of the prophecy of Daniel xii. 1. There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation. What will be the result? Let us see, when the visible Theocracy shall have accomplished its great purpose, "The mystery of God will be finished as he hath declared to his servants, the prophets." Rev. x. 7. When the Kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. We find in the Bible revealed a grand, political economy in the near future affecting the welfare of nations by the establishment of the kingdom of God under the Messianic order of things. Behold a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes rule in judgment. This divine scheme regulating the affairs of the world is the long looked for golden age of universal peace and prosperity, finally resulting in the abolition of death itself. Hence we find these final judgments being executed. "Then came a great voice out of the temple of heaven from the throne, saying, It is done. The mystery of God is finished. O sing unto the Lord a new song, for he hath done marvelous things, his right hand and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory. Your Brother in Christ,

G. W. SMITH.

Reducing Taxes on Railways.

If railways are obliged to lower fares one cent by the enactment of a two cent law, will it not be just as reasonable for them to expect a reduction in the amount of taxes they are taxed at to annually pay into State and county funds? A reduction of one third in the vast sum of State and county taxes paid by the railways will mean a great deal to a State but not any more than a two cent fare means to the railways.

One, Two, Three.

If you ever noted the evolution and progress of a great trunk line, you'll begin with one through train each day, then as the business increases it adds one more, and still another? It is an ascension—from one—one, two, three. Each figure represents a notch of progress each indicates the high water mark of success. Three through trains each way daily is a distinguishing mark of success for any railway.

Such has been the success of the famous "Nickel Plate Route." It began with one train; the popularity of this it rapidly added another. And still the people increased their patronage until a third train was imperative. And now across the rich plains of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, from Chicago to Buffalo over to New York and Boston, three swift and elegantly appointed trains pass each way daily over the finely graded roadway of the Nickel Plate Route, each carrying a large contingent of happy travelers. That is the moral of the story. Remember the significance of One, Two, Three.—dec. 21.

Is There a Contradiction?

It is affirmed in the Scriptures that God repents. The Lord repented that he made man. Gen. vi. 6. He repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people. Ex. xxxii. 14. He repented him that he had set up Saul to be king. 1 Sam. xv. 11. In Jer. xviii. he himself declares that he will repent of the evil and also of the good which he thought to do unto a nation. In seeming contradiction to these statements it is declared: "The strength of Israel will not lie nor repent: for he is not a man that he should repent." 1 Sam. xv. 29. "I the Lord have spoken it; it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither will I repent." Ezek. xxiv. 14. Balaam under divine inspiration said: "God is not man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent." Num. xxiii. 19. And Paul, "The gifts and calling of God are without repentance." Rom. xi. 29. The infidel says here is a plain contradiction; and more, that the God of the Bible is fickle like man, changing to suit purposes, and is bound by no agreement to which he pledges himself.

Infidels are poor expositors so to speak—careless readers is the truth of the matter. The Christian expositor believes both statements, and that there is here only a seeming contradiction. He holds firmly to the truth that God never lies; and that he is unchangeable as he has declared. "I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Mal. iii. 6. Some times the attempt is made to remove the difficulty growing out of the statements that God repents, and that he does not repent, by saying, that God being unchangeable, when repentance is affirmed of him we are not to understand it as denoting "change of mind, purpose or action, as when affirmed of man. But this explanation only shifts the difficulty and brings us face to face with the word "repent." If it does not carry the idea of change as it stands affirmed of God, then what idea must we attach to it? Who will tell us? or who has told us? Bush hath hits and misses the truth, in my judgment. Misses it when he says: "As a general rule wherever repenting is attributed to God, it implies not a real inward change in his feelings and purposes. This statement is suitable to the anthropomorphic notion of a God without body parts or passions. The notion then that God's feelings and purposes are not changed, as the word repent seems to denote, if it be not a meaning [illegible] manifestly contradicted by [illegible] of persons as applied to [illegible] people Israel, and to other [illegible] and to individuals as well. One class of texts expresses his displeasure toward his [illegible] a threat of punishment to be inflicted in case it is persisted in. The other class of texts expresses his approval and intention of doing them good, and this based upon their return to right conduct. Such hits the [illegible] but not the whole truth in [illegible] the same connection a sentence [illegible] that it implies a [illegible] without repentance." Rom. xi. 29. God looks beyond the centuries of Israel's hardness of heart, and promised punishment for national sins [illegible] the fullness of the nations shall [illegible] in, so all Israel shall be saved. This is God's purpose toward his [illegible] not chosen a people, still "beloved for the fathers' sakes." Touching this he does not repent. Nothing will stand as a bar to the national restoration and salvation of blinded Israel. The truth has been sworn unto. My attention is frequently called to the fact that God is unchangeable, that his Word so teaches. Here are the words which declare it: "For I am the Lord I change not. First clause of the 6th ver of Malachi chapter 3. This must be understood in the light of Israel's calling and God's purpose in calling them. The next clause gives the conclusion, "Therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." As much as to say, "I have an ultimate purpose toward you, and through you to all nations, therefore I will not utterly consume or destroy you." They were always to be a nation before him. Jer. xxxi. 36. The Psalmist says: "He being full of compassion forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not: yea, many a time turned he his anger away." Psa. lxxviii. 38. He turned his anger away,—repented of the evil which he thought to do unto them. Above all these changes in Israel's fortunes making it necessary for God to change his dispensations toward them, he remained unchangeable as to his ultimate purposes.

The Gospel Recovered No. 15.

BRAWBACKS AND HINDRANCES.

"That all may be are.....that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

The previous article (No. 14) was chiefly occupied with "theological gladiatorship," as illustrated by Dr. Thomas, as the warrior characteristic, excellent in its proper place, but disastrous in its effects when misapplied. However interesting as an intellectual exercise to a certain class of minds, theology, being something outside the "simplicity that is in Christ," is really unworthy of being earnestly contended for.

It seems fitting now to show more at length that Dr. Thomas was from an early period compelled by the force of circumstances to recognize the distinction referred to, and even to defend himself against certain who mixed up vital with minor points in their opposition to him. Thus in "Life and Work," p. 77, referring to the 34 questions noticed in a previous article here on a variety of secondary points, he says, "We were involved in a discussion of minor and comparatively unimportant points, such as the destiny of infants, idiots, and pagans, the lust end of the wicked, etc. These are details or consequences resulting from a great principle, not the principle in itself. The opposition strove to keep this out of sight, and to make it appear, if possible, that what we contended for was the non-immortality of the soul, the non-resurrection of infants, etc., and the annihilation of the wicked, as the pith and marrow of the gospel. Here is where their hypocrisy, dishonesty, or ignorance beam forth as the meridian sun."

In an article headed "Preach the Word," in the "Herald of the Kingdom" Vol. III. 1853, p. 44, referring to 1st Cor. ii. 1, he says, "He (Paul) did not come to them with excellency of speech or of wisdom," such wisdom and oratory as the Greeks delighted in, whose wisdom "is foolishness with God"—he did not BLEND their foolish wisdom with God's testimony, as some were beginning to do." He gives here in a long note, Clemens Alexandrinus, Origin, etc., as examples.

In the "Herald of the Kingdom," Vol. V. are three articles headed "Colonial" extending to forty columns. The first is headed "Pan Christendom sentimentality" with an extract from the "Expositor" as follows: —"Dr. T's zeal for the discovery of something new and diverse from the elements of all Christendom, has carried him into a system of theological ultraisms." Dr. Field of Jeffersonville, Indiana. The articles take the form of dialogue between Elpis and Josedec, the latter seeking to charge Elpis with advocating that "a man should be perfect in knowledge before baptism." The Dr. contends for the simple faith and obedience of the gospel of the kingdom. He puts a good deal of exposition as to the promises to Abraham and David into a nut shell thus, "The kingdom which formerly existed in the Holy Land, God will again establish there, under a new and better constitution."

In the Dr's many paper controversies with the late Joseph Marsh, editor of the Expositor at Rochester N. Y. he required to advocate "the simplicity that is in Christ." Here is a remarkable instance. In the Expositor for 1857, p. 662 the following statement was made:—"Dr. Thomas has published that the recent Russian war would not terminate till the Lord shall come, and destroy Gog and his army on the mountains of Israel. The war has terminated in a general peace; the Lord has not come; Gog has been turned back, and consequently has not been on the mountains of Israel." The Dr. has a reply of two columns in the Herald of the Kingdom, Vol. VII. p. 280. A few sentences must suffice. He says, "We never have pretended to infallibility or an exemption from error especially in our views of the details of the future.....We are certain that the kingdom will be set up or restored, in the Holy Land, etc. We can make no mistake about this while we retain the faculty of reading the English Bible where these points stand out in such bold relief, that a child may read and understand." After referring to Marsh's denial of such points, he says, "These are errors that cannot be offset.....by publishing mistaken notions of Dr. Thomas' views or opinions of unrevealed details strongly expressed." He then argues that the present is not a general peace but a temporary truce."

Let it be noted here that it is only the plain language of the English Bible, simple even to a child, that Dr. Thomas falls back on, when his "views or opinions of unrevealed details" are called in question.

Again in "Herald of the Kingdom," Vol. VIII. 1858. p. 212. he has this, "Let a man, or a company of men and women prove that they believe the gospel, Paul preached, and have obeyed it, and we will call them only by a New Testament title."

In "Herald of the Kingdom," Vol. IX. 1859; p. 66, he says, "A man may have a theoretical understanding of the gospel, but not a hearty belief in it. He may also understand it, and at the same time add on to it the sentiments of all Christendom for the sake of getting on more easily with it."

In "Eureka," Vol. I. 1861, p. 863, we find, "It is by the truth called the word of the truth of the gospel of the kingdom," Acts xx. 24, 25; Col i. 5, believed and obeyed, that relations are established between men and God. This is the spiritual connecting medium that links them to his throne in their present state." See also "Eureka," Vol. II. 1865, p. 336.

These and other similar statements of a later date, which could easily be quoted, must have been well known to any of those who made, and who still continue to make, so much of certain pet opinions causing disruption of church fellowship. The "theological gladiatorship" of such seems to have been too strong to permit of their being wholesomely affected by such considerations. Neither did his sentiments and reasonings in behalf of the simplicity of the faith and obedience of the gospel operate favorably with the Dr. himself to interfere with his partiality for one section of the brotherhood. Those calling themselves Christadelphians had in many instances flagrantly violated those very sentiments by elevating minor points to a level with the gospel itself, and practically excommunicating all who did not agree with them. "Brotherly love" in the case of such brethren is confined within a narrow circle of human construction, in defiance of Divine rule, as prescribed by the Lord and his apostles. Such a course has to a great extent proved its own failure, of which ample evidence is furnished by those who entered upon it, and who still persist in prosecuting it. Of this more anon.

Meanwhile the exhortation of the Apostle Jude is brought into striking contrast with the policy which is attempted to be criticised in these papers. "That ye should earnestly contend for THE FAITH which was once delivered to the saints."

The Restitution.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 4, 1899. NUMBER 1.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Recent Archæology and the Bible. No. 6.

The fifth lecture in the present course on "Recent Archæology and the Bible" was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Nicol last night in Tolbooth Church, the subject being "Canaan and its Neighbors in the Tel-el-Amarna Tablets." The land of Canaan, the lecturer pointed out, had been the goal of the military ambition of the rulers of Babylonia from Lugal-Zaggisi, in the fifth millennium before Christ, to Nebuchadnezzar, in the sixth century before our era. It was coveted also by Egypt, because it lay right on the high road to the fertile plains and wealthy cities of Mesopotamia. From the time of the going down into Egypt to the conquest of Canaan by the returning descendants of Abraham, under Joshua, little or nothing is to be learned from Scripture of the peoples who inhabited Canaan and the other northern lands. Egyptian records have something to say of the peoples of Northern Syria as far as the Euphrates, especially of the Hittites and the part they played in the wars of Thothmes III. and Rameses II. and other Egyptian kings. The Egyptian occupation of Canaan and the neighboring countries is written in the copious annals of the eighteenth dynasty, and the list of places in Northern Syria and Palestine conquered by Tothmes III. and engraven on the walls of the temple of Karnak, throwing some light upon the early geography of Syria and Palestine, and upon the history of the Canaanites. But these records shed only few and feeble rays of light compared with the flood of light which the Tel-el-Armana tablets have thrown upon the political condition of Canaan before the conquest. That famous correspondence, written in cuneiform characters, consisting of letters from allied and vassal princes and governors in Syria and Palestine to Amenophis III. and Amenophis IV. of Egypt, was immediately concerned with the decline and fall of the Egyptian power, which for a time after the conquests of Thothmes had been supreme in Western Asia. But, indirectly, the Tel-el-Armana letters bore a testimony which revolutionizes our conceptions of the history of those times. It had been shown in a previous lecture that Babylonia once exercised sovereignty over these regions, more or less continuous and complete, and it was under the shelter of such a suzerainty that the Babylonian language and writing had taken such firm root and spread so widely in Western Asia. The Babylonian language, as could be seen from the Tel-el-Amarna tablets, was employed in those regions and at that time not simply as a diplomatic convenience, but for the ordinary purpose of civilized life. Even the strange and powerful Hittite people came under the intellectual influence of Babylonia at the period, and used the Babylonian characters for their still mysterious and untranslatable language, one example of which is found in the Tel-el-Amarna correspondence. And even when Babylonian supremacy had given place to Egyptian in Canaan and Syria and the neighboring lands, the Babylonian language held its ground so tenaciously that it had to be adopted by the reigning Pharaohs as the medium of communication between themselves and their allies, and vassals, and governors in those regions. After pointing out the bearing of these facts upon the questions raised by the higher critics who have been accustomed to make the ignorance of writing at that period a ground for maintaining the legendary character of the pre-Mosaic narratives, the lecturer gave some account of the tablets themselves, referring to the different countries from which they came to their long [illegible] in the archive chamber of the Pharaohs by the Nile, and to the variety of the clays of which they were composed, forming a kind of solid water-mark to authenticate the locality of their origin, and then discussed in some detail their contents. Special notice was taken of the Lachish tablet, written by Zimrida to the Pharaoh, a fellow to which was found by Dr. Bliss when excavating Tel-el-Hesy, the site of the ancient Lachish, bearing the name Zimrida, and held by some to have been written by Zimrida to a neighboring military commander. The letters from Jerusalem were of peculiar interest as proving that it was a city and sanctuary of renown among the hills of Judah long before the conquest; and the position of Ebed-Tob, the governor of Jerusalem, as a priest-king, deriving his office not from father or mother, but from the Mighty King, the God whose oracle was there, was shown to be similar to that of Melchizedek in the days of Abraham, just as Melchizedek's position was shown in a previous lecture to be that of the patesi, or priest-king, of Babylonia long before. In the Tel-el-Amarna tablets, the lecturer pointed out there were two peoples mentioned as the chief antagonists of the Egyptian domination in Syria—the Khabiri and Khatti. Different views are held regarding the Khabiri, who are represented in the correspondence as bearing hard upon Ebed-Tob around Jerusalem, and also upon the Pharaohs' representatives as far north as Hamath and Damascus. It could not well be maintained that they were the Hebrews coming in to conquer the land—the chronology and general political situation seem to forbid that supposition—but it might be, taking various indications into account, that they were some detachment of Israelites who had found their way into Palestine and addicted themselves to a wandering and warlike life before the nation as a whole conquered Canaan and settled in it under Joshua. The Khatti were now identified beyond all question with the Hittites of Scripture, although the Scripture reference to the Hittites in their scattered settlements in Canaan and its northern border give but a very inadequate idea of the greatness of this people at the zenith of their power. The story of the discovery of the Empire of the Hittites within the last quarter of a century was told, and their relations with the Egyptians and Assyrians, as well as with Abraham and his descendants, described from Biblical, Egyptian, and Assyrian sources. Their influence upon the nascent art and culture of Greece was pointed out, the famous lions of Mycenæ having been borrowed from Hittite art, and the pottery of Cyprus and to the Trojan plain having had a Hittite impress. The two-headed eagle of the Hittites, which had been the emblem of the very early Babylonian kings of Lagash, two thousand years before the period in question, survives, by a descent which can be historically traced, as the symbol of Imperial power in Austria and Russia today, and is seen figured on the coins and postage stamps of the Emperor and the Czar. Surely a wonderful survival of two Empires, widely separated from one another, which had disappeared not only from the kingdoms of the earth, but from the records of history, to be recovered and set fairly in their place among the nations by the research of the last quarter of a century.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Giving Thanks Always.

This is one of those deep-meaning admonitions of the apostle, which at first sight seems rather impracticable; but as it is only the spiritual man that can discern the spiritual, so only those who are in touch with Paul can follow his depths. Is not this what the gospel of God's favor should generate in our breasts: we worthless, cursed for, and sought for, by the great Creator, and all out of his love—ought not the knowledge and realization of what salvation to eternal life means, and the thought of God's mercy and goodness to lead us into that state of mind beyond empty formula, nor platter-cleaning, long verbal prayers, giving alms to be seen of men, but the offer of the highest part of our nature—the intellect—to God, by offering him our heart. Joyful in the truth as David,—confident in God as Paul, real in worship as Christ,—always abounding in joyful heart-praises to God. In every act, and look, and word and thought, "Giving thanks," like nature in her silentness and beauty.

The Gospel of the Kingdom.

The gospel is good news concerning a future kingdom to be established on the earth, which will ultimately become a universal kingdom, having Christ as King, the saints as rulers, and all the nations of the earth as the subjects to be ruled.

Jesus taught the gospel. "Jesus came into Galilee," (testifies Mark i. 14) "preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." The apostles taught it. Among all ye, says Paul "have I gone preaching the kingdom of God." Acts xx. 5. What is that kingdom? A kingdom on earth. The Lord shall be King over all the earth, and in that day there shall be one Lord and his name one. Such is the testimony of Zechariah. The universality of the kingdom is declared, the position defined, and the King revealed. The ancient throne of David is the throne upon which the Lord will sit. The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David, "of the fruit of thy body will I set upon the throne." Psa. cxxxii. 11. Peter applies this to Christ, as we read in Acts ii. 30, "David being a prophet, knew that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit upon his throne." The co-rulers with Christ are his immortalized brethren. Jesus himself said, "And I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me, that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom." The song of the redeemed will be at the period of their immortalization, in these words, Rev. v. 10. "Thou hast redeemed us—and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." The kingdom is Yahweh's. It is an instrumentality ordained of him for the complete and final redemption of the world—the consummation of his glorious purpose. Hence it is the saints' great desire to attain to that kingdom. It is the prize set before them. They are exhorted to seek it first. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." And having sought and found by a faithful adherence to the word of their salvation, and continuance in well doing to the end of their probationary career, the welcome words of their gracious King, will fall sweetly on their ears, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Then will their every desire be gratified, their every hope more than realized, for long life and length of days will be theirs, together with glory, honor, and incorruptibility. Amen.

"The Year 1899"

Will have been born before our paper readers our patrons, 1898 is now only a measure of past time. How has that measure been spent? This is an important question to ask ourselves on the threshold of the new year. The years roll by, each succeeding one appearing to bring in its train increased care, additional responsibility, and a larger experience of labor and trouble.

"We cannot expect it to be otherwise. The darkest part of night is just before the dawn of the morning, and it is quite in keeping that the metaphorical night should deepen its darkness before the rising of the sun of righteousness and the dawning of that morning without clouds. Can we look back upon the past with the satisfaction of knowing that it has been well spent? Or, have we to confess that many of the precious hours were squandered away? Such enquiry may enable us to value more highly the fleeting moments of our probationary career, and to apply our hearts unto wisdom, that we may be diligent while we have opportunity. How can to kill time, be the object of those who are commanded to redeem it? It is only the empty-minded worldling who feels it necessary to engage in any pursuit with such an object.

It is well to start the new year with aims of the right kind in view, with resolves that are worth carrying out, and purposes the opposite of everything mean, selfish, or ignoble, in any degree; to set before our minds examples worth imitating, and to study well the characteristics of men of true nobility and moral worth, and concerning whom we have authoritative assurances that they pleased God. If we look at men whom the world calls noble, we seldom find examples worth imitating, but often see much to inspire contempt, if not disgust, and qualities which the voice of wisdom bids us shun,—practices hateful in the sight of him with whom we have to do, and little to command our respect. The Bible, however, reminds us that in "a little while the wicked shall not be;" that the mighty will be put down from their seats, and that a storm of divine anger will sweep away the immoral, vicious, horse-racing, gambling, pleasure-seeking beings, although occupying high positions now,—and shall establish in their stead, the humble and meek. No, we must not go to the world's great men to learn lessons of sublimity of moral character,—not to the idols of the multitude, such as Byron or Burns, or Sheridan. What does all the honor of this present age amount to when a man lies silent in the arms of the great spoiler and the icy hand of the great enemy has been laid upon his throbbing heart? They may reiterate his great achievements, recount his honors, they may place his laurels upon the coffin that encloses him, and exhibit the decorations that were a source of pride to his vain mind, but they cannot put life into the dead form. They cannot send the blood coursing through the veins. They cannot cause the glassy eyelids to look once more upon passing objects, or the once active brain to think again. There is no power outside of heaven that can accomplish a result so wonderful as this. There is none but God and his glorious Son who possesses that mighty energy whereby "bodies of humiliation can be changed and fashioned anew, "like unto the glorious body of the Anointed Jesus. There are none besides who can make men "Equal unto the angels so that they can die no more;" and their power will only be exerted in behalf of those whose names have been enrolled upon the scroll of life, because they have sought and known and done his will.

How the hearts of the Little Flock should swell with gratitude when they remember that the grand old Book of God introduces us to society altogether different from that we have adverted to. How refreshing to turn from the vanity and vice, the ambition and pride, the selfishness and greed, the worldliness and indifference to divine things, and the hollowness, shallowness, levity and superstition, to study for a time the characteristics of the Nobleman of the past; and yet of the future; the men of whom the world was not worthy: men of true greatness because of real goodness: men of thorough, robust character who counted not the favor of king or people; who would not compromise the truth for any earthly consideration: who would not lower the standard of holiness in order to please those who desired to live both for God and the world, to serve Christ and the world (as if such a thing were possible); men who weighed not their lives in the balance, but who counted all things but loss that they might win the divine approval; men who could say—in view of bonds and imprisonment, hunger and thirst, weariness and pain, miry dungeons and cruel mockings, lion's dens and fiery furnaces, and perils of deaths of every kind, "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto me." These are the sort of men the Bible introduces us to None of your hand-and-glove-with-the-world gentlemen, who could not denounce a sin for fear of the consequences. Brethren and sisters, the study of their lives and the imitation of their deeds will truly make our lives sublime.

Right at the threshhold of 1899 let us all, who have named the name of Christ, make the prayer of the Psalmist our prayer:—"So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Let us offer this prayer from the heart every day we live, and then there will be no danger of a surprise when the Lord calls for those who are his. And that stupendous event may not be far away. Darkness may increase, and difficulties may thicken, but this must not dismay,—these are an augury of the near approach of that day upon which all our hopes are fixed.

In wishing all the faithful in Christ Jesus a Happy New Year, there is hope of its realization, and here and this we have only room to say our closing words to all are in Deut. vi. 24, 25, 26.

Communicated.

Israel and Judah.

Dear Restitution:

Israel and Judah must first acknowledge Christ as their Messiah, as a condition precedent to being relieved from the judgments which have been pronounced against them, by reason of their having rejected him when he came the first time. "Blindness in part has happened to Israel until the fulness of the times be come in." Rom. ii. 25.

The meaning is not that blindness has happened to part of Israel, but blindness as to part of the prophecies has happened to them. What was the blindness? They did not fully understand the prophecies that relate to the first advent of the Savior and therefore they rejected him. This blindness will not be taken away "until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." "Nevertheless when it (Israel) shall turn to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away." 2 Cor. iii. 16.

When shall the vail be taken away? "WHEN ISRAEL SHALL TURN TO THE LORD." When will Israel turn to the Lord? When the "BLINDNESS IS REMOVED. When will that be done? AFTER THE CLOSE OF GENTILE TIMES.

Let me call attention to some very plain prophecies, relating to Israel, found in Ezek xxxix. "So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day forward." Ezek. xxxix. 22. What day? Why the day that the Lord destroys the army of Gog on the mountains of Israel, after the great battle of Armageddon has been fought.

Again, Ezekiel says "And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity:  Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel.  When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' land and am sanctified in them in sight of many nations." "Then shall they know that I am the Lord their God,  neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God." Ezek xxxix. 23, 25, 27, 28 and 29.

All Bible students know that these prophecies have not yet been fulfilled. That being true, Jacob is still in captivity and God has not yet exercised his "mercy upon the whole house of Israel." The prophet says, "Then shall they know that I am the Lord their God." When will they know it? AFTER THEY ARE BROUGHT BACK FROM THEIR CAPTIVITY AND NOT BEFORE.

The Prophet Isaiah says, "It shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people  and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel." Isa. xi. 11. "Behold I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen  and bring them into their own land, and will make of them one nation." Ezek. xxxvii. 21. If the children of Israel are dispersed among the heathen, they cannot be identical with the Anglo-Saxons or English speaking people, for the reason that these constitute two nations, viz., England and the United States. "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah." Heb. viii. 9, 10, 11. The eleventh verse shows that this takes place after the second advent of Christ. Will the Lord attempt to convert the Israelites until after he makes this new covenant with them? "When the Lord shall bring the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice and Israel shall be glad." Psa. xiv. 7 and liii. 6 This proves that Israel is in captivity and will so remain until the Lord brings them out of it. "Thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob." Psa. lxxxv. 1. "The Lord hideth his face from the house of Jacob." Psa. viii. 17. Israel is not now the favored people, but they will be AFTER THEY ACKNOWLEDGE CHRIST AS THEIR MESSIAH, BUT NOT BEFORE.

At a time when the nation of Israel was one of the most powerful nations in the world, Moses prophesied of them as follows: "Thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb and a by-word among all nations." Deut. xxviii. 37. He further prophesied of them, "The Lord shall SCATTER THEE AMONG ALL PEOPLE FROM ONE END OF THE EARTH EVEN UNTO THE OTHER, and there thou shalt serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone." Deut. xxviii. 64. What gods were these people to serve during their captivity? Answer, wood and stone. This prophecy shows that during their captivity the Israelites will not serve the true God, but will serve heathen gods which their fathers did not know. Does not this prove that LOST Israel must be looked for among the heathen nations who worship gods made of wood and stone? I think it does so most conclusively. "For the Lord shall have mercy on Jacob and will yet choose Israel and set them in their own land." Isa. xiv. 1. Here we have a proof that notwithstanding the fact that the Israelites are now bowing down to wood and stone, God will in due time have mercy on them and restore them to their own land.

R. S. DWIGGINS.

"Let Us Redeem the Time Because the Days are evil."

The long winter evenings are here, and give us time and opportunity to think and write upon those previous themes of truth touching the great salvation. Let us not suffer the time go to waste, especially let us remember THE RESTITUTION. It is what we make it by our means and contributions. Our faithful Editors depend on their patrons for both means and matter to give us back a paper that is worthy of the Truth, and fit to place in the hands of saints or sinners as a faithful exponent of the gospel of Christ. There are but few of our brethren who are not able to instruct others in some line of Truth, and many times those who think themselves so weak and ignorant have a vein of inspiration that only needs tapping, to set in motion a covenant that may flow out and water and revive the hearts of all with whom it may come in contact.

It is not the long sermon, nor the long article that interests us most; but we are stirred to act most frequently by the short, earnest, practical appeal. It takes us unawares, and we fall in line of duty before we have time to question its authority. It was thus with the Savior' teaching. The multitudes were irresistably drawn after him, and confessed he spake as never man spake. The secret of touching the hearts of men consists in a measure of saying and doing the right thing at the right time in the right manner. We need not weary our hearers, but we do need to interest them. If the simple story of the cross fails to move the heart, no amount of Talmagian eloquence will induce a man to seek after the Lord. He might seek after Talmage, but his time to turn to God has not come. The sinner does not need his ears tickled; but he does need his heart broken up, and stirred to its core. Flattery is not the medicine to give to one who is an alien from God. Do not cry peace, when there is no peace, nor strive to heal a wound while the arrow is wranking in the sore. Jesus says many shall strive to enter in and shall not be able They strive unlawfully. They often try to unite with Christ without being made free from sin. They fail to receive the word of the kingdom into a good and honest heart. They do not repent. Hence their baptism does not wash away their sins. They simply unite with the church, and hide under the folds of its outer garment, instead of hiding in the refuge of the Rock, Christ Jesus. Such persons are in every church. They need to be looked after, and some need rebuke, and some encouragement, and some need to be admonished to repent and do their first work over again; lest the candlestick be removed out of their hand. Too little attention is given to the young convert by those who have experience and growth in the divine life. We should impress upon his mind the necessity of "Cleaving to the Lord," of being "steadfast in the faith," of "pressing toward the prize." These things are the milk of the word upon which his growth depends, and deprived of them he dies. Let us brethren not forget the nature of our high calling; nor the duties it places upon us. We may become strong and able to digest, and understand intricate questions of truth, but as the Savior said of the poor being always with us, so we have the weak always with us. The best teacher among us is the one who can make plainest the path of duty and the way of truth. We are not always understood. "Let us condescend to men of low estate." Yours for the Truth.

Sound Words.

Brother Underwood:

As one of the readers of THE RESTITUTION allow me to thank you for the remarks you made upon the Howard article, a few numbers back. If ever there was a necessity of sounding out the glorious gospel of the kingdom, and giving all side issues and hobbies the go by, I think it is now. I am astonished, that men who have professed to have heard and accepted the joyful sound, should fritter away their time and talent upon questions that never did nor ever can, either save a soul from death, or incite those who have believed, to live more godly, and build them up in their most holy faith. Oh, how I wish all who write, would write with that end in view; and then the readers would see that the writers themselves, are forging ahead in the divine life, and beckoning us forward and upward in the same. I wish too, they could see that a solemn responsibility rests upon all who essay to speak for God. If they propagate a theory which is without foundation, the injury to some one may be fatal: and since the effects of a wrong impression may never be removed, although a life-long effort in that direction be made, how careful we should be to write and speak only as the oracles of God speak. Word is brought back to us by those who attend conferences, that some of the speakers take the opportunity to air their speculations and new ideas, that would be of little value, even if true and which throws a wet blanket over those who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and eager to hear the eternal purpose of God rehearsed once more, and to hear earnest souls, from all directions, give voice to the joy and peace that grow out of the blessed hope.

It looks as if the Lord is at hand, and although I am not recognized as a teacher through your columns, I seemed impelled to give a note of warning at this late hour of the day to sound out only the Word of the Lord. It is the gospel that saves and obedience to Jesus' commands, is living godly.

In the bonds of the gospel,

WALTER TOMLINSON.

Editor Restitution:

I thought I would let the brethren know that through the preaching of Brother A. N. Cronk, a few of us have been led to see the difference between the sky-kingdom as taught by the different churches, and the gospel of the kingdom as taught by Christ and the Apostles. Also that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul as taught is Satanic in its origin. We have a little church here at Burwell, Nebraska, of the one faith, that are looking for the coming of the Lord. We would be pleased to have any preaching brethren of like faith come and preach at this place in order that the people can see that there are others that preach the gospel of the kingdom besides Brother Cronk. We have ten that have accepted the truth. Eight of them were baptized by Bro. Cronk, I saw Brother Herlman when he was here several years ago, would like to have him come and see us if convenient.

Your Brother in Christ, looking for his appearing and his kingdom,

A. E. FALES.

The pastor of Brunsdorf conducted the services at the funeral of Prince Bismarck, according to the rites of the Reformed Church. The text, in compliance with Prince Bismarck's desire, was from 1 Cor. xv. 53-57, as follows: "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.'

Active solicitors wanted everywhere for "The Story of the Philipines" by Murat Halstead, commissioned by the Government as Official Historian to the War Department. The book was written in army camps at San Francisco, on the Pacific with General Merritt, in the hospitals at Honolulu, in Hong Kong, in the American trenches at Manila, in the insurgent camps with Aguinaldo, on the deck of the Olympia with Dewey, and in the roar of battle at the fall of Manila. Bonanza for agents. Brimful of original pictures taken by government photographers on the spot. Large book. Low prices. Big profits. Freight paid. Credit given. Drop all trashy unofficial war books. The most active volcano in the world is Mt. Sangay, 17,190 feet high, situated on the eastern chain of the Andes, South America. It has been in constant eruption since 1728, and the sound of its explosions is sometimes heard at Quito, a distance of 150 miles, 267 having been counted in an hour.

According to the authority of an English magazine, Great Britain controls 21 out of every 100 square miles of the earth's surface, and 24 out of every 100 square miles of territory in North and South America.

Poetry.

Sometime.

Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgments here have spurned,
The things o'er which we grieved with tasks wet,
Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deepest tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see; while still we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called, he heeded not our cry,
Because his wisdom to the end could see.
And e'en as pitying parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things because it seemeth good.

And if, sometimes, commingled with life's wine,
We find the wormwood, and recoil and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than ours or mine,
Pours out his portion for our lips to drink,
And if some friend we love is lying low,
Where human kisses can not reach his face,
Oh, do not blame the loving Father so,
But bow your sorrow with obedient grace!

And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friends,
And that, sometimes the cable pull of death
Converts the tiniest focus into love-crowned,
If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within, and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all his doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

But not today. Then be content, poor heart;
God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold.
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart—
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
And if, through pain, we reach the land,
Where tired feet, with sandals loose, may rest,
When we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we will say that "God knew best."

Our Future Life and Our Future Abode.

"Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul."—Heb. vi. 19.

The following article was sent to a very good religious paper, which for fifty years has been spreading the gospel of the kingdom—i. e., the news of the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, to reign upon the earth. But it will persist in trying to bolster up the theory that man is possessed of an immortal soul, which at the death of the body flies away to heaven, a theory which is based upon the lie the devil told Eve in the Garden of Eden—that if she ate of the forbidden fruit she should not die, but she should "be as God, knowing good and evil." Gen. iii. 5. If that theory be true, why should the soul be brought from all the joys and glories of heaven and reunited to its body, to again dwell upon the earth? Such a theory is a muddled up, inconsistent heathen tradition, which has no foundation in the Holy Scriptures. But here is the article:

"I have been an editor the best part of my life, but I have never tried to make a paper to please everybody, because I was well aware that I would make a complete failure if I did. I suppose you are in the same boat. But there is one question I wish you would either quit hammering at, or else give the opponents of your views an opportunity to present their side of the matter, and that is whether man is possessed of an immortal soul. You keep firing shot at those you are pleased to call materialists, but in all your little pop-gun shots, or in all Brother——'s attempt at heavy artillery and seige work, you have not been able to present a single positive text to sustain your immortal soul theory, because there is no such text in the Bible.

1. "There is not a text in the Bible that says anything about man being possessed of an immortal soul or never-dying spirit, or any such thing.

2. "The Bible does not present a single promise of a future life without a resurrection—and that through our Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Life-giver."

3. "The Bible does not present a single promise that those who attain to a future life shall ever dwell anywhere else than on this earth, renewed and purified."

"Those three points cover the whole ground, and, if you will point out positive texts in our Bible that will refute them, I will send you a check for fifty dollars. I do not mean texts from which you draw such inferences, because I have the same right to draw inferences from what may be called obscure texts, and I want my inferences to agree with the positive texts, to avoid making the Holy Scriptures contradict themselves."

1. "Man was created out of the dust of the ground, and he did not have a living soul put in Him, but he—the man made out of the dust—became a living soul when God breathed the breath of life, or—as the Hebrew has it—the breath of lives, into him, Gen. ii 7. 'The soul that sinneth it shall die.' Ez. xviii. 4, 20. 'His spirit goeth forth, he returneth to his (native) earth; on that very day perish his thoughts.' 'That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts: even the same thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea they have all the one kind of spirit, so that the pre-eminence of men is naught.' (Lesser's translation of Ecc. xxi. 4: and Eccles. iii. 19.) Read also the standard version, and read carefully the xxxvii. Psalm and scores of other texts of similar import.

2. "Christ Jesus is the Life-giver. 'God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' John iii. 16 'He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life.' John iii. 36. 'The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation,' or condemnation. John v. 28, 29. 'If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and, if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.' 1 Cor. xv. 16-18. Those 'that know not God, and that obeyed not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ * * shall be punished with everlasting destruction.' 2 Thess. i. 8, 9. Not everlasting torment. Paul, after giving a long list of ancient worthies, says: 'These all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise.' Heb. xi 39. 'This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.' 1 John ii. 25.

3. "'For a child is born unto us, a Son has been given unto us, and the government is placed on his shoulders; and his name is called Wonderful, counsellor of the mighty God, of the everlasting Father, the prince of peace, for (promoting) the increase of the government, and for peace without end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to establish it and to support it through justice and righteousness, from henceforth and unto eternity: the zeal of the Lord of hosts will do this.' (Lesser's translation of Isa. ix. 6, 7.) 'I looked in the nightly visions, and, behold, with the clouds of heaven came one like a son of man and he attained as far as the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there were given him dominion, and dignity, and government, and all people, nations and languages had to serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom is one which shall never be destroyed.' (Lesser's translation of Dan. vii. 13, 14.) The angel Gabriel, when he appeared to Mary and foretold the birth of her Son, told her to 'call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.' Luke i. 32, 33. 'Behold, I will create new heavens and a new earth: the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind: but be glad and rejoice unto all eternity in what I create; for, behold, I will create Jerusalem for rejoicing and her people for gladness. And I will rejoice over Jerusalem, and be glad in my people: and there shall not be heard in her any more the voice of weeping, nor the voice of complaint.' 'The new heavens and the new earth, which I make, shall have permanence before me, saith the Lord.' (Lesser's translation of Isa. lxv. 17-19, and lxvi. 22.) 'We, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.' 2 Pet. iii. 13.

"'And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new.' * * * 'And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor unto it.' Rev. xxi. 1–5, xxiii. 24. 'And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun: for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign forever and ever.' Rev. xxii. 5.

What better heaven, or place of eternal abode, could be asked or imagined? Read both chapters in full, and then search the Bible from Genesis to Revelations, and if you find a single plain, positive text showing that the human race are possessed of immortal souls which, at the death of the body, fly away to heaven, then send me word where it is, and where that heaven is located. These are things I want to know.

The paper referred to has not published the article or any reply thereto, and the editor, in a private letter, only quoted one text from which he drew an inference that man are possessed of immortal souls. Yours for the truth,

ALPHEUS DAVISON.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed find money to pay for the dear paper another year, home does not seem like home without THE RESTITUTION'S weekly visits, and now in these times of turmoil and dissentions we need it more than ever. Oh, is it possible that the world wide commotion means Christ's soon coming? It does: all hail the day. Come Lord Jesus and come quickly, is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

MRS. LOUISA CORDALEY.

Dear Restitution:

Dear Editors of THE RESTITUTION, that are battleing for the truth as it is revealed in God's Word may you be blessed in your labors, for it looks as if the day time of the Gentiles was almost run out, and we ought to look for the Nobleman to return. It looks as if the governments of this age could not get much worse than they are just now, and may we pray for Christ to "come and come quickly" and set up his kingdom. Then we can sing "Peace on earth, and good will to men."

Your Brother in hope of the kingdom.

AMOS EATON.

Dear Brethren in the Lord's Anointed:

I am glad of the privilege to inform you that I am yet in the land of the living, surrounded by all manner of wickedness, and inducements to draw my attention from the gospel of the kingdom; but, the Word and promises of God is far stronger than anything the world can produce to lead me from Christ and his kingdom; yes brethren, we are in the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal, this world has no attraction to me any more; my mind, my hope, my all, is on the things of the kingdom, and the evidence is growing brighter that we are nearing the time of the coming of our King. We need only to look around us to see the signs of the times we are living in. Read Paul's description of the last days in 1 Tim. iii. I he says, "This know that in the last days perilous times shall come," and then goes on and tells what will cause them. Now dear ones, could any man now living give a better description of the times we are in? We are not at a loss to give it its right application; for Paul has already done that; he says, "In the last days," that settles it, and loved ones, we are here in the midst of the days; and now what can we look for but the coming of our King? O, brethren, and sisters in the Lord's anointed, let us be faithful in the service of our Master; and let not anything take our attention from the service of our soon coming King. If we loose a place in the kingdom, we loose all. Love to all.

C. P. ALGIRE.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I was absent last year from your Christmas gathering but not because my love for the truth and its faithful advocates had grown cold. I am late now I fear for the special number (if you have one) but a place later will do if I may be allowed. I have not had the dear paper regularly for a long time, not being at home, and have not very thoroughly read the copies I have had, my health being such as to hinder me studying as we have to, to get hold of the deep meaning hidden in the precious themes discussed, but I did not fail to look for the dear familiar names of the workers and the records of their faithful labors. My heart has rejoiced with your joy over victory won and my prayers have mingled with yours for future and greater blessings, and deliverance for the suffering church of God, and through her for a lost and dying world. May God abundantly bless the dear faithful toilers who have so long borne the burden and heat of the day against untold obstacles, and discouragements, while many have seemed almost to be idlers in the vineyard. Be patient and faithful dear ones to the end, nor fear that the Master has failed to see it all. Your reward is sure and your sacrifices of love are not forgotten by him who numbers even the hairs of our heads. When we come to have the spirit of our patient loving God we will not judge to even the latest and feeblest one of his "little ones" a full and perfect reward. Matt. xx. 16. Let us heed the dear Father's voice in the parable of the prodigal son, Luke xv. 31, 32, and not be afraid of losing our place in his Sections, but open our hearts with him to welcome the dear returned wanderer even at the eleventh hour. Let no jealous or envious thought of ours, chill or blight the delicate buds of faith, hope and love, springing up in the poor hearts that have been desolated by sin's withering curse. "Love seeketh not her own." Help them, lift them up, love them, believe in them, beyond all earthly reasoning, and having done all you can for them, lay them in the dear Shepherd's arms, and lay your weary head upon his heart and rest, and fear not. He can bring them safely home and he will, nothing can pluck them out of his hand. I enclose the words of a little poem I would like to see published again. It has been such a comfort to me and might be to other tired hearts as it is Scriptural as well as beautiful.

"Late at night I saw the shepherd,
Tolling slow along the hill,
Though the flock below were gathered,
In the fold so warm and still.

On his face I saw the anguish,
In his locks the drops of night
As he searched the misty valleys
As he climbed the frosty height.

Just one tender lamb was missing
When he called them all by name
While the others heard and followed
This one only never came.

Oft his voice rang through the darkness
Of that long, long night of pain
Oft he vainly paused to listen
For an answering tone again.

Far away the truant sleeping
By the chasm of despair,
Lay unconscious of its danger
Shivering in the mountain air.

But at last the Shepherd found it
Found it ere in sleep it died
Took it in his loving bosom
And his soul was satisfied.

Then I saw the eastern spires
Part before a shining throng
And the golden dome of morning
Seemed to shatter into song."

"The Son of Man is come to seek and save that which is lost". "He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied." I pray from my heart that the church may awake to her great duties and privileges, be cleansed of every fault and fitted for her great work of blessing all nations. May all make full proof of their ministry and be accepted for the great work of the new age in which the filling of the earth with the knowledge and glory of God will be accomplished. My hopes of this and of the soon coming of our great Leader are very bright. Let us love one another and pray one for another. Let us watch carefully against the evil on every hand. Let us work diligently, faithfully, and wait patiently, not neglecting our own readiness to meet the Master. We know that though it seems long his coming must be nearer now, than when we first believed. In our impatience for the end of sin's cruel reign, let us not waste our chances of serving him and his. Hoping and praying for a place among the approved ones in that day and wishing you all good, now, and ever I close. Your sister in true Christian love and hope.

ALICE ADAMS.

To all God's faithful ones:

As the time has arrived for the world to indulge in a season of feasting and greeting, the object being the commemoration of the first advent of our Savior, is it not becoming for the followers of our Lord and Master to engage in a season of spiritual feasting? Some have repudiated the idea of having a portion of our paper devoted to the love feast and think it taking valuable space for letters of little importance. One brother said some time ago that our paper should be devoted to subjects of more importance and edification, and asked what any one could learn from reading the love feast? Well, he could at least have learned that there are many whose names we would never have heard had it not been for their testimony in the love feast, who are watching and waiting for the Nobleman who has gone into a far country to receive a crown and to return. The object of the love feast was, I believe, to express our faith in the soon coming of our Savior and Redeemer. The man who is so wise he cannot learn anything from a subject that should concern every believer must indeed be thoroughly furnished, but not unto good works. Christ was all love and sympathy. He condescended to men of low estate. He said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." He never said, "Blessed is the man who is so wise he has no disposition to appreciate the many testimonies of the loved ones concerning his second advent." No, no, my brothers and sisters, those who fear the Lord will "Speak often one to another, and the Lord will hearken and hear, and a book of remembrances will be kept for those who think upon his name, and they shall be mine in that day when I come to make up my jewels." Christ has heard every one of your testimonies, though they may be simple and childlike. We may not all write labored articles, but we can write a few lines and thereby strengthen perhaps some fainting one, who amid the breakers of the world are trying to cling to the Rock, Christ Jesus. Is it not our duty when we are converted to strengthen the brethren? How is it to be done? By reading long debates and discussions on questions that are calculated only to gender strife? and often produces weariness? Or by sympathetic words and actions show that we love the brethren? that we love to hear their testimonies? We take new courage when we read of their faith and hope, and they do the same when they read of our faith and hope, and in this way kindle a flame of sacred love in these naturally cold hearts of ours, and fan into a flame the dying embers.

Let us not be among those who will say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and begin to eat and drink with the drunken, but stand as a light house on the rocky shore, or, as a city set on a hill that cannot be hid, that others groping along the pathway of life may step into our light and be lead by its beams to that better life to know Christ and the Father which sent him, is life eternal, which we cannot do unless we have "Christ formed in us the hope of glory." With Christian love, I desire to extend Christmas greeting to all God's children and a Happy New Year of usefulness, and may we be as zealous in our spiritual feast, as the world in their temporal feast, and the smoke of our incense will arise as a sweet savor unto our God, and Christ will say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Let us be like simple, confiding children and if we cannot do great things we have each a duty to perform, which will be just as acceptable in the sight of God. Let us keep our hearts pure, for we read it is only the "pure in heart that shall see God." See that loving heavenly Father who gave his only begotten Son to redeem us from the death state, whose death opened up the way to life and immortality. He is the portal to an endless life. May we all be faithful and gather at last in one happy family, separated and scattered in the first Adam, united in the Christ the second Adam to go out no more forever.

Submitted in Christian love,

ANGELINE LENT.

Editor Restitution:

I will write a few words in regard to our church at Blair, Neb., which I am sorry to say is in rather a poor condition. It seems too bad, but we have very little preaching and no Bible readings and Sunday School. Bro. Crowe is coming to preach for us next week, and I hope he will waken us up. I can say, for myself, that I am strong in the faith as ever, but what am I doing for the Master? is the question I often ask myself. It seems to me that we are not practicing what we believe. We believe in the near coming of Christ, but we are still planning and working for self, just as if this life was all we have to live, and I am afraid we will not be found in the first resurrection. Oh! I hope we may. We had a grand good meeting at Omaha, and I met many brothers and sisters there that I perhaps will never see again, but will take this opportunity to wish them all a Happy New Year which will soon be here, and say to one and all, let us watch and pray lest we miss the first resurrection, and to miss that is to miss all, and my prayer is, "Come Lord Jesus and come quickly."

Yours in hope,

MRS. LIZZIE JOHNSON.

Dear Restitution:

I have read with interest Bro. Cameron's articles and also Bro. Duggin's, and Craton's. The 5th of James and the 3rd of Joel certainly applies to our time. Events are fast shaping themselves for the coming of Christ in his kingdom. I want to say to Bro. Cameron, that for 30 years I worked and worshiped with that body of people known as "Campbellites" but some years ago they expelled me from their worship as a heretic, soul sleeper, non-hellist and materialist. But none of these things move me, and I have been baptized into my new faith, having a new hope, and new associations. The Bible is a new book to me. Though getting old and feeble I am thankful to the Heavenly Father that he has opened the eyes of our understanding that we should have a knowledge of his holy will in these last days of Gentile times. Yours in hope of eternal life when Christ comes.

H. B. FOWLER.

Dear Restitution:

I will feel very lonesome for a while for I lost my dear loving companion the fourth of this month, leaving me to care for a girl six years of age, a boy four years and an infant boy. But during my deepest bereavement I felt that God had caused the dear sympathizing friends (although strangers to me) to help me freely; God bless them. The dear loving wife "Died in the faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and was persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed." Heb. xi. 13. I notice in my daily work that most all men curse and swear and when I hear it the thought comes in my mind like the vivid flashes of lightning, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith?" Luke xviii. 8. The answer just as quick, "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv. 37-39. I believe we are living near "The last days." 2 Tim. iii. 10. I shall try and be worthy of meeting my dear companion when the Lord comes to make up his jewels. Mal. iii. 17. "For his anger endureth but a moment: in his favor is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." Psa. xxx. 5.

Your lonesome Brother in hope of eternal life.

L. J. SWEET.

Dear Restitution:

I am glad to see in the paper that our Christmas love feast is commenced; it does me so much good to read the letters from the brothers and sisters scattered abroad, and a great many like myself, are alone and where we cannot meet with the brothers and sisters of like precious faith, to worship our dear Father in heaven. But, I feel that he is with us and watching over us, and let us all live so that we will at last hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant." It is hard to withstand all the opposition and the temptations that come in our way, but it is a trial of our faith, and if we hold out faithful our reward will be all the greater. Let us pray daily for grace and strength to hold out, and at last to overcome and be accounted worthy of a place in his kingdom. I am striving daily to live in all good conscience towards God and man, and it does me so much good to hear from others. It encourages me and gives me new strength to persevere. Pray for me, and may God grant that we may all meet in the kingdom, is my prayer.

Your Brother in Christ looking for the soon coming of our Lord.

A. B. GRIFFITH.

To all the loved ones in Christ:

As it is again nearing Christmas I will try to write a few lines. We are among the isolated class, are living where we hear no preaching of the true gospel, but we are trying to live as near right as we can, for we believe we are living in the last days. In Matt. xxv. 14, 23, we learn that if we have been faithful we shall hear the good tidings, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Wishing you all a merry Christmas we remain yours in Christ.

Fell Asleep.

Jesse Rose fell asleep in Jesus on the 18th of Dec., 1898, in Madison Co., Mo. Bro. Rose was born in the State of Indiana, on the 14th day of Jan., 1816, age 82 years, 10 months and 20 days. Moved with his parents to Ohio at the age of 7 years, and is one of a family of 24 children, of whom 10 survive him. He married Martha Fowler in 1838. To them were born 4 daughters and 4 sons, of whom 2 daughters and one son, W. H. Rose, are living. Bro. Rose joined the Primitive Baptist order, in 1857; moved to Madison Co., Mo., in 1873. Joined the General Baptist 4 years ago, and lived with them, believing that he had an immortal soul, and a home in the sky. He was destined to hear the gospel, good news, glad tidings of great joy, preached by Bro. John Foore. On the 17th day of last September, Bro. Foore came here and held meeting 7 days, of which Bro. Rose attended, heard the gospel preached as he never had heard it, believed it, and on the sixth day of the meeting was assembled on the bank of the river with 5 candidates for baptism, (W. S. Rose being one of them), after hearing a masterly discourse on baptism and witnessing the representation of the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. He saw he was without God and hope in the world and to delay was dangerous, so he demanded baptism, and came up out of the water to walk in newness of life, of the few days that remained for him to live, we are persuaded that he walked a Christian life, being strong in the faith.

GEORGE M. TOWNSEND.

Married.

On Dec. 25, 1898, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCrory, near Plymouth, Ind., their only daughter, Miss Vinsy McCrory was married to Mr. James Adams of Payne, Ohio. Mr. Byron McCrory acting as groomsman, and Miss Mina Zumbaugh as bridesmaid. Many friends and relatives assembled to witness the ceremony and to congratulate the happy pair, after which a bountiful repast was served. Many beautiful and useful presents were given them. The evening was spent in a social way, conversation and song. They will make their home in Ohio.

May he who calmed the raging storm,
And walked the waves of Galilee,
Help thee thy sacred vows to form
Till launched on life's eternal sea.

The ceremony was performed by the writer,

A Great Engineering Feat.

December 18th the engineers of the Chicago & North-Western Railway accomplished the wonderful engineering task of moving its 220-ton bridge crossing the Kinnickinnic river at Milwaukee, on its Chicago division, down stream 250 feet. This is a feat that has been undertaken but a very few times in the history of engineering.

The bridge was a single-track draw, and was removed to a new foundation in the quick time of two hours and forty-seven minutes. The structure was floated on two scows, one on either side of the center, which were sunk with 90,000 gallons of water. With the scows in proper position, the water was pumped out and the bridge gradually lifted from its foundation and towed to its new resting place by two tugs.

The bridge was in perfect condition and was removed only to make way for a double-track structure of the latest pattern.—It.

What the War is Costing the Railways.

The railways are expected to yield over two and a half millions of dollars toward defraying war expenses. This vast amount will be collected as taxes in the form of stamps required on bills of lading, etc. Aside from the actual war tax, a large expenditure will be necessary for extra printing, supplies and clerical work entailed in complying with the war tax law.

Notwithstanding this enormous outlay in addition to current expenses, there has been no material increase in railway earnings, and the average per mile fare received from each passenger during the year 1898 will fall below that of 1897, when it slightly exceeded two cents. The injustice of a law compelling railways to make a general fare of two cents per mile, under such circumstances, is plain.—It.

The sublimity of wisdom is to do those things living which are desired to be when dying.

Happiness is like a sunbeam, which the least shadow intercepts, while adversity is often as the rain of spring.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and no recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed for only 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

To have the men who have demonstrated their organizing ability by great business successes tell their secrets of organization, is the object of the editor of The Cosmopolitan. That he is succeeding, is proved in the January issue by the article from CHARLES R. FLINT, who is regarded in New York as one of the three or four ablest organizers in America. He is president of the Rubber Trust and the head of the great mercantile house of Flint, Eddy & Co., which has its ramifications in almost every port of the world. Mr. FLINT tells very openly what makes for success in the organization of business. His article may be read with interest by the Rockefellers, the Armours, and the Wanamakers as well as by the humblest clerk seeking to fathom the secret of business success.

In the same line is an article, also in the January Cosmopolitan, telling how Mr. PLATT organized and conducted the campaign for the election of Roosevelt. It is by a gentleman who was actively engaged at the Republican headquarters during the campaign, and who gives a vivid picture of the perfection to which political organization has been carried in New York State by the most astute of managers. The wary old Senator who has been a lifetime in politics and the youngest political aspirant will alike find food for reflection in Mr. PLATT'S article.

Ten Days at Washington.—Tickets via Pennsylvania Lines Good for Stop-Over at National Capital.

Tickets to Philadelphia and New York via Washington and good for ten day's stop over at the National Capital may be obtained over Pennsylvania Lines at the same fares as tickets sold to Philadelphia and New York over the direct line of the Pennsylvania System. THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT.

We are pleased to announce that we can offer our subscribers this valuable reference book at the very low price of only THREE DOLLARS. This work is so well known that it needs no introduction. It contains the Original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlineary word for word English translation; a new Emphatic Version, based on the interlineary, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican Manuscripts. Also illustrative and explanatory foot notes, and a selection of references. By Benjamin Wilson. We have used books now in stock, and can send at once. Send to this office.

A most excellent and appropriate present for any Bible student.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you friends who think sincerity will save them? Have your friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no fear for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's benevolent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Celestials for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages 8½ per 100 post free, or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

Waiting for Christ.

We wait for Thee, all-glorious One!
We look for thine appearing;
We hear thy name, and on the throne
We see thy presence cheering.
Faith even now
Uplifts the brow
And sees the Lord descending,
And with him bliss unending.

Though for Thee, through days forlorn,
In patient self-denial;
We know that thou our guilt has borne
Upon the cross of trial.
And well may we
Submit with thee
To bear the cross and love it,
Until thy hand remove it.

We wait for Thee, already thou
Hast all our heart's submission;
And though the spirit sees thee now,
We long for open vision;
When ours shall be
Sweet rest with thee,
And pure, unfading pleasure,
And life in endless measure.

We wait for Thee with certain hope—
The time will soon be over;
With childlike longing we look up,
Thy glory to discover,
O blest to share
Thy triumph there,
When home, and joy and singing,
The Lord his saints to bringing.

Judges Chapter 10.

1. And there arose after Abimelech to save Israel Thoola, son of Phoua, a son of his father's brother (an idiomatic way of saying a nephew of Phou) a man of Issachar; and he dwelt in Samir in Mount Ephraim.

2. And he judged Israel for twenty-three years, and he died and was buried in Samir.

3. And there arose after him Jair, the Galaadite, and he judged Israel twenty years.

4. And he had thirty-two sons who were accustomed to ride on thirty-two asses' colts and who had thirty-two cities; and they called them Jair's suburbs unto this day in the land of Galaad.

5. And Jair died and was buried in Hramnoon.

6. And the sons of Israel repeated doing that which was wicked in the sight of the Lord, and they served as bond-servants the rites of Baal and the rites of Astaroth and the gods of Aram and the gods of Sidon and the gods of Ammon and the gods of the Philistim; and they forsook the Lord and did not serve him as bond-servants.

7. And the Lord became wrathful with anger against Israel and gave them up into the hand of the Philistim and into the hand of the sons of Ammon.

8. And they afflicted and crushed down the sons of Israel in that period for eighteen years, all the sons of Israel, namely in the country across the Jordan—nor in the land of the Amorite in Galad.

9. And the sons of Ammon crossed the Jordans to array themselves against Juda and Benjamin and against Ephraim and the sons of Israel were in exceeding tribulation.

10. And the sons of Israel called unto the Lord for help, saying, We have been sinning against thee in that we forsook God and served as bond-servants the Baal service.

11. And the Lord said unto the sons of Israel; was it not out of Aiguptos and from the Ammorite and from the sons of Ammon and from Philistim.

12. And Sidonions and Amaleek and Madian who had caused you tribulation, was it not from them ye called to me to help you, and I saved you out of their hand?

13. And ye forsook me and served other gods as bond-servants: Therefore I will not repeat saving you.

14. Go your way and call for help unto the gods whom ye have chosen for yourselves and let them save you in your time of tribulation.

15. And the sons of Israel said unto the Lord; we have sinned; do thou unto us that which is good in thine eyes, only deliver us this day.

16. And they turned the alien gods away out of their midst, and served as bond-servants the Lord alone; and, Israel's soul belittled itself with weary toil.

17. And the sons of Ammon went up and pitched camp in Galaad, and the sons of Israel were gathered together and pitched camp in the spying-place.

18. And the laity, the rulers of Galaad said, each man of influence to his neighbor who is the prominent man who will be first to array us against the sons of Ammon, and he shall be ruler of all those who inhabit Galaad.

CHAPTER 11.

1. And Jephthae the Galaadite was one exalted for ability, and he was a son of a woman who was a harlot, and she had begotten Jephthae unto Galaad.

2. And the wife of Galaad brought forth sons for him: and the wife's sons grew up and cast out Jephthae and said unto him, Thou shalt not inherit in the house of our father because thou art a son of a concubine, thou art.

3. And Jephthae fled from the face of his brethren, and took up his abode in a land of Toob; and idle men were gathered together unto Jephthae, and they went out with him.

4. And it came to pass when the sons of Ammon arrayed themselves against Israael.

5. The elders of Galaad also went went their way to take Jephthae from the land of Toob.

6. And said unto Jephthae, Come and thou shalt be a chief-leader for us, and we will array ourselves against the sons of Ammon.

7. And Jephthae said unto the elders of Galaad, No, no, ye hated me and cast me out of the house of my father, and sent me away from you, did ye not? And why have ye come unto me, now when ye are in need?

8. And the elders of Galaad said unto Jephthae, It is for this reason we have now returned unto thee, and do thou go thy way and array thyself against the sons of Ammoon, and be a ruler of all those who inhabit Galaad.

9. And Jephthae said unto the elders of Galaad, If ye are returning unto me to array yourselves against the sons of Ammoon and the Lord give them up in my sight, shall I indeed be your ruler?

10. And the elders of Galaad said unto Jephthae, Let the Lord be the one who is listening between us if we do not do according to thy spoken word.

11. Jephthae went his way with the elders of Israel and the laity constituted him a head and chief leader over them. And Jephthae talked all his words in the sight of the Lord in Massepha.

12. And Jephthae sent messengers unto the king of the sons of Ammon saying, What is it to me and thee that thou hast come against me to array thyself for war in my land?

13. And the king of the sons of Ammoon said unto the messengers of Jephthae, It is because Israel took my land, when he came up out of Aiguptos, from Arnoon to Jabok and unto the Jordanos; and now restore them in peace and I will go my way.

14. And Jephthae again sent messengers unto the king of the sons of Ammoon.

15. And he said unto him; In this wise saith Jephthae; Israel did not take the land of Moab and the land of the sons of Ammoon.

16. Because when they went up out of Aiguptos Israel went his way in the wilderness unto a sea of Siph and came to Kadees;

17. And Israel sent messengers unto the king of Edoom saying, I would pass along in thy land forsooth; and the king of Edoom did not hearken; and he sent moreover unto the king of Moab and he was not satisfied; and Israel stopped in Kadees,

18. And went east of the land of Mooab in the wilderness, and camped in the land across Arnoon and did not enter into Moab's boundaries, Arnoon is a boundary of Moab.

19. And Israel sent messengers unto Seeon, king of the Amorraite, king of Eseboon, and Israel said unto him. Let us forsooth pass by in thy land unto our place.

20. And Seeon did not trust Israel to pass by in his boundary; and Seeon gathered together all his laity, and pitched camp in Jass, and arrayed himself against Israael.

21. And the Lord God of Israel delivered Seeon and all his laity at the hand of Israel and smote him; and Israel inherited all the land of the Amorraites who were inhabiting that land.

22. From Arnoon even unto Jabok and from the wilderness unto the Jordanos.

23. And now the Lord of Israel took away the Amorraite from before the face of Israel, and wilt thou inherit him?

24. No, no, whatever Chamoos thy God shall give thee to inherit, these wilt thou inherit, and all the people whom the Lord our God took away from before our face will we inherit, shall we not?

25. And now art thou better than Balak, son of Seppheor, king of Moaab? Did he not fight with Israel or war with him,

26. When he dwelt in Esebuon and in the boundaries thereof and in the land of Arour and the boundaries thereof, and in all the cities thereof, and in all the cities beside the Jordanos for forty years? And why didst thou not deliver them in that period?

27. And now I (lit. I am) have not been sinning against thee, and thou art doing wickedly in having arrayed thyself against me; may the Lord have judged today between the sons of Israel and the sons of Ammoon.

28. And the king of the sons of Ammoon did not hearken unto the words of Jephthae, which he sent unto him.

29. And the Lord's spirit came to be on Jephthae and he went unto Galaad and Manassee and he went unto the spying-place of Galaad unto the limit of the sons of Ammoon.

30. And Jephthae made a vow unto the Lord and said, If thou dost give the sons of Ammoon into my hand.

31. It also shall be that whoever shall come out of my house to meet meet me when I return in peace from the sons of Ammoon, shall be the Lord's; I will offer him as a whole-burnt-offering.

32. And Jephthae went to array himself against the sons of Ammoon, and the Lord gave them up at his hand.

33. And he smote them from Arour to the entrance in unto Armoon, twenty cities in number, and as far as Ebeldharmin, a very great blow. And the sons of Ammoon withdrew from the face of the sons of Israael.

34. And Jephthae came to Massapha to his own house, and lo, his daughter was going her way out to meet him with tympana and a choral procession; and she was his only born; he had no other son or daughter.

35. And it came to pass when he saw her that he rent his outer-garments and said, Alas! Alas! My daughter, thou hast brought me into great trouble; and thou wast in my trouble, and I (I am) opened my mouth unto the Lord against thee, and I shall not be able to turn back from it.

36. And she said unto him, Father, Thou hast opened thy mouth unto the Lord against me? Do unto me in the way there went out from thy mouth in respect to the Lord having made a requital for thee on thine enemies from the sons of Ammoon.

37. And she said also unto her father, May my father surely have done this word; allow me two months, and I will go my way and walk down upon the mountains, and lament over my virginity, I (I am) and my female companions of my age.

38. And he said, Go thy way; and he sent her away for two months; and she and her comrades of her age went their way and lamented over her virginity upon the mountains.

39. And it came to pass at the end of the two months she returned unto her father, and he performed his vow on her which he had vowed: and she had not known a husband; and it became an ordinance in Israael.

40. From days to days the daughters of Israael were accustomed to go their way to threne for the daughter of Jephthae, the Galaadite, four days during the year.

COMMENT.

The [illegible] chapters, the 10th and 11th [illegible] history of Jeptha's [illegible] and besides embodying much significant and important history relating to God's special people Israel, and his dealings with them as a nation, is replete with moral and religious instruction for the individual Christian now. How clearly we have brought out here in the biography of Jeptha the later aphorism of Paul that "God is no respecter of persons." Here we have the son of a concubine, an outcast and one despised by his whole nation selected of God to become their deliverer and exalted to the leadership of the very people who had cast him out as well as of his own brethren, whose hatred had set the whole nation against him.

Perhaps the most important thought suggested by the narrative of Jeptha is the ethical question in casuistry raised by the rash vow made and carried out by him to which apparently he attributes his success in defeating the sons of Ammoon. The whole qestion is a difficult one, and much can be said both for and against the payment of a rash vow involving the happiness and even the life of another. Of course the general teaching is that we should be slow to vow and swift to pay any vows we have made, even to our own loss individually; but how about involving an innocent party in our own loss, even if we have so vowed? This I think was the mistake of Jephthae though there is every evidence of sincerity on his part. I may offer my own life in a spirit of sacrifice; but the offering of the life of another without the knowledge and absolute previous consent of that one cannot be acceptable to a righteous God, and must be accounted nothing less than murder, if that person be innocent as in this case and be offered as an expiatory sacrifice. The only possible merit in a vicarious sacrifice is in the fact that it is a willing one. "Lo I come to do thy will," "In that will have we been sanctified."

The whole heathen world and all idolatry has thus erred in their thought of God and in their idea of a vicarious sacrifice; and the theology of apostate Christianity has in its deductive conclusion attributed to God a character worse and more fiendish even than heathendom, "A life for a life" and "no remission of sin without the shedding of blood" is found to be an inherent instinct in mankind as well as a dictum of divine revelation, and all true sacrifice is now granted to be vicarious whether the result of mother instinct for child or the human father's labor and sacrifice of his own desires for his offspring or carried over into the higher realm of the spiritual instincts and volitions, the subordination of the self in some way for other selves and others' interests. This principle of the subordination of the lower to the higher, or of the one to the multiple in short is the gist of the gospel—the law of "the survival of the fittest" not as asserted by modern science and scientists—namely the subordination and elimination of the weak by the strong, which of course is the law of the natural, but the assertion of the higher spiritual, which is the willing subordination in sacrifice of the strong to the weak—this in the individual that the general multiple may be increased.

This in the line of the higher teaching it seems to me, a fair deductive lesson from the "Story of Jephthae's Daughter."

Editor Restitution:

In looking over the last number of THE RESTITUTION which reached me, viz., the 14th inst., I read the article under the headlines of "Was Jesus' Prayers Always Answered." I usually found a great deal of instruction from the "Pine Woods Bible Class," but in this case I was very much disappointed. If the exposition of our Lord's prayer as answered by Albert to the question, "Teacher, What was Jesus' trial?" is in accord with the Bible and generally accepted by the "Christian Publishing Association," then I say that I have been reading THE RESTITUTION these many years to no purpose. I understand from the 10th verse of Rom. vii. that if any one could keep the law, that he could live thereby, and as in Rom viii. 2, our Lord did fulfil the law. He could never die by natural causes, hence the sacrifice on the cross was a surrendering of a life which death could not claim. He having fulfilled the law, death could not have any power over him till he was raised up on the "accursed tree." Rom. x. 5 proves that our Lord was perfect and if he only wished immortality for himself the law could not demand his life. But for the sake of Adam's race he allowed himself to be made sin, who knew no sin, etc. In speaking of his approaching demise to his disciples who wished to follow him, said to them, "Can you drink of the cup of which I drink?" Evidently the cup referred to them was the cup referred to in the Garden the night of his passion. The real pith of our Lord's prayer was "Nevertheless not as I will but as thou wilt." And again he said, "The Spirit is indeed willing, but the flesh is weak," so that there is no justification for saying our Lord was not willing to lay down his life "for his friends." If I am wrong on those points all my views are astray. But I feel confident that the Scriptures are with me and I deprecate any attempt at wresting the Scripture in order to satisfy infidels who scoff at our Lord's prayer in the Garden. I would like to hear from you on this subject.

Yours very sincerely,
JOHN MORRISON.

Editor Restitution:

I was conversing with an Advent preacher, a Sabbath keeper. He said "the Sabbath covenant was to last for a thousand generations." Said I, will you give me the proof? So he turned to Psa. cv. and read ver. 8, 9, 10, "He hath remembered his covenant forever, the Word which he commanded to a thousand generations," etc. Here is proof positive that the Sabbath covenant was to continue a thousand generations. Said I, Please to read the next verse and you will see what covenant it was to last a "thousand generations." Said he, "A thousand generations is thirty thousand years; literally without end." Said I, please to read the next verse. But it was some time before he would heed my request. But finally after re-peated soliciting, he turned his eyes to his Bible. I waited probably ten or fifteen minutes for a reply, but no reply came. He tired me out waiting; so I left without hearing his conclusion. This is the kind of argument and proof that takes with some. Is it supposable that he had never read this eleventh verse before? Evidently he had and evidently he intended to make a convert to Sabbath keeping by deception if possible. I cannot account for his conduct on any other line.

Our Love Feast.

Editor Restitution:

I am still working among the Indians. Have no brethren near me, have not heard a sermon of any kind for over a year and a half. Yet I am strong in the faith and will ever press on to gain the prize. May the time not be many years in the future that will bring our sorrows and trials of this life to an end, and we meet the dear Savior and our loved ones in the glorious kingdom, is my one prayer. I ask an interest in the prayers of all earnest followers of the meek and lowly Jesus.

Your lonely Sister.
H. E. PADDOCK.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Dear Restitution:

My father sent me the blessed paper for the past three months. I had never had it before. Father took it while I lived with him and I find I cannot do without it. When Saturday comes and it is not in the office, Sunday is a lonesome day, for I cannot take the Bible and gather the information I can with your paper. I do not see how I have done without it so long. I have been telling the people of the blessed Word of God around here for the past five years, but they seem to think their way is best. I have told of our Lord's coming and of the danger that rests upon them. They seem to think the Bible teaches it, but it doesn't make any difference.

Yours truly hoping to meet in a world where no sorrow comes when our Lord comes.

W. A. SOREN.

Dear Restitution:

I hasten to renew for my paper, as we cannot well do without it. It is time for our love feast to commence again, it is so encouraging to hear from the isolated ones. I know there are a few scattered over this broad land that are watching and waiting for the return of our dear Savior. May we be ready to welcome him, is my earnest desire. With much love, especially to the household of faith.

Yours watching and waiting,
C. E. PERKINS.

Dear Brother Underwood:

My time is up and I hasten to renew, have been waiting in hopes that I could have some to send for the poor, would like to help to send to some of God's poor, as I know how to feel for those that cannot take the paper. If I miss any of the papers I am lost as there are so many good articles that help me on my way, so I can sympathize with those that are not able to take it. Another year is almost gone, never to return, how have I spent it, have I made good use of it, have I done all I could to advance the cause of our blessed Master? These are questions that we all should ask ourselves, and to try and find some way of doing more for the cause of him who laid down his life to redeem us from the bondage of sin. Where would we have been if it had not been for our dear Redeemer? Lost to all eternity. But through the love of our heavenly Father over the works of his hands he devised a way to bring his children out from under the dominion of the arch-deceiver, and if we will only believe and obey his commands we can have eternal life. Just think of it, dear reader, when so much has been done for us, should we not give him our whole desire? O, dear ones, give the Lord your heart, and use all your influence to lead others to the Savior who has done so much for us.

J. B. LENT.

Dear Restitution:

My interests in and love of the wonderful revelations of the divine light is paramount above all else with which I have to do in my sphere of mortal existence; therefore to be telling of the old, old story of the gospel with its precious promises is my greatest delight and most satisfying joy. Being an isolated "child of the King," I most deeply sympathize with all others who are walking alone with God in the like precious faith, and that the dear Lord will direct us in all his ways and keep our hearts unto the love of God, and unto the patient waiting for the return of him who is to reign and rule in righteousness on the new earth, is my earnest pleading.

MRS. R. W. COOPER.

The case against Ritualism and Catholicism was put in a nut-shell by Mr. Watkinson. Their genius was not the genius of knowledge. 'A little while ago I found in the house of one of our people an extinguisher,' said he, 'and when I came to look at it it was in the shape of a monk.' Nothing more was needed to depict the blighting influence of Monasticism.

Under the laws of China the man who loses his temper in a discussion is sent to gaol five days to cool down.

Send in letters for our Love Feast, so that we may have a word of cheer from all.

The Editor is some better, being able to be up and about the house most of the day.

"If you want love, love. If you want sympathy, have sympathy yourself."

In giving thanks for your blessings, don't forget the criticisms you have received.

It is better to say a little worse than you mean, than to mean a little worse than you say.

For K. W.:—You can find the information you want in Gal. iii. 8, and Heb. ix. 10.

"When thou wouldst help another, study not to please not thyself in the doing, but him thou servest. So shalt thou be unselfish indeed."

He who acts solely from principle should have an overwhelming love for it; for when the battle is over he will find himself with nothing left but principle."

There are human beings who are proof against both commands and persuasion, and they are called mullish; but this is libelous, for even a mule can be persuaded sometimes.

"It rests with God to exalt both men and nations when his purpose requires it, or to overwhelm them with disaster and destruction, when they fail to realize the objects for which he has given them existence."

For L. P.:—Death is real and actual. All evidence is an attestation of this fact. Not anything survives death as a personal, living being. To contend otherwise involves a denial of death, and a denial of the resurrection.

For R. R. T.:—By reference to Acts xxvi. 22 you will see that Paul preached "none other things than those which the prophets and Moses said should come. He also exhorts men to be followers of him, as he was of Christ. If we obey his injunction we cannot ignore the Old Testament Scriptures. Apart from them the New Testament is a sealed book.

"I hear men everywhere praying for more faith, but when I listen to them carefully and get at the real heart of their prayers, very often it is not more faith at all, that they want, but a change from faith to sight. In both these cases you do not see that what you are begging for is not more faith, although you think it is, but sight. You want to see for yourself the blessing in the sorrow, the strength in the hard and hateful task. Faith walking in the dark with God, only prays for him to clasp his hand more firmly—does not even ask him to lighten the darkness so that he may see the way."

For E. T.:—"The Rulership of the future age is that of a Royal Priesthood. Not only will Christ be King, but he will be a priest upon his throne. The kingdom will endure for ever, but not in the above form. Its constitution will be changed at the close of the thousand years. Christ will deliver up the kingdom to his Father, having completed his work. His priestly office will be no longer required, for sinners will no longer exist. The kingly office may be changed to some extent, but there is no clear statement to that effect, and therefore we decline to be drawn into a discussion of speculations. It is, however, clearly set forth that in the Eternal Ages all will be constituents of a united brotherhood, and Christ will ever remain supreme Head of all.

A passage in a Cornish cobbler's sermon reads as follows:—"I've often thought, what a poor master the Devil's servants have got. Why when he came up to tempt our mother Eve, in Paradise, he hadn't got any bit o' a little for to bribe her with, and all he could do was to tempt her to steal her Master's apples. He hadent got anything at all of his own. Andrew didn't say, "I'll try to do all the good I can," and then do nothing, because he couldn't find anything to do; but says, "There's Simon; I'll go and catch him." That's the way; pick out one soul, and set your heart 'pon it; begin to pray for that one, and go on trying till you've got it; and then try for another. We might do a good deal o' good in the world, if we didn't try to do too much. I've heard folks a ringing, and meanin it too:—

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small,"

An' because the whole realm o' nature wasn't theirs, they didn't give anything at all." The indications are that there are many waiting to own the whole realm of nature before they give.

A Word with Our Friends.

Brothers and Sisters, a year ago we asked that the contributions of each writer for 1898 be of the character that would build up—not tear down—that would instruct the outsider in the doctrines of our holy faith, and encourage all to a closer walk and more godly life, that thus an abundant entrance may be gained into the soon coming kingdom. Only in a measure has this been carried out, some deeming it a "bit" in the mouth, and desire of some one to "guide" them, when they are well capable of going without the aid or direction of any one. This idea, we feel constrained to say is an unjust way to look at it. Nothing of the kind was intended, as the managers of this paper are believers in "free speech," and always have been. The cry is made to have a paper that can be given out freely, and that will be an exponent of our belief as a people; and with the view of having The Restitution such a journal, we asked then and do now repeat the request for 1899.

Brethren, we as a people believe in the second coming of Christ. Our hope is centered there and then. Will you kindly write articles on this subject—proving from the Bible that it is truth—so that we can have an article, (two or three of them) for each issue. We believe in the "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by his holy prophets;" the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth; Jesus Christ, God's only begotten Son as King of kings and Lord of lords, and the saints made immortal to be with him in the work of that age; Israel's literal restoration; the literal resurrection of the dead; conditional immortality, or eternal life only through Christ; the gospel to be believed, sins to be repented of, baptism by immersion in water for the remission of sins, and holy life after—all as necessary for final salvation.

Brothers and sisters, we ask you to write so as to bring out the different phases of the cardinal principles of our belief—The One Faith, the one Hope, the one Baptism.

The Transitory State.

To man in his mortal condition life is sweet; all wish to retain it, and none desire its end. We wish to live our allotted time, and view the tomb with feelings of awe and dread. Yet we know that in the common order of things this is our portion, as it is the portion of the myriads of the past.

Our individual experience now is one of continuous change. Years come and go, and with them come and go the friends we have loved so well. With most of us the friends of today are not the friends of years ago. In the dim vista of life's changing scenes we see them—coming forward in all their strength and sweetness, our companions for a little while—we see them fade away, and others take their places, and in turn pass away, until now, many whose friendship once was ours, exist but in memory, the fading shadow of a by-gone day. They came forth as a flower, but were cut down; they fled as a shadow and continued not. The place that knew them then shall know them again no more for ever. Their lure once so familiar, is now hid in the darkness of night, and they sleep in the land of forgetfulness.

And with our own loved ones, those near and dear to us, change is ever present. They do not live for ever. Affection's tightened grasp cannot keep them. They pass away, and in their turn, will be where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the weary are at rest.

Looking at ourselves, we find we are but poor frail creatures of the dust; at the best but a fleeting shadow, our life but as a vapor, a tale soon told. Our appointed three score years and ten glide quickly away, and it will soon be our turn to sleep the sleep of death.

Thus human existence at the best is but an ephemeral affair.—a transitory state. A man is so vain, so unfixed, so perishing a creature that he cannot last long. He goes off, and is forgotten, like a phantom, or as dream when one awaketh.

This is a sad view of life. Yet it is not from a love of dreariness we are impelled thus to the contemplation of the brief span of human life and the return of man to his native earth. It is well that we should so contemplate life at times; that we should bear in mind our frailty, that we may be induced to search for the light that can alone guide us through the darkness of the grave into the glorious light of an everlasting day. This is the Spirit's counsel. The words of Divine Wisdom are, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

Communicated.

Dear Restitution:

Another loved one has been led away in the "silent city of the dead, to await the coming of the resurrection angel. Florence Thompson Sears, the eldest child of Alfred Thompson and Mary Ellen Thompson, was born June 12, 1858, in Rensselaer, Indiana, which place has always been her home. She was educated in the public schools of Rensselaer, and the Northern Indiana Normal of Valparaiso, Ind. On June 12, 1880, she was married to Charles G. Sears, of Rensselaer, with whom she passed nearly eleven years of happiness, until his death, February 27, 1891. After this heavy loss she sought distraction in new scenes, and became an extensive traveler; all alone, and mostly without fear, she visited and made a thorough study of her own and several other countries. Mrs. Sears was in delicate health most of her life, and endured with great fortitude several severe and painful attacks of illness; yet she possessed an indomitable will power that maintained her in a life of unusual activity. Probably the most prominent trait of her character was her sincerity and love of truth, an inheritance from her parents. She was a true and faithful and appreciative friend. She had a high sense of the family tie, and was a loyal and devoted daughter, sister and wife. Her last illness was mercifully short, and she was spared the suffering she has always dreaded. She breathed her last at 6.20 P. M., Jan. 2, 1899, at the age of 40 years, 5 months and 20 days. She resided with her mother, and the funeral services, conducted by the writer, was held at Sister Thompson's residence.

Not a Perfect and Complete Law

Startle not, gentle reader, at my caption, but hear me, and give me a fair trial before you set in judgment and condemn me. David never said the ten commands is the perfect law of the Lord, converting the soul. No sir, that was the other fellow that said that, and you and I ought to know that it is both unwise and unsafe to be led by such a trickster, who simply works in the simple rule of addition, and thereby fools the people, and leads them astray. Seems that the good people are entirely too credulous on one side, and have been for the last six thousand years for their own good. Look here! Don't you know that the ten commands make no provisions for the sinner? Then how dare you tell the people that they are perfect, and that they convert the soul? When on other occasions you do not hesitate to tell the people the truth about the ten commands—that they can only convict of sin, and condemn the transgressor at most. And if they be perfect, and convert and change the sinful soul, then what need of another remedial system? Right at this point, an elder, when pressed, said that it took both laws to convert the soul. Then away goes your misleading argument, and the bottom falls out. Is that the blind misleading the blind? Look here. If the ten commands were a perfect law, then when is the necessity of resorting to an imperfect law to ascertain when to be in and end your Sabbath? "From even to even shall ye celebrate your Sabbaths." That makes it plain. But oh, what an anomaly, God's chosen remnant people with a prophetess in their midst, blundering along and treading on both ends of the Sabbath for years, and then all at once a new light flashes up to explain this perfect perplexing Sabbath puzzle, and set this people right. And where does the timely light come from? not from heaven this time direct, nor from Ten commands either, as one in their right mind would naturally suppose, but from this old, imperfect, obsolete law, that had been out of date for 1800 years. Talk about the ten commands being a perfect law, and you simply deceive yourself and the people too, but thank the good Lord, you cannot deceive all of them all the time.

Look here. If the ten words are a perfect law, universal and eternal in their obligations, how can you account for this strange fact—that the tables of stone and their contents are gone, and you know not where, and all you know or can know about them, you get through this old, imperfect, obsolete law of Moses. Praise the bridge that carries you over. It seems enough to suggest an honest person. Again, when I read I heard the words spoken, they had no idea they were a perfect and complete law—the whole of it. Nay verily, they felt like there was more to follow. Now if they were right, then the Ten law theory is all wrong, and if they had a correct idea, they the Lord compliments and confirms them in it. Moses says so, read Deut. v. Now which of the dilemma will you take? Once more. To believe and teach that the ten commands are a perfect law, and the whole duty of man, is to believe and teach a falsehood, as no Bible writer ever talks that way and I know, and I believe that you know, that the ten commands are not, nor never were the whole duty of man. The case man does not say it, no, it is that other fellow, who presumes to himself much liberty with the Word of God and with the people. In conclusion let me ask you kind Christians, Do you not feel away down in your soul, that it would be a great relief to be able to read in the Bible, that this death penalty and all those "last sections, and restrictions about what you shall do, and shall not do on the Sabbath, and been nailed to the cross and taken out of the way? Which would virtually destroy the Sabbath.

Yours Truly.
T. E. Adams

An Open Letter.

Editor of the ——:

In reply to your question permit me to lay down a first principle by which I seek to be governed in all Scripture study and investigation, and that is, the testimony of God is to be believed and argued. Opposite to this is another principle that we must at all cost look or neglect, viz., exhaustive criticism. The contextual teaching related to all passages of the Word cited as proof of any doctrine.

Before coming directly to the subject in hand, it will not be out of place to consider in a general way Jehovah's work and purpose in the earth, as it will enable us to look at the testimony pertaining to a certain feature of the truth in accord with the whole.

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and all things therein, whether animate or inanimate, and among those things divinely created was man. The material—natural cosmos did not originate and make itself. It was on the contrary the direct work of divine wisdom and power. The laws governing the natural world must not be confounded with the cause producing it, lest we exclude from our vision the self existent Eternal Spirit of whom, or out of whom are all things visible and invisible.

Man in the first instance was made out of dust, but the natural law of procreation, is quite distinct from the creative energy that in the first instance made man. The cosmic order was first created before any law pertaining to its subsequent control could find expression through that order.

Son of God.

Adam was a son of God by direct creation out of dust, or out of the earth: something that cannot be affirmed of his posterity. Adam's children are the secondary, indirect production of the procreative energy divinely planted in his constitution in the form of life germs, which by the law of sexuality continue to reproduce, or propagate the species originally created. The natural man—alias, the scientist, is more or less averse to believing anything not seen in what he calls the operation of natural law, and as a result he has spared no effort to discredit the Mosaic account of creation. In one way he cannot complain of lack of compensation, when we realize how absolutely faithless and godless is this present generation. But until more light and evidence of a conclusive nature is presented than has been so far offered, we shall continue to exercise confidence in and feel satisfied with the narrative of Genesis. Plausible speculation based upon the operation of what is termed natural law may be entertainingly entertaining, but never can convincingly solve the mystery as to how the human species originated. Natural law begins a little subsequent to the origin of things, and therefore does not go back far enough to give light where light is most needed. Where we cannot see, or where experimental or absolute knowledge is wanting, we are compelled to fall back upon reason and faith. Reason as to the validity and truthfulness of ever-com records, claiming to be God-given, and faith in the assurance of the same as the light of heaven.

The eye of faith encouraged and strengthened by the intellectual appreciation of satisfactory testimony as evidence can penetrate the darkness of the past, and the invisible future as well; even with unspeakable confidence and joy, confidence as to what has been, and the consolation of hope in what is coming. Reason and faith must go hand in hand; separate them and both are stranded and wrecked. The natural man exercises his reason, but dwarfs spiritual perception and faith with physical curiosities pertaining to the indefinite or unwritten fossils and shells of extinct animal life enveloping the mind with the curious and interesting, but affords no food for faith nor light for hope. The spirit, the heavenly manifestation of life on a higher plane than the natural or animal, there exhibit and outgrowth of the recreation process, made operative through the second man is the true and proper field of faith, even opening the door of hope to the children of men.

New Creation.

No evidence of a new creation would be convincingly apparent if the interposition of the divine hand was not visibly manifest. Our conception of a new creation must of necessity be formed from what the Scriptures teach upon the subject directly, in connection with what they affirm creation was in the first instance.

In other words we must know what creation means before we can determine satisfactorily what is meant by the phrase "New Creation." Adam was created, but it cannot be affirmed that Cain and Abel were God-made like their father; and this illustrates the point we wish to emphasize concerning Jesus, the first man of the "New Creation." Jesus is styled "the beginning of the creation of God." Rev. iii. 14. The quick of perception will hardly misapply this statement. Jesus a creation in a sense peculiar to himself "the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature, for by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him and for him, and he is before all things.....and he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence, for it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." See Col. i. 15-19.

The foregoing quotation deserves particular attention, and I request the reader to notice the following points.

1st. Jesus like the first man was made in the image of God.

2nd. "By him and for him were all things created, whether they be thrones, dominions, principalities or powers." the all things constituting the theme of Apostolic discourse. Paul is not speaking of the material universe, nor of the present cosmic order under the constitution of sin and death, but of a new order having been delivered from the darkness and thraldom of sin.

Adam is the representative head and beginning of this world, not Jesus. We must keep these two orders distinct and separate, if we desire to enjoy the full benefit of the testimony given. Misapprehension and confusion is not desirable, and can be avoided if the Scriptures are properly applied.

3. "He is before all things, the head of the body," etc. The church is created in him, and out of him, deriving its existence from him, even as Mother Eve was created out of Adam. The creation of Adam and Eve was the result of divine power miraculously applied, even as the creation of Jesus and his bride; begins, and ends with miracle; that is not the outgrowth of what we call a law of nature. By nature we are alienated from the life of God, and under the transmitted effects of sin, ending in death. If Adam was the child of miracle, equally so was the second Adam. If the first man was the beginning of the old creation, then the second man stands at the head of the new.

Converting dust into flesh was no more a manifestation of supernatural power, than was the making of the Word flesh. Both were creation acts: illustrative not only of divine power, but also of divine intent and purpose in things attained thereof. Adam was the son of God, not the son of man, but Jesus is more, in that he is both Son of God and Son of Man; which fact involves more perhaps than is apparent at first sight. He is Son of God by creation, and Son of Man by virtue of the substance, out of which he was created. Adam was made out of dust. Jesus was made out of a woman, but both were God made, and therefore sons of God, in a sense peculiar to them alone. Jesus is the beginning of a "New Creation" not out of the dust of the earth, but out of the Adamic race. The "New Creation" is a step forward and upward in that it begins, not as in the first instance with inanimate dust, but rather with vitalized flesh. Adamic flesh in and of itself cannot propagate either physically or mentally, anything higher or better than itself. On this account except God had interposed, it would under the law of sin and death, slowly tend toward extinction. In the creation of the second man, there is the beginning of something higher, and better than the first, in that the substance of his make-up was flesh, which after ages of suffering and moral discipline, had been prepared, and when refashioned by Spirit energy, the development of the second man, as the beginning of a "New Creation" was on a higher plane than the first, not simply in a material sense, but in the mental and moral proclivities that would be actively operative. "The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee," an explanation as to how God would interpose in the incipient process of creating a new family, and a new order of things. It is unnecessary to stumble like the Jew at the idea of Deity having a son, or stagger at the thought of miracle. Miracle is only another word for divine guidance, control and assistance. All along the history of the world God has been constantly assisting the natural to work out the desired result. You see this in Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Samuel and John the Baptist, but in the fullness of perfection in Jesus. Every one and more as the natural order of things was too feeble, God has interposed to strengthen and breathe as it were, anew into man the Spirit of life. Isaac was the son of promise, involving divine power to fulfil the promise. Is Jesus the promised Seed of the woman, inferior to Isaac? Sometimes the divine purpose is overshadowed by marvelous facts in advance of its full and glorious manifestation. Abraham's promised seed,—the child of miracle, was doubtless a type and evidence of the greater Seed to come. Why should we hesitate and stumble at Jesus, and not at Isaac? Indeed all of God's promises are above and beyond natural causes,—even our every day life requires his constant and kindly protection and assistance; else salvation from sin and death would be impossible. Moses, Samuel and John were men of God, but Jesus was more, he was not only a man of God, but the Son o God. While others were servants in God's household, he was the heir of the vineyard, and worthy of all respect and difference from the tenants thereof. In olden times God spoke to Israel by his servants, the prophets, but in the last days of the Jews' commonwealth he spoke to them by his Son. Heb. i. Some foundation for this language must exist, and it is well that we look for it at the very beginning of the new creation. Sonship has its life germ, its embryotic condition of incipiency in the creative act and energy of the Eternal Spirit.

A contemporary refers to a law-suit going on in Switzerland about 'the 520 fish out of the Sempach Lake given to the monks every year for the deliverance from purgatory of the souls of the Austrian soldiers who were slain in the Battle of Sempach. 'Those ecclesiastics have eaten 354,800 of those fish, and they have been saying masses for those souls for nearly five hundred years, and yet the wretched Austrians must be in purgatory still. And if in Mexico they can get a soul out of purgatory in a moment's notice by the winning ticket in a raffle, how comes it that in Switzerland five centuries of their intercessions have not yet prevailed?'

A gentleman, travelling in Persia, says he has been in a town where the bells ring for prayer five times a day, and business men run out of their offices to the churches, leaving their places of business unlocked, and nobody ever has a thing stolen.

Rest.

He sees when their footsteps falter,
When their hearts grow weak and faint;
He marks when their strength is ebbing,
And listens to each complaint.
He bids them rest for a season,
For the pathway has grown too steep,
And bobbed in tender caresses
He gives the loved ones rest.

Like weary and wayworn children,
That sigh for the day's decline,
He knows that the best is waiting
For some kind reward of mine.
So he calls them home to his bosom
From the shadows and toil and sin,
And silently watches o'er them,
He gives to the loved ones rest.

He watches the sorrowful mother
As she bends above each bed,
The father who silently prays
So tenderly o'er his dead.
Counts often are now the trials
And sorrows that make them weep,
For each one has something peculiar
He gives to his loved ones sleep.

He sees it. Friends the dearest
Can never the loved restore;
But He who is the changeless Friend
And Father of the sorrowing kind
Has promised to meet them
He gives to the loved ones rest.

The Battle Hymn of the Republic sung amid the ruins of Spain and Persia.

Spain and Persia during the most splendid epoch of their greatness ruled the known world with a savagery and brutality almost unparalleled in the history of the race.

Although existing in periods many centuries remote from each other these two nations had many points of character and their governments, their final ruin and overthrow up on land and sea, are varied only by the differences in the arenas in which they perpetrated the blackest crime in the annals of history, but.

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord:
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored.
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword.
His truth is marching on."

Five centuries before Christ uttered in prophetic vision of the destruction of Jerusalem, Persia under Darius ruled with a rod of iron almost the known world a vast empire from the upper Ganges to the Nile of Northern Africa and with equal rigor governed what is known as European Russia and Turkey.

Spain, founded upon the ruins of Ancient Rome, conquered the old world and with a proud, ambitious, domineering spirit carried slavery and chains into every nation of the Western Hemisphere. But Columbus, who gave to Aragon and Castile the new world, with unspeakable cruelty was thrust into a Spanish dungeon to wear out his miserable existence under a load of chains. Under the iron rule of the first Charles the whole Iberian peninsula, the Balearic isles and a vast country north of the Pyrenees, the islands of the Mediterranean, Belgium, Austria, Bohemia and Hungary were included in the Spanish empire. In Africa Spain ruled that part of the ancient empire of Persia which the Portugese pirates had seized. In Asia she had conquered the Philippine archipelago and subjected their inhabitants to the same cruelties inflicted by Persia upon the Ionians in the Grecian archipelago.

In the Western hemisphere Spain ruled the greater part of North, South and Central America, including the islands in the West Indies from whose shores the wail of her slaughtered millions ascend and mingle before the throne of heaven with the sighs of the Greeks slain by Persia on the coast of the Aegean sea, and the myriads of victims of Persian and Spanish cruelty in all ages and climes, appealing to the God of Battle in the name of humanity till

They have builded him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps:
His day is marching on."

Obituary.

After four weeks of suffering, little Samuel, infant son of E J. and Lucy B. Groat, fell asleep on Christmas morning; age 11 months and 22 days. We laid him to rest, knowing that his suffering is over and that the sorrows, the worry and care which fall to the lot of those who are permitted to live longer will never be his. We live in hopes that when the voice which spake with resurrection power at the grave of Lazarus, calling him from his silent slumber, shall again speak to the sleeping ones we shall meet our little Samuel. Meanwhile this innocent, trustful life, with its ready smile will live in our memory as an incentive to a higher and nobler life.

Dear Restitution:

I wish to write a few lines for THE RESTITUTION in my lonely hours in memory of my youngest son, who was killed on the race track in Tennessee. His remains were shipped to Plymouth, then on to Lapaz. His funeral was conducted by Bro. Zilmer at the Lapaz church, where I have other sons living. He went in that line of business against my wishes, but I must say he was a good son to me. I have learned from different places that of all the evil surroundings, he tended his work and did his duty. If it was not for hope my heart would break. We can only look to Jesus for consolation. If it was not for him we would all be in despair. When he was here on earth he made us such wonderful promises, said he was going to his Father, then he was coming again the second time. I know his second coming has been delayed so long, but we must still watch and wait. I pray the Father that he will soon send his Son Jesus from heaven to reign here in righteousness, and be our King. That I may be one of the worthy ones, is my prayer.

Your Sister in Christ,

S. SHERLAND.

Notice of District Meeting.

The First District Meeting of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will be held at the Salem meeting house, five miles north of Plymouth on the Michigan road, commencing January 26th, 1899 and continuing over the 5th Sunday. A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and no recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to any for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and as the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Railways Promote Prosperity.

It has been truly said that every prosperous railroad carries its prosperity in every cent and hundred upon its line. Railroads in prosperous conditions spend their money liberally along their lines in the way of improvements. So long as the earnings of a railroad are kept up, their employees are able to earn good salaries and it is to the interest of every man to have railway employes earning good salaries, because no class of people are larger consumers in proportion to the amount of their income than are the railroad employes.

A compulsory reduction of passenger fares will affect the prosperity of any railroad when the average earnings are barely above two cents per mile for each passenger carried. The average in Indiana for last year was a fraction over two cents per mile. The earnings for the current year have been on the down grade and expenses have been largely increased by the war tax, so that the showing is not favorable The deduction is clear that a two cent fare law will not fail to cripple the railways and business in general.

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as associate with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"Were Half the Power."

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals or forts.

The warrior's name would be a name abhorred!
And every nation, that should lift again
Its hand against a brother, on its forehead
Would wear forevermore the curse of Cain!

Down the dark future, through long generations,
The echoing sounds grow fainter and then cease;
And like a bell, with solemn, sweet vibrations,
I hear once more the voice of Christ say, "Peace!"

Europe's Game in the Orient.

Dispatches from the Orient indicate a gradually increasing tension in the relations between France and China. For months France has been negotiating for the cession of additional territory to her settlement near Shanghai. The Viceroy of China refused to grant further concessions.

Following the refusal came an edict appointing Governors of all Chinese provinces members ex-officio of the Tsung-li-Yamen (Chinese Foreign office), thus creating for an extraordinary emergency a Cabinet embracing the whole empire.

The action of the Chinese government was immediately followed by an order from Russia to her Ambassador to Pekin to support French interests in China "as energetically as if they were Russian."

Thereupon the French Consul at Nankin boarded a French warship held in readiness for many weeks and left the city.

Foreign residents at Shanghai are in a state of alarm and are expecting serious trouble of some kind.

Thus all the elements of a serious crisis are at hand, and the signal is only needed for a combined European effort to wrest large portions of territory from the Chinese Empire—by diplomatic cunning, if possible; by force, if necessary.

What are the "claims" of France, Great Britain, Germany, and Russia, in China?

France wants the four southern provinces adjacent to the Tonquin frontier.

Great Britain has determined to control the entire Yang-tse-Kiang Valley, stretching from the Yellow Sea to the eastern and northern confines of India—by far the richest and most fertile part of the Chinese Empire.

Germany is after the Shan-Tung peninsula, bordered by the Yellow Sea and watered by the Yellow River.

Russia has already grasped the Manchurian peninsula, and undoubtedly aims at the ultimate absorption of the entire northern portion of the Chinese Empire.

These are the claims of the European powers. They are not mere diplomatic demands. To a large extent they have already been taken, partly by treaty, but largely by force.

It was but a few years ago the partition of China by the four great powers of Europe was commenced. Yet today they control hundreds of thousands of square miles of territory and millions of population. These territories are administered by European governments, they are amenable to European laws alone, and pay taxes to European treasuries. They have lost their identity as integral portions of the Chinese Empire.

Events are moving swiftly in the slow-going Orient. The years 1897 and 1898 witnessed a tremendous advance in European aggression.

In June, 1897, the French fleet seized the island of Hainan, lying off the coast of the French possessions in Tonquin and commanding the entire southeastern coast of China. The seizure was, of course, diplomatically denied, but the French forces were not withdrawn. They are there yet, and to stay.

The seizure was quickly followed by a "treaty," drawn up at the Quai d'Orsay. By this treaty, signed July 12, 1897, China practically surrendered Hainan to France. In April, 1898, China signed a second treaty "leasing" to France a large and easily defended bay on the southern coast; granted a concession for a railroad from Tonquin to Yunnan-Fu, in the Province of Yunnan; pledged herself not to alienate any of the territory in the four provinces of the empire bordering on Tonquin; and conceded to France a voice in the control of Chinese postal affairs.

France has already wrested much from China. She already controls Cochin-China, Cambodia, Annam, and Laos and Tonquin. These provinces have a combined area of 196,422 square miles and a population of 19,500,000. From them France derives a revenue of $13,400,000. Her trade with these provinces is large and is practically all with France.

French aggression in the south of China is, however, overmatched by Russia's grasping tendencies in the North. It would seem the allied powers of France and Russia are much like the two jaws of a vise, with China in danger of being crushed between them.

Russia has already practically acquired the Manchurian peninsula, having an area of 360,000 square miles. Of course, Russia's claim to the entire possession is not yet recognized by any of the numerous "treaties" which China has been compelled to sign, but Russia holds the principal ports, the coast line, and main province. She is building railroads through it, and her fleet will use its principal harbor for its Asiatic rendezvous. To all intents and purposes Manchuria is today a Russian colony.

Russian aggression in Manchuria bore its first fruits on March 27, 1897, when China signed an agreement "leasing" Port Arthur and Ta Lein-Wan Bay to Russia. The same agreement granted a concession for a railroad through the entire Manchurian peninsula, from Vladivostock to New-Chwang and Port Arthur, and ultimately to Peking.

Russia's advantage from this agreement is a tremendous factor in the final struggle for the dismemberment of the Chinese Empire. Up to the date of the ratification Russia's fleet was ice-bound at Vladivostock the greater part of each year. For centuries she had endeavored to secure a port open to her ships of war the year round. The "leasing" of Port Arthur from China gave Russia that open port. The agreement gives her the exclusive right to use Port Arthur as a harbor for her war vessels, and the fleets of every other power are barred from entrance.

Russia's success was learned with alarm at Berlin, and Germany made haste to secure her share of Oriental spoil. A pretext was easily found. In November, 1897, a German Catholic mission in Shan Tung province was destroyed by a fanatical Chinese mob. In the same month a Chinese mob attacked the German Minister to China in the City of Hoo-Pee, and, it is claimed, insulted the German flag.

Germany dispatched a fleet of four war-ships to the coast. On Nov. 18, 1897, the fortified City of Kiao Chou was seized by force. Germany then demanded the punishment of the leaders of the mob which attacked the German mission, the payment of $150,000 to the families of the murdered missionaries, and an indemnity large enough not only to cover the expenses incurred in sending a naval expedition, but to cover the cost of maintaining a military force at Kia Chou.

Needless to say, the demands were promptly conceded. China paid the indemnity and "leased" to Germany 148 square miles of territory adjacent to Kiao Chou, ceded that port and the bay it commands, and recognized a German "sphere of influence" to the extent of 2,740 square miles.

Great Britain was not long in following the example of her rivals. Lord Salisbury first undertook to come to some arrangement with Russia by which the latter would give up Port Arthur and abandon all attempts at the conversion of the Manchurian peninsula. Russia declined. Thereupon, on May 20, 1898, a British fleet took possession of Wei-Hai-Wei.

The port of Wei-Hai Wei practically bottles up Russia at Port Arthur, as it commands the entrance to the Gulf of Pechili. It advances British policy with reference to the Yang-tse-Kiang Valley. This valley is the cream of the Chinese spoils. It embraces practically one half of the most [illegible] part of the Chinese Empire. The Yang-tse-Kiang drains a territory embracing 800,000 square miles. It is 3,350 miles long and, with its tributaries, furnishes a system of navigable waterways aggregating 12,000 miles in length.

Great Britain, it may be certain, will get the lion's share of the Chinese Empire when the partition of the Orient is finally accomplished facts. —Tribune.

Partition of Persia is the Next Move.

Persia is doomed. China's fate will be that of the Shah's empire. The vast territory once ruled by those proud conquerors, Cyrus, Darius, and Xerxes, is to be the vassal of infidel states, and the nation that has a history of more than 2,500 years is sure to perish within the next quarter century.

Rich in mineral resources, with great possibilities of development under civilized rule, Persia is coveted by Russia and England. The northern territories, under Russian influence, have become partially civilized by the opening of railroads, the kingdom for the most part is in a primitive state. The civilization of Cyrus and the Barbaric splendor of Xerxes have been dissipated until Persia is the least of nations. But the methods of government have changed only slightly since that time. There is no State Treasury, the taxes collected from the people being paid into the private Treasury of the Shah, who spends the money as he wishes.

The more enlightened men of Persia —for the land that produced Omar Khayyam still contains some enlightened men—will welcome the partition of the empire. In the hands of the Russians or the British industries would thrive. The country is rich. At present it exports little besides carpets and tobacco. Yet there are vast mineral resources in the unexplored mountains now held by lawless tribes. There are great areas of fertile fields as large as some of the Western States of the United States, and that under cultivation might be made quite as productive. There are few manufactures except of carpets and silks, for which they are famous, and this is almost entirely handwork. Today there is no progress. Railways are few, and they have been built by Russia and Great Britain for the purpose of mobilizing troops in case of necessity. There are few cart roads. Traveling is mostly done by post horses and caravans, and transports by pack animals.

Those who have visited the country, however, say that it has no great possibilities as any in the world, and the Russian and British statesmen who have made it a bone of contention for a century know it to be the truth.—Tribune.

Recent Archæology and the Bible. No. 6.

The sixth lecture of the present course was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Nicol last night in Tolbooth Church, the subject being "The Early Times of the Hebrew Monarchy." When the children of Israel crossed the Jordan under Joshua and undertook the conquest of Canaan they found the circumstances specially favorable to their enterprise. The Hittites had been exhausted with the wars they had carried on against Egypt and were now on the decline. Early in the reign of Meruptah, who had been named to be the Pharaoh of the Exodus, Egypt suffered from an invasion of strangers from the coast lands of the Mediterranean by the north-east way to Egypt, had overrun the flourishing communities of the Canaanites, and helped to bring about that condition of anarchy in which the Israelites afterwards found the peoples of Canaan. By the time of the conquest, Egyptian suzerainty over Canaan had ceased, and the garrison of Egyptian troops had been withdrawn, and it was with the peoples of Canaan, unaided by foreign allies, that the Israelites had to reckon when they crossed the Jordan and began the conquest. Reference was made to the taking of Lachish by Joshua, and to the record of it in the blackened ruins of the fourth city discovered in the "Mound of Many Cities" excavated at Tel-el-Hesy by Dr. F. J. Bliss, and it helped to give a profound impression of the historical reality of the Israelitish conquest under Joshua when archæologists could point with such a measure of certainty to the ruins of a city which he had sacked. Mentioning that there were important points in the chronology of the times of the Judges still to be settled, the lecturer proceeded to the times of the monarchy, when Jerusalem became the theatre of events now better understood in the light of Palestine exploration and of the recently discovered annals of Assyrian Kings. Reserving the later period of the monarchy, especially as it appears in the cuneiform inscriptions, for another lecture, he devoted attention to the results of the Moabite Stone and the Siloam inscription. Sir Charles Warren's work in the discovery of the underground Jerusalem was described, and especially the excavations which were believed to have laid bare the foundations of Solomon's Temple. It was sometimes supposed that not only the timber but also the stones for the temple at Jerusalem were obtained from Lebanon. There was no doubt Lebanon had supplied the timber to Solomon, just as it had supplied cedar wood for the palaces and temples of the mighty Babylonian cities millenniums before his day. But since the discoverery of the Royal Quarries on the Temple Hill in 1852, the stone of which was exactly the same as those massive stones believed to be the foundation stones of Solomon's Temple and the Temple wall, there was every reason to believe that it was in these quarries the stones for the Temple were hewn and prepared, so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the Temple itself while it was building. It was not long, however, till the Temple suffered at the hands of the spoiler, for in the reign of Rehoboam Shishak, the Sheshong of Egyptian history, in all probability under invitation from Jeroboam, came up against Jerusalem and took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, the record of his successful campaign being engraved on the south wall of the Temple of Amon at Karnak, where a name and a figure appeared which were at first believed to represent King Rehoboam, an identification which has had to be given up. The interest of the Moabite Stone set up by Mesha, King of Moab, the contemporary of Ahab and Jehoshaphat, was described as lying in the fact that it not only confirms in a very interesting way an episode in the Book of Kings, but furnishes the oldest example known of alphabetic writing, and though in the Moabite language, differs very little from the Hebrew, the form of the letters being that of the oldest Hebrew. Between the Moabite account of the episode and that contained in the Hebrew Scriptures there was general agreement, with discrepancies due partly to the fragmentary character of the inscription as we now possess it, and partly to the circumstance that, like other ancient Kings, Mesha recounts his victories and is silent as to his defeats. We do not need to go to the length of Professor Sayce, in attributing to the Hebrew annalist the same readings, to suppress what is humbling to the national pride, for the Biblical writers do again and again chronicle defeats sustained by Israel and Judah, and this is only what we would expect when we consider the moral purpose running through the Divinely-guided history of Israel and the record of it as well. The Siloam inscription, believed to date from the reign of Hezekiah, is the oldest inscription in pure Hebrew that we possess, and showing that a century before the Exile writing had attained to considerable perfection. There is nothing incredible, therefore, in the reference in the Book of Proverbs to proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah, King of Judah, copied out. Kings of Assyria and Babylonia employed large bodies of scribes in copying and editing the older literature of the country, and with writing in such a state of advancement as the Siloam inscription shows, Hezekiah might have had men so employed likewise. The discovery of the Siloam inscription, taken along with the engineering works to which it belongs, shows that the age of Hezekiah was by no means destitute of the arts of civilization and of literary culture, and goes right in the teeth of the contention of the more extreme critics, that writing was unknown in Israel till the time of the Exile. The subject of the next lecture will be "The close of the Hebrew Monarchy in the light of Assyrian Annals."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Punishment Eternal, but Not Eternal Torture.

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." Matt. xxv. 46.

We readily allow that the Greek word translated everlasting, is precisely the same as that translated eternal: it means eternal in the case of the righteous, and eternal in the case of the wicked,—the existence of the righteous to be eternal, the punishment of the wicked to be eternal also. We agree to all this; but, when the word punishment is altered to torment and made synonymous, we disagree at once. Torment and punishment are not necessarily synonymous terms; fine, imprisonment, death, may be called punishments, yet the person so punished may endure no torment at all. Death can be effected in many ways without the individual suffering torment.

But death and destruction, it is contended, cannot be everlasting punishment. We ask, Why not? The sinner is offered everlasting life; he rejects the offer, and is punished with death. Were a man's life taken away for a year, and then restored, he would be punished for a year: if for ever, and never restored, he would be everlastingly punished. In 2 Thess. i. 9, we read that those who "know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and the glory of his power." Here destruction is termed everlasting: not that this destruction is for ever going on, and never accomplished; for we are told that the wicked shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy; but we say if destruction is called everlasting, the punishment which it constitutes can be called everlasting too. Everlasting punishment, for in both cases it is the effect, not the act, which lasts eternally.—W. Dashper.

The religion that makes people pay their debts; the religion that keeps people from speaking ill of their neighbors; the religion that makes no distinction between wealth and poverty; the religion that makes people honest and upright: the religion that makes men manly and women womanly; the religion that is part of people's every-day life, exemplified in kind deeds, loving acts, cheering words, is the religion that is needed in the world today. Have you got it?—Sabbath Advocate.

The largest library in the world is the national library of France, founded by Louis IV., and which contains 1,400,000 books, 800,000 pamphlets, 175,000 manuscripts, maps and charts, 150,000 coins and gold medals, 1,800,000 engravings, and 100,000 portraits.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JAN. 18, 1899.

WE wish to thank our patrons for the promptness with which they have responded to our call for renewals, and for help for the poor. We trust that this last will continue so that it will not be necessary to stop one paper to any of the Lord's little ones. A few who are in arrears have failed to respond, and we must insist on hearing from them. If there is some good reason for your delay further, we ask you kindly to write us, and let us have a clear understanding of affairs. We are asked to pay our accounts, and must ask you to pay yours to us. We will not knowingly wrong any one, and will make right any error shown us, and we only ask that those who know themselves to be behind in payment will make haste to fulfil their promises to us. Please attend to this matter to day.

Till He Come.

The following lines from an English magazine will, we think, bear reprinting:—

"Tell me not with deep emotion,
Of a heaven in the skies;
This will draw no true devotion
From a sinful soul that dies;
While the grave remains the portal,
All must enter till he comes
Till he come the King immortal,
Who himself the victory won.

Tell me not in mournful sadness
Evil things will never cease;
This admits no ray of gladness,
Gives no hope of joy or peace.
But tell out this, yea, tell it ever,
That the Righteous King will reign;
He that lives and fails us never,
Will the Eden bring again.

Then the saints in Jesus sleeping,
Will awake at his glad voice;
And with those in patience waiting,
In the rapture will rejoice.
In the gathering them together,
To the Savior from above,
In the ineffable for ever
All will live, for God is love."

M. MAX REGIS, the Jew-baiter of Algiers, has been elected Mayor by 36 out 87 votes.

FROM what has appeared in the daily papers of late it would appear that there is an Anti-Semitic movement in New York City.

WE see by exchanges that Dr. Herzl has been to Rome to secure the support of high officials to the scheme of founding a Jewish state in Palestine.

BARONESS de Hirsh has donated half the expense of erecting a hospital building at Jaffa ($15,000) on condition that a like amount be raised by general donations.

DR. HERZL when in London recently said, "Today I tell you I do not hold the moment far distant when the Jews will get in motion. I know what I say. I never spoke so distinctly."

FAUNCE says. "The field is not the church: the church is simply the reapers thrust out into the field. God help us to keep the map of this field, and help us to be willing to go anywhere Unless we are willing to go anywhere we are fit to go nowhere."

LORD Kitchener has returned to the Soudan. Before he left England he appealed to the public for £100,000 to found a Gordon Memorial College at Khartoum for the education of the Soudanese. Considerable over that amount has been subscribed. The Marchand Expedition has evacuated Fashoda, and the British and Egyptian flags have been hoisted on the fort.

A LETTER from Sister Woodward, dated at Dutton, Mich., Jan. 10, says that B. W. Woodward is but little improved, has only been able to be out once for a few minutes, coughs a good deal, and is weak. Sister Woodward has so much to do it is impossible for her to write to all the friends who are interested in their welfare. We hope with the change in the weather he will get well and strong again, and be able to go on with the work in hand.

A FAMINE is threatening Russia. The harvest in 1897 was a failure, and 1898 was no better. In some districts of Kazan no food worth speaking of was taken from the soil for man or beast, and hundreds of thousands will have to be fed either by the government or by private charity. For a long time the government persistently ignored the warnings of correspondents,—but at last they are seriously alarmed, and agents are buying grain.

FRANCE is still agitated over the Dreyfus affair, and the St. James' Gazette (London) says the crisis seems more and more to be working up to an overthrow of the Republic as at present constituted. The Westminster Gazette says France need not expect to be rid of the Dreyfus affair for several months to come, and the prospect is a terrible one for Frenchmen. The national debt of France in 1871 was £480,000,000; it is now £1,490,000,000.

PHILIP Brooks once wrote:—"What shall I do with sorrow that God has sent me? Why take it up and bear it, and get strength and blessing out of it."

"Ah, if I only knew what blessing there was in it,—if I saw how it would help me, then I could bear it. What shall I do with this hard hateful duty which Christ has laid right in my way?"

"Do it, and grow by doing it."

"Ah, yes, if I could only see that it would make me grow."

"I hear men everywhere praying for more faith, but when I listen to them carefully and get at the real heart of their prayers, very often it is not more faith at all, that they want, but a change from faith to sight. In both these cases you do not see that what you are begging for is not more faith, although you think it is, but sight. You want to see for yourself the blessing in the sorrow, the strength in the hard and hateful task. Faith walking in the dark with God, only prays for him to clasp his hand more firmly—does not even ask him to lighten the darkness so that he may see the way."

THE new British Ambassador at Constantinople has very energetically protested against the difficulties of English subjects on landing at Jaffa. The ambassador pointed out that restrictive regulations against British subjects of whatever religion, would mean a breach of treaty which the British government could not tolerate. It is said that the Porte, in order to gain time, denied having knowledge of restrictive orders with regard to British subjects, and promised to ask the Governor of Jerusalem for an explanation.

INGERSOLL, the champion atheist for the moment, delivered his new lecture on Superstition last Sunday evening to an immense crowd in one of the large theatres in Cleveland. Hundreds were turned away for want of standing room. And from the press reports we see that the sweltering crowd seemed eager to catch every word that fell from the great blasphemer's lips. This shows the drift of things. Even the form of godliness is fast disappearing. Nothing but God's judgment in the earth will cause men to learn righteousness.

"An Infallible Tribunal."

The knowledge that the disputes, misunderstandings and wrongs of the present maladministration of things, are destined in the purpose of God, to come before an infallible tribunal, at which every man shall have praise or condemnation, is one of the greatest sources of relief which the truth affords. It rejoices one to know that nothing that defileth can enter the kingdom. It is comforting to know that wrongful suffering will be avenged,—that secret faithfulness will then be openly acknowledged, unappreciated worth recognized, and the evil doing, unsuspected, will be held up for execration in the assembly of the holy angels or elohim."

"Give Attendance to Reading."

Was a part of the apostle's injunction to his young son Timothy; and our first words to the brothers and sisters at this time, will be the same words of exhortation—the exhortation of such an one as Paul the aged—"Give attendance to reading."

The most important help in the way to eternal life is the regular and devoted perusal of the Sacred Scriptures. From them alone can that wisdom be obtained which will make "wise unto salvation." There is positively no other source. Hence the necessity of our acquaintance with the things therein revealed, if we would make salvation ours. It is, therefore, of all books most precious, and should be our chief and most beloved companion. It is indeed a lamp unto the feet and a light unto their path. It gives knowledge and understanding of the deep things of God. By it we become acquainted with his mind and purpose. His thoughts there revealed, thus become our thoughts, and impart to us a divine-mindedness, which will, if we are exercised thereby, produce purity of life and form in us a character before him well-pleasing and acceptable. "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy Word." His words are pure words, and when read carefully, and studied carefully will engender holy thoughts, and these impel to pure actions. These actions repeated become habits, and the habits in their sum total form that character which is interwoven with, and in truth is, our real selves. Thus our life-work would be in harmony with God's will, and we should increase daily in the knowledge and love of God,—reaching forward unto the perfect man, unto the measure and stature of the fulness of Christ. Thus we should realize the object for which the Scriptures were given: that we might become as he would have us become; that we might live as he would have us live,—bringing forth fruit unto holiness; being washed, sanctified, and justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

Those who are begotten by the Word become new creatures in him. They possess a power, a mentality, an understanding, through the mighty influence of the inworking of the Word of truth,—by which they are enabled continuously to overcome the promptings of the natural mind, (the thinking of the flesh, the enmity against God, the diabolos, devil) and bind down and crucify the flesh with all its lusts, for the perfect manifestation of the Spirit, the disposition of Christ, to the salvation of the soul.

How full of meaning and weighty with power become the words of Psalm xix. 7-11:—"The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb. Moreover by them are thy servant warned; and in keeping of them there is great reward."

While other learning, then, may gain the applause of a few frail creatures, whose applause may soon be hushed forever by the hand of death,—divine knowledge will direct the soul to the raptures of eternal day, and insure the approbation of the King of kings, and the welcome congratulations of angelic myriads, in the presence of him who is, and who was, and who is to come."

For Our Children.

Forgive and Forget.

Forgive and forget, forget and believe,
Be happy whoever your lot may be cast;
Don't dwell on the wrongs you daily receive,
Nor think that your troubles forever will last.

No day brightly dawns but darkly may close,
And clouds will hang under the sunniest skies;
But happy is he who cheerfully goes,
And turns from the shadow faith's large, loving eyes.

This life is too fleeting and precious to throw
Away on the trifles that float in the air;
To catch at the zephyrs or sunbeams that glow,
Will drive the most gifted to grief and despair.

If wronged and you know it, don't bitterly weep,
But with a stout heart move steadily on;
When safe in your bosom the secret you keep,
The triumph o'er pride is patiently won.

Forgive and forget. How placidly flow
The currents of joy that mingle and meet,
Beneath the broad splendors of Hope's weeping bow,
When the triumph of peace is full and complete.

Then cherish love only and always be kind,
And never return a slight that is given;
And friend unto friend and your virtues will bind
And strengthen your trust in the goodness of heaven.

The Story of Israel. No. 86.

MARCHING TO CANAAN. NUM. XII. 1-16.

It was the 25th day of the second month, when that innumerable flock of quails flew in from the sea, over and around the camp of Israel.

The month of feasting, lasted 29 days in all, making 86 days of delay on the journey, as you will see before we get through this lesson.

They have marched but three days; they started the 20th of the second month, rested the 21st, marched the 22nd and 23d, began murmuring on the eve of the 24th, and the quails were sent the eve of the 25th.

They ought to have reached Kadesh-Barnea, Thursday—the 4th day of the third month, but they will not very naughty after they get there, and none of the older people, except Caleb and Joshua, will ever make Canaan their home.

The Israelites remain encamped at Kibroth-hataavah, a whole month, as we have said before, then march due north, up the Wady El Attlyeh, to Hazeroth, situated at the base of the Jebel er Tih mountains and on a plateau, much higher than the one they have left. There are no quails here. There flight is low down, across the lower valley.

Can you guess what happened while they stood at Hazeroth?

"Aaron and Miriam spake against Moses, because of the Ethiopian woman that he had married, for he had married an Ethiopian woman."

We thought, Zipporah. Jethro's daughter was a Kenite, or Midianite, but we hunt up some ancient maps and see that the people of Arabia, are called Ethiopians, so Zipporah, could be properly called an Ethiopian, and a Kenite too. But some think that Zipporah died, and that Moses, married a second wife. He was married twice, according to Josephus, the Jewish historian, but his first wife was not Zipporah, but Tharbis, the daughter of an Ethiopian king, who lived far up the river Nile.

The Ethiopians had come against the Egyptians, and were defeating their armies and taking their cities. Everybody was afraid of them. Moses was made general on the Egyptian side. He marched into the country of the Ethiopians and surprised and defeated them. He went against a city built on an island between the Blue and the White Nile. It is now called Khartoum,—the gate-city of central Egypt that we spoke of in our other lesson. It is a hard place to capture. Moses, was a very handsome man. Tharbis saw him and thought she would like to have him for her husband. She sent him word that "if he would take her for his wife the city should be his." He agreed, the city was given up, the marriage took place and the war ended.

The Bible, says nothing about Tharbis, unless this Ethiopian, that Aaron and Miriam are fretting about, is her. Moses was a very meek man, more so than all the men that lived upon the face of the earth. He had no confidence in himself: he could never have put himself forward to be the leader and king of such a great people, if the Lord had not chosen him. But he had confidence in God and was faithful to him in all his house. Yet Aaron and Miriam envied him: they thought they ought to be recognized as prophets too, and have as high a position as he had. The Lord calls all three to the tabernacle, and informs them that "if there be a prophet among them, he will make himself known to him in a vision or speak unto him in a dream."—"Mouth to mouth and not in dark speeches."

"Why were they not afraid to speak against his servant Moses?" He was angry with them and when he went away, the cloud was taken too. Miriam had become a leper, white as snow. Aaron looked at her and saw how foolish they had been. He prayed that the sin might not be laid upon them (the consequences of the sin, he means) and Moses cries to the Lord and Miriam is healed. But she must remain outside of the camp seven days for that is the law. I told you the total delay would be 36 days and these seven days make it.

The Israelites, now "move north again, up through the pass in the mountain range and out to the second terrace of the Sinaitic Peninsula."

They have come to the edge of "The great and terrible wilderness."

They have only traveled five days in all this time. It will take six more days to get to Kadesh. This wilderness, is the great desert of Paran. Moses sees that no more time must be wasted. So he hurries them up and they camp that night at Rithmah, the modern Bireth Thineh, thirty miles west of Ezion Gaber at the head of the gulf of Akabah. The next stopping places are not set down till you get to Numbers xxxiii.

They left Rithmah and went on to Rimmon-parez and staid over the Sabbath. Then to Libnah; from there to Rissah; next to Kehelatha, opposite the mouth of Wady Quades, the 11th and last day's journey they went up the Wady Quades, to Kadesh Barnea.

Can you find it on your maps? We begin the thirteenth chapter of Numbers here. We will take that for our next lesson. It will tell us about the sending of the spies into Canaan.

AUNTIE WINCE.

It is probably not generally known that the word 'dad,' used by many children in place of 'father,' is the purest Welsh. The opening words of the Lord's prayer in Welsh are Ein Dad.

Communicated.

Isaiah xi. and 9th.

"They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

This prophecy relates to the condition or state of things growing out of the reign of the Messiah in the age to come, and relates to things on the earth (viz.) men and beasts. The prophecy is literal in every aspect, and terrestrial in its application. In the beginning God gave Adam absolute dominion of the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and they were willing servants to man, and we may rightly conclude perfectly docile to him, and peaceful toward each other. That their natures were perverted when man gave heed to the serpent's lie. The effect of sin touched and marred the earth and all upon it with discord and inharmony. The animals turned upon each other with tooth and nail, and refused to submit to the service of man, without a struggle, and contested the right of dominion with him. This state of things still obtains everywhere. In some parts of the earth many thousands fall victims to the ruparious cruelty of wild beasts every year. No locality is entirely free from some form of poisonous serpents, or venemous reptile. Even our most docile domestic animals come far short of meeting the picture the prophet has made to represent that time when the righteous branch shall reign and prosper. A moment's reflection tells us such viciousness among beasts could not be tolerated there. We may thank God that he has not forgotten to promise the second Adam absolute dominion over all the earth, including every creature. Our brethren are well aware how absurd and foolish this writing would be to a by one, except ourselves who believe in a restitution age.

To show you how this view is received and disposed of, I will relate a little Sunday School experience with the 11th chapt. of Isaiah as the lesson. The class agreed in explaining away the beasts, and transforming them into men, and women, and children, and of course they could not make their figure go on one leg much less four. Seeing their helplessness I ask if I might have five minutes time to talk about that point in the lesson. It was granted. I said in substance "Man possessed originally perfect control over all earthly creatures. This was forfeited when sin entered into the world. That the present world is evil, and the curse has touched earth and everything upon it. That the world to come would be given the Messiah, and that meant the removal of the present state of things here on the earth, and in their stead a new order of things would be established in harmony with man's perfect happiness, and the righteous rulers will, and it would result producing harmony and peace even among the beasts of the forest and field. I closed by saying I understood the language to teach that the vicious animals in the age to come would not hurt anybody. The pastor of the church being present replied as follows, "I do not believe this language could refer to a reformation of beasts: as they have no soul or spirit, nor moral sense. Hence God could not make them docile." "And besides I do not believe there will be such a menagerie of animals in heaven." This last thought showed that my weapon had not pierced his understanding, his thoughts were "Beyond the Jasper Sea." What simplicity. This same Sunday school waded through Moses and the Prophets every year, and has done so for forty consecutive years. Shall I say, "Ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth?" How will they be ready to enter into the work assigned to the servants of the Lord when he returns, seeing they have ignored his teaching, and scorned the work he has appointed them for that age. It is a serious matter if God is concerned about man's faith as he is about his actions. To my mind he requires him to believe his word and walk by it, and hope in it. Let us rejoice in and be satisfied with the precious promises of his grace, and wait for his Son from heaven. Yours in hope.

"He Giveth His Beloved Sleep."

Bro. John W. Anderson died at his home in Dixon, Ill., the 2nd day of Jan. 1899, after an illness of but a few days.

As the peaceful calm steals over the turbulent waves of the ocean, so did the cares and storms of this mortal life pass away and he fell asleep in Jesus, to sweetly rest until the voice of his Savior will awaken him to everlasting glory and happiness.

Bro. Anderson was born Feb. 17, 1823 in Chester Co. Penn., and during the early years of his life he was a firm member of the Baptist Church, but after hearing the truth preached by H. V. Reed, of Chicago, he believed and obeyed the gospel, being baptized by Mr. Reed: and for thirty-five years he has worked and contended for the truth, taking the Bible for his guide day by day, and striving for the great reward promised to all who overcome. "And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life." 1 John ii. 25.

During the latter years of his life the Bible was constantly by his side, it was to him as his daily meat, and he never wearied of reading and talking over the many precious teachings of the wonderful Book.

In the little church of Dixon he was a zealous worker, striving to keep together the little flock, and by preaching and expounding the Word among them to keep the light of the gospel clear and bright before them.

From their midst one is gone who will be greatly missed and though the loss will cause sadness, yet will come the comfort that he is peacefully awaiting the coming of the Savior, and that in his words, is the comfort and the hope which helps us all in our affliction.

"I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

The funeral sermon was preached by D. M. Hudler of Muscatine Iowa.

Written by one who has realized his gentle kindness and love, and who now mourns the loss of a loving father. His daughter,

"Law or Gospel, Which?"

Editor Restitution:

I wish to say a few words of praise of Bro. Joblin's article on the "Law or Gospel, Which?" I think we readers of THE RESTITUTION owe it to ourselves to see that those letters are printed in pamphlet form and that we give them a well directed and wide circulation. I have read many treaties on this subject of which he so ably treats, and I think his is the best of all. "Would-be law keepers" are every where, and nothing is better to head them off, and catch the attention of honest men and women about to embrace the "Law Gospel" of the Seventh Day Adventist people. As these articles of Bro. Joblin's. Therefore let us do our duty to see them in pamphlet form and then use them the best we know how. Just a word and a few tracts in time saved me from being a Seventh Day Adventist by Bro. Bingly about 9 years ago, and by the use of these articles we may help others to see the light.

Christ is Coming.

All the elements are telling it; the sky is full of signs;
There's an ominous awakening foreboding God's designs.
E'en the timorous are telling what the mighty fear to speak,
And the powerful are cringing with the wicked and the weak.
It is God's expostulation with the wretched and the rich,
With the princes in their palaces, the drunkards in the ditch.
Christ is coming, Christ is coming, all the prophecies proclaim,
With the mighty hosts of heaven, in his chariot of flame.
He is coming, he is coming, it is written in the sky;
Earth is ripening for the harvest, and the harvest-time is nigh.

He has heard the cry of millions in the slavery of sin:
He has listened to the shouting of the ones he died to win;
He is gathering his armies for our liberation day;
And that great emancipation human hands cannot delay.
He is whispering in the whirlwind, he is speaking in the flood,
In the perfume-laden zephyr, in the bursting of the bud.
All the stars are singing praises to the glories of his name,
While the rocking earth is groaning 'neath a load of sin and shame.

View parades her gaudy trappings 'mid the pleasure-seeking throng,
Tinging with enticing glamour every separate way of wrong.
Homes once happy are in ruins through the gay deceiver's wiles;
While the throng are singing praises to the drama that beguiles.
There's a luring fascination for the slinking libertine
In the comedy of passion, for a glimpse behind the scene.
Soon the bloodhounds are followed by the wrecking of a life,
And the bonds are snapped asunder 'tween a husband and a wife.
There's a plaintive cry ascending in a long, unceasing moan
From the lowly orphan children to the great Judge on his throne.

Yonmay listen but a moment to the mutterings of woe
That are gathering all around you as the seasons come and go;
But the words you hear are laden with a draught of bitter dregs—
There's a great, gaunt army growing, and the ragged waif who begs
At the doorstep of your dwelling is a thoroughly-drilled recruit
In that massive, marching legion moving down destruction's route.
Justice heeds the cry but seldom of the innocent oppressed;
Where the glittering bribe is lacking, many a wrong is unredressed.
Wealth is marshalling its forces; labor's legions are astir,
Anarchy, the wild, red-handed, has in this its dowager.

All the nations are a-quiver with the threatenings of strife,
Pouring out a golden river for new means of taking life.
They are furrowing the ocean with a myriad ships of mail,
Ballasted like clouds of fury with a cloud of iron hail.
On the hill the beacon's lighted, every torch is trimmed anew,
And the ranks of moving millions gather where the harvest grew.
There's a force unseen impelling all earth's nations to the fray;
'Tis the warrior host of Satan, hastening Armageddon's day.

You have seen the stars of heaven falling as the King foretold;
Seen the moon with bloody visage; seen the sun his light withhold.
You have seen the march of knowledge with its swift increasing stride,
And the progress of invention, like an irresistive tide.
You have seen the preparation of the armies of the world,
Waiting now the order only like swift meteors to be hurled
To the seething sea of turmoil, 'gainst the city and the plain,
Belching death in iron hailstorm, strewing all the land with slain.
God is holding still the bridle of the prancing warrior steed,
While there yet is hope in heaven and a Priest to intercede.

When redemption's work is finished in this sin-polluted land,
And the seal of God is given to his humble, faithful band,
Angel hands will stay no longer earth's impatient armed horde,
And the trodden plains will redden 'neath the thrashing of the sword,
Sad will be the billows' burden where the flaming fleets go down,
With the bright-eyed sailor laddie, and the captain of renown.

Then the form of the Redeemer in the heavens will be seen,
Seated on a cloud of glory, in his hand a sickle keen.
By the hand that bled for sinners will the harvesting be done;
For salvation's work is finished, and the race of sin is run.

Glorious things of thee are spoken,

Editor of the ——:

MARY'S PEDIGREE.

The conception and birth of the Lord Jesus as given by Matthew and Luke is, in my judgment, in full accord with the foregoing general view of Jehovah's work. In reading those narratives, however critically, I find it exceedingly difficult to discover a single verse that could be omitted without doing violence to the record as a whole; besides causing obscurity instead of giving light. Matthew's history makes Joseph his reputed father call his name Jesus, while Luke's record imposes the same obligation upon Mary. This fact is a pointer. The two writers are in substantial harmony, but writing from two different standpoints. Matthew makes mention of Mary incidentally, only when it was necessary to complete his narrative as a whole, and Luke is equally silent as to Joseph; showing that while one wrote the history of the male line, the other confined himself exclusively to the female side of the house. We can hardly look upon this fact as accidental. If Mary had not been a descendant of David, Luke's record was and still is without especial significance. If Jesus was the son of Joseph, doubtless both narratives would have stated the fact, without any hesitation, or ambiguity, but they did not. Luke in his preface avers in all candor that he had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, and writes his narrative that others might know the certainty of those facts wherein he had been instructed. His language seems to imply that he considered himself fully as well, if not better qualified, than others to give an accurate history of Jesus from his birth to his resurrection; that is all the facts pertaining thereto.

Crediting his statement as truthful, I read his record of the said facts carefully to determine, if possible, whether it bears on its face any evidence of having been designedly corrupted, or in any way disfigured by the cunning craft of an interpolator. Commencing with Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, he gives an account of the conversation that transpired between the angel and Zacharias with reference to his forthcoming son, that should be born to him in his old age—also the fact that he should call his name John, and how he should be grant, being filled with the Holy Spirit from his birth—chosen and sent of God to prepare the way and make ready a people for the coming One, even Jesus, the Son of God. Moreover, he does not overlook the incidental fact that Zacharias became of his old age, and Elizabeth, his wife, well stricken in years, was more inclined to argue with Gabriel than to believe the statements of his celestial visitor. All this was natural, just what we would anticipate when something out of the natural order of things is promissive. Had Zacharias acted differently he would have been in this day of criticism regarded as an imaginary character, one of those fictitious beings so common to the light literature of modern times. He desired to see a miracle, before he could believe a miracle possible, especially when pertaining to his own individual experience. He acted and spoke from the impulse of the moment and therefore in line with the natural. This fact in my judgment inspires confidence in the record. There is a total obscurity of anything like fraud or cunning deception in the narrative, hence I am compelled to believe it as truthful.

In a later time miracles became common place, and pious frauds abounded, on every hand. From the second to the fourth century and onward religious romance prevailed to such an extent, and superstition so overshadowed the religious world that nearly all the literature of those times is little more than a mixture of fable and fraud, or "lying wonders." Luke's narrative evidently escaped the corruption of theological bigots and zealots as is apparent from the simplicity and brevity of its statements in full accord with the natural where the supernatural interposes. His record does not invoke the supernatural where the natural is sufficient, nor does it exclude the divine, where the human is feeble and helpless and therefore incompetent to work out the desired result. He treats human nature as it really is instead of clothing it with the marvelous drapery of myth and superstition. Zacharias demanded a sign for he was skeptical, this fact is consistent with the teachings of the natural man, a craving for evidence visible to the physical eye. His attitude mentally was defiantly practical and stubbornly incredulous, doubtless just as you and I would have acted under similar circumstances. I see nothing of a legendary nature so far in the record. The desired sign was given: more of a sign perhaps than Zacharias desired, but it was certainly convincing, in that it could not be mistaken. It was even a miracle, of such a nature, as to prove both a sign and a reproof: rendering the unbelieving priest at the altar of incense speechless and dumb. All this, however, is in line with precedents of like character in the old Scriptures, notably in the case of Moses, who sought by argument and excuses to evade the divine will, until silenced by the miraculous infliction and healing of leprosy in his own person. Thus far Luke's history is in line with the old Scriptures, and consistent with itself and the facts it purports to narrate. Certainly no pagan hand of corruption is visible in any part of the record so far examined. Six months after John's birth and mission had been foretold the same messenger visited Nazareth, and entering the house where abode a virgin daughter of Israel, he greeted her as follows, "Hail thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women." When she saw the angel and heard his salutation, Mary did not faint or swoon: though somewhat surprised and affrighted, she nevertheless maintained her self possession, and while in the presence of Gabriel was becomingly modest and dignified in her deportment. If there is any fraud in Luke's record, we ought to be able to detect it in this and what follows in the way of conversation between the angel and Mary. The intelligence, judgment and practical good sense of Mary shines forth in the fullness of native ability and strength. Doubtless she was a virgin of mature years, surrounded by humble circumstances it is true, but gifted with those graces of mind and heart that in the providence of Jehovah made her truly the highly favored of God, and blessed among women. In examining critically this record I do not see how one verse could be omitted without disjointing the narrative as a whole. If we were to drop out the 34th and 35th verses, for which we have no authority we would but add obscurity, where now none exists.

Mary's question, "How shall these things be?" is no more than would naturally follow as the result of Gabriel's announcement. Her question did not arise from unbelief, as is evident from Elizabeth's words in verse 45. But if verses 34 and 35 are spurious then verse 45 is pointless. Mary had greater reason to doubt the angel's word than did Elizabeth and Zacharias. But if Mary's first born Son was the son of Joseph she deserved no credit for believing the angel's word, for there was nothing improbable or marvelous in the fact of her future maternity, seeing that she was already bethrothed to Joseph. Elizabeth, however, in verse 45 gives her praise and commendation for believing something evidently not in accord with the natural course of things: if not, then her language to Mary is without point. She gave her praise for faith in contradiction to her own husband's unbelief, when in fact if Gabriel's answer to the question, "How shall these things be?" is spurious and false Mary deserved no credit whatever. Zacharias was smitten with dumbness—paralyzed in speech not only as a sign, but as a reprimand for unbelief. Unbelief of what? That John should be the forerunner of Christ? No. That was not what he called in question. What he doubted was that he should have a son in his old age. His unbelief was natural, rational, and practical, and therefore he demanded a sign. But not so with Mary. She believed that the purpose of God would be accomplished, however improbable from a natural standpoint it might appear, and on this ground the words of Elizabeth are significant, "Blessed is she that believeth, for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord." What was it that Mary believed? What were the things told by the Lord? Moreover why did Elizabeth commend her for believing if there was no such a thing as divine interposition in the conception and birth of her son? Evidently we are surrounded by statements in this record that are absolutely irreconcilable with the hypothesis that Joseph begat Jesus. Not only so, but inconsistent with themselves. god's promise,—a promise that required, as do all of Jehovah's promises, divine fulfilment. Mary rightly comprehended this principle, from her acquaintance with Jehovah's dealings with her nation: but how it was to be done, was the information she desired. The desired information Gabriel gives in what follows as an explanation as to how Jehovah would himself interpose to fulfill the promise made. We cannot hide our eyes to these facts narrated by Luke, and confirmed by Matthew.

It matters little as to the geneology that follows, or even that given by Matthew, so far as concerns the legitimate heirship of Jesus to the throne of David and his kingdom. Matthew evidently wrote from a Jewish point of view as he begins with Abraham, which was all sufficient so far as the Jew was concerned, while Luke traces the geneology of Heli back to Adam, the son of God. Matthew says Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary. Accepting this statement as true we are compelled to regard Heli as the father of Mary. Joseph could have been Heli's son only in a legal sense, by adoption or marriage. Being in the line royal as the son of Jacob, and the legal head of his wife, who also was of royal blood through another branch of David's family, it appears all proper and right that his name is mentioned or counted in the geneology as given by Luke. But if we desire to be cynically critical, we might set up the claim that Luke's table of names had been corrupted, or that some mistakes had occurred by way of transcribing. This, however, would be assuming what we ought to be able to prove. But suppose we substitute the name of Mary in the place given to Joseph, can any man point out wherein the record would be disfigured in any other part, or wherein it would contradict anything affirmed by Matthew? That Luke actually gives the pedigree of Mary is evident to my mind from his narrative as a whole. The same thing can be affirmed of Matthew concerning Joseph. We certainly must exercise judgment and reason when we compare Matthew with Luke's, and to what other conclusion can we come, than that Matthew gives the pedigree of Joseph, while Luke gives that of Mary.

Joseph, according to Matthew, was in the line of Solomon; while Luke follows in his register of names through Nathan; both, however, were sons of David. These two branches of David's family appear to unite in Zorobabel, and again divide until united by the marriage of Joseph and Mary. I cannot undertake to notice all the difficulties that have been encountered in endless geneology, nor even those given by Matthew and Luke. However, in comparing the two it is noticeable that while Matthew commences with Abraham and comes down through David and Zorobabel to Joseph, Luke follows the stream backward to its fountain in Adam. Was this accidental? Matthew says "Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ." If Joseph was really the father of Jesus, why did he not say Joseph begat Jesus? This would have been in accord with the style of his geneology as a whole. But when he comes to Joseph there is a sudden break in his mode of expression, necessitated no doubt by the facts in the case. He could say David begat Solomon, but he could not write Joseph begat Jesus. This is more than confirmed by Luke and John. Luke writes "being as was supposed, the son of Joseph," who was the son of Heli. There evidently was a known cause in Luke's mind for these words, else this statement would have never been written. Luke avoided the difficulty of saying Heli begat Joseph, and this fact goes a long way in proving that Luke purposely arranged his table to give the pedigree not of Joseph, but of Mary. We are, actually, it seems to me, shut up to this conclusion; that Mary's name is omitted, affords no grounds for stumbling; nor any real cause for quibbling. It is worse than folly to critically quibble over a matter of this kind, unless we have strong support from other sources. Moreover, we are bound to be honest with sound judgment and reason in a matter where their exercise is absolutely essential. Luke gives some one's pedigree, it cannot be Joseph's, else Matthew's is false. What conclusion then other than the one indicated can we come to?

Blindness in Part Happened to Israel.

"For I would not brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Rom. xi. 25.

This is the A. V. rendering. Without at present quoting any other translation we will try and find out what the apostle means; and to do this it is necessary to refer to other passages of this same chapter and book. The Scriptures more than any other book are self-explanatory. The discouraged and disconsolate prophet Elias at one time thought that he, of all Israel, was the only one who was not worshiping Baal. The answer of God to him was, "I have reserved to myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal," verses 3, 4. The apostle having quoted these words then says, "Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace." ver. 5. The idea here is, "a part of Israel" in contradistinction to "all Israel." A part of Israel in the prophet's day were worshipers of the true God; in Paul's day a remnant or part were elected by grace; leaving a part, a very large part, of which he affirms blindness. This is very plain. The thought in the apostle's mind, and on the very surface of his words is, that a part of Israel were blinded or hardened through unbelief. It is a part of Israel and not "a part of the prophecies" as it is sometimes understood.

The 7th verse reads "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded." Why this failure on the part of Israel? In chapter ix. 32, we are told: "Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling-stone." Christ was the "stumbling-stone and rock of offence laid in Zion." The Israel that stumbled sought justification by the law. Who then is this Israel? Answer. A people with the law in their hands at the time when the Messiah appeared among them. It was not the ten tribes or Ephraim-Israel, but Judah-Israel who as a nation had rejected Christ, and whose doom was near at the date of this letter to the Romans. The former abandoned the law away back when they lived in Samaria and adopted Baal-worship instead. It is written: "When Ephraim spake trembling, he exalted himself in Israel, but when he offended in Baal he died." Hosea xiii. 1. Jereboam took counsel and made two calves of gold, setting the one at Bethel and the other at Dan; made a house of high places and made priests of the lowest of the people. The law was not Ephraim's ritual of worship and of course he did not seek to be justified by its deeds. Israel of the ten tribes went into captivity without the law and are found a people not worshiping according to its ordinances. They got rid of their idolatry somewhere out in their captivity, as did Judah at Babylon; for Hosea represents Ephraim as confessing thus: "What have I to do any more with idols." Hosea xiv. 8. Jeremiah describes Ephraim as "bemoaning himself," thus: "Thou hast chastened me and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: turn thou me and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God." Jer. xxxi. 18. God in his faithfulness and unwillingness to forget Ephraim pledged himself to be a little sanctuary to them in the countries where they should come. Ez. xi. 16. Ephraim is styled "God's first-born," his "dear son" and "a pleasant child." And all this in their captivity. Their sins were not so great as those of Judah's, consequently their punishment would be less severe and protracted. Judah is still blind and groping her way in the darkness of legalism. Their table has been "made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling-block, and a recompense unto them." Rom. xi 9. Even to this day "their minds are blinded; the vail is upon their heart when Moses is read." See 2 Cor. iii. 13. Their day of turning to the Lord is near when the vail will be removed and then the two nations forming one under one head will rejoice together in the Lord. I will now give Conybeare and Howson's translation of the text embodying the headline of this article: "For I would not have you ignorant, brethren, of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own conceits—that hardness in heart has fallen upon a part of Israel until the full body of the Gentiles shall have come in."

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Our Love Feast.

Editor Restitution:

We are living as many others of the household of the faith, isolated from the privilege of meeting to worship as we would like to. There are but few of us here endeavoring to hold to the one faith. Several others are friends to it, but popularity is to strong for them to resist, an earnest contention is demanded, but we must be patient, gentle, apt to teach, it is true, but we cannot sanction the heresies that our Brother said would come by reason of which the truth would be evil spoken of. Your Brother in the one hope of his soon coming, with a remembrance of our dear brother Editor in our prayer.

WM. D. ROOT.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

And to all those that have obtained like precious faith with us through the rich treasures of God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Merry Christmas, and Happy New Year to you all. What are we striving for anyway? Oh, for a crown, for the overcomers, as Jesus has overcome. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." Oh those words, "As I also overcame." Brethren let us awaken as we vow that if the Lord will spare our lives, giving us health and strength that we will work more in the cause than we have done in the year that is past. In this love feast let us be very careful how we write, you all know that paper is very gentle, will lay still and let us write on it just what we please, and talk is cheap, so let us not promise anything to the Lord except what we intend to do. While I have been to 67 New Years already, I can say that I am strong in the faith, and I will do for 1899, as much as in me is, preach the gospel to other cities wherever there is a way opened, my hands untied so that I can go, then go I will. According to our great and learned men the time is nearly up when "He that will come, will come and will not tarry," and when the number is full, the door will be closed. Are we ready? that is the question, not who can write the best article. When I look back to my younger days to the days when I first learned the truth from Br. J. F. Wagoner, R. Corbaley, and old father Shaffer, in old Ind., nearly 40 years ago, and take a look at the line of the old soldiers of the cross, and see how the enemy death has slew the old soldiers, I stop and ask, who will be the next to fall on the battle field? Is it I? "Finally my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." Eph. vi. 10, 11. "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand." Oh, how hard it is to stand with all of the many pleasure resorts and pleasure games not only by the world, but the different churches, and some of the one faith people forget themselves, and the first thing we know are pattering after the world's people. "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit, which is the Word of God: Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." You all read all the Savior's last prayer, or the one you find in John xvii. 9, "I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me: for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and I am glorified in them. I have given them thy word; and the world hated them, because they are not of the world. How much better are we than they? I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou thou shouldst keep them from evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth." (French the Word.) "Neither pray I for these alone but for them also which shall believe on me through this Word. That they all may be one; as thou Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us. Not one for Paul and one for Apollos, and of Cephus; and of Christ. Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul. Brethren we want to be careful as to how we exalt men, Paul may plant and Apollos water, but God gives the increase. The gospel is "God's power unto salvation" is not the man that converts. He only sows the good seed and if it falls into good ground it produces in due time. Well, now back to St. John xvii. How close do we come of fulfilling this prayer? and why should we all be one in him? "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me?" What were these things written for that Paul tells us in Rom. xv. 4? "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope." In St. John xx. 30, we find "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples which are not written in this book. But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name." In conclusion will say or ask how many of the dear ones will start anew, not only with pen and ink and paper, but with your means and your all in the spread of the gospel by helping those that are willing to go out into all the world, why there are hundreds, yea millions of people hungering and thirsting for a morsel of the bread of life and to get to the well of no one heeds the call, to busy making money to lay it up for that day that James speaks of, James v. 1 to 8, just upon us. If you can't do more send THE RESTITUTION as a New Years gift to some poor hungry starving soul, all we need of this world's goods is just enough to get through this world. Send out tracts, papers and help the poor, lift up the fallen, let us do more good in 1899, than any year before, and the good Lord will prosper you both spiritually and also in earthly goods. If you don't want to send Paul, send Apollos, or Cephus, all that can sow let them go out and preach if they can't see what good they have done it may be that the Lord can. I recollect of reading where only twelve were standing by Jesus all had left him but twelve, and asked them "Will ye also go away?" they answered, "To whom shall we go, thou hast the words of eternal life." These words are a comfort to me. "Thou hast the words of eternal. May God bless you all, all that love the Lord.

JOHN FOORE.

Editor Restitution:

Don't stop the paper it is the best religious paper that ever came into my house, keep right on, here to the line regardless where the chips fall. Enclosed you will find pay for paper and will try to keep you paid up sooner. Yours in the soon coming of the Lord.

Crippling the Interests of Many Indiana Citizens.

It is estimated that there are over two millions of persons dependent upon or interested in railways, exclusive of the large number of individuals concerned in the manufacture or production of railroad materials. A large number of this vast army are residents of Indiana and their prosperity depends upon the prosperity of the road in which they are interested as employes. Any legislation which will interfere with the advancement of those interests will necessarily be felt in the communities which are in a great measure dependent upon them for support in different ways.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as present for 1899. The cost is only three cents a week.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall Co. Ind."

Remittances should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JANUARY 25, 1899. NUMBER 4.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

If Life were All.

[illegible] and death were ruin and—
[illegible] turned the soul to higher aims—
[illegible] love, and quest, and deed,
[illegible] we could—but we want life attaining
Reward so small
[illegible] never [illegible] the battle line sustains,
If life were all.

[illegible] further object—
[illegible] of the distance of life's utmost scope—
[illegible] sometimes, where joy [illegible]
[illegible] for all things that our hearts may [illegible]
Beneath Life's pall
[illegible] not [illegible] for those long years to grope
If Life were all.

[illegible] recall, and [illegible] wild storms
[illegible] nor [illegible] shone thro' the awful
[illegible]—
[illegible] through the Dark no outstretched loving Arms
[illegible] the world to forsake his wars:
O, cup of gall!
Life were not worth the [illegible] of its tears,
If Life were all.

MARY'S PEDIGREE.

Of the four historians Mark is the only one who contents himself in beginning his record with the entrance of Jesus upon his public ministry. His words are the beginning of the glad tidings of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. We cannot pass by in silence the words "Son of God." On what grounds could Mark call Jesus the Son of God? Certainly there must be some reason for such an exalted title and name. Was he the Son of God in any sense more than John the Baptist? He certainly was not, if we ignore the testimony of Matthew, Luke and John. Mark even fails to show us he was of the lineage of David, or that he has any earthly parentage at all, nevertheless he hesitates not to call him the "Son of God," even more than hinting that the anointed One could be no other than Jehovah's Son. It seems to me that Mark's narrative lends aid and support to both Matthew and Luke. It certainly does not contradict them. Luke shows why Jesus should be called the Son of God, in his record of the conversation that transpired between Mary and Gabriel, and Mark I., in full accord therewith. John's record differs from all the rest. He affirms almost nothing as to the human side of the Messiah. Matthew and Luke relate the facts pertaining to the conception and birth of Jesus: but John goes back to the original fountain of the creation. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made, that was made.....And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten Son of the Father, full of grace and truth."

1st, There was the abstract Word in the beginning before it was made flesh, the Word of promise concerning the woman's Seed that should overcome sin and destroy death.

2nd, The personal Word after it became flesh, the only begotten Son of the Father full of grace and truth.

3rd, The Word after resurrection and glorification in the presence of the Father became or was made spirit incorruptible and deathless. The foregoing three phases of the Word are given in order to connect the beginning with the completion of the new creation as illustrated in the person of the Lord Jesus.

There are a number of points I would gladly submit pertaining to John's words "with God and was God," but I can hardly undertake so much in this epistle. Suffice to say I am not a pre-existing theorist. Dust existed before it was made flesh in Adam,—likewise the Word existed before it was made flesh in the person of Jesus. Neither Adam nor Jesus existed as conscious individuals before their creation. This fact ought to be self-evident to all. But speaking of the subject now before us, it is necessary to remember that both were God-made—that is they did not come into existence independent and apart from the supernatural.

Adam was the Son of God, all will admit this fact, and all admit it on a common basis. Was Jesus inferior to Adam? We say nay, because he was recognized in the words of John as the "only begotten of the Father." There is certainly a significance to the words "only begotten" that distinguishes the Lord Jesus from all others; words he afterwards himself employed to reveal his Sonship which was higher and closer to the Father than all others: all plain and satisfactory enough in the light of what Luke affirms as to his supernatural conception. If Jesus was the natural son of Joseph,—it is impossible to satisfactorily account for the use of language that makes him the only begotten Son of Deity; dwelling in the bosom of the Father; that is, nearer to the Father than any other one.

"The Lamb of God"—divinely provided to "take away the sin of the world." "The true light that came from or was caused to shine" in the world "Israelitish order," without whom that order would never have been created. The order itself was in all its ceremonial service a shadow of good things to come, focalizing upon the "Son of God" as the beginning of the new creation. Jesus was, and is the truthful Heir to David; you admit this, and contend for it on the ground that he was David's Son. Follow up your own reasoning and see how he is also the heir of God, because he is God's Son. It will not meet the issue to say that he was declared to be the Son of God by resurrection, for sonship was necessary before resurrection was possible. Had he not been Son of God before resurrection, his restoration to life, and escape from hades could not have made him such. His resurrection was a confirmation of sonship, not a creation of it. He was the heir in the days of his flesh—"the child of promise, the Seed of the covenant, the antitype and substance of the Mosaic shadow, Jehovah's light-bearer, reflecting the perfection of holiness, and though born of a woman, was nevertheless the Son of God. Hence John could well say, "I saw and bear record that this is the Son of God." This statement could not be true, if Joseph begot Jesus: for in that case he would not have been distinctively God's Son, in any higher sense than many others of the Abrahamic family. I am not unmindful of the words of Philip, who gave utterance to the popular apprehension. Legally and conventionally speaking Jesus was doubtless styled the son of Joseph; this would be natural, and instead of weakening, it adds strength to both Matthew's and Luke's record. Had he not been recognized by his contemporaries as the son of Joseph, common custom and practice would have been set aside, and higher critics of our day would not have been slow to detect it as a matter too exceptional to escape suspicion and doubt.

The circumstances surrounding the birth of Jesus were well calculated to conceal its significance and importance from those dwelling in the obscene village of Nazareth: even if any of them had knowledge of the real facts.

The fact that he was born in Bethlehem, and afterward to escape the violence of Herod took flight into Egypt, and after the death of Herod returning to Nazareth, their former home, were events of which the family acquaintances and neighbors in Nazareth would have little knowledge or interest.

In view, therefore, of all these circumstances Philip's words to Nathaniel confirms Luke's statement as "being the supposed son of Joseph." These four narratives appear to be so interwoven one with the other in the statement of facts, that I find it impossible to reject one, or any part of one, without repudiating all of them. I sincerely ask you to reconsider and re-examine these records, not simply in a critical but comprehensive manner; not merely to find a flaw, or discrepancy in one, but how to discover the truth and harmony of all. You must, to be honest with your own conscience, be able to satisfy your own reason and judgment before trying to convince others that those records are fraudulent in their statements.

All the New Testament writers speak of the Anointed One as the Son of God in an exceptional sense, and on a basis peculiar to him alone, that is, in a form of speech inapplicable to any other human being—nay, more in a sense that distinguishes from and gives him pre-eminence over the angels of his presence and power. "For unto which of the angels has he said at any time, Thou art my son?" And again he said when he bringeth the first begotten into the world, "Let all the angels of God worship him."

How can you account for this peculiarity of language and sentiment attaching to Jesus on the grounds that his conception and birth was independent of divine interposition and power. Not without a show of reason and truth it may be affirmed that the foregoing quotations are applicable to Jesus on the ground of having been the "first begotten" from the dead, and made in the presence of the Father both Lord and Christ, reaching the conclusion that previous to his resurrection he was the son of Joseph, but after his soul was rescued from hades to die no more, he became the Son of God in partaking of the divine nature. This mode of reasoning injects an element of error into the testimony and thereby conceals the truth in part.

The resurrection and immortalization of Jesus did not make him the only begotten of the Father, but rather a justification and declaration that he was such. Glorification was a personal reward—"the glory set before him," and to which he attained as an obedient son, sonship preceded resurrection for, says the apostle, "When he bringeth again the first begotten into the world," showing conclusively that he was the first begotten Son of God, when first introduced into the world, and will be the same in the second instance.

Jesus himself bore witness to his sonship, in styling himself the "gift of God." John iv. 11. These words are significant, and full of meaning as expressing a relationship planted in the beginning of his existence. As a gift he came direct from the Father—the voluntary and beneficent volition of the divine will, making the Word flesh in the person of a divinely begotten Son.

The Word of life has its germ in Gen. iii. 15 indicating the purpose of the Creator to accomplish a certain result through the Seed of the woman, "I will put enmity between thy Seed and her seed, it shall bruise his heel." When the fullness of time came in the person of a divinely begotten Son, (Gal. iv. 4) the promised Seed made his appearance, and was bruised or wounded on our behalf; but his wound was healed, hence says Paul, "If when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son." Rom. v. 11. Again he says, "God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin condemned sin in the flesh." Rom. viii. 3. Jesus himself affirmed the same doctrine, "God so loved the world that he gave he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John iii. 16. "The Father loveth the Son and hath given all things into his hands." Ver. 35. "He that cometh from above is above all." Ver. 31.

The foregoing testimonies and many other passages of like import show conclusively that Jesus in the day of his flesh, was the Son of God, in a sense peculiar to himself and on a basis not common to all. Where can we find a satisfactory solution of this peculiarity of sonship, if Matthew and Luke's records are rejected? Words if they mean anything mean something clear and well defined. Is there any idea or doctrine in the New Testament more clearly and forcibly taught than the sonship of Jesus? Peter's confession, "Thou art the Christ the Son of God" is a fair example of New Testament teaching on this subject. Jesus accepted this confession as pre-eminently sound and truthful, and responded "Upon this Rock will I build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

What [illegible] this confession that constitutes [illegible] solid and immov[illegible] Sonship [illegible] Peter acknowledged no more, and no less than Jesus claimed; he confessed the truth, expressing his real conviction that Jesus was not only the anointed of God, but also that he was the Son of God; these two ideas are inseparable, for sonship is the root and foundation of Messiahship. Destroy or kill the root by repudiating the Sonship of Jesus, and you take away all hope, not only of life, but the glory of his kingdom as well.

We stand on dangerous ground when we question the record God has given of his Son, and are in no way prepared to challenge death, or defy the gates of hell. This is a serious matter, seeing that it involves every thing that moulds our history, and fixes our destiny.

Depart and Be with Christ.

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS.

"I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better."

Teacher. I have a strong desire to depart and be with Christ, how is it with you, Carrie?

Carrie. I have also, in the sense the Scriptures speak of. We can never appreciate the Scriptural sense unless we learn what is involved in the word depart.

Teacher. What two thoughts come prominently before us in the above text?

Carrie. First, Depart. 2nd. Be with Christ.

Teacher. Is there anything in the Scripture under examination, to indicate the lapse of time between the two events?

Carrie. Nothing whatever!

Teacher. To what event is the word "depart," in this text usually applied?

Carrie. Death.

Teacher. What is the condition of the dead?

Carrie. The Scriptures say the dead "know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5.

Teacher. How could they be with Christ while in a condition of unconsciousness? I would also ask is there an appointed way through which that which is dead can "be with the Lord," as our text says? What have you to say, Lud?

Lud. It will be through the medium of the resurrection. See 1 Thess. iv. 16, 17: "The dead in Christ shall rise first: then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever BE WITH THE LORD."

Teacher. What space of time elapses between the departure, and the being with Christ?

Lud. The time which will elapse between the death of the individual, and his resurrection. There is no Scripture warrant to expect to be with the Lord before then.

Teacher. Is "depart," the only proper translation of the original, from which it is taken?

Lud. No sir, it is not. It is used to signify "return," as well as "depart."

Teacher. What language did Paul use in his writings?

Lud. The Greek.

Teacher. What is the Greek for "to depart?"

Lud. I will answer by the following quotation: "The word is analusai, the aorist infinitive of the verb analuo, which is a compound of ana,—and luo—to loose." Parkhurst says: "It signifies in the New Testament, to return or depart."

Teacher. Give a passage where the word is translated "return."

Lud. See Luke xii. 36: "Be like unto men who wait for their Lord, when he will (analusei) return from the wedding."

Teacher. Does the proper application of the Greek grammar to the word in question, make the matter clearer? Tell us what you think, Arloa.

Arloa. I will quote from a scholar as follows: "The significance of this word will be perceived in the light of the following rule of Greek grammar. The infinitive with the article is in all cases, equivalent to a substantive; as ton legeo, the act of speaking. Hence, to analusai (literally 'the to return') is the act of returning, and should distinctly be 'the returning,' in addition to the verb return, there is the verb to be; this also is in the infinitive and preceded by the article, and, therefore, ought also to be understood as a substantive—the being. Both phrases are preceded by the preposition eis (for), from which it follows, that Paul's desire was 'for the returning and the being with Christ? The verse then translated in strict accordance with the original, would stand as follows: 'For I am straitened by the two, having the earnest desire for the returning and the being with Christ, far better by much.'"

Teacher. Can there be any being with Christ until the returning of Christ?

Arloa. There cannot, the Bible always associates the being with Christ when the Christ returns.

Teacher. Why would it be better?

Arloa. As I understand it, Paul thought it would be much better to be with Christ when he comes in glory, than to continue in mortal flesh. The preference is decidedly in favor of the returning.

Teacher. What does Paul say about his departure?

Arloa. He connects his departure from life, with the returning and being with Christ as the time he would receive his crown, and not immediately after his departure from life: although, in fact, it would appear to him as though he had immediately passed to his reward, as speedily as the lightning's vivid flash, on account of not being conscious of the lapse of time. Hence, it would be quite natural to connect his departure with being with Christ, for the very next conscious moment he would experience, he would actually be with Christ.

Teacher. Yes, that is all true; but did he really expect a lapse of time between his departure from life, and the receiving of his crown?

Arloa. He did. 2 Tim. iii. 6-8, brings us to the time when he was about to place his neck upon the headsman's block. He says: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course. I have KEPT THE FAITH: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give to me at THAT DAY; and not to me only, but unto all them also, that LOVE HIS APPEARING." The words, "that day," have reference to the Lord's "appearing." He had a desire "for the returning and the being with Christ." His whole thought was centered in being with Christ.

"He that hath raised up the Lord Jesus, shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us WITH YOU." 2 Cor. iv. 14.

We shall meet the Lord in the air, and shall "ever be WITH THE LORD."

Teacher. Can we ever be "with the Lord:" and still have our mortal body? How is that Lucy?

Lucy. Oh, no, Paul says 2 Cor. v. 8: "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the (mortal) body, and to be present with the Lord."

Teacher. I notice you have put the word "mortal," in parenthesis, does the context warrant this?

Lucy. It does. See verse 4: "That MORTALITY might be SWALLOWED UP OF LIFE." Our bodies are now mortal, but when they become "swallowed up of life," they are no longer mortal bodies, that will be a thing of the past, and we can truly say at that time, we are "absent from the body," —the terrestrial body, we once had. "There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another." 1 Cor. xv. 40. Here we have the two bodies, the terrestrial and celestial. When we are absent from the Lord, we are also absent from the celestial body. When we are "present with the Lord," we are also absent from the terrestrial body. The terrestrial body cannot ever exist in the Lord's presence; hence, it is true that if we would be "present with the Lord," we must be "absent from the body,"—the body of our humiliation, and be fashioned like unto his glorious body.

Teacher. Did Paul expect it would be gain to himself to depart and be with Christ? What do you think George?

George. Certainly he did, he said for me to die is gain.

Teacher. What would he gain?

George. Jesus said: "He that loseth his life for my sake, the same shall find it." He draws a contrast, in which the gain is shown. "For in this (earthly body) we do groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house, which is from heaven." The gain consisted in being prepared by faith and obedience, to be clothed upon with that which is eternal, and freed from all the ills and evils incident to a groaning mortal condition. Waiting for that auspicious event, in the unconscious sleep of death, he would also gain exemption from the trials and afflictions through which he was at that time passing. The weary would be at rest.

Teacher. Won't it be a glorious thing to "depart and be with Christ?" What have you to say, Albert?

Albert. It would indeed be really a desirable thing to depart from this groaning condition, which is entailed upon us through sin, and experience blessings and joys, which as yet have not entered into the heart of man to conceive of. "The half has never been told."

Teacher. How can it be obtained?

Albert. Yield an obedience from the heart, to the glorious gospel of the kingdom, be firm in the faith, and never compromise it with the apostacy. Next, live a godly life in harmony with it, and cut loose from every ungodly, worldly abomination. He pure as he is pure. The pure in heart shall see God.

Teacher. That is right, Albert, I heartily respond. Amen.

Wealth of Nations.

The United States constitutes the richest nation on the globe. Mulhall furnishes these figures: United States, $81,750,000,000; Great Britain, $59,030,000,000; France, $47,950,000,000; Germany, $40,260,000,000; Russia, $32,125,000,000; Austria, $22,560,000,000; Italy, $15,800,000,000; Spain, $11,300,000,000. These computations are based upon values as shown by real estate records, buildings, merchandise, and railways, as well as the circulating medium in each nation. As will be seen, our wealth is more than seven times greater than that of Spain, double that of Germany, two and one-half times greater than that of Russia, nearly double that of France, equal to the combined wealth of Russia, Italy, Austria, and Spain, and $22,720,000,000 larger than that of Great Britain.

One day in January, 1516, the inhabitants of the Vaudois valleys of the Alps received an intimation from the Pope's representatives that, unless on the next day they went to Mass, they would be punished without mercy. With the full knowledge of the fate before them, this was their resolve: "We here promise, our hands on the Bible, and in the presence of God, to maintain the Bible whole and alone, though it be at the peril of our lives, in order that we may transmit it to our children pure as we received it from our fathers."

The Arab entertains a belief that Eve was the tallest woman that ever lived.

Plymouth, Indiana, Jan. 25, 1899.

King Oscar of Sweden has abdicated his throne in favor of his son Prince Gustaf. Ill health being the reason given.

We wish to hear from every one who has had this paper sent to them free for the past year. Write and tell us how you are situated now. Please attend to this at once.

The lower half of the kingdom of Greece and the adjacent islands suffered from a destructive earthquake on Sunday last. Many towns were wrecked and a number of people were killed.

We hope all who can will attend the District Meeting at Salem Church, five miles north of Plymouth. This is the first one of these meetings, and very naturally the friends near this house want it to be a success. The programme is an excellent one, and the meeting will doubtless be both interesting and profitable. All who can should attend.

Dr. Selden H. Talcott in his annual report of the Middletown, N. Y. Asylum, in substance declares that teaching the doctrine of eternal damnation to children, in many cases results in insanity. He says the shock of fear from teaching sensitive children the horrors of future punishment often ends in the arrest of mental development. Children should not be frightened into religion, nor the so-called religious education driven into them. Worry, insomnia, arrest of mental development, and then imbecility are the results. In concluding he says: "Present religion to the young in the form of a new commandment,—a glorious inspiration to do good and be good."

Seeing the threat to adults of fire and brimstone for ever and ever has been abandoned, it is a revelation to us that these horrors are heaped upon children. What a commentary.!! '

Suppose this office owed you a sum of money, and it being past due, you should write inquiring about its payment, and no attention was paid to your letters. Would you think it was just treatment at our hands? We have sent letters at much cost in labor and money, to a number of our patrons who are in arrears, and stated that we need the money. A goodly number have responded promptly, and some have failed to make any reply whatever. It is to these we write this, we want to ask you if you have done exactly as you would we should do to you? We do not ask impossible things, but it does seem as if you might at least write and tell us why the money is not sent. If it is that you are waiting to get the money all at once, then we say do not wait another moment, but if you have but a single dollar ready send that today. Do not wait for next week. If it is on account of poverty—then let us know that, and may be we can arrange to have you supplied. If it is simple neglect, then do please remember that we are needing the money very badly, and do not delay any longer.

These Times

Are peculiarly perplexing from some aspects. The New York Herald in an extended review of the most important industrial combinations, denominated as trusts, says that within six months articles of incorporation have been taken out by more than a hundred companies of abnormal capitalization, which are designed to concentrate the business of scattered companies in the various fields of industry; the grand total capitalization being the enormous sum of $2,717,768,000. That of the Oil trust is $135,000,000; steel and iron $347,650,000; coal $161,750,000; gas $432,771,000; sugar $115,000,000; cigarettes and tobacco $108,5000,000; telephone $56,720; alcoholic trusts $07,800,000; electrical $180,327,000; miscellaneous trusts $1,349,250,000; these latter trusts include flour, horseshoes, leather, crackers, starch, harvesters, lumber, rubber, dressed beef, sheet copper, paper, acids and chemicals, malting, silverware, lead, knit goods, sash and doors, wall-paper, typewriters, window glass, caskets, crockery, windows and doors, smelting, saws, ropes, twine, axes, bolts, nuts, thread, furniture, stockyards, matches, plate-glass, refrigerators, air-brakes, envelopes, type, soda-fountains, tacks, potteries, marbles, cartridges, linotypes and gossamer rubber.

Only for the light of the prophetic Word we would be sadly perplexed at the tendency of things. But we are confident, that although this transition state may cause suffering and loss to some, the outcome will more than level things up. And even now, while small operators will be driven out of competition by underselling them,—even then, millions of consumers will be benefitted. Political and domestic economy are subjects we are not qualified to discuss,—but we see that the capitalists are in control of almost every industry and are constantly enlarging and perfecting their producing faculties, and no earthly power can hinder them. As far as they are concerned self aggrandizement furnishes the motive, but we believe God will use all their inventions and energy in the execution of his eternal purpose in the earth.

When he whose right it is to reign, shall assume the royal prerogative, he by his mighty power and wisdom will re-adjust the business affairs of earth and rule in righteousness, and none will say to him, nay: and we have no doubt that the amazing developments of these last days are intended to furnish means to execute his vast and beneficent designs when he takes to himself his great power.

The New Covenant.

We were surprised and delighted a few days ago by the receipt of a letter from one whose writings of years ago have with us a delightful fragrance. It was pleasant to learn that our efforts to exhibit the truth of God on so vital a theme as the "New Covenant," was appreciated by one so profoundly read in prophetic lore; but it was so perfectly delightful to find that he had taken up the subject where we left off, and led us into rich pastures. We trust he will forgive for presenting to our readers the contents of a private letter. What is good for us is good for the whole household; and we bespeak for the letter a careful reading,—and we think there may be found in it a clue to a number of difficulties, or what appear to be such in many minds; at any rate, let all search and see.

To Mr. Maurice Joblin,—Dear Sir and Brother:

I have read your communications in The Restitution with reference to the covenants—especially the New Covenant. I feel thankful that you undertook the labor of contributing two articles so much needed on the part of many readers of The Restitution, and I might add writers too. That accurate knowledge requisite, can only be acquired by diligent and persistent study, and retention of the testimony of the records.

It is a necessity on the part of the student to apply the apostolic injunction, "To rightly divide the Word of truth," for one's own profit and the profit of any who may be in the range of the teaching. Failure in this particular is quite apparent in articles appearing in The Restitution from time to time. I have been intentionally, and for a definite purpose, a diligent searcher of the Holy Scriptures for 40 years. And in view of acquired convictions, I am delighted to know that others have been digging away in the same mine of wealth—the true riches. Your contributions fully met and answered the objector's effort to narrow down the covenants of promise within the range of his mental vision. Not understanding the length, breadth, height and depth of the Divine Purpose in the earth, which the Father purposed in the Anointed Jesus before the founding of the Mosaic Cosmos. There are a few points closely related to the matter you presented, which occurred to my mind after reading your last article. And then I thought I would write you, but put it off till this evening—will now make a beginning and finish as opportunity offers and time permits. As intimated above, these have been with me a special study for sufficient time to enable me to see harmony and consistency as well as divine philanthropy in the records concerning the covenants of promise. Not what you have written for instruction—but what you have not, that I ask you to come with me for a short time and travel along the path of Revelation for the purpose of knowing the teaching. I do not intend to give full quotations, but just enough to catch your ear, (eye) being familiar with text and context:—Ex. iv. 22, 23, "Israel, my son, my first-born," etc. Note the relation of the "first-borns" to God, and the same thought in regard to the first fruits, that the tribe of Levi sustained a mediatorial relation between God above them and the congregation below them. So that the tribe of Levi belonged to the Lord in a sense which the congregation of Israel did not. Num. iii. 6, 9, 12; and viii. 2, 6. Having arrived at the foot of Mount Sinai, Ex. xix. the announcement is made:—"If you will obey my voice indeed.....You shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, for all the earth is mine: And you shall be unto me a priestly kingdom—a sanctified nation," etc. Compare with the King's Version, and note the difference between "a kingdom of priests" and "a priestly kingdom." The former affirms that the constituents of the kingdom are all priests, individually, contrary to the records: while the latter represents the kingdom of Israel as a priestly or mediatorial kingdom and a sanctified nation—being officially related to the heavens above them and the earth beneath them as in Isa. lxvi. 22, compared with Jer. ii. 3. Leave out the supplied words and read "Israel sanctified to the Lord, the first-fruits of his increase." The first-fruits belonged to the Lord. See remarks on above. A mere handful compared with the great harvest at the time of the re-gathering of the nations. See Zech. ii. 11 and parallels.

Accordingly we know that Israel in the epoch of the regeneration, will be mediatorially related to the nations which will be joined to the Lord in that day. As the tribe of Levi was related to the congregation of Israel during the Mosaic economy:—Israel as a nation—destined to continue as long as the new heaven and the new earth (Isa. lxvi. 22) agreeing with Jer. xxxi. 31-34—when the ordinances of heaven and earth come to an end—when the sun himself grows dim with age and nature sinks in years—when the alternations of day and night shall cease (Gen. viii. 22), when God's covenant with the day and the night, and the succession of the seasons shall be no more. Then and not till then, shall God's covenant with Israel be abrogated. Compare Gen. i. 14 and Jer. xxxi. 32; xl. 33. As long as the throne of David continues. Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4, 28, 29. [They did; ver. 30.] [He did, ver. 32] Ver. 34-37 and compare Ez. xxxiv. 23, 24 and xxxvii. 24, 25. The perpetuity of David's throne is assured to David in the strongest terms, together with the nation of Israel, being co-related and co-extensive as well as contemporaneous: one cannot exist without the other.

Another, and an important element in the department of worship is the perpetual covenant with the Aronic family concerning the perpetuity of this Aaronic Priesthood. See Ex. xl. 15; Num. xxv. 12, 13; Mal. ii. 4, 5; iii. 3, 4; Ez. xliii. 7, 18, 19, and Jer. xxx. 9; xxxi. 34; xxxii. 40; xxxiii. 8, 14, 18, 20, 21. I note the passages for convenience, not for your information. Thus the holy priesthood of Aaron is assured in perpetuity for a purpose, according to the "plan of the ages." "Then Israel will dwell in safety alone. The fountain of Jacob will be upon a land of corn and wine, yea, his heavens will drop down dew." And the holy temple will be a house of prayer for all nations.

This national aspect concerning Israel is fully illustrated in the teaching of Jesus. Matt. xxv. 31-46. Give the passage its grammatical construction, and mark the force of the particles of comparison, "He will separate them [the nations] as a shepherd divides his sheep from the goats." The King divides the nations for certain reasons stated, and for a purpose; on account of their relations and attitude towards Jesus' brethren. Consult Is. xix. 23, 24, 25 and preceding context. Here are three of the many nations to be joined to the Lord, including Israel. On the other side it might be safe to mention—(1) Russia since 1881 (2) Germany, (3) France, (4) Spain, (5) Austria, (6) Bulgaria.....You get the thought. These goat nations will be cut off from the national life of the age to come as cumberers of the ground while the approved nations—for the reasons set forth, will enter into the national life of the age.

Let us look at the reading of Heb. viii. relating to a certain covenant having direct reference to a people mentioned by name for a purpose and period without any reference to the Melchizadec order, only in contrast. Days are coming when I will make—complete, or finish a new covenant with these people which he (God) led forth out of Egypt at a certain time. On the other hand the covenant of which Jesus is now Mediator has been in force since its ratification. Consult Heb. ix. 15. Referring to the previous verse the writer affirms: "For this cause or this very reason he is Mediator of a new covenant so that by means of death for a redemption of the transgressions under the first covenant, the called might have, etc. The blood of the Anointed One ratifies a covenant which affects the conscience—the mind and heart, and a covenant is of no force until the death of the appointed victim is produced This has been done as in verse 14 compared with verse 24. For Christ did not enter the holies made with hands, the figures of the true, but entered into heaven itself to be present in the presence of God on our account—as Mediator of this new and more efficient covenant. Ver. 25-27. This only by the way, we now return to Israel. Note the force of the pronouns "They," "theirs" and "them" in reference to Israel and Judah and their conditions under this new covenant. No such thought as a transfer of covenant relations from Israel and Judah to Gentiles whether Christian or pagan. Lev. xvi.; and Num. xviii. 1. Israelism in future manifestation, as compared with that ceremonial suitable for "the time then present," under the shadowy constitution of things; as viewed through the officialism of the day of atonement becomes a large affair in the adjustment of the world powers according to the arrangement of the ages for the Deity, by means of the administration of the Messiah and his associate Rulers.

The wording of the Israelitish covenant (Jer. xxxi. 31), is significant when chronologically applied in accordance with the unfolding purpose of the times of restitution culminating "in the economy of the fulness of times when all things will be reached under one Supreme Head." Eph. i. 10.

"This is the covenant which I will covenant with the house of Israel after those days saith the Lord—I will put my laws into their minds, and on their heart will I write them.....Because all shall know me.....For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness and their sins I will remember no more." A system of education is here suggested—the law is not to be hidden away in a chest, but laid up in the minds and hearts of the holy people. Sins are not to be remembered every year as under the former argument. But, on the other hand, they are "remembered no more; according to the meaning of the covenant, agreeing with Jer. l. 20 and xxxiii. 8. Compare Jno. i. 29 with Acts iii. 19, 20, 21. (Nationally) Our Savior Jesus is now at the Father's right hand in heaven itself "until the times of Restoration." Then, as prefigured in the official acts of the High Priest on the day of expiation—He returns home from the far country and blesses his people Israel; having borne away their sins in fact, so that their transgressions under the first covenant might be obliterated. This, as also that are national affairs relating to Israel.

It is worthy of note in this connection to consider that in the sacerdotal arrangement of the world to come there is no provision made for the observance of the great day of Atonement: and provision is made for other great days with suitable ceremonial observances. And for sufficient reason, as intimated above in quotation from Heb. ix. 15.

One would suppose of all people, that the chief Priest of Israel would understand the significance of the ceremonial of the day of atonement; and therefore we would refer to John xi. 48-52 it reads, "And one of them being a high priest that same year, said to them, (the council) You know nothing at all, nor do you consider that it is expedient for us that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not. This he said not from himself; but being high priest that year he prophecied that Jesus should die for the nation; and not for that nation only; but that he also should gather together in one (body) the children of God which were scattered abroad." Compare Heb. x. 12-14, continue to read and you will find what the Holy Spirit through Jeremiah affirms, "their sins," etc., "remembered no more," and therefore an offering for sin, under these circumstances unnecessary. Ver. 18.

The distribution of the earth's surface to the favored nations in the future age will be justly apportioned according to the number of the children of Israel, "because the Lord's portion is his people (in a sense which the saved nations are not) Jacob the lot of his inheritance." Compare Deut. xxxii. 8, 9 and Acts xvii. 26 with Isa. ii. 2, 3; and xlix. 6, and Rev. xxi. 24; etc. Predicated upon the Noahic covenant, Gen. ix. 12, and preceding and succeeding context. Note the phrase: "Perpetual generations" for the reason that "Seed time and harvest..... summer and winter," etc. shall never cease "while the earth continueth." Gen. viii. 22; and Eccl. i. 4. Salvation of the nations by means of the One offering, with Israel the most favored of them all; as the mediatorial nation for a purpose. And salvation of the body of Rulers by means of the same offering. Eternal life of the body individually and as a municipality with the glorified Jesus as the head of the Great Council;—The new Jerusalem. And as rulers and subjects are co-related and reciprocal, the national eternal life of the favored nations are assured, and hence the eternal perpetuity of the kingdom and the subjects thereof.

Generations come and generations pass away, but the nations continue under the divine rule. And as the first-fruits belong to the Lord—a mere handful compared with the great harvest or increase (Jer. ii. 3) at the time of ingathering, what must this harvest of nations be, but the fulfillment of the Abrahamic promises? Abraham will attain to the fatherhood of a "multitude of nations."

Israel will be conspicuous during the subjugating period as the instrument in the Lord's hand for the purpose. Zech. ix. 14; x. 3, 4, 5; Psa. xlv. 6; cxliv. 6. Compare with Rev. vii. 4. These select men "out of the twelve tribes of Israel's sons." Mark the reading: "Not out of Gentile nations; as affirmed in verse 9, a multitude out of all nations for another purpose altogether. It is wisdom to abide by the reading—a "revelation" is something comprehensible when the words are understood. Therefore, I would suggest the propriety of allowing the thought before mentioned concerning the part which Israelitish instrumentality will play in the drama of the world's overthrow and subsequent renovation under divine rule.

And further, what people would be more fitting as a messenger in mid-heaven from Deity to announce to the nations the conditions of that salvation from the impending judgments of the seven last plagues? Consult Rev. xiv. Note the angel in mid-heaven succeeding the description and character of the 144,000 redeemed from the earth, but not elevated to the royalty. Redeemed from the men, namely, from the men of Israel composing the tribes aforesaid. They follow the Lamb in his career of conquest. They were not defiled by the harlot women of the Apostacy. "They are virgin"—mark also the threatening of the message—worship God, or take the consequences. Once more: "The City had 12 gates, and names written thereon which are the names of the twelve tribes of Israel's sons."

Rest.

"My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest."

"After battle rest is sweet,
He who ne'er stood battles heat,
Never fought and never won,
Can not put fresh laurels on."

There was a time when the writer had no special interest in this word, rest. He wanted to be on the move all the time. When the days work was done and supper over, he wanted to see and be seen on all Market St. —now called Baltimore St. What a change 45 years has made, no one to meet now on Market, or any other street. The old familiar faces I rarely see in the day time, and at night never. They don't come out any more. If they do, I don't. What would I do, now that I am compelled to take my place among the "has beens," if there was no compensation for wearied limbs, loss of memory, loss of the attainment and respect I had when younger? My children assure me that they will look after me when I become helpless. This is some compensation, but is a little like assuring one, that when we become stone blind some one will lead us. I do not know how much rest other old people find in these assurances. I only know that they do not fill the bill in my own case. I must look beyond the promises of my children. My compensation is in the assurances of Jesus. How soothing his—"Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God believe also in me." Again, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and because I live, ye shall live also." And "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

This is what I need and crave, rest. rest, rest from a thousand thoughts that also are too true. Such thoughts as—nearing the end,—left at home to mind the grandchildren. Answer the door bell, etc. etc.

The feeling of isolation is one of the hardest things I have to bear. While this falls on me I try to sing the hymn commencing "Abide with me," etc. The 23rd Psalm is also a restful easy chair for me. Tired people need rest. "Rest to the laboring man is sweet," but not half so sweet as the rest one experiences who is fully trusting in God for things present and things to come. "My presence shall go with thee and I will give thee rest." This rest is more than the ploughman experiences when he lies down at night. It is emancipation from the bondage of fear. It enables one to say exultingly, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." Lack of trust, today, is holding thousands of people here in Baltimore, in bondage just as real, as the negro slave experienced before the war. I met an old man in the street cars the other day and he looked so happy. I asked him in a whisper, what made him so cheerful and he answered "because Jesus, my Master says, be of good cheer." I thought what a pity that so few of us try to obey this command. This man referred to, attracted nearly every eye in the car. He had found rest for his soul by a faithful, intelligent following of Jesus. The prospect of a cold or long winter failed to effect his glowing happy face. He was allowing the Father in heaven to attend to all this and he was just having a great holiday, resting in God.

In reading society notes, I am often pained at the avoidence of unrest one detects in these human butterflies, seeking what can not be found in valley, mountain or sea side, in the way society proposes. No, we must come to Jesus if we would find real rest for our souls. The invitation is to all. It is very sad that so few set themselves to learn those things when they are young.

Our first parents were deprived of having access to the tree of life, just because of the sin of disobedience, and their posterity will never be permitted to eat from life's fair tree in the paradise of God, besmeared with sin. Ample provision has been made for cleansing, and only those who avail themselves of this privilege will be permitted to share in the glories of a redeemed and purified host.—H. A. Mitchell.

A very curious presentation of the number of Irishmen, of the stamp of Wolseley in England, the Duke of Tetuan in Spain, General O'Brutescheff in Russia, Viscount Taafe in Hungary, who are leaders in many nations, is given in the January Cosmopolitan under the title, "Irish Leaders in Many Nations." It will be found interesting to all who have even a drop of Irish blood in their veins. "The Jews In Jerusalem" is another article in the same number possessing interest for a large class.

The Golden City.

From the days of St. John's Revelation
The marvellous story is told,
And down through the ages has come the song,
The song of the City of Gold.

To the innocent hearts of the children,
To the toilers who faint 'neath earth's sun,
To the old who have fought out its problems,
To the dying whose journey is done,

Comes the dream of the mystical City.
With color and loveliness rife,
Iridescent its jewell'd foundations,
Flower-bordered the River of Life,

And the streets of the City are golden,
And the sea as of crystal appears,
And the sound of the harpers is in it,
And it knows naught of sorrow or tears.

Like a mirage far out in the desert,
Like the fabric that fashions our dreams,
Like some many-hued mirrored reflection
The heavenly Jerusalem seems.

We grope 'mid the types and the shadows,
We fret at its veiling disguise;
But our hearts cannot grasp nor conceive it—
Its glory is hid from our eyes.

We catch but a note of the music,
A glimpse swiftly passing and faint,
A hint of its wondrous perfection,
Low whispered to seer and to saint.

Yet the glow of it shortens the journey,
And our feet tread more bravely the road
Which leads to the surrendless City
Whose Builder and Maker is God.

And thus as a gift to the ages
The marvellous story Love's on,
And the heart of man rests on the vision
That illumined the eyes of St. John.

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No 1.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Allan Fordyce, about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—Ed.]

Sir,—In a recent lecture, you endeavored to expose the fallacy of certain measures which would likely be brought before the next Parliament, and warned all Chartists to keep aloof from any agitation on imperfect measures, as they would be productive of no real benefit.

Now, for similar reasons, based on the true sayings of God, I venture to warn you to withdraw yourself from the agitation of imperfect measures, and to call on you to raise your voice, and proclaim the near approach of a perfect government, presided over by the Messiah.

Whatever be the relative merits or demerits of the various human schemes propounded for the regeneration of society, they must all be inadequate and imperfect, from the imperfection that attaches to man. For, what are the British? what are the French? what are the Americans? or the Italians? or the Hungarians? Take them at the best, and they are but aggregations of weak, ignorant, selfish men, capable of communicating to no governmentiany principles but those inherent in themselves; and thus, under any system of representation, it must inevitably happen that the elect will be weak, ignorant, selfish beings, with a dash of qualities belonging to the crafty and headstrong. A pretty set of legislators! A combination of fallibles producing an infallible!—a clean thing for an unclean!

From the advocation of such foolishness, I pray, may the good God deliver you! There is a reform and a regeneration beside which these cannot be named, and the advocates of which have this assurance, that, come when it may, they will share in the bliss and glories for whose approach they plead. You may advocate Chartism—"the little or the big Charter"—but you can have no confidence that you will see the establishment or the results of either. But this we know, that they who contend earnestly for the faith delivered to the saints, will have a part and a place in the realization of that which they believe.

But, with your mind so firmly bent upon the social and political regeneration of the world, I cannot but direct your attention to the word of God regarding this very point: for although it has generally been said that the revelation from God relates to the salvation of the soul, it stands out glaring, from almost every page, that God has a mighty work to effect apart from the resurrection of the body and the restoration of life, and that is to establish on the shattered remnants of the present social and political structures a new organization of the social state, with new habits, new enjoyments, and new aims, all regulated and harmonized by governors possessing both the will and the power to preserve order, and perform the most beneficent actions.

In proof that these things are so, I refer to the second chapter of the Book of Daniel. There we find revealed to Nebuchadnezzar, as the head of the Gentile power, the fate of all human governments. Nebuchadnezzar saw a colossal image of terrible form, consisting of four principal parts. Its head was of fine gold, the breast of silver, the belly and thighs of brass, the legs of iron, and the feet part of iron and part of miry clay. It indicated four successive governments, of different characters, during successive times, and, as a consummation, a grand confederation or consolidation of the power of all these governments under one powerful head, to exist at a time still future. At that time, the image is not only under one head, but it stands on feet and toes, which attracted the most particular attention of Daniel. The dream is given, and the interpretation too. The feet and toes are seen in the act of formation; the iron is mixed with miry clay, and hence the kingdom is partly strong and partly brittle. The strength of the iron seems to represent the strength of Despotism. Any one who has looked at political systems must have observed that the oneness of will of despots is in itself a great power. Deliberative assemblies often differ, but a single-souled despot decrees with the most powerful celerity. Hence, where power is most needed, on the battle-field, each army is under a despotism of the most absolute nature. There is no Chartism there. It is by this power of despotism that the down-trodden peoples of Europe are overmatched and coerced. But in this vision of Nebuchadnezzar, it is seen that the iron despotism and the miry clay—that is, the seed of men, or the frangible democracy—are to attempt to form mixed governments, such as we have seen during the last few years. But, without pretending to gifts of prophecy, or at all relying on the interpretation before us, we might safely affirm that, as hitherto, so all future attempts to make autocracy and democracy to cohere will be utterly unsuccessful. The two have nothing similar—nothing coherent in their natures. There must either be death to the aristocrats or to the democrats. The destruction of the aristocrats is an impossibility; for, although they were all killed today, there would be a fresh crop of them tomorrow—perhaps, however, under a different name. There is no portion solely of clay in the image seen by Nebuchadnezzar; so that, believing this, I necessarily hold that all attempts to form democratic governments are but childish patterings amongst untemperable mortar. But in this vision, it appears that for a time, very short indeed, mixed governments have an important existence, and by a freak of inconsistency—such as is seen in Republican France upholding Popish despotism—bear up, and are directed by a glorious golden autocrat. But at this epoch—at the conjuncture of these circumstances—when the world beholds such an empire as it had never hitherto witnessed, a stone cut without hands smites the image on its feet, and breaks them to pieces. Then the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, are broken to pieces together, and become like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, and the wind carries them away till no place is found for them. The kingdoms are dashed in pieces, and the God of heaven sets up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed—which shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all those Gentile kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

I call special attention to the following circumstances and consequents:—

1. The stone smites the image on its feet, therefore the feet must exist when the stone gives the blow.

The golden head, the silver breasts and arms, and the brazen belly and thighs, are all crushed at the same time that the legs and feet are crushed. Thus, all interpretations which destroy the golden head, etc., before the feet suffer the blow, are palpably erroneous; and, as the image in all its entireness has never existed, it is clear that the time for the stone to smite is not yet come.

This is the kingdom, whose near approach I call on you to believe and proclaim. It is a new kingdom from its very radix, and it is established by one who has omnipotence to arrange its affairs with perfect wisdom.

Need I say such a government will contain all the elements necessary for effecting and insuring the welfare of the subject peoples? Are they poor?—the King will satisfy the poor with bread. Are the priests covetous?—he will clothe the priests with righteousness. And in Zion will God cause David's horn to bud, and on him shall his crown flourish. Is there one law for the rich and another for the poor? Is the law not presently accessible to the poor? or do privileged villains turn the poverty of some into a means of opposing others? He shall judge the poor of the people; he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressors. He shall deliver the needy when he crieth, the poor also, and him that hath no helper. He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the lives of the needy from their avaricious oppressors. He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence, and, instead of valuing their lives at a shilling a-day, their blood shall be precious in his sight. The righteous flourish, and the ways of the wicked are turned upside down. Justice and judgment are the habitation of the throne; mercy and truth are established in its presence.

Is that a government that meets your desires? All-powerful for good, incapable for evil, the King-priests of that are minister to the welfare of the people, who place their confidence in governors from whom they fear no tyranny or injustice, but instead receive bounties and blessings from those vessels of mercy and glory.

Recent Archæology and the Bible. No. 7.

The concluding lecture of the present course on "Recent Archæology and the Bible" was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Nicol in Tolbooth Parish Church last night, the subject being "The Times of Christ and the Apostles in the Light of Recent Discovery." In the time of Christ Palestine was a Roman province, and the country was occupied by a busy and prosperous population. There are not a few spots in the Holy Land where the traveller feels sure he is in the very footsteps of Christ—the long and difficult ascent from the Jordan Valley to Bethany itself, the spot on the road from Bethany where the Holy City bursts upon the view, the garden of Gethsemane; Bethlehem, the place of his birth; and Nazareth, which was the home of his youth. Jacob's Well is one of the places the site of which is acknowledged by Jews, Moslems, and Christians alike; and though the identification has been challenged, and it has been said there was no such place as Sychem in the time of our Lord, the objections have been well met by Professor George A. Smith and others. Of the nine cities by the Lake of Galilee which were flourishing in the time of Christ, the sites of several have been identified. About the sites of Capernaum, Bethsaida, and Chorazi there is no certainty, and their almost complete disappearance is in accordance with Christ's prediction concerning them. In connection with Jerusalem, reference was made to the supposed discovery of the Pool of Bethesda, to the Via Dolorosa, and to the site of Calvary, which the tradition of more than fifteen centuries had located in the Church of Holy Sepulchre, but which modern research, led by Major Conder, General Gordon, and others, is inclined to place on the knoll a little distance from the Damascus gate, and over what is known as Jeremiah's Grotto, where, in the face of the rocky bank terminating the knoll, are two holes like the sockets of eyes in a skull. Notice was next taken of what has been recently achieved by archæological research in elucidation of the Acts of the Apostles, and especially of the missionary journeys of St. Paul. Scholars and historians like Bishop Lightfoot, Professors Mommsen and Ernst Curtius, and M. Waddington, have laid New Testament students under a deep debt of gratitude by their splendid contributions to the History of the Early Church, based upon the important discoveries of the last twenty-five years. The labors of Sir Charles Wilson, formerly Consul-General of Anatolia; of Professor Sterrett, of America; and of Professor Ramsay, of Aberdeen, in accumulating materials, topographical and epigraphical, which no critic or commentator can now overlook, were heartily acknowledged. The crowning achievement of the last-named, to which his travels and collection of inscriptions, and wide and varied classical learning had all contributed, his vindication of St. Luke as a historian of the first rank, and of the Acts of the Apostles as a veracious history, were warmly commended; and his books on "St. Paul the Traveller" and his "Church in the Roman Empire" were spoken of as the finest examples of what could be done by historical and archæological learning in correcting the critical refinements and subjective analysis of the mere book student or speculative theorist. Illustrations were then given of the way in which the story of the life and work of St. Paul, and set before us in the Acts and in the Epistles, can be tested by contemporary history and politics and topography, and the sites of cities visited by St. Paul on his missionary journeys, now absolutely or approximately discovered, were shown to bear their own witness to the accuracy of the Scripture narrative. Glancing at the value of discoveries of inscriptions at Rome and Thessalonica in elucidating and confirming statements in the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles, the lecturer passed on to Ephesus, where some of the most remarkable of such discoveries have been made. By means of the Ephesian inscriptions discovered within the last thirty years, and published by the British Museum authorities under the editorship of Canon Hicks of Manchester, the historian of the Acts can be subjected to a very searching test, and out of it the nineteenth chapter of the Acts, referring to St. Paul's labors and the uproar excited against him, comes without any well-founded imputation of inaccuracy, but rather with accurate touches vouching for the exact knowledge and the veracity of the historian brought into view. The situation, history, commerce, and public buildings of ancient Ephesus were described, reference being made to the great theatre, capable of holding at least 24,000 spectators, the outlines of which are still discernible. Some account was then given of the search for the great temple of Diana at Ephesus, and its discovery by Mr. J. T. Wood, after many years of persevering toil. On one of the marbles found by Mr. Wood at Ephesus is an inscription bearing the very name of Demetrius, said to be of the Ephesian tribe, and not improbably, as Canon Hicks has shown, the Demetrius named in the Acts, the silversmith who made silver shrines for Diana. There is, at least, a marvellous accord between the position of Demetrius in the inscription and the account of Demetrius in the Acts, for in the inscription he occupies a place of special responsibility in connection with the temple, while in the Acts he is the leading man in his craft, and jealous for the honor of the goddess. The Asiarchs, whose kindly attentions to St. Paul are a proof of the influence he had gained, and whose office Professor Ramsay has now cleared up; the town-clerk, or, perhaps, rather the chief magistrate; the deputies, or pro-consuls, who were over the administration of the province; the expression "temple-sweeper," applied to Ephesus, were all shown to furnish touches of accuracy, proving contemporary knowledge. Inductions were also given in the inscriptions of the decline of paganism, and one inscription, of date 160 A. D., contains a decree bearing that the Ephesian goddess was being set at naught in her own city, and intended to secure the restoration of her decaying prestige, thus indirectly testifying to the progress of the Gospel and the spread of the faith of Christ. In conclusion, the lecturer expressed his gratification at the large attendances which had followed the delivery of the lectures, and at the expressions of interest which the newspaper reports of them had elicited in many quarters. It was his firm conviction that, great as had been the results achieved by the scions of archæology, and particularly of sacred archæology, in the century now closing, these were but the first fruits of the harvest that awaited the cultivator of this rich and fascinating domain. The Bible might, in consequence, have to be read in a new context; there might be new readings of incidents and episodes of the sacred history; but there was no need to tremble for the Ark of God, for the Word of God liveth and abideth forever, and we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

Fair Play a Jewel.

A Scotch preacher, who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly begun, suddenly stopped: "Brethren, it's nae fair; gie a man half a chance. Wait till a' get along, and then if a'm nae worth listening to, gang to sleep, but dinna gang before a' get commenced. Gie a man a chance."—Congregationalist.

A Letter.

To Mr. Mead, Pastor of the Congregational Church, Scotland, Conn.

Friend Mead:

Your remark the other day in regard to the serpent's head, has set me into a train of thought which I will endeavor to communicate by pen. You said the serpent's head would stay bruised. This is emphatically true. But what is the serpent's head? To my mind; the serpent's head is the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, to wit, "Ye shall not surely die." This is the fount and head of popery, idolatry, Buddhism, Mohammedanism and Spiritualism; in short, every error that has ever obtained among mankind; and in fine, every trouble that mankind has ever experienced may be traced directly to the deductions from the serpent's lie. God's works are perfect. Mankind was not made for trouble, pain or sickness, but the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is responsible for every wrong and evil to which mankind is subject. But Paul in 1 Tim. vi. 15, says—that the Lord Jesus Christ, at his appearing, will show in his times, who only hath immortality. Now, how shall this be shown at Christ's appearing? Evidently by a discrimination between those that are left on the lines of deductions from the serpent's lie, when Matt. xxiv. 40, 41 are fulfilled, I feel fully satisfied that not one who believes that immortality is a result of natural generation, rather than a gift of God through Jesus Christ will be accounted worthy to help make up the number of the Bride, the Lamb's wife. Jesus Christ will not want, nor will he have any but virgins for his Bride, and by professing to have immortality by any other means than by seeking for it by patient continuance in well doing, is certainly a plain mark of defilement. I therefore conclude that not one who believes in that abominable doctrine, will find a place in the Elect Bride.

But you will reply—"The Alliance people believe in the immortality of the soul and of going to heaven at death; will they therefore be excluded from eternal life?" I reply: not necessarily. If a man have the privilege of partaking of the Tree Life, he will eat and live forever. See Gen. iii. 22. And in the restitution, when the flaming sword shall be removed and Paradise restored, or regained (as Miltonsings) then those who are worthy, having come into the purview of the Savior's promises, will have the privilege of partaking of the Tree of Life, whose fruit shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof shall be for medicine. But the fruit of the Tree of Life will not be straw royalty, nor even immortality.

The Savior's promises do not need any fixing up nor an ellipsis read into them in order to make them harmonious. He plainly promised everlasting life to all those who have left houses, etc., for the kingdom of God's sake; and he well knew how this promise would be fulfilled, as well as an exclusion from the kingdom of God of all those who have not been born of water. See John iii. 5. This exclusion will be as literally enforced as any other promise of eternal life will be fulfilled.

But in reply to John iii. 5, perhaps you will say as did the Editor of the Christian Herald in answering a question: "What did the Savior mean by being born of water?" He replied that "He meant the natural birth as any physician will tell you." If the Savior meant the natural birth, then every person that has been born since Adam will enter into the kingdom of God, so far as being born of water is concerned. Is it possible that the Editor of the Herald can be so blind or infatuated by Rantism, that he cannot see that this would be nonsense and that the Savior was not the author of it? Paul says Rom. vi. 4, "Therefore, we are buried with him by baptism into death." Again ver. 5, "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Will you kindly tell us how you can see any likeness to Christ's death and resurrection manifested by sprinkling a few drops of water on a man's forehead? By practicing rantism you virtually, (though not intentionally perhaps,) ignore the death and resurrection of Christ, for Paul shows in the above quotations that to be buried in baptism, symbolizes the death of Christ, and to arise from the watery grave, symbolizes his resurrection. But rantism contains not a thought of the death nor resurrection of Christ. Christ came to fulfil the law, (Matt. v. 17,) and for that purpose he went to John the Baptist to be baptised. This law was the law of priesthood, 2 Chron. iv. 6. A sea was made containing 3000 baths for the priests to wash in. Why so large a sea if a pint of water would be sufficient? There can be no other conclusion but that the priests must be immersed before entering upon their office. So Christ went to John to be immersed in the Jordan to fulfil this law of priesthood, and so all who aspire to the priesthood must necessarily be immersed as Jesus was, before he can enter upon the priest's office.

But by practicing rantism you are evidently following the leadership of that Lexicographer, E. Robinson. He says—page 119, "There is in summer no running stream in the vicinity of Jerusalem, except the mere rill of Siloam, a few rods in length, and the city is and was supplied with water from its cisterns and public reservoirs." This may be true. Again he says—"From neither of these sources could a supply have been well obtained for the immersion of 3000 persons." There may be grave doubts entertained of the truth of this last assertion. But possibly Mr. Robinson did not notice the upper pool of Gihon, which at a rough estimate is 20 or 30 rods in length and half as wide also, the lower pool of Gihon, which probably is half as large, the Pools of Hezekiah and Bethesda within the city walls, and the Sheep Pool on the east side of the eastern wall. All these five pools are now dry, except the Pool of Hezekiah. But evidently they contained water in the Apostles' day. But if necessity require a trip to the Jordan would not be an impossible thing, as the account in Acts does not specify that they were all baptized in one day, but were added. But at any rate I shall not discard Paul for Robinson, nor plain and positive statements of Scripture for Robinson's conjectures.

A clipping that I have pasted in my Bible tells me that Drs. Carson, Hinton, Campbell of Scotland, Chalmers, Luther, Calvin, and the hundred great and learned men who edit the Edinburgh Encyclopedia all agree in the fact that the word baptize should be rendered immerse, and that baptism by immersion was the ancient practice.

Submitted in love for truth,

B. Howard.

A Second Letter to J. A. Conant.

Friend Conant:

The subject of the new birth has occupied my attention of late, and our conversation the other day has stirred me up to communicate my thoughts to you. We claim that the new birth takes place when immortality is put on at the revelation of Jesus Christ. If conversion is the new birth, then Christ was converted, for Paul says (Col. i. 15) that Christ was the first born of every creature, and in ver. 18 says,—that Christ is the beginning, the first born from the dead. Christ was not the first that was made alive from the dead; but he was the first born or made immortal from the dead. Christ came from the dead immortal. He was the beginning of an immortal race of beings. If I understand you correctly, the new birth took place with you when you were converted. Bro. tell me please when the regenerating process took place with you? or was you born without being begotten? Christ makes use of natural things to illustrate spiritual things. That which is born of flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. His illustration in regard to the wind blowing where it listeth is right to the point and should be conclusive. Please notice, that the Savior says—"So is every one that is born of the Spirit." The person himself is so, can come and go at pleasure, can go into a room as the Savior did, or as the wind does, the doors being shut, (John xx. 19) and can vanish out of their sight. Luke xxiv. 31. When one is born of the flesh, he is born in the likeness of him who begat him; so when one is born of the Spirit, he is born in the likeness of him who begat him by the Word. Conversion is the begetting process, and if he make no failure so as to prove an abortion, he will be born from the dead at the revelation of Christ, or if living he will be changed to immortality.

Yours truly,

D. Howard.

We don't have to try and convince ourselves that we are not as bad as our neighbors; it comes natural.

The man who boasts he owes no man a dollar may not know of any one who would be willing that he should owe him ten cents.

Our Love Feast.

Editor Restitution:

There is a good field here, at Redington, Neb. for an able speaker there is only a few of the one faith here. We have our Bible class every Sunday and have had for the past eighteen months. We are still living in hope of gaining that glorious kingdom which God has promised to those that are faithful to the end. May we all be faithful is the prayer of your Brother and Sister.

W. W. & A. BELDON.

Dear Restitution:

We do eagerly look for the dear old paper every week, as much as our daily bread, and if it is delayed we feel lost. I am sorry the Editor is sick. May God bless him and give him his health, we feel that we are weak in the flesh, but strong in the faith once delivered to the saints, though foes do surround us we will try to overcome the evils of this world by doing good, and we ask the Prayers of the faithful that we may grow in grace with all humility of spirit, knowing that if we faint not that we shall reap the reward promised. Your Brother and Sister in Christ.

MR. & MRS. SEBEE A. GUILD.

Dear Restitution:

It is now time for us to renew our subscription for you again and we are so thankful that we can, we have been away from home a few days and are about a week behind our usual time of renewing but we cannot do without you and may the God of Israel watch over you to keep you in the paths of truth and the love of God until he comes is our prayer. God bless THE RESTITUTION.

JOHN ALLARD.

Dear Restitution:

As I sit thinking of the old year that has just past, it leaves many pleasant memories. While I do not have the pleasure of meeting very often with the brethren and sisters of THE RESTITUTION, my heart is often cheered while reading the testimonies from them through THE RESTITUTION. May God keep us close to his side, and at last may we meet in his kingdom. From a Sister in Christ.

MRS. O. E. PARKHURST.

Editor Restitution:

The year 1898 closes this evening. Our record for the year is made, have we done anything to advance the cause of our blessed Master. Have we said a kind word, or done a kind act to help some poor weary one to bear their trials and troubles, or have we been finding fault with some poor brother or sister when perhaps they have been doing the very best they can. I can only answer for myself. I am no fault finder, am a poor unworthy servant esteeming others better than myself, have tried to do a little for the Master as best I could. Hope I will be able to do more the coming year. We have regular meetings at White Cloud, Kan., once a month at our school house, generally a very good hearing. Any brother or sister coming this way will be welcome and kindly treated here, we would be very glad indeed, to have some preaching brother drop in some of these long winter evenings, and give us a few good meetings. I hope the brethren and sisters will give us lots of short letters the coming year, it seems almost like being at church to read the friendly words of so many each week in THE RESTITUTION. Now brother we wish you a prosperous New Year, and a pleasant Editorial journey until the kingdom is reached, may we all be there.

J. F. PIERSON.

Editor Restitution:

I thought I would avail myself of the privilege and contribute a few lines to the love feast. The old year is gone and the new one began. Many things transpired last year that we little dreamed of when the year began and what may not this year bring forth. Shall we say we hope it will bring the coming of the Lord? Yes we should all say come Lord Jesus, and come quickly, that should be the uppermost wish in our minds. But have we so lived that we could meet him with confidence? That is a serious question. We are surely nearer his coming than we were a year ago. And we are sure of another thing, the Scriptures say he will come some time, and we all believe that promise. So let us all watch as we are commanded to do for we know not the hour when the Son of Man will come. I will close by wishing all the household of faith a happy New Year. May we soon meet in the kingdom of God is my prayer.

A. SEITZ.

Notice of District Meeting.

The First District Meeting of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith will be held at the Salem meeting house, five miles north of Plymouth on the Michigan road, commencing January 26th, 1899 and continuing over the 5th Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all whom it may concern, by the brethren in the locality of the meeting. Ministers will be present to preach the Word. Praise and adoration of Him ever blessed Father for the gift of his Son, will be the happy privilege of every believing heart that shall be present at this series of meetings.

Railroad Fares are Reasonable.

Legislatures in different States are from time to time urged to tinker with passenger tariffs on railways and enact a law compelling a general charge of two cents per mile. The current rate is three cents, but the average falls below that owing to concessions granted for special occasions. Persons who appreciate the convenience and comforts provided by the railways will not consider a three-cent fare exorbitant. The present charge for a twenty mile ride on a railway will not pay for horse hire for such a trip, to say nothing of the time required for an overland journey and the discomforts of muddy roads and inclement weather.

Active solicitors wanted everywhere for "The Story of the Philipines" by Murat Halstead, commissioned by the Government as Official Historian to the War Department. The book was written in army camps at San Francisco, on the Pacific with General Merritt, in the hospitals at Honolulu, in Hong Kong, in the American trenches at Manila, in the insurgent camps with Aguinaldo, on the deck of the Olympia with Dewey, and in the roar of battle at the fall of Manila. Bonanza for agents. Brimful of original pictures taken by government photographers on the spot. Large book. Low prices. Big profits. Freight paid. Credit given. Drop all trashy unofficial war books. Outfit free. Address, F. T. Barber, Sec'y, Star Insurance Bldg., Chicago.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address: THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Most of us know we could achieve more if we considered our own personal comfort less.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Coming of Our Lord.

He is coming—oh how precious!
Till earth's shadows flee away
How this hope should sooth and cheer us
As we tread our pilgrim way
Through the desert
To the land of endless day!

Yes, we know that he is coming,
For 'He promised in his Word;
Surely hearts should then be longing
For our faithful, loving Lord,—
Ever watching,
That his footfall may be heard!

Oh, the joy of that glad morning
When we see Him face to face!
In his beautiful adorning,
Love in every feature traces,
See his glory,
Know the fullness of his grace.

He will share his triumph glorious
With his well-beloved Bride;
Over every foe victorious,
She will then with him abide,—
With his presence
Be forever satisfied.

Angels listen to the story
Of our dear Redeemer's love;
Then he shall have all the glory—
All the praise from choirs above,
And forever
We his loving kindness prove.

—Lizzie Howard.

Selected.

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No. 2.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Allan Fordyce, about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—ED.]

When the Reform Bill was passing, the Duke of Wellington warned the Lords and the country, that hence forth would begin a race for popular favor, by which class would be arrayed against class, and the end would be anarchy and disorder. It was well spoken. If your advice to the lower class be adopted, and they refuse to support any alterations of the electoral body which the middle class may propose, the natural effect is the alienation of the middle class from that beneath them, and their alliance with the conservative or aristocratic party. In the agitation, the chasm would gradually but inevitably widen, till there would be no sacrifice of value sufficient to appease the popular wrath; but the lower class would seize the pillars of government, and hurl them to the dust, though they should be buried themselves. It is a political earthquake—the commencement of civil convulsions—and a bloody war of classes, and against property, similar to what took place in France in the end of last century.

If, on another view, the suffrage should be extended to the great mass of people, whether it be household suffrage or universal suffrage—whether the whole six points of the Charter, or only two or three of them, be peaceably enacted—the effects would not differ. The universal voice of the people, or the voice of the great mass of the people, is more readily evoked for the perpetration of evil than for the accomplishment of good. It was universal suffrage that built Babel; it was universal suffrage that made a golden calf for Israel; it was universal suffrage that crucified Jesus of Nazareth. The working class is as capable of any act of oppression, of violence, of wrong, as any other class, as was shown in France, when recently arose the wild cry of "Liberty, equality, fraternity!" British artizans were driven from the country, and many escaped almost naked and penniless, while their houses were pillaged by the fraternal working classes. I am aware that the education of the people weakens the power of despots, and that nothing is more terrible to them than the advance of what are called "liberal opinions" among their subjects. Hence, the last Emperor of Austria said to a deputation of professors that waited upon him, "I wish obedient subjects—not learned men. Do not make the people too learned!"

But, in thus restricting learning, the Emperor overlooked the truth, that "a little learning is a dangerous thing." More than a little learning very few of the laboring classes can obtain, and very few of any class seek to obtain more. They are taught to read without being taught to discipline their thoughts, and are thus easily led by plausible appeals to their passions, their sympathies, and their antipathies. They are fit for an insurrection, but not to govern themselves, much less to govern others. In being so ready to follow Daniel O'Connell and Fergus O'Connor, and, while ragged and dirty themselves, to give units of money to both these demagogues, I confess I see a willingness and liability to be duped, deluded, and oppressed: but however good qualities these may be in slaves, they are the very worst that legislators can possess.

But, further. With stern facts and figures before me, I cannot think that society is progressing except for the worse, and that all reforms of the legislative body that have taken place have produced no good effects to the people. Since the passing of the Reform Bill, the taxation for the maintenance of the army has swelled from fifteen millions to upwards of twenty-one millions of pounds annually, although the Government has resigned all aggressive policy, and declared for peace and non-intervention. The proportion of poor permanently on the poor-rolls in Scotland has gradually increased, until from being one in every forty-two of the population in 1845, it became in 1849 one in every thirty-two. But, in addition to that amount of declared and admitted permanent poverty, there is a large amount falling or rising according to the fluctuations in the demand for labor, in the cost of living, and in the amount of disease. So large is this floating pauperism, that, in 1848, one in every eleven in England received relief as paupers, one in every six in Ireland, and one in every twelve in Scotland: or, in the three kingdoms, every eighth was in a state of starvation. In Edinburgh, every sixth person was a pauper; in Dunfermline, every fifth person; and in Glasgow, two out of every seven had to supplicate a pittance from the inspector's hands. And, apart from private charities, and the assistance which those nearest to want gave to those starvelings, the expenditure for the poor in Scotland rose from £295,232, 8s 1d in 1845, to £377,044 2s 4d in 1849. In the same way the statistics of crime show an increase far exceeding the increase in the population: and if any reliance can be placed on the official returns by the Excise department of the revenue, the quantity of spirits distilled in Scotland was never so great as in the year last returned.

But, further still. In addition to all the crime, depravity, and pauperism which exist, there is welling up copiously and unceasingly an appalling surplusage of power, which threatens to overleap and tear down the barriers that confine it, and, like waters from a bursting reservoir, to sweep its path with the besom of destruction. To want sufficient power is to struggle against fate, but to have a redundancy of power is to be hurled with it into the gorges of a cataract. If mankind were unable to work sufficiently they must starve, unless a miracle intervened; and if they work more than is necessary for their comfortable maintenance, the workmen are deprived of their means of livelihood, and being thrown into the fellowship of the dissolute and the vicious, are mingled with them, and ready to join any scheme that promises to make them no more miserable than they are, and thus to shock to their foundations the pillars of society and government. Now, this latter is what is presently going on. Over production is continually increasing, and there are thus continual additions to that horde of vagrants without livelihood or home, and subsisting on vice, with their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them. Repeated Acts of Parliament may check the progress of this evil, but in the nature of things they will not and cannot be applied until myriads upon myriads have been steeped in wickedness and crime.

With all these facts and considerations before me, it would be strange if I were not sceptical as to the effect of any possible reforms in the legislative body. Whatever ameliorations, by extension of the suffrage, have taken place in the state of British society, they have not arrested the progress of poverty and crime. And why should they? Why should a vote for a Member of Parliament stay crime and quench the pangs of hunger? A vote will not fill a man's belly, unless it can be bought and sold; neither will a man avoid crime on account of such a pitiful right; much less will the placing of legislative power in the hands of the ignorant conduce to enlightened and righteous government. Thus, then, the pauperism and crime of the country seem to me too great to be stayed by any other vote or voice than that of him who spoke to the winds and the waves, and they obeyed. The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint; from the sole of the foot unto the head, there is no soundness in the present social state. It is wound and bruise, and putrifying sore, neither pressed nor bound nor mollified with ointment. The disease is constitutional, and political doctors in vain strive to mend the shattered frame.

And so the Scriptures reveal the future as an unward downward progress in iniquity, till the nations have filled their measure to the brim. Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. There is no wickedness like unto that which prevails after all your measures of amelioration and progress. Its cry is great as Sodom's, and goes up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, demanding speedy retribution. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be after all your "remodellings and improvements of society." God sees that the wickedness of man is great in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart is only evil continually. Fraud, rapine, and violence, attain a climax. The harvest is ripe; the press is full; the wickedness is great. If peace theories had ever progressed it was only when destruction was hastening; for a proclamation goes forth among the Gentiles, "Prepare war; wake up the mighty men. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong. Let the people be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat." Joel iii. 9. God shall whet his glittering sword, and his hand shall take hold on judgment. He will render vengeance to his enemies, and will reward them that hate him. His arrows will be satiated with blood, and his sword shall devour flesh. Deut. xxxii. 41. And the Lord goes forth to fight against those nations as when he fought in the day of battle. Zech. xiv. 3. Heaven opens; and, followed by the armies of heaven, goes forth the Faithful and True, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, in righteousness to judge and make war. Rev. xix. 11. And John saw an angel standing in the sun, and he cried with a loud voice, saying, to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God, that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses and them that sit on them, and the flesh of all, free and bond, small and great. It is a sacrifice for every feathered fowl, and every beast of the field—a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel; and the Lord God will set his glory among the nations, and never more hide his face from the House of Israel. Ezek. xxxix. 17-22. "The tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them; and they shall be his people, and he their God." Rev. xxi. 3.

That is the end of the present state of things, after all legislative reforms and ameliorations. Daring impiety and wickedness have leagued their armies and fought against God. The nations rush, like the rushing of many waters; but God rebukes them, and they flee far away, and are driven, like the chaff of the hills, before the wind, and, like a gossamer, before the whirlwind. Once before, God shook the earth; but now hath he promised, saying, "Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven." And this "yet once more," signifieth the removing of those things that may be shaken, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Wherefore, receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved"—(Heb. xii. 26 28)—shall those who believe God's promise to overthrow the thrones of kingdoms, and destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the peoples—(Hagai ii. 21, 22)—shall they try to make or mend political constitutions, when God has condemned all that can be made? Nay, they are pilgrims and strangers, and will hold fast grace, by which they may serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear.

Washington Gladden's Book, Entitled, Seven Puzzling Bible Books.

The seven books discussed, are Judges, Esther, Job, Ecclesiastes, Songs of Solomon, Daniel, Jonah. Most of the trouble in interpreting the puzzling books of the Bible Dr. Gladden thinks is due to a "failure to take them for what they are; from an attempt to make history out of fiction, dogma out of drama, allegory out of simple poetry, and prophecy out of apocalypse." The reviewer has this to say of the book, "Many will find it a help toward satisfying their reason, and confirming their faith." The Higher critics will have reason to thank the Dr. for this effort of his as it adds another volume to the already large library on their side of Biblical controversy, and lends the influence of one more reputable name to the cause of Infidelity disguised under the profession and name of Christianity. Gladden and Abbot constitute a large addition to the working force of the Higher criticism; and when the Polychrome Bible is given to the world as the result of profound scholarship(?) we may expect to see the beginning of an era of strong faith, characterized by the absence of all doubt(?) If the Dr. is right in his theory of the books enumerated, I see no good reason why he should not regard all the books of the Bible in the same light and treat them in the same manner, and per consequence, undermine all faith, for faith must rest upon divinely authenticated facts. The question is, Are there not other puzzling books as well as the seven comprising his list? What about the Revelation, the last book of the Bible, for this is confessedly the most puzzling one of them all. All except the Higher critics regard this as a prophecy or a book of many prophecies. In the introduction it is styled "the prophecy;" and a benediction pronounced on him who reads and them who hear the words of prophecy. Come Mr. G. and try your hand on the symbolisms found here. They all mean something. Tell us what they mean; for you are an expert on puzzling books and this is one of them, and of course needs your treatment!

"Make Prophecy out of Apocalypse." What does he mean by this? He uses the word prophecy in its usual sense, to foretell, but what meaning has he attached to "apocalypse?"

This is a Greek word changed a little or anglicised. It occurs twelve times as a noun in the original and is defined by Green, a disclosure, revelation; and as a metaphor, illumination instruction, manifestation, appearance. God, in kindness to us and to meet our need of enlightenment gave us an apocalypse, a disclosure or revelation; and a large part of this tells of things to come, and may properly be called prophecy; so where is the mistake? Prophecy in a special sense means a disclosure of events future to the day of the prophets; apocalypse includes things to come; especially is this true of the book, God in his wisdom, called The Apocalypse in which John wrote the "things he saw, the things that are and the things that shall be hereafter," and in which was set before us that grand prophetic event the personal apocalypse of the Son of God.

The book of Daniel is somewhat puzzling but to call it "apocalypse" does not change the matter nor does it come to be prophecy because so called. It has been so regarded and so treated by the long line of prophetic students from Jesus and Paul, to Cumming, Weethee and Totten. It may be that Gladden attaches to the word apocalypse a meaning unknown to the Greeks of any period of Greek literature. But then this question would confront him. How do you know that it is this and not prophecy? The great Teacher called Daniel a prophet. Matt. xxiv. 15. Upon the very surface of the book stands sketched in brief but bold outline the history of the great world kingdoms including Babylon down to and embracing the stone kingdom which is to demolish all other kingdoms. The book is both apocalypse and prophecy from the standpoint of truth and the usage of language! Amen. I am not reviewing and pronouncing judgment on the Author's book which I have not seen, but criticising his theory of the books he enumerates, of which theory he gives a clear statement as quoted at the beginning of this paper. I have a curiosity to know how he has made out his case, no not this but how he has tried to make out his strange theory. It is on his statement that I join issue. I am a literalist and he is a higher critic. I believe in the Bible as written and for the purpose written. He says, "Judges and Esther, Job and Jonah are fictions." If so where will we find history in the Bible, or any where else? He is equal to Swedenborg who said there was no such personages as Adam and Eve; that these were only names of faith and love. Surely Judges is a historical book. There is mention by name of twelve judges. The account covers a period of at least three hundred years and presents to our view six cycles of revolt, of punishment and deliverance. All this has the air of actual events; some of them contemporaneous and others successive. In three hundred years Israel and the nations in and adjacent to Canaan would enact a great deal of history. Now why should the scribe, whoever he was, fall to writing fiction when there was such a fruitful field of facts.

Fiction under these conditions would not "satisfy our reason nor confirm our faith." Surely not. The Higher Criticism neither creates nor confirms faith but on the contrary is destructive of faith. Avowed Infidelity is not near so dangerous as this Higher criticism under the garb of Christian profession, adorned with high sounding titles and backed by eminent scholarship. Old fashioned Infidelity was open and direct in its manner of attacks upon the Bible. The New Infidelity is a kind of Judas that betrays with a kiss and wounds the truth in the house of its pretended friends.

Purgatory.

The following is a Leaflet which was distributed at a Lecture held in Edinburgh, in (1851), in opposition to the doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church. It was got up by the present writer and a brother named James Hamerman now deceased. The Lecture was one of a series, and the subject for that evening was "Purgatory, and Indulgencies." Its reproduction in "THE RESTITUTION" may be of interest to some readers, and the truth it sets forth so briefly will be considered sufficiently important to rescue the nonceau from entire oblivion.

"THE DEAD KNOW NOT ANYTHING."—SOLOMON. ECCLES. IX. 5.

The doctrine of Purgatory depends entirely upon the state of the dead between death and the resurrection. It has generally been taken for granted that man, when dead, is capable of thinking and feeling—of enjoying pleasure and suffering pain. This doctrine is founded upon the idea that man is possessed of an immaterial, immortal soul, which can live, and move, and have a being independent of the body, and before the resurrection. This is a very important subject, and it becomes us to ask seriously if it has any foundation in Scripture. It is always considered a safe principle of interpretation to take the teaching of plain, direct, and unparabolic passages in preference to those which are parabolic or in any other way obscure. Let us examine a few of that class of passages bearing on this subject. Moses, in his account of the creation, informs us that "the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. ii. 7. God did not create a separate soul and join it to a body; but the thing made out of dust became a living soul by the breath of life being breathed into it. The breath of life was possessed by the lower animals as well as by man:—"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath of life." Gen. vii. 21. Man, therefore, in having the breath of life, has no pre-eminence over the beasts. Eccles. iii. 19. The withdrawal of the breath of life causes death, as Elihu testifies, "If he set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath; all flesh shall perish together, and MAN shall turn again unto dust." Job xxxiv. 14, 15. Thus it is not an important appendage of man, but MAN himself that returns to dust; the spirit, or breath, returning unto God who gave it. Eccles. xii. 7. But it is said that the thinking part of man survives, and man continues to think. Solomon says, "The dead know not any thing." Eccles. ix. 5. And also, "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Eccles. ix. 10. And David puts the question beyond a doubt when he says, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth, in that very day his THOUGHTS perish." Psalm cxlvi. 4. This agrees exactly with the testimony of the Apostles. The Apostle Paul expected no advantage without a resurrection. He says, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, IF THE DEAD RISE NOT? let us eat and drink for tomorrow WE DIE." 1 Cor. xv. 32. These are plain statements of Scripture. They condemn both the Popish and the Protestant ideas of the state of the dead between death and the resurrection. Their plain teaching appears to be that man is mortal, and that his only hope of future existence is by a resurrection from the dead. This is in strict harmony with the words of the Savior himself:—"I am the resurrection and the life." John xi. 25. It is important to observe the order of the Savior's language—Resurrection first, life after. Search the Scriptures, then, for yourselves. Cease from man and from man's systems. "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye PERISH from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."—Psalm ii. 12.

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

J. CAMERON.

We often say a bad thing about a man without thinking. When it comes to saying a good thing we think once or twice, or more, and end in not saying it at all.

Once upon a time a man conceived a strange story. To him it seemed incredible. He set out in search of people who would believe it, and he did not have to go far.

When a man talks about dishonesty to acquaintances, he is likely to be personal in his remarks, even if he does not realize it always.

To some small spirits the hardest thing in the world to believe is what they know to be so.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEB. 1, 1899.

WORD reaches us confirming the news of the death of Bro. Wiley Jones of Manchester, Va. He died quite suddenly on Dec. 7, 1898. Full particulars of the sad news, and other data concerning him has failed to reach us yet. Shall give a more extended notice later.

REMEMBER the statements sent out to those in arrears. A number have not yet responded. The Golden Rule enjoins that we do to others as we would have others do to us. If we owed you and failed to reply even to your letters, what would you think of us? Let your own heart; answer the question.

ON Monday morning we received a call from Bros. Wagoner and Wince on their way home from the District Meeting five miles north of this place. They report having had a very interesting meeting. The extreme weather and the great amount of sickness caused the attendance to be less than had been hoped, though the audiences were very good. Bro. Zilmer will continue the meetings for a few days longer. An itemized report will be given soon.

In Memoriam.

Death has once more entered our little band and taken a loved Sister from us,—Mrs. Catharine Russell, whom it was our privilege to baptize, on the profession of her faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, on the 19th of January, 1890. She died on Jan. 14th, 1899.

In childhood she was brought up in the Calvinistic Faith, which at that period had a firm hold in Scotland, the place of her nativity; but that cruel belief was never congenial to her sense of justice, and her sweet, loving disposition. And when James Morrison, the Scotch Reformer commenced his crusade against Calvinism, and vindicated the character of God from the aspersions thereby cast upon it; she and her husband, then in their early married life, were among the first to join his standard, and their home often sheltered the Reformer in his journeys while on his preaching tours.

The impressions then received of the love and goodness of God prepared her mind in a large degree for the reception of the Truth in later years. And when her mind was enlightened to receive the gospel, she embraced it in the love of it. Few there are who enjoy it more than she did. For many years she was in very feeble health, but was tenderly cared for by her devoted children.

Although for a long period unable to attend the assembly of the saints, she took great pleasure in pouring over the Word of life, and reading THE RESTITUTION, and Glad Tidings, and would frequently say, "Why was it we did not see these grand and glorious truths long ago? O that we could make all see that there is no immortality out of Christ Jesus, and that eternal life is the gift of God through his Son, to be conferred on believers only at his coming and his kingdom."

She watched with great interest the signs of the end of Gentile rule, and loved to speak of the soon coming of the Prince of Life.

As an humble, loving, trusting follower of Jesus she will long be remembered by us, while we cherish the fond hope of meeting her, along with all the faithful ones in the realms of light and glory,—the kingdom of God in earth, long promised, where sickness, pain, sorrow and parting shall never come.

"Organized Christianity."

The Rev. David Beaton writes of what he styles "Organized Christianity," as follows:—"Deep moral earnestness for the welfare of mankind, combined with bitter enmity to organized Christianity, is a startling phase of modern literary activity." He refers to the fact frequently noted of late that in recent meetings of laboring men, the name of Jesus is often applauded, and the name of the Church as often hissed.—occurrences which give voice to the indictment that the Church of today is hostile to the objects for which Jesus lived. This same accusation, either implied or expressed, he discerns in a large portion of recent leading fiction. He says of one of Baroness Von Suttner's works that it is an appeal to the nations to ground arms and practice the teachings of the Prince of Peace. She naturally expects to find the Church speaking against War, the crime of crimes,—but instead, finds the warmest supporters of her peace principles in Renan, De Maupassant and Dr. Berner, avowed opponents of the church and even of the faith, and the advocates of war among Christian(?) ministers whose position in the Church renders him utterly blind to the moral inconsistencies of his arguments..... In a word, the author goes to skeptical literateurs, scientists and philanthropists for support and inspiration, and pours her bitter contempt upon the representatives of official Christianity from the Pope down, as leagued with the powers of the world against the very principles for which Jesus lived and died.

Speaking of Mr. Hall Caine's work, "The Christian," he says:—"Stripped of all verbiage he makes this charge against the Church: That when a man with the spirit and character and aims of Jesus Christ appeared in the Church of his birth to do the work that Jesus did and commanded his followers to do, the fate he met was the same as his Master's—death; and this at the hands of the Church and the people whom this Church had been teaching for a thousand years."

No wonder Mr. Benton thinks this state of things furnishes ample reason for humility and new resolves to manifest more of the Christ-likeness to the world. But what folly to expect an exhibition of Christ-likeness from those who reject his teachings? The truth is, that what is "called Organized Christianity" and subjected to the fire of skeptical philanthropists and scientists, is a spurious article from the bottom up, and has been the principal factor in turning men of true hearts and beneficent purposes away from all such pious shams. The very fact that the name of Jesus is reversed by such men indicates the influence which the life of Jesus reproduced in his professed followers might have exerted in the world. To do that, involves belief of the gospel of the kingdom and of Life only in Christ, and acceptance of the Law of Pardon. Ah, it involves the forsaking of all to follow the Anointed. It involves the denial of self, and the taking up of the cross of the Anointed One as the way to the crown.

Restitution.

Restitution is the most popular doctrine in the Bible, because God "has spoken it by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." Yes, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after. "As many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days." Acts iii. 21, 24.

It was typified in the Jubilee year that came every fiftieth year, in which all that the Israelites lost has restored. The Levites had no possession in the land hence had nothing to lose, but they assisted in the work of restitution. In the type the Priests and Levites stand for the true church of this age; the kings and priests of the restitution age, while the whole congregation of Israel represent the world who are to be the objects of the restitution.

There are a number of Scriptures, looking at them from any other standpoint than that of the restitution, which would lead one to believe that God's "plan of the ages," Eph iii. 11. Emphatic Diaglott, had failed, when having passed six thousand years, and we see only a small number that have a hope.

One passage reads, "This is the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," John i. 9. The natural man reasons thus—not so Lord for by far the greater majority of earth's population has lived and died never having seen the light. Again we read, "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." Heb. ii. 9. And we are constrained to cry out, how can it be? When so few have as yet received any benefit from his death?

Another reads, "Behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people," and we wonder, when we know what the popular doctrine of today is,—that only a few will be saved and the remainder of mankind the greater majority, will go to hell to be in torment for all eternity, for not seeing the light, that came to lighten every man. Surely there must be some mistake. It can not be "glad tidings" to those who have never heard the good news, or seen the light.

We read again, "Christ Jesus who gave himself, a ransom for all to be testified in due time." Ah! now we see God has a due time, and God has a "plan of the ages" and he will "in the ages to come show the exceeding riches of his grace."

God's original plan was to bless all the families of the earth. He told Abraham that "in him and his seed should all the nations be blessed." The times of restitution is the age following the second coming of Christ. When all that was lost by the first Adam will be restored by the second Adam.

In Acts xv. 14, we get a glimpse of God's plan that it was not to convert the world in this age, but to take out a people for his name, who are to be the kings and priests in the next age. And Gal. iii. 27, 29. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," and when the seed is complete, that is to bless all the families of the earth, then we read after this, (after the people for his name have been taken out,) I will return and build again the tabernacle of David, that the remainder of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name has been invoked," Emphatic Diaglott.

It is in the times of restitution, that "every one shall die for his own sins," Jer. xxxi. 30. "And it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people," Acts iii. 23.

It is there that the highway will be cast up for the people. The stones will be gathered out and no lion or ravenous beast shall go up thereon, but the redeemed of the Lord shall walk there, and with evil restrained, it will be much easier to walk than in the narrow way of this age. for the wayfaring man though a fool shall not err therein." Isa. lxxxv. 8, 9; lx. 10.

Then "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea," Isa. x. 9.

Then the curse will be lifted from the earth, and it shall yield its increase, and from the "wild beast and the lion and lamb shall lie down together, and a little child shall lead them." Isa. x. 7-8; Ezek. xxxiv. 27.

Christ and the church which will then be the seed that will bless all the families of the earth, must reign, till they have put down all rule, and all authority, and power. "Then the king dom and dominion shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." Dan. vii. 27.

Thus we see that the dominion that was first given to Adam, and which he lost through the fall, is to be restored to man as well as the earth his home. After he has proved his willingness to conform to God's laws.

ADDIE GRANGER.

Editor Restitution:

Hearing a discourse on our identity with the house of Israel, it set me to thinking and studying, and the more I study the stronger my belief is that we are Gentiles and not Israel. Then reading Bro. Dwiggins' article on Israel and Judah I feel just like making a few remarks on that subject myself.

But before I proceed I wish to say, if anyone does not agree with me on these points please do not condemn me for I have no hard feeling toward you, because you see it some other way. What mattereth it to you or me whether we are Jews or Gentiles. We should rejoice in that we have a chance to accept the gospel.

1. Bro. Dwiggins showed that Israel was in captivity, and if in captivity it could not be a ruling power (or nation) and the conclusion we arrive at "is" if not a ruling power (or nation) England or U. S. cannot be Israel, for the reason that they "are" ruling powers.

2. In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. We see Lazarus the beggar (representing the Gentiles) carried by angels to Abraham's bosom. Acts x. Cornelius the first Gentile ever converted under the gospel was told by an angel to send to Joppa for Simon who would tell him what to do, and after he was baptized, I learn he "became" (showing he was not already) the seed of Abraham, Gal. iii. 29. Before baptism he was without Christ being an alien from the commonwealth of Israel, a stranger from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world.

Now the point is this, if we are Jews or Israel, we could say with the Pharisees, John viii 33, that we are Abraham's seed: without being baptized into Christ, but my Bible teaches me "if" I am Christ's I am Abraham's seed.

3. We read he came unto his own and his own received him not, and Paul says, lo we turn to the Gentiles. James also says, Simon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. and to this agree the words of the prophets. To what agree the words of the prophets? After this. After what? After he has visited the Gentiles, he will return and build the tabernacle of David. What for? That the residue of men might seek after the Lord. Now the question arises, Who is the residue? Well if there are but two classes of people, viz., Jews and Gentiles, and the Gentiles were visited at the first, then the residue must mean the Jews, and this is confirmed when it says, and "all" the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, showing that the residue is a different class of people from the Gentiles upon whom his name is called.

Again. What are they to do? They are to seek after the Lord, and who is to seek after the Lord but the Jews? They that have been cut off, they that have been blinded in part, will (as Bro. Dwiggins showed us) be gathered out of every nation whither they have been scattered and brought into their own land to serve the living God. The natural branches were broken off; so some of the wild branches are grafted in; in their places. So if we the wild branches are having our chance now, and believe in the restoration of all things, we must believe in the restoration of the Jews to the gospel, or in other words we must believe God will grafted them in again. I could make a few more remarks on this subject, but will refrain from it. Submitted in love.

FRED EDDY.

Editor Restitution:

I find as I study my Bible these comforting words, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. xi. 10. From the reading of this verse we learn that we who are faithful, will receive a crown of life. Now the question arises, when do we receive this blessing, do we receive it at death as some people claim, or do we get it at the resurrection. Let us turn to 1 Pet. v. 4, and see what we find. "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." This shows plainly when we shall receive the crown, it will be at the time when the "Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. iv. 16-17. And we also find another proof in Matt. xxiv. 30, 31. "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." In 1 Cor. xv. 51-52, 53, Paul says, "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." This shows what the crown is, and also when it is to be given. Now the question arises, do we go to heaven to get the crown, or does it come to us, let us see what the Revelator says about it in xxii. 12, "And behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." This is only one proof of the many that are in the Scriptures, that the Lord is coming to earth once more to dwell with men, and judge the nations. We also read in Isa. xl. 10, "Behold, the Lord God will come with a strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold his reward is with him, and his work before him." So we find in both the Old and the New book, that the reward comes to us, instead of our going to heaven to receive it. Now Paul must have meant to teach something of this kind when he said, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge will give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." Oh, my dear brothers and sisters in Christ, let us look closely to ourselves, and strive to be one of the faithful ones that shall receive the crown of righteousness, when our Saviour shall come to claim his own; oh, what would be more pleasing to the ear, than to hear the words, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. xxv. 34. The earnest prayer of my heart is that we may earnestly, "Press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil. iii. 14. Oh, let us not do as Lot's wife did, at the last minute turn our faces back to the world and lose all hope of a future life, but let us keep our faces Zionward for Paul says, "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. iii. 20, 21. Oh, what can we wish for, that would be grander, than to become like our Savior, "who is a rewarder of all those who diligently seek him." Oh, are we proving ourselves worthy to pray "To our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done, in earth as in heaven."

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

We have taken THE RESTITUTION for fourteen years and it is still a welcome visitor at our home. I have been sick for four months and THE RESTITUTION is all the preaching we have here. From your Bro. and Sister in the one hope.

MR. & MRS. JOHN COURTNEY.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Let us keep our hearts pure, for we read it is only the "pure in heart that shall see God." Let us work diligently, faithfully and wait patiently, not neglecting our own nor "less to meet the Master. Pray for us that I may be among the faithful, for it is to them that a crown of life is given. And may God grant that we may all meet in the kingdom, is my prayer. Your Sister in Christ.

Editor Restitution:

A Brother inquired some time ago where the garden of Eden was located. Turn to the 2nd chapter of Genesis 10-14th verses and read. Then look on a map of the patriarchal ages for the rivers, it shows very near where it was. Yours in the hope.

M. V. STAUB.

Editor Restitution:

I would like to say through the paper that we are located in Pendleton, Oregon. And if there are any of the faith near here, or any traveling through I would be very glad to have them call on us. I have been alone in the faith so long that I feel very weak and unworthy, and without THE RESTITUTION to read, until lately. My father J. W. Barber of Windom, Kan., sent some back numbers. I found them very interesting and so many good letters from those that are strong and hopeful that I have been encouraged and will enclose $1.50 for it this year. Yours waiting for the Prince of peace.

SARAH E. SMITH.

Dear Restitution:

I cannot afford to be without the paper; for I find it a great help. Its weekly visits is a source of strength in this time of waiting, and watching. I am very anxiously watching the signs as they are made manifest, showing that the time must be at hand, when in the fullness of the times, our Lord and Savior, and King, shall be made manifest unto his "little flock," and will take unto himself his great power, and will reign with his saints. I believe we are now in the days of his preparation, that the wonderful things that we see now being made manifest, is his work preparatory for the kingdom. May the time speed greatly is the prayer of your unworthy Brother in Christ.

C. W. WILLEY.

Dear Restitution:

We are still looking for the return of the King to set up his kingdom on the earth, and long for it but do not see as he will come yet if he waits for the church to be one as he is in the Father one that we may be one in him, for one seems to be teaching one thing and some another and a very few attending to the ordinances of the Lord's house. Oh how I would like to see all agree on the communion and attend to it every first day of the week. I have no doubt but what that was the purpose of the disciples coming together, and then exhort each other in the things of the kingdom, and if we should practice what the disciples of old did I think we would be all right for an abundant entrance into the kingdom when the Lord comes. I am as ever in the one hope of his coming. Amen.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and so recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Active solicitors wanted everywhere for "The Story of the Philippines" by Murat Halstead, commissioned by the Government as Official Historian to the War Department. The book was written in army camps at San Francisco, on the Pacific with General Merritt, in the hospitals at Honolulu, in Hong Kong, in the American trenches at Manila, in the insurgent camps with Aguinaldo, on the deck of the Olympia with Dewey, and in the roar of battle at the fall of Manila. Bonanza for agents. Brimful of original pictures taken by government photographers on the spot. Large book. Low prices. Big profits. Freight paid. Credit given. Drop all trashy unofficial war books. Outfit free. Address, F. T. Barber, Sec'y, Star Insurance Bldg., Chicago.

Poetry.

Waiting for the Restitution.

Until times of restitution,
Spoken of in holy Word;
Can we have the consolation
Of beholding Christ our Lord?
For the heavens must retain him,
Till the time of Gentile times;
God an elect Bride seeks to win,
Gathered out of every clime.

All the holy prophets' stories,
Foretold with proph'tic voice;
When God's restoration glories
Fill the earth, she will rejoice.
Chariots bright with exultation,
Nations all, of every clime;
Christ will work their full salvation,
Through God's restitution time.

Divine action to fulfil promises,
Spreading wide, reverses the curse;
O'er Messiah's peaceful vision,
Which doth all in mind embrace.
Then the hills and mount'ns dropping
Wine for bread, sweet, real, pure;
Into living fountains leading,
Thirst the nations will endure.

Blessed streams, the earth refreshing,
"From the presence of the Lord!"
Pow'r and glory wide extending,
Strike the elect Gentile dead,
When the "Son of God" arraying,
With love's healing in his wing;
Leads his returning
To the never ending King.

Blessed times of restitution,
When the earth and heav'n anew,
Purged, and cleansed from all corruption;
God will bless with heav'nly dew.
Light shall be the earth with knowledge,
To the glory of the Lord;
Jesus, King all will acknowledge:
All shall know the Most High God.

God of heaven—the great restorer,
Scatters all forget then will bless;
Out of Zion the Deliverer,
Comes to turn ungodliness
Away from Jacob. God's elect,
Their transgressions hasting out;
Jacob, God will not reject;
Sing for Jacob, sing and shout.

God will lift the veil of covering,
Causing Israel to again:
Remember their sinfulness bringing:
Israel shall be saved. Amen.
Christ the conquered world restoring,
All wickedness right soon away;
Jews and Gentiles bow adoring:
"Former things have passed away."

Groaneth now the whole creation,
Shareth too, thy Bride the pain:
Waiting for her blest adoption.
When she'll drop her mortal chain.
Round the throne of pearl assembling,
Chosen jewels of the Vine;
With the Lord his Kingdom sharing
Crowned with glories all divine.

All of God's peculiar children,
Sown in weakness, earthly seed;
By his Spirit God will quicken;
From death's bondage they'll be freed.
Rich in pow'r at heart vision,
To the likeness of their Lord;
Royal chosen generation,
"Heart in heaven is their reward."

Living saints in Christ now waiting
For their change to come, when they
In a moment, in a twinkling,
Put on immortality.
Then to comfort one another,
All ye Saints now taught to God;
With these words when met together,
Till the coming of the Lord.

Lord we hail the new creation,
Perfectly restored in thee,
From the bondage of corruption
Into blessed liberty.
When renew the earth with glory,
Fitted for the heavenly rest:
Lighted by the Lord of glory,
Will be "sunshine" for the blest.

Lord, we hail thy visitation,
Told by faithful prophets longer;
Hail the times of restitution,
Later by Apostles sung.
When the Christ of Gentile nations—
Glory of God's Israel,
Soon will end earth's lamentation,
Earth with nations come to dwell.

Yes, we "see the day approaching"
We believe, and wait the hour;
Watching for our Lord's returning,
Clothed with majesty and pow'r.
We are waiting for our union
With Messiah Christ our Lord;
Waiting for the glad reunion
Of the kings and priests of God.

Full of joyful expectation;
Waiting to behold his face;
Full of love and adoration;
Waiting for our Lord's embrace.
Waiting, patient vigils keeping,
While our hearts within us burn;
Restitution songs repeating,
While we wait our Lord's return.

In the top of mountains crowned,
Christ the topmost crowning Stone
With the light of God surrounded,
Sits upon the judgment throne
With "The Church of God" most holy;
Glorified, exalted, bright;
Royal Bride, once meek and lowly,
Shedding restitution light.

Salem then will flame with glory:
"And there will be no more night;"
Holy City—heaven's third story.
"Nations saved walk in its light."
O, thou chiefest of ten thousand,
Born a King in Bethlehem;
Come, O come and take thy kingdom,
Holy, New Jerusalem.

—Mrs. H. W. Post.

Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly,
While the billows near me roll,
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Saviour hide,
Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my soul at last.

—Chas. Wesley.

The Nature of Man.

Is he a Dual Being, composed of body and soul, each being an independent entity, and the soul capable of existing when the body is dead?

Or, is he a unit, and when dead has no living existence in any sense?

To the above questions all so-called orthodox Christians will readily make answer that man is dual. The body mortal, the soul immortal, and, being essential, cannot die. When the body dies the soul is released from its embodiment, which only served to circumscribe its knowledge, power and enjoyment; or, if the body were wicked, its tormentor in the burnings of hell. As all Christian theology is based on Bible teachings, when we ask for Bible proof of this dogma we are referred to such texts as 1 Kings xvii. 21, "Let this child's soul come into him again." Gen. xxxv. 18, "When her soul was departing." Matt. x. 28, "Cannot kill the soul." If we will consult any good Hebrew and Greek lexicon we will find the original words here translated soul are used in a restricted life, which put to quite different construction on these texts.

Luke xvi. 23, "In hell he lifted up his eyes being in torments." This text says nothing about the soul, for "the rich man died and was buried;" and as after a period we find him in hell, he must have been buried in both bodies).

This account of the rich man and Lazarus is beyond all doubt a parable, founded on a tradition of the Jews, see Matt. xv. 6-9, and rebuked in a rebuke to all such. Traditions in the Savior's teachings as found in verse 31: "If they hear not the sense of believe and obey not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."

Luke xxiii. 43: "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Jesus could not have meant to promise the thief but he would be with him in Paradise. "Thy Kingdom" see verse 42, that self same day, within six hours from the time he spoke, because "Thy Kingdom" was not yet established. Nor had Jesus left the earth three days thereafter. Jno. xx. 17, and it was not till forty-three days after that he ascended to heaven: Acts i. 3-9. Besides it is probable, yea, almost certain, that the thief did not die on that day, and so if he was with Jesus in Paradise, he must have been with him while yet alive. The soldiers broke the legs of the two thieves, but they "break not Jesus' legs because he was already dead. Why would they break the thieves' legs and not Jesus' legs? Because Jesus being dead he could not escape, but the thieves being alive they might escape when taken off the cross at the close of the day—that they might not hang on the cross on the Sabbath. Jno. xix. 31. So Jesus' promise to the thief must have been in the sense of "That day," which the Greek word semeron is susceptible of being rendered.

There are two other passages in the Scriptures which seem to favor the popular idea of the dual nature of man. When we take into consideration that the translators of our King James version were all believers in the Popes' decretals: (Pope Clement the fifth, Pope Leo the tenth and the Council of Lautern) "The reasonable soul is immortal; and we strictly inhibit all from dogmatizing otherwise; and we decree that all who adhere to like erroneous assertions shall be shunned as heretics." We can readily understand why they rendered every passage that was susceptible of such rendering, to make it favor their belief.

There is one passage in the Bible that teaches that doctrine beyond the possibility of a doubt, and there is no use trying to deny it. But in studying the Scriptures we must always examine the context, and see who is speaking. The text referred to is found in Gen. iii. 4. For those who adopt the teachings and faith of this text and its author, we have no argument.

But let us now examine some of the plain and positive declarations of God through the mouth of his angels, prophets, and Jesus himself.

In Gen. ii. 7, we read: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Many quote this text to prove that God breathed an immortal soul into Adam; but in order to do so they have to substitute immortal for the word living. As it stands immortality is not implied. The same words are used in Gen. i. 21 and 24, and there they are translated living creature; and in verses 20 and 30 the marginal reading is soul, as applied to the beasts, fowls and fishes. So if living soul as applied to man in Gen. ii. 7, means a living entity apart from the body, it would mean the same for the other creatures in Gen. i. 20-30; and numerous other places in the Bible where the same Hebrew word is used, might be cited, and in that respect man would have no pre-eminence above the beasts. It is dead and, is the case. Man in his living, breathing functions has no pre-eminence above the beasts, and it is so declared in God's holy word. See Eccl. iii 18 to 21. [Please examine the Revised version, especially the translation in 21st verse.]

The word soul occurs very many times in the Scriptures, but neither in the Old Testament nor the New, can a single text be cited where the word has the undoubted meaning of a thing or being apart from the body or person, whether dead or alive. It is a notable fact that in all the occurrences of the word soul, not once is it qualified by the use of immortal, deathless, never-dying, or like terms in connection with it. On the contrary, the Scriptures speak of souls dying, souls being dead, souls destroyed, souls going to the grave, souls coming out of the grave, etc. Note a few instances.

Joshua x. 28. "And that day Joshua took Makkedah, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the King thereof he utterly destroyed, them and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain." See also verses 30, 32, 35, 37, 39.

Job xxi. 13-23: "But my servant shall sing for joy of heart, but behold ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit." Here the word heart is used in the place of soul, and the word spirit in the place of life.

Ezek. xviii. 4: "Behold all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth it shall die." See also verse 20.

Matt. xxvi. 38: "Then said he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." James v. 20: "Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death."

Psa. lxxii. 9: "But those that seek my soul to destroy it." Psa. xlix. 15: "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave."

Acts iii. 23: "And it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."

In all of these, and in many more that might be quoted, the word soul is used as being synonymous with the body or person; and can be so understood throughout the Bible; or of some attribute pertaining to the person, such as life, mind, appetite, lust, etc.

Having fully established the fact, from Scripture testimony, that the soul is not a thing of life apart from the body or person, we will refer to a few Scriptures which will further confirm this view by showing that all thoughts, devices and plans cease at death, and can be resumed only by a resurrection from the dead. Eccl. ix. 10: "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might: for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest."

Eccl. ix. 5: "For the living know that they must die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten."

Psa. vi. 5: "For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?"

Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Isa. xxxviii. 18: "For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down to the pit cannot hope for thy truth."

Now dear reader, do not jump at the conclusion that because the Bible teaches that when man dies he is dead, wholly dead body, soul and spirit, that the Bible does not teach that there is to be a future life. The doctrine of a future life is THE HOPE that is set forth in the Scriptures; but that hope is wholly conditional. Man sinned, and through disobedience brought death. Jesus the Christ passed through life without having sinned, always doing those things which were well pleasing to the Father and on account of his obedience he has been constituted the Life Giver; but to them only who heartily accept of, and conform to, God's plan of salvation. In Jno. xvii. 1-3, we have: "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son may also glorify thee; as thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." And in Jno. i. 12: "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

In Rom. vi. 23, we are told: "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Also that eternal life is not a present possession is very clearly stated in the following—1 John ii. 25: "And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life."

2 Tim. i. 1: "Paul an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus."

Titus i. 2: "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began."

Titus iii. 7: "That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs, according to the hope of eternal life."

Eternal life must be sought for. Rom. ii. 7, says: "To them who by patient continuance in well-doing seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life."

Paul in writing to the Galatians, vi. 7, 8, says every man will reap according to his sowing. If we sow to the flesh we will reap corruption; but if we sow to the spirit, we will of the spirit reap life everlasting, which is incorruption.

Those who do not have the seeds of eternal life implanted into their minds, hearts and dispositions, by searching out the mind of the spirit as revealed in God's word, heartily believe it, and joyfully obey it, and walk consistent with it to the end of this probationary life, will never be raised to incorruptibility, and be made partakers of the divine nature, by the knowledge of him who has called us to glory and virtue, See Pet. i 3, 4, for having died without the hope they are perished, 1 Cor. xv. 17, 18, or if alive when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, vengeance will be taken on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; and shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power. 2 Thes. i. 6-10.

But those who have believed that Jesus is the Christ, John xx. 31, have been baptized into his name, Gal. iii. 27, become Abraham's seed according to the promise, Gal. iii. 29, heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, Rom. viii. 17, if they have died will be raised to life. Jno. xi. 25, and with the then living righteous, will be changed to incorruptibility, 1 Cor. xv. 53, be born of the spirit, John iii. 6, be made equal to the angels, Luke xx. 36, and in that glorified state will sing the new song: "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9, 10.

If we are not in this TRUE FAITH, in these and other vital teachings of the Scriptures, it behooves us to get right by a systematic, careful, diligent and prayerful study of God's word, for Jesus' own word for it, that spurious doctrine will not avail for salvation. He says, "Ye make the commandments of God of none effect by your traditions. But in vain do you worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men:" Matt. xv. 6-9. And again: "Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. For laying aside the commandments of God, ye hold the traditions of men.....Full well ye reject the commandments of God, that ye may keep your own traditions.....Making the word of God of none effect through your traditions, which ye have delivered." Mark vii 7-13

Jesus also admonishes his hearers to "Strive to enter in at the straight gate; for many shall seek to enter in and shall not be able." For a casual familiarity with Jesus and his word, without the love of it, will only serve as a foundation for rejection.—See Luke xiii. 23-30. "For they that worship God, must worship in spirit and in TRUTH: for the Father seeketh such to worship him." John iv. 22-25.—Solomon T. Blessing.

Questions Answered.

J. B. Lent, writes:

"I am in a dilemma, and I wish to ask Bro. Wilson a question or two to see if he can help me out. I see in his article of Dec. 28, 1898, "Born of the Spirit," that he says by Arlen, that the resurrection takes place under the sounding of the seventh trumpet, and quotes Rev. xii. 4, 5, as proof. Will Bro. Wilson show how he arrives at that conclusion?"

The only reason I know is, the Bible says so, and that is always a sufficient evidence for me. I refer you to Rev. xi. 15-19. I quote from a translation by S. P. Tregelles, LL. D. that great searcher among ancient manuscripts. Most every word of which is based on manuscripts fourteen hundred years old, and none less than twelve hundred years. Ver. 15, commences as follows: "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven—saying, The sovereignty of the world hath become the sovereignty of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." Verse 18: "And the nations were angered, and thy wrath came, and the time of the dead to be judged: and to give reward unto thy servants, the prophets, and to those who fear thy name, the small and the great; and to destroy those who destroy the earth."

The above events occur under the seventh trumpet, and they are also events which attend the resurrection.

For another proof see 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52: "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the LAST trump: (the seventh) for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible."

"I presume Bro. Wilson will also agree with me that Rev. vii. 9-17, is a resurrection scene, and if so we find that it takes place under the opening of the sixth seal."

The resurrection does not take place "under the OPENING of the sixth seal," it is an AFTER event. The sixth seal opens in Rev. vi. 12, and it describes judgment times. Chap. vii. ver. 1, opens up as follows: "After this I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth," etc. "After this," that is after those scenes of calamity. Then follows the sealing of Israel. The resurrection scene is still AFTER this. The ninth verse starts as follows: "After these things I saw, and a great multitude which no man could number, out of every nation, and tribes, and tongues, standing in the presence of the throne, and in the presence of the Lamb.—clothed with white robes, —and palms in their hands," etc. The end of the chapter closes up resurrection events, and also the sixth seal, just as the close of the sixth trumpet, and the opening of the seventh, brings resurrection events. The trumpets and seals cover the SAME time. The close of each of them brings RESURRECTION glory.

SECOND QUESTION.

John Morrison takes exception to the study of Pine Woods Bible Class, entitled: "Was Jesus' Prayers Always Answered?" He says speaking of Jesus: "He could never die by natural causes." It needs but two or three passages of Scripture, which are exceedingly plain, that they need no "wresting" to make it appear. I will give two: I quote the Diaglott translation of Heb. ii. 14: "Since then, the children have one common nature of blood and flesh, he also in like manner partook of these; in order that by means of his death, he might vanquish him possessing the power of death—that is the enemy."

The phrase: "Blood and flesh" is found in the Alexandrine, Vatican and Sinaitic manuscripts.

Now, I submit, that every single individual, without any exception, who possess the "Blood and flesh" nature, is liable to "die by NATURAL causes," at any time. The Scripture says: "He also in like manner, partook of these."

God has many a time in the case of man, interposed divine power, to prevent the death to which he was liable on account of his "Blood and Flesh" nature. He did this also for Jesus. The only reason why men could not take him, and kill him, before his "hour was come," divine power prevented it.

I will now give a passage showing that Divine power did save him FROM DEATH, during the days of his flesh. Heb. v. 7: "He who in the days of his FLESH, having offered up both prayers and supplications, crying aloud with tears to him who was able to deliver him out of DEATH, and WAS HEARD for his devotion."

The correspondent closes his article with the following: "I deprecate any attempt at wresting the Scripture in order to satisfy infidels, who scoff at the Lord's prayer in the garden." I do, too. I have a most profound regard for God's Most Holy Book, I would sooner part with my life than knowingly wrest it.

Obituary.

Comrade Wm. H. Knodle was born near Eaton, Krebble Co., Ohio, Nov. 17th, 1838, and died at his home in Rockvale township, Ogle County, Ill., Jan. 11th, 1899, at the age of 60 years, 1 month and 25 days, having but just passed the allotted time of three score years. When but two years of age comrade Knodle was brought by his parents from the Ohio home to Mt. Morris, Ill., where among the pioneer residents of this locality 60 years ago, they made for themselves a new home and new friends, since which time the deceased has resided continuously in Ogle county, save the three years when we went out from home and friends, a member of Co. G. of the gallant old 74th Ill. Vol. Inf. to battle for the preservation of the Union and during which time he received wounds that haunted him during the remainder of his days and to which is attributed the direct cause of his death as stated above. In May, 1864, in a skirmish at Adairsville, Georgia, the bullet which wrought misery for the deceased throughout the balance of his days, entered his groin and he was pronounced fatally wounded by the regimental surgeons and nothing done to relieve him for four days. He clung tenaciously, however, to the slender thread of life and was taken back to Chattanooga and placed in a hospital, where, under the care of a young physician who gave him constant attention and together with the careful nursing of his comrade, Robert Lighthizer, recently deceased, he recovered and his life was prolonged 35 years. Shortly after his return from the war, in Mt. Morris, Ill., he was united in marriage to Miss Martha J. Wagoner, who has proven a faithful companion to him, in strict accordance to the marriage vow "until death did them part." To this happy union was born one daughter and five sons, one of the latter having preceded the father to that long home, in infancy. The others, together with their widowed mother, were present at the last sad rites, one of them making a long journey from Colorado and arrived just as the remains were being transferred from the church to the hearse.

About 27 years ago the deceased united with the church of God and ever remained a steadfast, consistent deciple of Christ, in full harmony with his faith. He was a fond husband and loving father and in years past, during his numerous periods of suffering, he has expressed frequently his readiness to meet his Redeemer, his only desire to remain longer being his great love for his family and the desire to to see his sons and daughters, people of character, capable of making good citizens, which, we believe, has been fully gratified.

The funeral service was conducted from the Silvtr Creek church, near the family residence, by Rev. D. M. Hudler, of Muscatine, Ia., under the auspices of Oregon Post G. A. R., after which the remains were conveyed by carriage to the Silver Creek cemetery, where they were laid at rest according to the impressive service of his comrades, who bore for him the highest esteem as a friend and comrade, well worthy of the highest tribute within their possession.

Caroline Hatch was born September 20, 1822, in Forsythe county, North Carolina. Died Jan. 16, 1899, aged 76 years, 3 months and 27 days. Married to J. S. Hatch in Oct, 1860, at Crawfordsville, Ind. Mother of two children, who survive her. Was immersed by A. F. Service (half brother of J. S. Hatch) in November, 1868.

She was a devoted mother and wife and a strong believer in the second coming of our Lord. Both her children, Mrs. Azorah M. Scrogge, and Jere B. Hatch, are believers in the same and hope to meet her in the kingdom.

A large audience assembled at the new church and listened to a discourse by the writer based upon these words "since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." Sister H. was seriously ill only a short time. Our aged Bro. and fellow worker is now left to bear a double burden, but does not sorrow as those who have no hope.

"A few more storms al all pass
O'er this wild death stricken shore
Then we shall be where storms cannot come
And death shall be no more."

The Kingdom of Israel or David.

Do the Scriptures teach that there shall be an uninterrupted administration of the kingdom of Israel or David until he comes "whose right it is?"

I understand Totten and all those who hold that the Anglo Saxon are the twelve Tribes of Israel teach the affirmative of the question at the heading of this article. This position is based upon the language of Jacob, in blessing Judah, Gen. xlix. 10. "The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come." Also, Jeremiah xxxiii. 18. "Thus saith the Lord David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel." I have been trying to find out wherein the truth lies relative to the question; by comparing all the testimonies I could summon from the prophets, and apostles, and the Lord Jesus Christ; with the view of fixing the preponderance of testimony. I am convinced that there is but one side to the question. That the Truth lies in the fact, that God caused the kingdom of David, which was the kingdom of Israel, which was the kingdom of God, which was the kingdom of heaven, to come to be; until Christ whose right it is shall come, and restore it again to Israel. I first call attention to Ezekiel xxi. 27, 28. "Thus saith the Lord God." "Remove the diadem and take off the crown, this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high." "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." Let us examine closely the language here employed. First then; who is the Lord about to depose? Ans. Zedekiah king of Judah. (The high one.) Take off his ornaments, and remove his symbols of royalty. Exalt him that is low. (Christ the lowly one) and abase him that is high. I will overturn, (repeated for emphasis). Now mark the result, and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him. Could words express in a stronger manner the end of a kingdom? Now; where is Judah's Sceptre and lawgiver? Calling into being those things which are not, as though they were. I answer they are in the hands of the Lion of Judah's Tribe; waiting the time appointed for his reign: according to the Scriptures. This view is in harmony with Christ's own words concerning the appointed kingdom to him and his apostles; not given then; but in the regeneration. Those who claim an unbroken reign of David's kingly line utterly ignore the phrase, "and it shall be no more," and contradict the express result of the overturning, and seem to teach, that to overturn a thing is the same thought as to turn it over to some other ruler; which would be equivalent to throwing it down, and setting up three several times, and lastly leave it stumbling instead of being no more, until the rightful heir should come. When the disciples ask our Lord if he would at that time restore again the kingdom to Israel, he did not tell them that the kingdom was rolled over, and over, and over, until it now stood right side up in the British Isles: but his words conveyed to their minds that God had appointed a time to do that work: but could not reveal the time. Again, Amos in his prophecy represents the tabernacle of David as down, and says, "God will set it up, and in the same connection, says, the captivity of his people Israel shall be brought back, and not be pulled up any more out of their land. This brings us to the time when God makes a new covenant with both the house of Israel, and Judah; recorded in Jer. xxxi. 31st which covenant is most certainly future, and the results were that all of the Tribes should know the Lord from least to greatest, and their iniquity at that time should be taken away. Then begins the perpetuity of Israel's nationality, illustrated by the enduring ordinances of the heavenly spheres. They are then, (not now), placed under the royal Sceptred King of the Tribe of Judah; whose kingdom is without end. Next let David testify of the condition of his throne and kingdom; when looking forward to the days when God would destroy, and break up the reign of iniquity, under his successors. Psalm lxxxix. 38, 39. "Thou hast cast off and abhorred. Thou hast been wroth with thine anointed. Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant, thou hast profaned his crown by casting it to the ground." Will any one deny that this refers to David's kingdom; which casting down was (not an event still future? Now, if you will take the trouble to read from the 18th to the 37th of this same Psalm, you will find that the Lord Christ is the one who will establish the glory and stability of that kingdom; when God shall make him higher than the kings of the earth, and build up his throne to all generations. It is on account of the holy one of God, and his perpetual reign over the twelve Tribes of Israel; that the prophet could say for God, that David shall never want a man to sit on his throne, and not because of Anglo-Saxon successors. O. Kinnear in the Anglo-Saxon says, "That the throne of David was overturned in Palestine, and carried direct by Jeremiah to the Tribe of Dan in the north of Ireland. Again, "He says Judah as a tribe separated from her own people, and scattered throughout the world; yet still the head and lawgiver of the other tribes; now the ruling race of the whole world." Thus we find that in the Christian dispensation alone, are the prophecies concerning Judah given by Moses and Jacob, accurately fulfilled, because the ten tribes have only been consolidated into a nation, since the Norman conquest; and in fact they have not been wholly united only since the days of James the first, and since that day, a descendant of David has been ruling over the ten tribes, though the sceptre of Judah has now been within the British Isles, since the days of Nebuchadnezzar, and of Jeremiah." Now is it not plain the throne of David is the kingdom of David? and is it not equally plain, that an overturned kingdom is a kingdom destroyed? How will it look then in print, to say that Jeremiah carried a destroyed kingdom over into the north of Ireland. Again, "Judah scattered throughout the world still the head and lawgiver of the other tribes." Head and lawgiver would seem to imply Sovereignty over Israel as the "other tribes." I confess my inability to see that point. It is to my mind as vague as the Pentecost Kingdom of modern theology, and like that theory, only bridges a part of the fact. Hence, since the time from the Babylonian captivity down to the days of James 1st, is longer than from Nebuchadnezzar to the Pentecost. Better regard the word of God, "It shall be no more until he comes whose right it is." "Therefore I say unto you (Jews) the kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Commenting on the above passage a writer in the Anglo-Saxon says, the "Church" is not a nation. The "Gentiles" partakers of the root and fatness of the good olive tree, are not a "nation," but to us of the Anglo-Saxon race is a nation, who today are in possession of the church of God" the kingdom of God which the Jews lost: and we, and we alone, of all the races of mankind are, and have been bringing forth the literal and spiritual fruits thereof. "Missions, Home and Foreign," and are also in the enjoyment of the covenant blessings both of the literal and the spiritual. If I apprehend the claim herein set forth, it is, That the church of God and the kingdom of God are synonyms, and are in the hands of the Anglo-Saxon race, who manifest all that the kingdom of God means, both spiritual and literal. Then brethren, when our Savior admonished the people to seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, he meant not the Ten tribes of Israel, and all else would be added unto them; and since they are in the enjoyment of the covenant blessings, both of the literal, and the spiritual, it must be that the necessity of teaching any one among them to know the Lord, is at an end, and it follows that their sins have been taken away, and their iniquity pardoned, and all Israel saved except Judah? How is this? Abraham left out without a foot of the promised land. The territory of the kingdom in the hands of the enemy. He whose right it is not returned from the "far country." The place of his throne in ruins. The city of the "Great King" trodden under foot of the Gentiles, and the "Sceptred tribe" a hiss, and a byword among all nations. And lastly "Israel, blind to the rock from which they were hewn." In conclusion I make this statement. That the oath of Jehovah to David concerning the perpetuity of his throne and kingdom, is not broken, nor weakened, by the interregnum from its downfall to the time of the return of "God's Anointed," any more than is the covenant, made with Abraham broken, because it remains yet to be fulfilled. Both are matters relating to the world to come, and are halfs of a golden whole; neither of which can be consummated without the personal return and supervision, of the Lord's Anointed. The kingdom of heaven admits of no mixture of good, and evil in rulers, nor subjects. Let us brethren continue to pray "Thy kingdom come," and with more zeal than the Jews manifested for Cæsar, let us continue to cry, "We have no king but Jesus," even though it should prove to be that we are Israel.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, post-office, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, post-office money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles such mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books of tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

In complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Fallacy of Reducing the Income of Railways.

Official reports show that the railways are not now receiving an average of three cents per mile for each passenger carried, and that the earnings from passenger traffic fail to yield a profitable interest on the enormous capital invested.

The railways are great distributors of passengers and freight, and they are likewise great distributors of money. Unlike banks, railways never hoard money. Wherever the railways go they give employment to labor, help industry and encourage trade. Pay cars go forth periodically and disburse money at each station and local shops and factories, the butcher, the grocer, the baker and tradesman became recipients of the millions annually distributed in this way by the railways. Thus when a laboring man, a tradesman or a farmer favors the reduction of the income of railways he is directly reducing his own wages, or forcing himself out of employment, injuring his business, or in the case of the farmer, destroying the home market for his products. Any act to compel railways to decrease their revenue by reducing fares is, therefore, a case of "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

An investigator, Prof. Rufus B. Richardson, has discovered at Corinth a marble block about three and a half feet long, with an inscription mutilated at both ends. The inscription seems to have been "Synagogue of the Hebrews," in Greek, and the stone in all probability came from the very synagogue in which St. Paul reasoned every Sabbath and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks, Acts xviii. 4.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations, the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the everlasting destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"Think on these Things."

In pain, on a bed of weakness,
A weary woman lay.
Her face was pale and ghastly
In the twilight, dim and gray.
A friend, in that still hour,
Spoke of Jesus being nigh:
"Oh, yes!" she faintly whispered,
"He never says 'Good-bye.'"

He never leaves his people,
He never forsakes his own;
He marks their path, though lonely,
Their wants to him are known.
In sickness and in sorrow
He listens to their cry,
His arm is ever round them,
He never says "Good-by."

Selected.

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No 3.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Alban Fordyce, about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—ED.]

Let me call your attention to the importance of belief in the promises concerning the kingdom of God. They are exceeding great and precious promises, by which we may be made partakers of the divine nature. 2 Pet. i. 4. We are saved by faith, that is, according to Paul, the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen as yet. Heb. xi. 1.

When John the Baptist came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, the national mind of Israel beat with high hope at his words, "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand." Matt. iii. 2. This was a proclamation of a new era—the restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. It was the proclamation of the advent of a kingdom that they knew of already, otherwise John's preaching would have been perfectly unintelligible. Were John to raise from the dead in our day, and preach in Britain the same words as before in Judea, how would his preaching be understood? It would be unintelligible to the masses. They know of no approaching reign. The only reign of God they know, instead of being still to come, is coeval with God's government of the universe; and they think that the souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory in heaven. Strange idea! when there is not one promise from God that believers will go to heaven when living, much less when they are dead. David was not ascended to heaven when his sepulchre was on earth: neither does Paul expect to receive his crown of righteousness till the day of the Lord's appearing. The celebrated Sir Norton Knatchbull says, that until the Convocation at Dublin, in 1615, no General Council or Synod had ever explicitly determined for an Article of faith, "that after the end of this life, the souls of the sons of God were immediately received into heaven." Sir Norton says, this was declared "perhaps of a purpose to meet with the Romish Purgatory!"

John was followed by Jesus, by the seventy, and by the twelve going through the cities and villages of Israel making the very same proclamation, "The kingdom of God is at hand." Matt. iii. 2; x. 7; Luke x. 9. "Aye, the kingdom of God—that is the church established on the day of Pentecost," some one may suggest; or, "It is a kingdom beyond the skies," says another. Before either espousing or rejecting any of these views, permit me to consider how a proclamation or promise relating to present action should be understood. It is to be understood not simply as it is spoken, for its author might be unable or unwilling to express what he means; for, through inability, they might not understand it aright. But it is to be understood, as its author thought when he made it, that it was received by those to whom it was made. This does not differ from the actual words of the author, if he expresses himself as he really means—without inability, mental reserve, or intention to deceive. Thus it is in the case before us. God is the author of the promise, Jesus is the speaker—so that both God and Christ are bound to fulfil the proclamation. "The kingdom of God is at hand," as they thought that it was received or understood by those who listen to the preaching of Jesus—and that is as the listeners understood it, for God knew their thoughts. Thus, then, we have two ways to arrive at a knowledge of the true meaning of the proclamation by Jesus—the one to take his words as they stand in connection and harmony with the former revelations of God, and the other to discover what meaning his hearers and disciples attached to his preachings. Keep these things in mind as we proceed.

It is at once manifest, that the vast multitudes that heard these preaching gladly, who went to Jordan to be baptized by John, and who followed Jesus in cities, mountains, lakes, and deserts, never understood the preachings to relate to the commencement of a new sect of Jews and Gentiles combined; and a little consideration will serve to show, that they as little understood these preachings to relate to a kingdom beyond the clouds. When journeying towards Jerusalem a vast concourse of people accompanied him, crying, "Hosanna! Save now, we beseech thee! Blessed be he that cometh in the name of Jehovah! Happy be the approaching kingdom of our father David!" Mark xi. 10. When he came to the temple, the chief priests and scribes ought to have blessed him from the house of Jehovah—Psalm cxviii. 26—but, instead of this, they are sore displeased at the cry of the children there—"Hosanna to the son of David!" Matt. xxi. 15, 16. He heard their Hosannas, and countenanced the ideas of the people, that he was coming in his kingdom, by conforming to their ideas of his coming as predicted in the prophets; but when asked to rebuke the children—who alone welcomed him to the house of Jehovah—he said that their lips perfected praise, at the same time telling the chief priests and scribes, that they should see him no more till they should themselves address to him the same, "Hosanna! blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!" Luke xiii. 35. Here is the expression of the popular belief, that the reign promised to David was approaching.

Again, we find that the chief priests and the pharisees assembled the Sanhedrim, and said, "What are we doing? for this man worketh miracles? If we let him go on thus, everybody will believe on him, and the Romans will come and destroy both our place and nation." John xi. 47, 48. Now, I make bold to affirm, that, if the belief on him then was what is understood by belief on him now, no one would ever have supposed, that for this the Romans would take away their place and nation. At present, belief on him is a belief that he has died, been buried, and risen again. Never was this believed by the Jewish people up to that time, and though it had, never for this would the Romans seek to destroy Israelitish nationality! Together with this belief of the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus, is now conjoined a belief, that at death the souls of believers are wafted to heaven. At death the soul is represented as being freed from a clog, and as springing up into knowledge, power, and glory. Now, on this, I remark, that the Romans would never interfere with a nation for believing that after death the soul would dwell in the presence of the deity—that being firmly believed by the Romans themselves. And never would sane men, much less clever schemers, have thought or alleged this as a reason for doing something with Jesus. What they wished to forestall and prevent was, what seemed to them, a real palpable danger to their nationality and their religion, arising from the influence and designs of the wonder-working Jesus. The danger seemed to them to be this: "Jesus preached the kingdom of God: it was a kingdom longed for by the people, as their deliverance from their enemies, and from the hand of all that hated them. The people were believing. Once they wished to take him by force and make him a king. He did not consent—it did not suit his plans at that time; but, like other pretenders, he only watches a fitting opportunity to raise a standard for the people and proclaim himself 'the son of David, the king of Israel.' He will revolt, and attempt to drive the Romans from our territory, and for this they will destroy our temple and nation." Thus reasoned the chief priests and pharisees in the Sanhedrim. No doubt they would like to be delivered from the Romans, but deliverance by such a tender plant was what they did not wish nor believe. Hence they dreaded a revolt headed by such a man, and considered it better that he should die than that the whole nation should perish from his intrigues. It is thus seen that, by the preachings of Jesus, the people had understood the establishment of a kingdom which was incompatible with Roman dominance.

His own disciples, too, who were under his most immediate teaching during the whole of his ministry, and who had been engaged with him in publishing that reign, ask, just before he ascends to heaven, "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Acts i. 6. There is here the clearest expression of their belief in a restoration of the kingdom to Israel, and that after all that they had learned, and especially when he had been with them for forty days after his resurrection, speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God—Acts i. 3—such pupils, under such a master, could not fail in knowing really what was meant in his preaching, "The kingdom of God approaches." Here they express their firm belief, and if they are mistaken, this is the very time to put them right. But what says Jesus? Does he tell them that the kingdom would not be restored to Israel, but that it was in their hearts, or beyond the clouds? No such thing. He tacitly acknowledges the correctness of their belief in the restoration of the kingdom to Israel, and tells them merely that it was not for them to know the times and seasons, which God had not revealed. What else could he have answered them? Shortly before, he had twice promised, as their reward, that in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, they also would sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Matt. xix. 28; Luke xxii. 30. They believed this, and were anxious to know the time for this restoration or regeneration. According to some, the disciples misunderstood him altogether; and, instead of sitting on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel in the regeneration, as he had promised and they had understood, they tell us that it was merely meant that they would, in the midst of a wicked unregenerate generation, promulge a new way of approach to Jehovah, which would be principally trod by Gentiles, or that they would kingdoms gain beyond the skies. Strange sitting on thrones this! Those who say so are wiser than Jesus! They would have taken good care that the disciples should understand that the days of Israel's nationality were numbered, or, at all events, that the Apostles never would sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And these would not have listened to the Apostle John's description of the New Jerusalem, that on its twelve gates would be written the names of the twelve tribes of Israel, and that its twelve foundations would be inlaid with the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb. Rev. xxi. 12–14. But so Jesus taught them, and their belief was so often and clearly expressed that no one can plead he did not know it. But if he knew it, he not only taught and approved it, tacitly and by implication, but when the best opportunities offered for correcting them if they had been wrong, he never availed himself of them: and yet he was of the most frank sincerity, and never failed to speak truth because it would be disagreeable. He came to bear witness of the truth; but he must have been the most enigmatical of all truth speakers if, in bearing his evidence, he should wilfully conform delusions, and buttress them by royal promises to his disciples. Shortly after he had promised that they should sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel, the mother of John and James instigated her sons to come and asked that he would grant that her two sons should sit, the one on his right hand, and the other on the left, in his kingdom. Jesus does not quash her belief in his reign over the house of Jacob, but tells that to sit on his right hand and his left was not his to give. When two of the disciples were journeying to Emmaus, Jesus drew near, and asked what they conversed about, and how they were sad? Luke xxiv. 13–27. They, not knowing him, told him of his own condemnation and crucifixion: and their hearts were filled with grief as they said, "We trusted that it had been he who should have redeemed Israel." Their hopes had been nailed with him to the cross, and buried with him in the tomb, and now their minds were perplexed by some strange tidings of the appearance of angels, who said he was alive. Mark how he addressed them—"O, fools! and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Ought not the Christ first to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" And, beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them, in all the Scriptures, the things concerning himself. Now, if God did not really mean to redeem Israel, surely this was the time for Jesus telling them so. But what says he? "O, fools! and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." Consider this a moment. Certain things had been spoken of by the prophets, and Jesus calls his disciples fools and slow of heart, because they did not believe them. Certain other things have been spoken of by the prophets, how shall we describe those who do not believe them? Fools, and slow of heart to believe them!—May this never be applicable to me or you!

And let me remark, that we should believe the prophets as they have spoken. "Thus it is written," is a reference from which there is no appeal; and "thus must it be fulfilled," is the dictum of Jesus. Nothing is more common now-a-days than to make the prophets mean something different from what they say. Hence, Zion is made to mean the Church, and Jerusalem and the land of promise are transported to heaven. Thus the words of man's wisdom teach; not so the words of the Spirit. The words spoken by God's prophets are spiritual already, and there is no process of alchemy revealed by which their nature can be changed. When the disciples were endowed with power from on high, in their first preaching it was affirmed that God had raised up Jesus from the dead, that he might sit on the throne of his father David. Acts ii. 30. This was what we have seen to be the desire of the multitude that hailed his entry into Jerusalem, and the prior expectation of his own disciples; and we have also before seen, that this is incompatible with the existence of the domination of the Romans, and of all other Gentile powers. For when he again appears, he first destroys the Gentile Armies assembled against Jerusalem—Zech. xvi.—and then sits down on the throne of his father David; and, in this his own proper time, is manifested the blessed and only potentate, King of kings, and Lord of lords. 1st Tim. vi. 15. There is given him a dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him. His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, which shall not pass away nor be destroyed. Dan. vii. 14. It is, too, a dominion not in heaven—Dan. vii. 27—but under the whole heaven, and particularly embracing those portions of the earth formerly under the sway of the beastly monarchies. To the same purpose is the angelic announcement to Mary—Luke i. 32, 33—"He shall be great, and shall be called Son of the Most High: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." We know that the throne of David never was in the heavens. The seat of David's government over the house of Jacob was in Jerusalem; and there it is prophesied that the Lord of Hosts shall reign—in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously. Isa. xxiv. 23. He is the Son of David, concerning whom God promised to him, "He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he will be my son. Yea, in his being punished for iniquity, shall I chastise him with a rod due to men, and with the stripes due to the children of Adam." Kenicott's Translation. 2d Sam. vii.

Building up Zion.

A recent report made to the State department by the American Consul at Beirut gives some late and interesting information concerning the growth of the Jewish population of Palestine. Twenty years ago there were only about 14,000 Jews in the Holy Land. There are 40,000 now out of a total population of 200,000.

This great gain is due largely to "assisted immigration." There are now in Palestine about 5,000 Jews who inhabit the twenty-two colonies which have been founded during the last twenty years by European Jewish associations. Probably not one of those 5,000 souls would be in the Holy Land now but for the aid of co-religionists. These colonists are doing well. They grow grapes, olives, almonds, and cereals. Dairying is carried on profitably at one of the colonies. At another experiments have been made in tea planted. At another there is an excellent agricultural school.

Ignorant persons have asserted often that Jews would not take to farming, even if they had the opportunity to do so, which is denied them in countries like Russia. It has been contended that "the genius of the race" demanded other fields of action—that Jews must be merchants, large or small, or money-changers or speculators. The success of these Palestine colonies ought to convince everybody that Jews will make good farmers and gardeners, even when the conditions are in some respect discouraging.

The government which these colonists have over them is a Turkish government. It is therefore necessarily and inevitably bad. Taxes are oppressive. Officials are corrupt and brutal. Protection for person and property is not always to be had. The Turkish officials dislike Jewish immigration. They do what they can to limit it, while it must be evident to them that immigration which makes waste vacant fields fertile must make the country more prosperous. Yet they have a fear, doubtless well founded, that if the Jewish population became greater than that of other elements, Turkish rule would come to an end.

It is unfortunate that there should be any check on the immigration of Jews who do not desire to crowd into cities like Jerusalem, where there is nothing for them to do, but who wish to "make the desert blossom like the rose," for there is a great deal of fertile land in Palestine untilled now, though it was once. There are extensive areas east of the Jordan once densely settled, but uninhabited now. There are now no forests to be cleared and no savages to be subdued. There are tens of thousands of Jewish families in Russia and elsewhere in Europe who can be settled on those lands when Turkish permission is given, much more cheaply than on lands in Argentina.

And such is the strength of the Zionist feeling among Jews in Europe that, other things being equal, they would much rather go to Palestine than to Argentina. They may not have any clearly defined ideas about setting up a Jewish government after the pattern of any of those described in the Old Testament, either priestly or regal. They may not have their hearts set on rebuilding the temple. But a sentiment causes them to look on the Holy Land as they look on no other country, as they cannot look on a country where they have been persecuted. So the greater the number who can get to Palestine to cultivate the ground and dwell under their own vines and fig trees, the better for them, and the better for Palestine.—Tribune.

Electing a Pope.

The Roman court, which phrase includes all those who assist the popein administering the Diocese of Rome, consists of the Sacred College of Cardinals, the ecclesiastical tribunals and the legates, vicars and prefects known as apostolics. Only the cardinals have a voice in electing a pope.

This is the procedure:

On the morning of the eleventh day after the death of a pope, the cardinals gather in St. Peter's. After mass they proceed to the Vatican and enter the conclave. From this session a cardinal may not retire, even because of illness, and reclaim his seat. The session is continuous. If one leaves he does not return.

The windows are walled up, the doors leading to the conclave are sealed. Strict watch is kept that no message be sent in.

Any Christian believer, even a layman, may be elected pope. In practice he is always taken from the list of cardinals.

Three cardinals chosen by lot act as tellers. A large vase, shaped like a chalice, is placed on the altar of the chapel where the cardinals are assembled. Each cardinal takes, before depositing his ballot, this oath:

"I call upon God, who will be my judge, to witness that I choose the person whom before God I judge ought to be elected."

The form of the ballot is:

"I choose for Supreme Pontiff the most Reverend——."

A two-third vote is necessary to elect.

The Activity of British Shipbuilders.

The shipbuilding done in Great Britain during 1898 reached the amazing total of 1,610,000 tons. This is equal to a fleet of 322 steamships of 5,000 tons each, such as Mr. Hill suggested might be most suitable for the beginnings of our hoped for American carrying trade on the Pacific. It is more than equal to the carrying capacity of all the vessels on our great lakes. It would make twenty years' work for all our lake shipyards combined. Here is a powerful illustration of the magnitude of the competition with which American builders have to contend, and of the necessity of such a tonnage bounty as that now under consideration in Congress. If we would make even a beginning in the recovery of the ocean carrying trade. The vastness of the shipbuilding equipment of Great Britain—enabling that country to turn out a big steamship for pretty nearly every day in the year—is something which paralyzes at once all American effort not backed by government aid. And Great Britain keeps on paying vast bounties, notwithstanding the advanced position reached by her shipyards.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Railway Corporations as Tax Payers.

No other business calling for as much capital is subjected to as many hardships as railways, and no business contributes as much in taxes as the railway companies. Many companies have proven their receipts average only a trifle over two cents per mile for each passenger carried owing to the many occasions for which they are expected to grant rates which seem below the paying basis. It is a gross injustice to further hamper them with legislation which cannot fail to be disastrous to their interests, as a two-cent fare law will undoubtedly be.

The clergy have the ear of the world, and put into it what, from the experience of ages, they know it will approve."

The greatest and most dangerous enemies to Christ are those who pretend to be his friends, but are not faithful to his doctrine and precepts.

Bro. Zilmer has been conducting meetings all last week at Salem Church, north of this place, and we hear that four have been added to the Church.

In all the departments of the world's social, civil and ecclesiastical life, its devotion is exercised upon trifles light as air; and nothing but sentimental and common trash is the pabulum of its existence.

"A man who is under the control of the Word gets quickly over little irritations; they are quite transient and accidental, and soon pass off. But if the mind is not under the control of the Word, it is the other way."

The Filipinos have been preparing for hostilities for some time, and last Saturday attacked the Americans in Manila, using seige and rapid fire guns, showing the plan to have been well matured. They were driven back by American troops aided by vessels of Dewey's fleet in the harbor. The Americans are victors so far, with 20 killed and about 200 wounded.

For D. T., "A sect is a body of men following some particular leader or united in some settled tenets. The word is derived from the Latin word secta, which comes from sequor, to follow; hence a following. For this reason the Apostles and their brethren were a sect, because they followed Jesus as their Master. All who follow Jesus are members of this sect, which is everywhere spoken against to this day. But while the disciples of Jesus are a sect, the founders of it would tolerate no minor sects within it. It recognizes but one following.—"The Truth as it is in Jesus." We trust this will be helpful.

The Church in Cleveland has laid away another dear old member of the Body—Sister Brown, who received the word with gladness from us, over 30 years ago. Through much affliction she has kept the faith, and demonstrated the power of the gospel hope to sustain those whose aim is to do the will of the Father. The word of the living God was her constant companion, and those in immediate contact with her testify of her zeal to recommend the precious truths which were the comfort of her declining years. Thank God, she has been laid away with a good and certain hope of a better resurrection. May that day soon dawn!

Mr. George F. Bull, the pastor of the Christian Church at Decatur, Ill., has issued a challenge to Robert G. Ingersoll, who lectured lately in that city, to debate, with some one to be selected, the question of "Christianity" etc. The challenge embraces about 2,000 words, and accuses the great infidel of being deficient in education, a poor lawyer depending on splurgy, spread-eagle speeches, declares his lectures are a series of old "chestnuts" and blasphemous ridicule, that he is an unblushing plagiarist, having taken a famous temperance lecture from a publication by Dr. Gunn. He "Mistakes of Moses" from an old English work published in 1819, and his poem on the "death of a child" from the writings of a foreign poet. He goes on and states that Ingersoll has declined to respond to various challenges to debate, among others are the names of Prof. Clark Braden author of "Ingersoll Unmasked," Rabbi Brown of Peoria Ill. Aaron Walker of Kokomo, Ind. A. R. Magruder whom many of our readers will remember well. Dr. Z. T. Sweeney, H. M. Brock, of failing to debate with Prof. O. A. Burgess even after John Darst a banker of Eureka Ill. had offered to deposit $5,000 in bank to his order if he would give ten nights of his time to the work. Dr. Hall proposes to pay Ingersoll $500 a night to now debate from six to twelve nights, and makes all these charges daring him to step out and refute them. We predict the debate will not come off.

Is the Earth to be Depopulated?

D. F. B. asks to be told through The Restitution, presumably for the benefit of others.—"Whether there will be a time in the future when the earth will be depopulated for 1000 years without a human inhabitant?"

We have only one source of information on this subject.—the Word of God. If God has said so, there will be such a time as that referred to.

Why not look it up? Bibles are very cheap, and excellent Bible Concordances can be had for a dollar and a quarter, if time is lacking for a thorough investigation without such a help.

We read "an Earth has never said the earth shall be inhabited for a thousand years or a thousand hours. But he has said he "made it to be inhabited." Isa. xlv. 18. We want to know who can frustrate his published purpose? He says he has given it "to the children of men." Psa. cxv. 16. He says it is the righteous portion of the children of men and the meek that shall inherit the earth, and dwell therein forever." Psa. xxxvii. 29 and Matt. v. 5. He says he sees the days of the upright and righteous will be over." Psa. xxxvii. 13. He says to us by his Son in Matt. xxv. 34, that this right-eous state might have this "from the foundation of the world" when Jesus pronounced upon himself upon the throne of his glory on earth, and invites them to inherit it. He says in Prov. xi. 31 that they shall be recompensed in the earth. He says again through the Son in Rev. xxii. that these living part in the first resurrection will be priests of God and of Christ and reign with him thousand years. He says in Rev. ii. 25-27 that those overcoming will reign over the nations. He shows us by Isa. ii. 2-4 that it will be a world-wide empire that we are to look for over with the result that all nations shall learn God's ways and convert their implements of war into those of husbandry and learn war no more. He says by the Psalmist (lxxii. 4) that the nations shall be glad and sing for joy because he will judge (rule) righteously, and govern the nations upon earth by those in whom he hath confided, whereof he has given assurance to all men in that he hath raised him from the dead. Acts xvii. 31.) Then "when all the people praise God" and the earth yield her increase [man as stated in Rev. xxii. 15 there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it and they shall reign for ever and ever." [and God, even our own God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him."

Note there shall be no more curse when there was a curse. Earth was cursed for man's sake at the beginning and the thorn and thistle era has caused the sweat of the brow to flow freely. But the kingdom is coming. 2. The King and the overcomers reign righteously. 3. The people learn his ways and so. 4. God's will is done in earth as in heaven, and all the people praise God. 5 The earth again yields her increase. 6. All the ends of the earth shall fear God 7. And they, God's children and his brethren! Do [could] reign for ever and ever." Rev. xxii. 5.

After the glorious restitution of all that's written, why should it be depopulated? Where could the depopulation begin?

We will now show the truth in contrast with the teaching reviewed as briefly as possible—

In Acts iii. 19, 20 we read. "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord and he shall send Jesus which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Rev. xx. 6 shows that that work occupies a thousand years, all human authority is put down and the last enemy of the race, death, is to be destroyed. I Cor. xv., and then a change is made of some nature, we cannot now discuss. That is one side of the picture.

The other side is, the Lord comes, raises the dead, changes the living, they meet the Lord in the air and he takes them to mansions above and they reign with him a thousand years, being gradually occupied according to an author lying before me declaring the cases of the fallen angels and all the wicked dead to be raised at the end of the thousand years. No restitution at all.

As to those not taken away, they are all absolutely destroyed [that is killed from off the face of the earth] and the Theological Devil and his angels are bound, that is, confined in this desolate earth to wander up and down, and meditate on their own destructive work till the rest of the dead are raised and then at once organizes the last rebellion.

Just think of ignoring all the prophets have said and accepting such drivelings. Ask them to find a place for God's plan in their theory or be for ever silent.

Gog to Jerusalem.

Under the above heading the Chicago Inter-Ocean gives at length an account of an organization called the "Knights of Zion" from which we give some extracts.

"The Knights of Zion of Chicago are doing all in their power to aid in the grand exodus of the Jews to Palestine, and arrangements are being made for the convention of all the Chicago gates, as the local orders are called, next Wednesday night. The Knights of Zion is the organization of Hebrews which was formed two months ago for the purpose of carrying out the grand project of [illegible] ing the Holy Land, where a home for all the oppressed Hebrews will be established, and the Jewish race will once more become a nation in the country from which they were driven 2,000 years ago."

Mr. Zolotkoff who is secretary of the Chicago branch and was one of the delegates to the Basle, Switzerland, meeting held last year, says in talking of the work now being done: "There is now going on in Vienna, a conference of four of the most prominent Hebrews interested in this movement. They are Dr. Herzl, Dr. Nordau, Mr. Wolfsohn, and Dr. Bodenheimer. They were the committee who was received by Emperor William on his recent visit to Palestine, and the result of their conference will have a great effect in stimulating interest in our movement. Within two months the Colonial bank will be started in London, by which the money necessary to purchase concessions from the Turkish government is. Paper money will be raised. The bank will have a capitalization of $50,000,000, which will be all by popular subscription.

We keep a constant watch on the Turkish government and are endeavoring to establish as many agencies as possible, and as independent governments there. Members of every Jewish society in Jerusalem, and we expect that it will become a refuge for the down-trodden and oppressed Jews of every land. The movement will be a great one, and the object of our society is to furnish aid to the Jews of other lands who desire to find peace.

There are already 800 members of our organization in Chicago, and the movement is spreading like wildfire through the country. Our convention will select delegates to go to St. Paul and Milwaukee to-day all three lodges there. St. Paul already has a membership of 400. We are in direct communication with the executive council in Vienna and our movement has their sanction. Our local organization was started two months ago. The movement to colonize Palestine has, however, been under way for a great number of years. There are already a large number of Jewish colonists there who make a good living by raising fruits, making wine, etc. An exhibition is now in progress at Frankfort-on-the-Main of products raised by the Jewish residents of Palestine.

In our new home which we hope to establish in Palestine we will have a government which shall guarantee freedom for every one, and will be as near like that of the United States as possible. It will be founded under the protection of all the great powers, so that there will be no repetition of the oppression we have experienced in other countries. I do not think there will be many go from the United States or Chicago, as the Jews here are good American citizens and are contented with their lot. In England and the United States we enjoy more freedom than perhaps in any other countries. In the recent congress at Basle, in Switzerland, there were 400 delegates, of whom six were from the United States. The Jews have so long been a separated and a scattered race that it has been impossible to carry out any concerted plans for colonizing Palestine, owing to the difficulty of carrying on communications with one another. Now, however, owing to the increased facilities for travel and for sending messages from one world to the other, the plan is possible, and is being carried out as rapidly as possible.

Our convention will be held in our hall on West Twelfth street, and there the progress of the movement will be discussed and new measures proposed for promoting it in Chicago. We have received every encouragement and find none of our race disposed to hang back. As the Jews under Moses walked through the Red Sea dry shod, just so will the Jews of the twentieth century once more find their native land. Abdul Hamid is a very fine gentleman, and we have every confidence that we will be able to secure from him the concessions we desire in the cradle of the Jewish race—Jerusalem."

Obituary.

Wiley Jones was born in Matthews Co., Va., Dec. 18, 1834, and died at Manchester, Va., Dec. 7, 1898. His father's name was William Wiley Jones, and his mother was a Miss Hudgins. When he was quite young his parents moved to Illinois, and later returned to Virginia settling in King William Co. The date of his embracing the faith won't be hard to decide for from a child he knew and loved the Holy Scriptures, and strove to shape his life to that model. He was immersed when sixteen years of age. His father was an elder, and a loving and fearless expounder of the gospel of the kingdom, so his boy did not have to unlearn false teachings. May 31, 1877, he married Miss Roxanna Harding, of Norfolk, who proved herself a helpmeet indeed to him in his business enterprises, counseling early and late. That he might have every possible opportunity for studying and preaching the gospel. She survives, a widow and childless, for their two little girls died very young. Their early married life was spent in Richmond. Afterwards they lived in Norfolk. Later on, for a short while, their home was in Lunenburg county. For some years past they resided in Manchester, Va., where he died quite suddenly of the condition of the heart. He had been suffering for some time with rheumatism in his limbs, but not enough to prevent his going to Church to keep an appointment, for Dec. 4th. In reply to the one who tried to dissuade him from having home service he said "I must work till I die." The weather was, at the time, cold and for him to preach, keeping on overcoat his uncovered head and sitting in a draught, was dangerous for his comfort, and he got him to stay with him, but he pressed on to Richmond Monday. From that time on he had two restful days, and on the third, while waiting at the breakfast table, he was stricken with paralysis, and his wife was waiting on him as he had done in the house for her. Kind neighbors carried him and his wife soon after to their home, but the faithful heart failed, and at last, after nine days of unconsciousness, he fell asleep, beside his beloved ones.

The above meets every one of our lamented brother and friend from a private letter. It never was our pleasure to meet Bro. Jones, but our recollections go back to the time when his name was a household word at my own father's home. Naturally we learned to respect him, and later when years brought us acquaintance with him by correspondence and through his works we grew to love the man who was so earnest and fearless in his defense of truth. Now he is dead—has gone the way of all mankind, but the world and the Household of faith have been benefited by his life. Verily, "his works do follow him." May we each so conduct ourselves through this life that we may meet him and all the faithful on the "Beautiful Shore." T.

In Memoriam.

Dear Restitution:

I am much grieved to learn of the sudden death of dear Brother Wiley Jones, of Manchester, Virginia; well known to most of your readers as an able writer, and an earnest preacher of the truth.

I first met him about twelve years ago when he visited this place and preached several consecutive Sundays to the church, and the more I became acquainted the more I was impressed with his ability as a writer, and his earnestness in proclaiming the truth of the gospel.

He was not only capable, but truly a man of God, eminently devout. On entering his room at an unexpected moment I found him on his knees in earnest prayer, and this feature of his character greatly endeared him to me. Being a spiritually minded man, the ways of the world were exceedingly distasteful to him; he was a beautiful penman, and on one occasion he was offered a very liberal salary to do of fice work which he declined, desiring, as he said, to give himself to prayer, and preaching the Word.

His ten discourses entitled, "The Gospel of the Kingdom," and "Twelve Words," are excellent to put into the hands of learners, and as they may soon go out of print your readers ought to avail themselves of the opportunity and obtain copies.

R. McLaughlan.

[Arrangements are being made to supply Bro. Jones' works from this office. Announcement will be made shortly.—Ed.]

Asleep in Jesus.

I have just received notice accompanied with a request to write a memorial of the death of Bro. Wiley Jones, of Manchester, Virginia. It is certainly with feelings of sadness I do so, in recording the loss we as a body sustain in one who has for so many years stood unflinchingly by the old Gospel of the Kingdom. He was never known to compromise that grand old gospel under any circumstance. My memory goes back to the early days when I was a youth, working in the Gospel Banner office, at Geneva, Ind., along with my Uncle Benjamin Wilson. He was at that time one of its correspondents, better for the modest faith of the gospel, and has stood in its defense ever since.

I presume nearly every reader of The Restitution has purchased his valuable little book, entitled "The Gospel of the Kingdom," a book of 278 pages which he sold for twenty-five cents each. This every one knows, as it is synonymous of the publishing business was a personal self sacrifice, as there could be no money made in selling a book of that size at such a price. We cannot measure the good he has accomplished by that source alone. I presume it has been read and circulated wherever the English language is known. I have heard of its even use in Jerusalem, The City of the Great King. Bless God for such unselfish and earnest work. Though he sleeps, his work will still bear fruit.

My mind contemplates the time when one of God's most holy messengers, even an angel, laden with heaven's own glory appeared, and from the depths of heaven's azure blue, rang forth his silvery voice with a message from the Spirit. Oh, such a message, fraught with tender affection, and consolation for bereaved ones. Listen! "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

The ultimate outcome of dying in the Lord is "blessed," even as the poet sings:

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep!
From which none ever wakes to weep.
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.
Asleep in Jesus, peaceful rest!
Where waking is supremely blest.
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour,
Which numbers us the Savior's power."

The words of Jesus fall upon the ear like a sweet benediction from heaven, to signalize rest. And while they sweetly rest, the world moves onward in its accustomed routine as also in nature, the stars still illuminate the heaven like shining diamonds in the sky. The birds still dart merrily in their early hours, pouring forth their sweet melodies. The flowers still bloom and exhale their fragrance, but the Sleeper in Jesus rests from labor, awaiting the spring time, when like the flower, he too, will bloom with immortal youth.

In the hour of death, we turn our faces heavenward, and ask, Is there hope? The answer comes, O, yes, be loved, there is the blessed hope, the one hope, in it we have consolation so strong that the heart exultant leaps for joy. It lifts the curtain, and we catch a glimpse of impending glory. And when the dark cloud of death is rolled away, hope like the gorgeous sun looks out of the cloud and laughs at the storm.

District Meeting at Salem.

The First District Meeting of the Church of God convened at the Salem meeting house five miles north of Plymouth Thursday evening Jan. 26, 1899. The weather, and some sickness in the neighborhood was some hindrance to a large attendance but no bar to the fulness of blessing of those present. Two series of meetings opened with a song service that lifted us heavenward in our emotions and carried our thoughts over into the kingdom and the new earth state. Each succeeding meeting seemed to grow better. This was natural under the inspiration of the themes so ably handled by brethren Wagoner and Zilmer, who did the preaching. The program was carried out nearly as printed. The subject of the Bible reading was Jerusalem in gloom and glory as in history and prophecy, and gave general satisfaction. This was followed by remarks. I regard this as an excellent method of teaching and should find a place on every conference program.

The preaching was good and highly practical, whether relating to duties to be performed or to things to be believed. Some not in the faith, expressed themselves as well pleased and desired their brethren to hear more. The subject of prophecy was presented, in a paper read Saturday forenoon, followed by most appropriate remarks on the part of brethren Zilmer and Wagoner. The conclusion reached was that prophecy was given to be studied and understood; that its importance can not be over estimated and that it is the duty of ministers to present it for the benefit of their hearers.

If there was one believer, who attended these meetings, that was not blessed and made to rejoice, that did not feel increasing realizations of duty deep and his satisfaction in the belief of the truth intensified and his determination to live a devoted Christian life strengthened, it was not the writer. I trust there was not one that went from the meetings unblessed. This meeting was not the result of noise or worldly excitement, nor of animal magnetism, nobly assisted nor of both, but the manifest effects of a false system of religion, but was the blessed result of a firm faith in God's eternal truth as presented by men whose hearts were all aglow with the love of the word. This was and is the ground of our rejoicing. It was not the ringing of overwrought imagination but the veritable of inspired history, prophecies and promises that gave the appeal to our emotions. We are not as some men who, not quite willing to say that the Bible is a forgery are looking for a clear and well proven case of "life after death" in the personal of some wandering human soul called up or down at the beck of some medium or witch in league with Satan. We have at hand a well attested case of "life after death" manifested in flesh and bones, the man Christ Jesus whom men slew and buried and rose with his forty days ascension to Heaven and not an army of men dressed up for the occasion. We are looking for the coming of this same dear Saviour we rejoice.

It was arranged for Bro. Zilmer to continue the meeting over the first Sunday in February. May the Lord bless his labors abundantly.

Jesse L. Wisler.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Bro. A. H. Zilmer preached seven discourses in the Burr Oak school house, commenced Jan. 19th and closed Jan. 25th. The preaching was well received, good attention throughout. Could not ask for better order. We never had a better feeling at this place among those of the faith. Bro. Zilmer will hold more meetings in this place or Culver City, in the near future when an effort will be made to arrange for a house in which to hold regular meetings. Hope to be able to make a report soon in which I can give an organized class, with house in which we can worship undisturbed.

Your Brother in Christ,
G. W. Maxey.

Poetry.

Song of Peace.

TUNE—"MARTYRS THEWOS GEORGE."

We'll sing with joy, a glorious song,
A song of Jubilee;
O him who died upon the cross,
To set poor sinners free;
And through his death brought us the gift,
Of immortality,
While we are marching to Zion.

CHORUS.

Rejoice, Rejoice, We'll sound the jubilee,
Rejoice, Rejoice, for we possess that made us free,
So we sing the glorious song,
A song of victory
While we are marching to Zion.

The angels first proclaim'd the birth,
O David's royal Heir;
Our Bethlehem the first only strain,
Was echoed here and there;
The song of peace was the burden,
And home to God and men
While we are marching to Zion.

CHORUS.

His heart overflows with loving words,
His willing hands extend,
To bless the poor and suffering,
And help the ones in need,
A pardon free he gave to all,
Who unto him will turn,
While we are marching to Zion.

CHORUS.

He leads the narrow way to life,
A blessed happy home;
His grace, light and truth in sight,
Where the redeemed become,
We see the angels' face,
The stars in splendor,
While we are marching to Zion.

CHORUS.

We see that day is breaking,
He says, I come soon,
Satisfied and glad our enemy Friend,
And angels sound the trump;
Till then we wait and watch and pray,
Our hope is bright and strong;
While we are marching to Zion.

CHORUS.

The Voice of God Against Spiritualism. No. 1

Some years ago when THE RESTITUTION was published in the City of Chicago, Rev. H. A. Rust wrote a little work entitled "Witchcraft Unveiled; or the Voice of God Against Spiritualism." This work has been out of print for a number of years and coming across an old copy, we find it fits in so well with the present "Manifestations," and is so complete in answer, not only to Spiritualism as it was twenty-five years ago, but as it is today, that we produce a part of it, and submit it to the careful perusal of our readers.—ED.

"Therefore all our counsel must begin with a conviction that we are dust, ashes or a wind, and a mystery to us. For all the days of this life must be an attendance on unto the Lord." Eccl. xxiii. 10, 11.

Since the year 1848, the public mind has been more or less agitated upon the subject of Spiritualism, and various have been the opinions with regard to it. Some claim for it a divine origin; coming from the world of spirits as a system of truth designed to elevate man, and as opening a new era in the history of spiritual progress. Others equally sanguine, behold in it the elements of a new science, while others claim for it a satanic origin. Whatever may be its moving cause, it has certainly gained a position where it demands the attention of thinking minds and invites investigation. Its beginning was marked by a single circle; its progress is unprecedented, and now its votaries number millions. Only twenty years, and its journals are numbered by scores, its volumes and public evangels by hundreds, its mediums by thousands, its believers by millions, and still it is marching onward with gigantic tread. Nothing seems to stay its progress. Men of strong intellect and extensive research are among its most ardent admirers. Is it not time then, that we stop and enquire, what is the foundation on which spiritual philosophy rests? Volumes and pamphlets have been issued from the press and thrown broadcast like the flying leaves of Autumn. If Spiritualism is a humbug, or a device of Satan, it is time that it met with a sharp rebuke from the Word of God; and if true it ought to be heralded forth with tenfold rapidity, until every nation and kingdom is brought to behold the realities of its mission. We ask then, what is the basis of this new philosophy, and what are its objects? The following, as given by the (pretended) spirit of J. C. Calhoun to Hon. N. P. Tallmadge, expresses in a few words its whole mission, viz: "To benefit mankind, and convince sceptical minds of the immortality of the soul."

There can be no question but what Spiritualism rests upon this one proposition, namely, the immortality of the human soul. This proved and sustained from the Word of God, spiritual manifestations become a matter of fact, and in this we behold the secret of its progress. The Christian world at this time is prepared by a long course of discipline, to receive this new development, and not to call in question its foundation. It has been, and still is, one of the main pillars of Protestantism, that man has an immortal nature, and a soul that running consciously between death and the resurrection as a subject of reward or punishment without the body; on this foundation Spiritualism has built its imposing fabric, and now calls upon the churches to disprove its position. Here we see that it is only perfecting the Protestant theory of man's present immortality. If departed human spirits become our guardian angels as the clergy preach, they do very reasonably, may we not converse with them? Precisely so to the point, and comes with force to those who claim the above, and yet deny spirit agency. When we contemplate how many theories are based upon the doctrine that man has an immortal soul, we are led to enquire, does the Word of God teach such a doctrine? The Catholic purgatory, the Mahomedan paradise, hero-worship, and the Egyptian system of [illegible] Universal Spirit, and to crown the climax, Spiritualism, all these rest on the one proposition that man's soul is conscious after death in weal or woe. Remove this corner stone, and these systems fall to rise no more forever.

At this point we enter our protest, and shall endeavor to show from facts and arguments that God's Word does not teach the immortality of the soul. This proposition may seem startling to the reader, but we ask you to hear us patiently, for on this issue the whole question turns. If the soul is immortal and goes into after death [illegible] Then Spiritualism rests the argument. But if the opposite be true, then it falls without proof from the Word of God. What does the Scriptures say upon this point? It is a fearful statement that all Bible Christians are exposed to since language, that if the soul is mortal, is it not a sad fact that it is not once mentioned in the entire Word of God? Such phrases as human soul, deathless spirit, the soul that never dies, are used with the confidence of the Bible. The mind of the reader, by association is prepared to receive [illegible] and [illegible] as Bible truths; and [illegible] the Bible on soul." The answer is at hand: Facts as it now stands, that it originated from heathen sources and not from the Scriptures, says Herodotus, "The Egyptians were the first who have defended the immortality of the soul."—Herodotus, p. 110. This historical fact is worthy of attention, and if true, shows that the origin of the soul's immortality as now claimed, was from heathens and not from the Scriptures. And further we will remark, it is indeed known that the immortality of the soul was not known to the Jews, but by the commerce which they had with the Assyrians during the time of their captivity. And Milman in a note on Gibbon, Vol. I. ch. 15, page 530, says, "But this doctrine, if popularly known, among the Jews, must have been purely Egyptian." This last statement proves what Herodotus says as being true, that the doctrine is of heathen origin, or from Egypt.

Rollin confirms the foregoing facts, and briefly sums up the Egyptian religion on this point as follows: "It is to Egypt that Pythagoras owed his favorite doctrine of the metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls." Vol. I. page 52. When we examine the history of the different nations of the East, we shall learn that they borrowed much of their religion from the Egyptians; and Plato who maintained that the soul was immortal followed Pythagoras, who learned it in Egypt. It might be proper however, to state that Parkinson maintains, "That the Chaldeans and Indian Magi, have been the first who asserted the immortality of the soul."—Herodotus, page 3. But all must admit that as history is not in the Bible. Moses and the prophets maintain the most profound silence on the subject, and it is in heathen lands alone that the subject is alluded to; and at this point I am forcibly reminded of the words of Dr. Good, "If we turn from Egypt, Persia, and Hindostan to Arabia, to the fragrant groves and learned shades of Dedan and Teman; we shall find the entire doctrine (of the immortality of the soul) left in as blank and barren a silence as the desert by which they are surrounded; or if touched upon, only to betray doubt, and sometimes disbelief. In the sublime and magnificent poem, (the book of Job) replete with all the learning and wisdom of the age; the doctrine upon the subject before us, is merely as I have stated it, a patriarchal or traditionary belief in a future state, not by a natural immortality of the soul, but by a resurrection of the body." See his lectures.

The foregoing historic allusions abundantly prove that the popular doctrine of the dual nature of man is not taught but from heathen sources.

We have said that the immortality of the soul is not mentioned in the Bible, and the allusions to the soul, are such as to give an opposite impression. The word immortality occurs but five times in the Bible, and not once in the Old Testament, and only in the epistles of Paul. We will here briefly examine the use he makes of the word, and learn if possible his idea of the subject. The first text is in Rom. ii. 7, "Who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, and honor, and immortality." This text is against the idea of man's being in possession of it at present, inasmuch as he must seek for it in order to obtain it. The second occurrence of the word is in 2 Cor. xv. 53, 54, "This MORTAL must put on immortality."

This allusion shows that man's immortality is deferred until the resurrection of the dead, and then the MORTAL is to become immortal. This also stands against the present theory of innate immortality. It is referred to again in 2 Tim. i. 10. "Who (Christ) hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."

There are three facts clearly pointed out in the above:

1. Christ has overcome and abolished death.

2. And in so doing he has brought the priceless boon of life to light, as he is to die no more, but ever liveth. Rev. i. 18.

3. This glorious truth is revealed in the gospel; hence this text stands opposed to the prevalent notion of a present immortality, for it is a part of the gospel plan, to give it to those who seek for it.

The last place it is mentioned, is in 1 Tim. vi. 16, "Who (God) only hath immortality." This has no reference to man whatever, and therefore cannot be brought as proof. Now is it not apparent from the Holy Oracles, that the use of this word as it stands, is opposed to the idea of all men having immortality in this state before the resurrection?

We have remarked that the use of the word soul, was such as to convey the impression that it was not immortal.

We will now give a class of texts pointing out this position.

John x. 55. "All the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed."

Verse 39. "And utterly destroyed all the souls that were therein."

John vii. 15, "My soul chooseth strangling and death."

Psa. xx. 29, "None can keep alive his own soul."

Psa. lxxviii. 50. "He spared not their soul from death."

Ezek. xviii. 4, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

Matt. x. 28, "Who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

Matt. xxvi. 38, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death."

James v. 20, "Shall save a soul from death."

Rev. xvi. 3, "And every living soul died in the sea."

The reader will please examine the contexts of all these passages, and he will then learn that they all express the idea of death to the soul of man.

But at this point the objector will say that God gave man a soul after forming his body of the dust. This does not agree with the Bible account of man's creation.

We are therein taught that man as such, was himself the soul, and not that there was a super-added entity called soul placed in the man's body after its formation. The text reads as follows: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

From this text we learn three important ideas:

1. The material of which man was made, "The dust of the ground." Not part dust and part spirit, but man was made of dust, and when God pronounced the penalty on man he says, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 19. Paul says the first man is "of the EARTH earthy." 1 Cor. xv. 47. And David exclaims, "He remembereth that we are dust." Psa. ciii. 14.

These texts are sufficient to show that man is nothing but dust; so far as his formation is concerned.

2. God "breathed into" man's "nostrils the breath of life."

It has been supposed by some that the breath which God gave man was the "immortal part," but this would prove too much, for we learn from God's Book, that man and beast have one breath. Eccl. iii. 19. "Yea they have all one breath." The word that is rendered breath in the foregoing quotation is translated spirit in Eccl. xii. 7. "Then shall the dust (the man) return to the earth as it was, and the spirit (breath) shall return unto God who gave it." But some will say, it is nonsense to say the breath goes to God. But did not God give the breath to man? Most certainly he did, and it is not at variance with Scripture language to say that God takes it. Says David, "Thou (God) takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust." Psa. civ. 29. And in Job xxxiv. 14, 15, "If he set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn into dust." These testimonies are so positive that they need no comment. Hence we see that God gave to man the breath of life, and that made him live, and when that is taken from him he dies. As man was not conscious before he received the breath, he cannot be afterward without a resurrection. But some may ask for proof that the thoughts perish when the breath of life, or spirit goes to God. Well, here it is, "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4. Hence when the spirit of life leaves man at death, he ceases to think; otherwise the above texts are without meaning.

The third point in the text (Gen. ii. 7.) is, "And man became a living soul." This we discover does not read that God put a soul into the man's body; but MAN, the being that God had made of dust) became a living soul. Paul teaches the same idea, and so understood it four thousand years afterwards, "And so it is written (in Gen. ii. 7,) the first man Adam was made a living soul." 1 Cor. xv. 45. Thus we see that Paul did not understand that God made Adam's body and then put a soul into it, but man was made a living soul, or being. The grammar of the language necessitates this conclusion, and it is admissible. The term soul, perfectly represents the whole being, as the following examples will clearly show:

Gen. xii. 5, "And the souls that they had gotten in Haran."

Exod. i. 5. "And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls."

Lev. xvii. 12, "No soul of you shall eat blood."

Job xxxiii. 25, "Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave."

We might add many more allusions where the whole man is called soul, but the foregoing are enough for the argument. The Hebrew word for soul is nephesh, and occurs seven hundred times in the Old Testament, and is rendered in the following ways in the English Bibles, "life, person, beast, creature, mind, lust, heart, me, a corpse, dead persons, dead body," etc. There is no text in the Hebrew that represents the soul as a conscious entity separate from the body. The Scriptures uniformly teach that death is a state of unconsciousness and repose; and as we have but little space, we shall proceed to classify some of the leading texts which have a bearing on the subject; and if the quotations which we are about to insert are true; then it follows that Spiritualism is opposed to the Word of God.

Says Job, "Are not my days few? cease then, and let me alone that I may take comfort a little, before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death.....without any order, and where the light is as darkness." Chap. x. 20-22.

This testimony shows us that Job did not expect to go into the spheres of immediate consciousness, and then return to communicate with friends on earth. He expected to go into the land of darkness without any order.

Again he says, "Man's sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." Job xiv. 21. This text is directly opposed to the teachings of the spirits, who teach that every thing that is now passing on earth is known to them; but Job says of dead men, that their sons come to honor and are brought low, but they know nothing of it. Hence either the spirits or Job, are mistaken!

That Job did not anticipate an immediate conscious state, is further evident from what he says in chap. xvii. 13-16. "If I wait, the grave is mine house; I have made my bed in the darkness. I have said to corruption, thou art my father; to the worm, thou art my mother, and my sister. And where now is my hope? As for my hope, who shall see it? They shall go down to the bars of the pit, when our rest shall be together in the dust."

This evidence is in place and gives force to the position of the sleep of the dead. Job did not expect to rest in heaven, or the spheres, but in the dust of the earth. The grave is his house and darkness his bed, hence he did not intend to become a rapping spirit in the nineteenth century. His hope was in the resurrection of the dead, when the Redeemer stands upon the earth in the latter day, and though worms destroy his body for a time, yet in his flesh he will see his Redeemer. He did not expect to go to some elysium, but to wait for the resurrection at the last day. If the dead are conscious, is it not strange that the beautiful poem of Job should not contain one hint of such a condition? His hopes and fears overleaped the interim, and rested on the promise for a future life; when he should be quickened and brought up from the dust of death.

Of the same import is the language of the Psalmist David. He represents death as a state of silent repose and forgetfulness, "For in death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" Psa. vi 5. He says, in death there is no recognition of the Lord, and he then asks, "In the grave who shall give thee thanks?" As much as to say, that in death there would be no praise, or joy; that this was his faith is plain from Psa. cxv. 17. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."

Our Love Feast.

Brother Underwood:

I do not write to you very often, but still have you in mind, especially when I take up THE RESTITUTION to read, and that calls to my mind that we have let our subscription for the paper run by for over a year. I suppose that it is neglect more than any thing else, or else the price of the paper is so small that we do not notice as the days, weeks and months pass by. Well, I will remit to you the money for the years 1868 and 1869, and thank you for the kind forbearance which you have maintained in sending the paper, for we would not wish to have it discontinued, and hope that it will be as interesting and as instructive in the year upon which it has just entered, as in the years which have gone. We are thankful to learn that you have, or are recovering from your sickness, and hope that you may be still spared to carry on the work in the vineyard of the Lord until the Master comes to receive his own into that glorious rest prepared for them, is my prayer.

From your Brother in hope,
LUTHER BUTTON.

Editor Restitution:

I now send two dollars in payment for our dear paper—we cannot do without it. It seems to be our only exponent of Truth here, and the truth only will do us good. I have been a subscriber for the paper from its beginning and want to be through life. I am sorry that I have been unable to be more prompt in my payments, I have had a hard struggle as my health is poor and am poor in things of this age, but hope to wear a crown when the elder Brother comes. May God bless you in your efforts and give us life by and by.

Yours truly,
J. CONAWAY.

Dear Restitution:

The fact of the second coming of our Lord is assured us by the two men in white apparel at his ascension from the Mount of Olives, Acts i. 11, in the following words, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as you have seen him go into heaven." Also the following, 1 John iii. 2, which tells us when he appears we will be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Timothy says that he will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. 2 Tim. iv. 1. We learn in Phil. iii. 20-21, that we are to look for him from heaven to change our vile body that it may be fashioned like his glorious body. Matthew testifies that he will come and sit on the throne of his glory and judge the nations. Matt. xxv. 31-32. John, the Revelator, says that he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him. Rev. i. 7. Paul's testimony to the Thessalonian brethren, 1 Thess. iv. 16, is that the Lord will descend from heaven and raise the dead in Christ first. The above citations of Scripture show the Lord's coming, and some of the things for which he is coming. Jesus told his Apostles he was going away and would come back again. John xiv. 28. So they were desirous of knowing the signs of his coming and end of the world, and put to him these direct questions. "Tell us when these things shall be (destruction of the temple), and what shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world." Matt. xxiv. 3. And received this answer, first Jerusalem should be encompassed with armies, (Luke xxi. 20); the city taken, the temple destroyed, they would fall by the edge of the sword, and be led away captives among all nations, and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled, and there would be great tribulation upon that people. Second, after these tribulations then the signs of his near approach, (Matt. xxiv. 29), which will be the darkening of the sun and moon, the falling of the stars and the shaking of the powers of the heavens, and the generation that sees these signs shall not pass away (not die) until all things be fulfilled (or he comes). We are admonished to watch for the signs. Mark xiii. 28. Then follows the fulfillment of the parable of the ten virgins. Matt. xxv. The Christian's attitude then will be watching and waiting for his coming and kingdom, as now he is praying, "Thy kingdom come," and watching for the signs.

From your Brother, watching for the signs of our coming King,
FRANK FOWLER.

Dear Restitution:

The church meeting here in Stewart's hall, Toronto, Canada, known as Christadelphian, at our annual meeting after some discussion, decided unanimously by ballot to drop the word Christadelphian, as applied to this church. It will now be known as the Christian Meeting in Stewart's Hall. Many of the members have objected all along to this name, among which the writer was one. It was shown at our meeting that the name is an absurd one, as applied to the followers of Christ. Strictly speaking it means followers of a brother of Christ. Christadelphian is a compound of three words, two Greek and one Latin. Christos, Christ; adelphos, a brother; with the Latin termination ani, which means a follower of; this termination was in common use amongst the Romans, and when joined to any name indicated that the person or persons were followers of the person indicated. We prefer to be known as the followers of Christ himself. Yours sincerely,
A. W. MASON.

Dear Restitution:

Last fall at a camp meeting an eminent preacher addressing young ministers spoke of some errors which they would have to meet, and advised them how to meet them. He spoke of the belief of the non-resurrection of the wicked, and quoted several texts against it. He spoke of the Seventh Day Sabbath, and gave several texts and arguments against that. He spoke of the doctrine of the age to come, but quoted no text against it. Concerning this doctrine he said, "They will ask you questions in Isaiah, Ezekiel and Paul. I advise you not to answer them, I don't care what Isaiah, Ezekiel or Paul says, a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, and Christ did not teach the age to come in any of his parables." He was preaching on the parable of the pounds in Luke xix. 12-27, but omitted to say who would inhabit the cities over which the faithful servants would be given authority. Thus do men's opposition to truth push them out of the Scriptures. Col. Ingersoll throws God's Word behind him only when it contradicts him.

Yours truly,
A. S. CLOUGH.

Editor Restitution:

Fill up the OLD RESTITUTION each week with the good news of the kingdom to come. When I examined the daily papers of last Monday to see what the high-priced "pastors" of Chicago gave their hearers for their "meat and drink," I thought of Paul's warning to Timothy, and the terms "sound doctrine," "itching ears," etc., passed through my mind involuntarily. Your Brother watching,
SAMUEL J. LINDSAY.

Judges Chapter 12.

1. And the men of Ephraim called for help, and passed by to the north and said unto Jephthae, Why did ye pass by to engage in war with sons of Ammoon and not call us to go on our way along with thee? We will burn thy house over thee with fire.

2. And Jephthae said unto them, I was a warrior, I and my laity and the sons of Ammoon exceedly so: and ye did not save me out of their hand.

3. And I saw that thou wast not a Savior, and I put my soul in my hand and went on by against the sons of Ammoon, and the Lord gave them into my hand; and for what hast thou come up against me this day to array thyself in battle with me?

4. And Jephthae assembled all the men of influence of Galaad and arrayed himself against Ephraim, and the men of Galaad smote Ephraim because those who were saying themselves of the Ephraimites said, Ye of Galaad are in the midst of Ephraim and Manasses.

5. And Galaad had taken possession beforehaud of Ephraim's crossings of the Jordanes; and the Ephraimites who were saying themselves said unto them: Let us cross over; and the men of Galaad said unto them, Thou art an Ephraimite art thou not? And they said no.

6. And they said unto him, Say "Stalk," and he did not succeed in talking in this wise; and they took and sacrificed him at the crossings of the Jordanes; and there fell of Ephraimites in that period forty-two thousand.

7. And Jephthae judged Israeel six years; and Jephthae the Galaadite died and was buried in his city of Galaad.

8. And after him Abaissan from Beethleem judged Israeel.

9. And he had thirty sons, and thirty daughters whom he sent out, and thirty daughters whom he brought in unto his sons from without; and he judged Israeel seven years.

10. Abaisson died and was buried in Beethleem.

11. And after him Ailoom the Zabouloonite judged Israeel ten years.

12. And Ailoom the Zabontoonite died and was buried in Ailoom in a land of ZaboulOon.

13. And after him Abdoon, a son of Eleel, the Pharathoonite judged Israeel.

14. And he had forty sons and thirty grandsons who were accustomed to ride on seventy ass's colts; and he judged Israeel eight years.

15. And Abdoon, son of Eleel, the Pharathoonite, died and was buried in Pharadoon in the land of Ephraim, on a mountain of Amaleek.

CHAPTER 13.

1. And the sons of Israeel still further added to do that which was wicked in the sight of the Lord, and the Lord gave them up into the hand of Philistim for forty years.

2. And there was a man of prominence from Saraa, of a deme of the kindred of Dan, and his name Manoce. and his wife was barren and had not brought forth.

3. And an angel of the Lord appeared unto the wife and said unto her, Lo, thou art barren and hast not brought forth, and thou wilt conceive a son.

4. And now be on thy guard, and do not drink wine and strong-drink, and do not do anything unclean.

5. Because lo, thou hast in womb, and wilt bring forth a son. And iron will not come upon his head, because he will be God's Nazir, the boy will be from the womb, and he will begin to save Israeel from out the hand of the Philistim.

6. And the wife went in and spake unto her husband saying, A man of God came unto me, and his appearance was as the appearance of an angel of God very fearful, and I did not ask him whence he was, and his name he did not tell me;

7. And he said unto me, Lo, thou hast in womb and wilt bring forth a son; and now do not drink wine and strong-drink, and do not eat anything unclean, because the boy will be God's saint (or sanctified one) from the womb until the day of his death.

8. And Manoce offered a votive-prayer unto the Lord and said. In me O Lord, God of love (be understood), the man whom thou didst send, let him come again unto us, and instruct us as to what we shall do for the boy who is being brought forth.

9. And God hearkened unto the voice of Manoce, and the angel of God came again unto the wife, and she was seated in a field, and Manoce, her husband, was not with her;

10. And the wife went swiftly and ran and told her husband, and said unto him, Lo, the man who came on a day unto me hath appeared unto me.

11. And Manoce arose and went his way after his wife, and came unto the man and said unto him, Art thou the man of prominence who talked with my wife? And the angel said, I am.

12. And Manoce said, Now will the word come. What shall be the judicial rendering for the boy and what the things for him to do?

13. And the angel of the Lord said unto Manoce, He shall be on his guard against all the things of which I told the wife.

14. He shall not eat from anything that goeth its way out of a vine of the wine, and wine and strong-drink let him not drink, and let him not eat anything unclean: all that I enjoined on her he shall watch to guard.

15. And Manoce said unto the angel of the Lord, Let us detain thee here, and let us make ready a kid of the goats in thy sight.

16. And the angel of the Lord said unto Manoce, If thou shouldst make ready I shall not eat from thy food: if thou shouldst make ready a whole-burnt-offering, unto the Lord shalt thou offer it; because Manoce did not know that he was an angel of the Lord.

17. And Manoce said unto the angel of the Lord, What is thy name, because should thy ornular-word come we will also glorify thee.

18. And the angel of the Lord said, For what dost thou ask this, my name? And it is a wondrous one.

19. And Manoce took the kid of the goats and the sacrifice, and offered them upon the rock unto the Lord, and withdrew to do it: and Manoce and his wife were looking.

20. And it came to pass when the flame ascended above the altar unto the heavens, the angel of the Lord ascended also in the flame; and Manoce and his wife were looking, and fell upon their face upon the ground.

21. And the angel of the Lord did not appear again unto Manoce and his wife; Then Manoce became aware that this was an angel of the Lord.

22. And Manoce said unto his wife, We shall die therefrom, because we have seen a god.

23. And his wife said unto him, If the Lord had intended to put us to death, he would not have taken a whole-burnt-offering and a sacrifice from our hand, and he would not have shown us all these things, and would not have caused us to hear these things even as the appointed time was.

24. And the wife brought forth a son and called his name Sampson, and the little boy flourished and the Lord blessed him.

25. And the Lord's Spirit began to go its way along with him in Dan's camp and between Saraa and Esthnol.

COMMENT.

The twelth chapter continues the historical career of Jephthae as the leader of the Galaadites against the Ammoonites first and later against the Ephraimites. As a Galaadite leader he had als become the general leader of Israeel as against Ephraim or Samaveia. This chapter recounts the discomfiture of Ephraim, the death of Jephthae and the careers of his two successors as leaders and judges of Israeel. The reader will do well to compare the Ephraim "Shibboleth" story as given in this translation. The test word given the Ephraimite by the Galaadites the reader will perceive was "Stachus" meaning "a stalk" and not as recounted in the other versions.

The 13th chapter leads up to and begins "the story of Sampson" as it is commonly known. There is much fundamental spiritual instruction in this seemingly simple narrative. Let us try to get some small portion at least out of it. In the first place Sampson was a Danite, a tribe in Israeel, that has had a wonderful past history and that according to prophecy is yet again to figure as "a tribe" in restored Israeel. See Jacob's prophetic horoscope as given in Gen. xlix. 16. Dan as a "lost tribe" is yet to come to the front in the march of civilization. He has left his mark all through Europe and "the Isles of the Sea," and has been a fighter "from way back;" and his curse has always been and still is, that he has yielded to the blandishments of the "Dalilah" (a little fire-brand) of idolatry and has not been true to the God who called him out of Egypt. He is still spiritually blind, but the "touch-sign" of God's call to be "a Nazir" is still upon him waiting for him to be true to his vow.

Moreover the Christian now is the true Nazarite.

Re-read "the Story of Sampson" in the light of these hints. Sampson means "Touch-Sign," and Manoce means slow or slack, and that appears to be the character of the person called Manoce here. His wife appears to have been the man of the two. The appellation by which Manoce addresses God in votive-prayer after the angelic appearance and message is very suggestive. The appellation "Kurie Adoonah," which means "Lord of Love." Again the angel appears and seems to them both to be "a man of God." Where are the wings? The angel says, "It is a strange thing thou dost ask my name." (C. V.) Why do you suppose he said it was a strange thing? Who was this particular angel? Wasn't it "the angel of the annunciation Gabriel?" Was'nt he always sent with any important message to God's people? Did'nt he appear to Daniel by name and don't you suppose he was well known to Adam and Noce and Habraam and Mousees and David? Observe the mixture of superstition and true faith in the character of Manoce.

Sampson was one of God's merciful instrumentalities to redeem Ephraim, or the kingdom of Israeel from the bondage of idolatry into which it had lapsed. This of course is the special significance of this character in Bible history, and written for our instruction, both individual and national.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Resurrection.

From the throne of the Father, uprising in might,
He shall come!
To gather his saints in the glory and light,
He shall come!

From the caverns and waves of the fathomless deep,
They shall rise!
From the graves of the earth, where they peacefully sleep,
They shall rise!

And the living be changed with a glorious surprise,
As a countless number they mount through the skies.
They shall rise!

And forever with God and with Christ shall they live,
They shall live!
In unspeakable glory, which God shall thus give,
They shall live!

Take comfort, be patient ones, for sure is the Word,
"I will come!"
And the dead in Christ and True Ones shall gloriously be heard.
He will come!

And none shall be lost who have clung to his name,
In this day of reproach, and suffering, and shame,
He will come!

Selected.

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No. 4.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Allan Fordyce, about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—ED.]

Had these circumstances been fully considered, the period when the kingdom of God should appear would not have been the theme of so much controversy. Some have thought it came on the first Pentecost after the ascension of Jesus, and others have dated it at the destruction of Jerusalem. But be it remembered, that the kingdom of God preached by Jesus and his disciples, was no other than that kingdom predicted by Daniel and the other prophets, which, we have already seen, commences at the destruction of Gentile domination, and lasts for ever. The kingdom of God is everlasting, which cannot be affirmed of any institution or dispensation dating from past times. An everlasting kingdom can only exist in the everlasting age, which we anxiously pray may some right early. Some attempt to make out that the kingdom of God commenced with small beginnings at the day of Pentecost, has been smiting ever since at the image seen by Nebuchadnezzar, and will eventually throw it down. But I trust that it has been made sufficiently plain, in Letter, No. 1, that the image has not yet existed; and much more plain, if possible, is it that the feet and toes had no existence in the first century of the present era, when the Roman sway extended throughout all the world, and, consequently, that the time for the smiting of the image was not then come. One other objection only will I bring to the opinion, that the kingdom is of gradual establishment by the extension of the Church, and that objection is in the words of Jesus. "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation." Luke xvii. 20. Now, if the extension of the Church be the gradual establishment of the kingdom, then it is manifest that, instead of coming without making long appearances and exciting observation, it is intruding itself before the universal gaze, in all the clamor of popular meetings, and blazoned in every religious magazine. Coming not with observation! There is not a sect in Europe but what has some lynx-eyed committee or editor observing and recording its progress. But Jesus tells us on no account to allow ourselves to be led into the belief, that the kingdom of God is here, or that it is there, or that this or that pretender is the Christ. Listen not to them, and go not forth: for, as the lightning shineth from the east unto the west, even so shall the coming of the Son of Man be. Flash, like the lightnings, the kingdom of God shall come: and before you can say there, it is among you.

Some have made death the entrance to the kingdom, but this is quite unwarranted by the Scriptures, which are silent as to death the consequence of sin, being the portal to blessedness: but they are not silent as to a blessedness to be obtained by a birth from the tomb, and the transformation of the living believers, when the seventh or last trumpet shall sound. Then shall be brought to pass the saying, "Death is swallowed up in victory." O, Death! where is thy sting" may be asked by those who never felt it, and who have escaped the appointment for all men once to die; and those saints who, before the grave shall have held inexpitivly may ask, "Where now its victory?" We are sometimes pointed to persons as being born of the spirit; but whatever spirit may be born of, they are not born of the spirit spoken of in the Scriptures, as will be the saints when they rise from the tomb—the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Luke xx. 36. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, which all may behold; but that which is born of the spirit is spirit.—John iii.—as will be manifested at the appearing of the Christ, the Lord from heaven, when the image of the heavenly will be impressed upon the saints, and they shall be like to him who is presently their hope. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body, fit for inheriting the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. xv. Until this resurrection birth, none shall enter into the kingdom of God. This was what Nicodemus did not understand; but that he might and ought to have known is clear, as Jesus upbraided him for his ignorance, saying, "Art thou the teacher of Israel, and knowest not these things?" John iii. Nicodemus did not know that one must be born again before he can enter into the kingdom of God. Hence, he asks, "Can a man enter into his mother's womb, and be born again?" Job would have said, Yes. Nicodemus he can; for he says, "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither." Job i. 31. If he had given that attention to the Scriptures which, as a teacher, at least, he ought to have given, he would not have wondered, nor asked, "How can these things be?" or, "How are the dead raised?" There are in nature many operations which are not to be explained. How does the herb grow from the dead seed? Knowest thou the way of the wind; or how the bones grow in the womb of her that is with child? So neither is it known how the dead are raised, or born of the spirit; but God knows, and performs all these things. Eccl. xi. 5. But Nicodemus ought to have known what the Scriptures testified concerning Abraham, who saw the day of the Lord afar off, and was glad. It was revealed to him that he would die and be buried in a good old age, but Abraham was not troubled. He knew in whom he believed, and was confident that God would raise him from the dead. But this confidence was not the result of an acquaintance with nature. "There is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branches thereof will not cease: though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground, yet, through the scent of water, it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant. But man dieth and wasteth away, yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up, so man lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more—they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Here is Job's judgment concerning nature, and it is reasonable to suppose that Abraham's was the same. In nature, we see the dead tree sprout and grow again; but there is in nature no such hope for man. He dies, and there is no more sprouting for him. But, while nature indicates a revival of plants and no revival of man, everywhere it is written, "There is no immortality here." The sapling is mortal, and the oldest tree is nothing more. Every spring the plants and trees seem determined for immortality; but autumn comes, and where is it? Thus, nature speaks of no immortality or resurrection, but God does. As I have said, Abraham knew that God would raise him from the dead, and that knowledge was communicated through God's promise to him. When Abraham was seventy-five years old, God called him to leave his country and his kindred, to go out into a place which God would show unto him, and which he should afterwards receive for an inheritance. Abraham was nothing loth to obey, but went out, not knowing whether he went. And the Lord said unto Abraham, after that Lot was separated from him, "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward, and eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it and in the breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." Afterwards, the extent of the land was more fully defined, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates, then possessed by ten kingdoms, all specified in the promise. Afterwards, God says, "I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger—all the land of Canaan—for an everlasting possession." This was promised when Abraham was ninety-nine years old, and after he knew that he was to die, and be buried in a good old age. Gen. xv. When through the poet Isaiah or the weeping Jeremiah, whether through prophet or apostle, the Spirit has spoken throughout the past and speaks in the present to us through God's servants. God has his servants today, and they are burdened with messages from the Spirit along the lines of reform, talking to us on temperance, on finance, on the social evil, on monopolies, on the increase of crime, on the evils of war, on the indifference of churches, on the gospel and on its claims, and on every point where a moral principle is involved, and it is the duty of the hour to hear what the Spirit says.

2. The Spirit speaks to us through conscience. God has more than one way of reaching us, and where momentous questions of life are involved he never fails to instruct, or warn, or encourage.

I said through "conscience." Yes, we call it conscience. It is that method by which we know when we do right or wrong. Whenever we do that which is wrong we feel condemned. When we do right we are approved by this wonderfully curious thing called conscience. But after all is it not the Spirit that speaks to us? And is it not true that he who has an ear to hear will recognize its voice? True, all do not have ears, and such will not regard; but the text is applicable to those who have ears. Now I take it, that those who are honest before God and with themselves will listen to the voice of the Spirit. "If our conscience condemn us not God is greater than our conscience and know all things."

3. Again, the Spirit speaks to us by God's Word. There is no circumstance in which we may be placed in life but that the Word of God comes to us in its application either approving or condemning us. Are you in trouble, there is a balm in the Bible for it. Have we sinned, there is a promise of pardon if we repent. Have we done a good deed there is a promised reward. Is your home darkened are you mourning the loss of loved ones, there is light to arise in the darkness and those who mourn shall be comforted. All the conditions and circumstances of life are minutely noted in this wonderful book called the Bible and there will be found joy for each tear, hope in sadness, love for persecution and respite from every sorrow. God in his wisdom and goodness through the Spirit has caused these words to be written that he might thus speak to those who listen well. Whatsoever was written aforetime was written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."

4. God's Spirit speaks to us by events. The winds are sometimes God's messengers. He may not send a cyclone to destroy our property and lives, but when a cyclone comes and wipes out a village and kills hundreds of its inhabitants, are we not reminded of the uncertainty of terrestrial things? God's ministers we are told are sometimes the flames of fire. The cyclones, the fires and the floods are events that speak to the one who has an ear trained to catch the breathings of the Spirit. Many events impress their language upon us as we go through life, and this event of death today speaks to us of man's mortality and the certainty of death. It proves to us that the young may die, and that death may come in an hour when we least expect it.

II. Faithfulness during life, is a cardinal thought in our text. God does not ask us to be faithful a number of years. He never requires of us what we cannot do. He does not place the limit of faithfulness at 50 years, or 25 years, or 10 years, or 5 years. Had he placed it at 5 years and we should die after 4 years of faithfulness we would lose the promised reward. "Be thou faithful unto death" is the requirement. Life is the workday of man, Jesus says work while it is called today. Night brings sleep, not only in the natural world, but the night of death brings a sleep which the Son of Righteousness alone can disturb by the golden light of the resurrection morn. Faithfulness till death is the condition of receiving the crown of life.

Robert was faithful in life. He was true to the principles of virtue, of the right, of loyalty to God. His life was an exemplary one among his associates, and after which they do well who copy.

The text does not seem to express the idea of belief so much as it does trust in God—loyalty, fidelity unswerving devotion to principle. There are no degrees in faithfulness. Either we are true or false to righteousness. If false, then not faithful, and the crown of life is forfeited.

III. The second death. In close proximity to the crown of Life is the idea in contrast, of the second death. Life and death are in the nature of things exactly opposite. Life is a reality and death is the absence of that reality. What life is, death is not.

The phrase "Second death" is not a compound word. The word "Second" is a numeral adjective, and separated in the Greek from the noun "death" by the adjective "the," giving us the thought that it is death the second time. There can be no second death until there has been a first death. The text then cannot relate to the present death. This present life ends in the first death. No one may hope to escape this first death; for we read that it is appointed unto man once to die, and that death has passed upon all, and that being related by nature to the first Adam we "all die." But the death spoken of in the text we may hope to escape if we overcome for "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death."

But before any one can die the second time there must be a second life. Hence the certainty of a resurrection as declared in the Bible for "all that are in the graves." Were it not for a resurrection the second life and the second death would be impossible.

But those who overcome—those who are faithful until death, or during this life need have no fear of dying again. Jesus says, "They which shall be accounted worth to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead" can die no more. Cannot die the second time, shall not be hurt of the second death. It is then simply a question of faithfulness in life—a question of victory over the sins, the temptations, the errors by which we are tried, whether we will gain the crown of life or be hurt of the second death.

The text then is a promise of a future life, and a future life is reached through the resurrection of the just, to immortality.

IV. When will the crown of life be given?

From what is already before us we see that the promise relates to the future. That loyalty is required during life, now, and here. We cannot be faithful in death, for "there is no work nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave." Our goods deeds must be done now if we would reap the benefit in the future. Our flowers must be given now if others are to be made glad by our ministrations. This life is the seed time for the harvest future. Death ends the struggle and the trial, and happy the ones who have been faithful unto death, for their's will be a crown of life.

Notice what kind of a crown it is to be—a crown of Life. A coronet of gems will not answer,—they may be lost or fade. The rich diamonds of India or the costly brilliants of Golconda cannot equal in value the glittering diadem of eternal life. Is will be a glorious crown, for is it not written, "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

The mission of our Savior in the world was not to prevent men from dying but to provide a way out of death, and give them a life eternal. Hence he declares that he is the resurrection and the life. Resurrection and eternal life stand or fall together. If there is no resurrection, then those who die are perished.

We present to you then the glad hopes of a re-living when the Chief Shepherd shall gather back into life those who were driven out in the cloudy and dark day. If we may form a judgment from the life of the young man who lies before us in death, he was faithful to his convictions of right and duty unto death, and is worthy of the crown. Let us cherish his memory and follow his example, and while we mourn for the dead, let us be more affectionate and earnest in the discharge of our duties to the living.

Funeral Sermon.

Discourse by A. J. Eychaner at the Chapel near Gladbrook, Iowa, Jan. 27, 1899 on the death of Robert Mann, son of Mr & Mrs. S. E. Mann, who died in the 17th year of his life.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." Rev. ii. 10, 11.

I. In this text we are called upon to hear what the Spirit says. The Spirit speaks to us, but how seldom do we have ears to hear. Let us reflect for a few moments upon the different ways in which the Spirit speaks to us.

1. The Spirit speaks to us through God's servants. All along the ages God has had faithful men who instructed and warned the people. They were instruments through which the messages were carried to men. On the sacred page there are many illustrations of the Spirit speaking to men. And indeed we are told by the Apostle Peter that Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Spirit. When God would send a message to Israel the Spirit was the method whether

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations: the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked, eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Married.

Married by the writer at the residence of the bride's mother in Coats Grove, Jan. 20th, Miss Alice Coats and Mr. Jesse Chase. To our young brother and sister we tender a hearty "God bless you." They start out in life with the sweet love of youth uniting them, but better still united in the loving service of God. May their home be sanctified with daily prayer, their life burdens carried to the great Burden-Bearer, and their great aim in life be to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, believing that all necessary things will be added to them.

MARY A. WOODWARD.

It may be that God used to give you plentiful chance to work for him. Your days went singing by, each winged with some enthusiastic duty for the Master. * * You can be idle for him, if so he wills, with the same joy which you once labored for him. The sick-bed or the prison is as welcome as the harvest field or the battle field, when once your soul has come to value as the end of life, the privilege of seeking and finding him.—Phillips Brooks.

How many earthly desires and worldly feelings are shaken from the soul by the tempest of a great sorrow, even as the faded leaves of autumn. But when all the leaves are stripped from the tree, and it stands bare and desolate under the lashings of winter winds, there still remain carefully seated up on every branch and twig buds of celestial hope, which are to unfold in leaf and flower in the summer of God's kingdom.—H. B. Stowe.

"But how can a man know the day of his death?" "True," replied the rabbi; "therefore, you should turn to God today; you may die tomorrow."

When doubt is in the pulpit, infidelity sits in the pew.

Plymouth, Indiana, Feb. 15, 1899.

Our friends will excuse Bro. Joblin for being shorter than usual for a while, when they know that his own health is poor and his wife is quite sick. Pray for him.

Bro. A. H. Zilmer closed his meetings at the Salem Church last Thursday, having had a profitable time strengthening the body and adding some to their number. He is now at Bracken, Ind.

The United States Senate ratified the work of the peace commission, by a majority of only one. Meanwhile the insurgents in the Philippines are still keeping up a rousing warfare, and it looks as if America would have to conquer the islands before they can get control.

Word is received from Bro. Richard Corbaley telling of the good work done by Bro. F. L. Austin on his trip West. A full report will be given later. Bro. Austin is now in Michigan, having arrived the latter part of last week. He expects to hold meetings at West Branch for some time.

We learn through a local paper of the death at Aurora, Ill. of Sister Orange C. Baird, at an advanced age. Her husband died some few years since. They were members of the old church at Geneva, Ill. years ago, and were always a welcome visitor at my own father's house. We remember them as two quiet, honest hearted Christians. They rest now, but will live again when Jesus comes, and the call goes over the land that will awake all his saints.

The Czar of Russia will find a much disturbed lot of nations to meet the Conference where the subjects of disarmament, etc. will be discussed. Eight months ago it seemed as if wars and rumors of wars had reached almost every quarter of the globe, but if possible the situation is now worse than then. Apparently the under the call of "Peace" the more nearly the nations are, Russia now has over 200,000 men in and around Port Arthur and 25,000 more are going there. With France to neither shed a tear over the dismemberment of China. England is making frantic endeavors to call to her side not only the United States, but also Germany and Japan to unite to keep China intact, and keeping open her ports for trade. It has been for years England that has kept Turkey alive as a nation, and now the same is to be repeated if possible with China. At the same time in large parts of inland China anarchy is rampant, most of the outbreaks being on a religious line. "Christians" being murdered. Japan is having as hard a time in Formosa as the United States is in the Philippines. England and France are each facing the other sword in hand, clashing not only in China, but in East, West and North Africa, and also Newfoundland. France has her scandals in high army circles to threaten her with revolution, and England is the most internally disturbed nation on earth today, on account of her church troubles. Austria is face to face with revolution, and Italy and Spain are worse than bankrupt. In both central and South America clashes of arms are heard, and South Africa is in her usual chronic turmoil. Sweden and Norway are on most unfriendly terms, but to crown the whole "war fires burn again on the Balkan peaks." Bulgaria menaces the peace of Europe by threatening to open hostilities in behalf of the Macedonian Christians. The Turks have been at their old tricks again with these people, and emboldened by the fact that though Greece was worsted in her struggle with Turkey, yet "the powers" at the end took the matter up and Crete is virtually rid of the Turks. So the Bulgarians argue while they may not be strong enough to fight Turkey and win, yet the attention of the powers will be called to them, and relief will follow. It is a very dangerous experiment, but men are desperate nowadays. We might write columns showing the disturbances of the nations, but we only desire to give a general outline of the condition of the world, and our readers will know that the fewer the storm the sooner will its force be spent, and then—the Morning cometh. Let us watch and be sober.

A letter from Sister Woodward informs us that Bro. Woodward is somewhat improved, though his condition will not warrant his doing much work for some time. We trust he will take proper care of himself this severe winter, and we feel confident the churches among which he labors will gladly forego his visits for awhile that they may have him for years to come.

"The Father's House."

In this text Jesus says, "In the house or kingdom" of my Father are many abiding places; if not I would have told you. I am going on to prepare room for you; I will come again, and will take you to myself, that where I am ye also may be. Jesus has been at this work for the last 1800 years, and abandoned it until he has developed the situation defined in the prophets as that which is to obtain and immediately precede his coming again. The drying up of the great River Euphrates is part of the preparation. We understand that there will be no room for the Father's House in the Holy Land till the authority of the power in control there be in some way removed. All the world can see that that power is growing less and less formidable, although it can on occasion make a display of strength. But where is there another power on earth of any pretensions, that is so often humiliated by the powers? Province after province is it deprived of after vigorous but fruitless protests. Crete is the last star in her crown to be put out. We are watching to see the outcome of the Zionist Movement. If the time to favor Zion has about come, this may be a means to that end.

"Christians are Barred."

The above is a heading over a cogent article in a daily paper, in which it is stated that the British government, through Lord Kitchener, has decided to shut out all missionaries—Protestant and Catholic—from the Soudan. Some fifteen years ago the dervishes got possession of that country, and drove them all out, and now that those tribes are subjected to British rule once more, the missionary societies were prepared to again enter the land. What effect this will have upon some who have looked to Egypt as the great civilizer of heathen lands, all unsuspecting a way for Christianity to go in, is yet to be seen. The decision is not taken without due consideration however. Taking a missionary report on the work in India, Lord Lawrence, one of its most honored governors says: "The number of actual converts to Christianity in India does not by any means give an adequate result of missionary labor. There are thousands of persons scattered over India, who, through the dissemination of Christian truth and principles, have lost all faith in Hinduism and Mohammedanism, and yet who hesitate for our reason or another to adopt Christianity."

In short have been led to abandon a faith that held them in restraint in a moral way, which was a basis for their civilization, and not being inclined to accept the Christian religion, they are without obligation, and are left without moral restraint. The British government has simply concluded that a conscientious Mohammedan or a devout Buddhist is a more satisfactory citizen than an individual who has been led to abandon that faith, and yet declines to subject himself to the requirements of Christianity.

Christian Science.

Prof. Dixon, of Washington University, St. Louis, in a review of Mrs. Eddy's Science and Health, says:—"The strongest argument I could use to demonstrate the irrationality of Christian Science would be to open one of the pages of the book and bid a thoughtful student examine it word for word, phrase by phrase, clause by clause. The thorough shoddiness of the material becomes then apparent. The book is the production of a shallow, ill-trained, ill-balanced mind, dealing with subjects far beyond its grasp."

Speaking of the theology of Science and Health, the Professor finds fault with the writer for her denial of personality both to God and to Christ. She says, "Christ is the divine principle, not person," "God is Principle, not Personality." This, the Professor says, is as if a son were to speak of his father as "the main principle of my production." To show Mrs. Eddy's elevated conception of the nature and mission of science he quotes the following paragraph:

"In the year 1853 a daguerreotypist said to a youth, whose likeness he was taking for a dollar: 'People think pictures will be cheaper when they can be taken on paper; but it is not so. The process is possible, but it will cost too much for practical use.' Within a few years of this prophecy a dollar would buy a dozen photographs, each more enduring than the fading old daguerreotype upon which the artist was at work.

"So is it every day. Penny postage as a reality. The ocean cable and the telephone are omni-present."

"Many 'improvements,' like these forming the walls of an eternal city, along with the Bible, Jesus, and Christianity! Such is actually Mrs. Eddy's teaching. The whole passage is exceedingly grotesque. She contrasts the appliances of science—the mere 'Nuremberg toys,' as Emerson has named them—with the noble reality of science."

As illustrative of the mental attitude of one capable of producing such a book as Science and Health, Professor Dixon tells the following story:—"The other day some women were engaged in a religious discussion. One of them when that he had advanced an exact and intimate study of the best commentaries. This view did not recommend itself to the next speaker. 'I am not,' she said, 'in favor of too much study and thinking. I want to get truth. Are you know we are told that in such an hour as ye THINK NOT, the Son of Man cometh.'"

Russian Quakers in Canada.

A communication from Halifax, N S dated Jan. 30, gives the following description of the arrival of the first shipload of this peculiar sect called Doukhobors. This emigrant number 2000 and two other ships with like numbers are on the way. Driven by persecution from Russia these people have decided to establish themselves in the "New" world, and will locate in Manitoba, where arrangements are already made. Should they be successful others of their faith will join them there.

"There was enacted by be far-famed harbor of Halifax one afternoon last week a scene in the world's drama which will live long in the memory of those who witnessed it as one of the most impressive events in the history of this great country.

"The dropping of the anchor of the British steamship Lake Huron in the placid waters south of the grim fortress which keeps watch and guard on George's Island signalled the dawn of a new life for a great multitude of people. It marked the passing to sturdy people from tyranny to liberty, from persecution to cordial welcome, from cruelty to kindness, from despotic Russia to the free air of Canada.

"Driven at the bayonet's point from their homes on the shore of the Black Sea, over two thousand Doukhobors found refuge and a cordial welcome at the eastern gateway of the Dominion.

"Storm-tossed and tempest-driven for twenty-nine days on the Atlantic, this quaint and oppressed people at last reached the land where that liberty of conscience and worship which was denied them in their native land is every man's birthright.

"The coming of the Doukhobors is an event of no ordinary interest. Never before has so large a band of pilgrims crossed the seas to found a home in the new world. Never before in modern times has the migration of a foreign people excited so much interest on the North American continent, and never before has persecution been more cruel and oppressive."

The following extracts will give an idea of the belief of these people.

"The Doukhobors like to express their religious thoughts and feelings in the form of allegories. Thus, for example, they speak of seven heavens, the first being humility; the second, understanding; the third, abstinence; the fourth, brotherly love; the fifth, compassion; the sixth, good counsel; the seventh, love, where God lives. In a similar way they denote twelve Christian virtues, under the guise of twelve friends—viz:

Truth, which delivers man from death.

Purity, which brings man to God.

Love, where love is, there God is also.

Labor, honorable for the body and helpful for the soul.

Obedience, a quick way to salvation.

Not judging, salvation without labor.

Reasonableness, the highest of virtues.

Mercy, of which Satan himself is afraid.

Self-control, the work of Christ our God himself.

Prayer and fasting, unite man with God.

Repentance, there is no higher law or commandment.

Thanksgiving, gladsome to God and his high angels.

"Our brethren," says one of the disciples, "are called Christians of the Universal Brotherhood" because all men are equal, children of one father—God—and those who live in deeds and not only in word may belong to it and be members of this universal body. The rules of life of the Christians of the Universal Brotherhood' and its general views (at least some of them) are as follows:

"The members of the community revere and love God as the source of all being.

They respect the dignity of man both in themselves and in their fellowmen.

The members of the community regard everything that exists with love and admiration, and they try to bring up their children in the same tendency.

By the word 'God' they understand the power of love, the power of life, which is the source of all that exists.

Life is progress, and everything tends toward perfection in order that the seed received should be returned to the source of life in the form of ripe fruit.

In everything that exists in our world we see consecutive stages toward perfection—thus, beginning with a stone and passing over to plants, we come to animals, the fullest development of which is man, regarding him from the point of life and of a conscious being.

The members of the community hold that to destroy or hurt any living thing is blameworthy. In every separate being there is life, and hence especially in a human being. To deprive a man of life is in no way permissible.

The members accord full freedom to the life of man, and therefore all organization based on violence they regard as unlawful.

The basis of man's existence is the power of thought—reason.

It is recognized that the communal life of man is based on the moral law which has for its rule, 'what I do not wish for myself, that I must not wish for any one else.'

These ten clauses we hold to be the fundamental rules of Christian life, or the Ten Commandments of the New Testament.

Home Thrusts of the Spirit.

"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." This is a passage of fearful import. Oh how many answers to prayers may this have prevented. Reader, do not forget it. God will not hear you, if you "regard iniquity in your heart." If you know you are doing what is wrong, and tolerate it, or find pleasure in it, and do not seek to eradicate it, it shows that you are in love with it, although you pray for forgiveness, if you do not turn away from sin, leave off sinning. God will never forgive you.

"Repentance is to leave
The sin we loved before;
And show that we in earnest grieve
By doing so no more."

The forsaking of sin and compliance with other rules of the Law of forgiveness of sin on the part of offending children of God ensures forgiveness; but to bewail the sin of the day and seek pardon for it, and the next morning repeat the wrongful deed of yesterday as a matter of course, and at night obtain pardon as on the preceding day, such an one may flatter himself that he is forgiven for the asking, and always will be, but he will be woefully mistaken. God does not hear him.

The man who for any cause, real or imaginary, cherishes a hard feeling against another, and is always on the outlook for an opportunity to get even with him, and looks at every word and act with suspicion, and is ready without investigation to put a wrong construction upon them, is not walking with God. The peace of God does not rule in his heart, no matter how loud his professions. We are persuaded that what are called trivial things are going to shut more out of the kingdom of God than what are considered heinous sins. Familiarity with and repetitions of what are considered slight offences, if offences at all, blunts the moral perceptions, so that sin imperceptibly grows less and less sinful and less and less hateful, and the Spirit's Word for it, the deceitfulness of sin hardens them. Heb. iii. 13.

Let us call our readers back to Isa. lxvi. 2, where it gives us the words of the Eternal God. "But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my Word:" and Psalm cxxxviii. 2, where the spirit in the Psalmist says to Jehovah. "Thou hast magnified thy Word above all thy name." And such a name incurs the same penalty as that of killing? This passage taken in connection with 1 John iii. 14, 15, which says, "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death; whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer, and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him," impart the awful truth that one who hates a brother, is at heart, a murderer, and receives a murderer's doom. We pray God that those whose eyes flash fires of hatred, and make themselves long in showing how they hate, and still delude themselves with the idea that they have a justified standing before him, may ponder well these words of the Spirit, and seek forgiveness before it be too late. Unmistakably clear as it made, that it is a matter of life or death to hate, or not to hate a brother,—a deadly sin; one that consigns men to the blackness of darkness forever and ever; they abide in death.

In addition to this we find in Prov. xxx 5 that "every word of God is pure;" and in chap. xiii. 13 that 'Whoso despiteth the Word shall be destroyed, but he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded." In these Scriptures we have some solemn lessons.

1st God looks to [regards] the man who is of a contrite spirit and trembles at his Word. The idea being, we apprehend, that it is he who fears to disobey God's Word that secures his regard,—others do not.

2nd. We have Jehovah's estimate of his own Word. He magnifies it above all his name.

3. "That every Word of God is pure." It is not for man to pick and cull what it suits him to obey. Only what it is expected of man to obey,—tremble at,—has been enjoined upon him.

4. That "Whosoever despiseth the Word that God supremely magnifies," and every word of which is pure,—yea; "Whoso despiseth that word shall be destroyed." To despise the Word of God is to disregard it—disobey it, as the last clause of the verse proves—"But he that feareth the commandment, shall be rewarded." No particular command, but every commandment wherever found. It is those who regard iniquity in their heart, that God says he will not hear. Iniquity is sin, and sin is transgression of God's commands or disregard of his will as revealed. Not only will not God hear such,—their destruction is certain.

In 1 Peter i. 8; ii. 5, we learn that those who have been begotten to a hope of life by the resurrection of Jesus Anointed from the dead, are a lively stones, being built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God, by Jesus Christ;" and in Matt. v. 21 we find him that spake as never man spake, saying, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment; but I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment; and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, [or fool, or vile fellow Bagbott], will be obnoxious to the burning of Gehenna. If, therefore, thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remember that thy brother has ought against thee,—leave thy gift before the altar, and go, first be reconciled to thy brother, then come and offer thy gift."

Here the temple altar service is referred to, to illustrate the practice of the holy priesthood and spiritual sacrifices referred to by Peter. Jesus well knew that the law and its service would soon be things of the past, and a new order instituted, and the illustration of the one by the other warrants us to conclude, we think, that the lesson points to hallowed precincts of the Lord's table on the first day of the week. Or, if it refers to private offering of spiritual sacrifices the result of disobedience is equally disastrous.

We all admit that we must live godly in Christ after we have taken upon us the name. And it is very easy to say we must live godly. But what is it to live godly? If it is not to live in harmony with God's revealed will,—that is, in obedience to his commands, as expressed by Jesus and his apostles we do not know what it is. But we do know, that no amount of pious feelings or religious fervor constitutes one godly. Pious feelings and religious fervor are of no account whatever, except as the fruit of faith and loving obedience.

Let us apply this principle to the divine rule of Matt. v. 23. A person cannot ignore this injunction and be guiltless. To obey is godly, to disobey it is ungodly. And not withstanding religious fervor God will not hear such. It is iniquity in the heart that prevents obedience to this and many other commands, unless indeed it be utter ignorance of the precepts of Jesus; in either case the effect is—disqualification for offering spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. This is a serious matter surely, and helps us to realize the importance of the apostolic injunction to examine ourselves whether we be in the faith. Clearly a knowledge of the truth and an intellectual assent to it is no guarantee that we are in the faith. The Master says it is he who doeth the will of the Father in heaven who will enter the kingdom, and not those who say "Lord, Lord,"—as if on intimate terms with him. Matt. vii. 21.

Matt. v. 21-23 contains another most important lesson. While murder is rightly held to be a heinous crime, has it ever come home to us all that the hatred of a brother with-out a cause incurs the same penalty as that of killing? This passage taken in connection with 1 John iii. 14, 15, which says, "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death; whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer, and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him," impart the awful truth that one who hates a brother, is at heart, a murderer, and receives a murderer's doom. We pray God that those whose eyes flash fires of hatred, and make themselves long in showing how they hate, and still delude themselves with the idea that they have a justified standing before him, may ponder well these words of the Spirit, and seek forgiveness before it be too late. Unmistakably clear as it made, that it is a matter of life or death to hate, or not to hate a brother,—a deadly sin; one that consigns men to the blackness of darkness forever and ever; they abide in death.

Impending Conflict

Students of prophecy, who are also readers of the newspaper, must surely see that the final crisis is impending. The whole world is preparing for the last act in the tragedy of warfare. Christendom is already the vast military camp and naval depot. The son of Pethuel is again on his watch-tower, blowing the trumpet in Zion, summoning the nations to "come up" to Jerusalem. Joel in his third chapter has dramatized in the most thrilling manner the scene of the advance of nations, marching to the "Valley of Decision," where the "Eastern Question" will be "decided."

"Proclaim ye this among the nations Prepare war. Wake up the mighty men. Let all the men of war draw near. Let them come up. Haste ye, and come, all ye nations round about, and assemble yourselves together." This is the summons. "Thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord!" This the prayer. "Let the nations bestir themselves, and come to the valley of Jehoshaphat, for there will I sit to judge all the nations round about." This the locality. "Put ye in the sickle for the harvest is ripe. Come, tread ye; for the wine press is full, the vats overflow, for their wickedness is great." This the cause. "The Lord will be the hope of his people, and a stronghold to the children of Israel. This last the consecration.—Dr. Nathaniel West in Prophetic News.

No nation in the Old World is so near to being an undying, persistent, determined, intelligent, unwavering, united force, as is Russia. Dynasties may change; but Russia neither wavers nor changes. She has set out to win the mastery of the Orient, and nothing but superior force can arrest her course. There is intimation that her aims—which she solemnly interprets as divine predestination—include her paramount rule in Europe also; and that her combinations with conscienceless France already have given her a portentous base in Western Europe, whereby her line of battle already stretches from the English Channel to the Pacific Ocean in the far East. It is superb generalship! What nation has better? Yet the final test will come only when the myriads of armed men meet in the shock of actual battle, which sometimes reverses the fortunes, and consumes the fruits, of the most appalling human generalship, as in Napoleon's history.

The Christian Herald of London says: An Italian counterpart has risen to the Parsian Miss Cusadon, who professed to be inspired by the angel Gabriel. A young lady, of good family, educated, and named Signorina Ettorre, of Naples, is an artist, and was copying a picture of Christ by an old master a few days ago, when, as she avers, the spirit of the Messiah passed into her breast, at the same time revealing to her sundry amazing events of the immediate future. She predicts that she is shortly to die, to the accompaniment of an earthquake, eclipse of the sun, and other dramatic effects, including the appearance of a black cross in the heavens. The day after her death she is to be reincarnated, and the Messiah will visit the earth in a form visible to all. His appearance will be marked by sounds as of the world in agony, resounding through the earth, and the pope will ascend to the heavens. Signorina Ettorre's home in Naples is now being daily thronged with wondering visitors to consult the new oracle.

The highest bidder for the crown of glory is the lowest bearer of the cross of self-denial.—A. J. Horton.

Thy Loving Kindness.

Not always the path is easy,
There are thickets hung with gloom,
There are rough and stony places
Where never the roses bloom.
But oft when the way is hardest,
I am conscious of One at my side,
Whose hands not whose not are wounded,
And I am happy and safe with my Guide.

Better than friends or kindred,
Better than love and zeal,
Dearer than hope and triumph
Is the name I wear on my breast.
I feel my way through the shadows
With a confident heart and brave,
I shall have in the light beyond them,
I shall conquer death and the grave.

Once who tried and tempted,
Offers a shared of sin,
That, strong as a current in water,
Has made wreck of the peace within.
That wonderful love is gladness,
Patient and tender to save
Has stooped for my redemption,
Has brought a blessing to me.

Therefore my lips shall praise thee,
Therefore let come what may,
To the height of solemn gladness
My song shall arise today.
Not on the deceptive, willow
Shall I hang my harp in the land,
When the Lord Most High has cleansed me
By the touch of His pierced hand.

The Voice of God Against Spiritualism, No. 2.

[Some years ago when THE RESTITUTION was published in the City of Chicago, Bro. H. V. Reed wrote a little work entitled "Witchcraft Unveiled: or the Voice of God Against Spiritualism." This work has been out of print for a number of years, and coming across an old copy, we find it fits in so well with the present "Manifestations," and is so complete an answer, not only to the theory as it was twenty-five years ago, but as it is today, that we produce a part of it, and commend it to the careful perusal of our readers.—ED.]

"There shall not be found among you" "a necromancer." For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." Deut. xviii. 10, 11.

We are taught in the most positive manner, that the dead are not praising the Lord of hosts and that they go down into silence. The same truth is further taught in Psa. cxlvi. 2, "While I live, I will praise the Lord: I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being." But why, David, will you praise him while you live? The spirits tell us that when you are dead, you will be better prepared to extol his name. This was not his faith, for he has told us that "The dead praise not the Lord;" therefore, spirits must falsify the Scriptures. We are also told that David is not dead, but this is contrary to the Word, for Peter says, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried and his sepulchre is with us unto this day." Acts ii. 29. If any man is in heaven, David ought to be; but says Peter, "David is not ascended to the heavens." Acts ii. 34. Hence, the conclusion is a just one, as drawn from the Psalms, that man sleeps in the tomb, and without a resurrection there would be no future life for man. And then, says David, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Psa. xvii. 15.

Solomon entertained the sentiments of his father on this point. He says, "For that which befalleth the sons of men, befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath (Heb. ruah,) so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast, for all is vanity; all go unto one place; all are of the dust and all turn to dust again. Who knoweth the spirit of man, that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Eccl. iii. 19-21.

This is positive in its bearing on this question, but the objector will say that man's spirit goes upward, while the spirit of the beast goes downward. I would remark, that the same word that is translated spirit in the twenty-first verse, is translated breath, in the nineteenth verse. The Septuagint renders this passage as follows: "And who hath seen the breath of the sons of man, whether it ascendeth upward, and the breath of the beast, whether it descendeth downward into the earth." Solomon says in the eighteenth verse, that man and beast have one breath, and that all go to one place, etc. Hence, the argument is fairly sustained, that death happens to all alike, and that all go to dust, from whence they came.

The view of the subject is made plainer by another text from the same book. "For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more reward, for the memory of them is forgotten; also, their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished." Eccl ix. 5. 6.

It is not possible for language to express more positively the unconscious state of man in death, than the foregoing. All the attributes of the mind such as love, hatred and envy, are represented as having perished when the man is dead, and then to tell us that "The dead know not anything," must forever settle the question, into the issue before us.

Spiritualism at this point meets with the most positive overthrow from God's Word, and the only way in which it is met, is by denying the statements as not being inspired, and this shows that they feel its force; otherwise it would not be denied.

We trust enough has been said to satisfy the candid, that man sleeps in the grave until the resurrection morn. And we now ask, on what event does the Bible offer man a future state? Does it anywhere teach that man will live forever without a resurrection; if so, then it follows that the raising of the dead is superfluous, and not necessary, as man exist without it. But the Bible most clearly shows that without a resurrection there is no future life.

When Jesus wished to console Martha and Mary about the death of their brother, did he tell them to go to some medium and converse with his happy spirit? Nothing of the kind; but he first testifies that Lazarus is dead, and then tell them that he shall "rise again." He did not assure them that he was now in some bright sphere above, and by forming a circle they could call him back to earth. But he goes to the grave where they had buried him four days before, and then called about for Lazarus to "come forth," and he that was dead came forth from the grave.

If we had a class of this kind now-a-days that would take heed unto in stead of tipping some pine table, or speaking with some mysterious ghost unseen and unknown to man, we might have some confidence in their teachings. But in a subject of the most direct importance, than did Jesus in his ministry. The way he comforted his disciples was by going to the grave and raising Lazarus from the dead; but he is one of our spirit mediums here at the house of Martha, or will they tell the Jews that the dead will arise? No, we can never be raised, but we will call his spirit for you from the world of spirits, and if there is any thing you wish to know about the "other world" he can tell you. The contrast must be apparent to all who believe in the Holy Oracles. Therefore, in order for them to converse with their brother, he must be raised from the dead. John xi.

If Spiritualism is true, there is no need of a resurrection of the dead; for all that is glorious and dignified about man, leaves him at death, and as we are told the body is but a "prison for the soul," why raise up the prison in some future day, and put the soul back again? But Paul says, "If the dead rise not, then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." They are no more, and death would have proved an eternal sleep. Again he says, "If after the manner of men, I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not, let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die." 1 Cor. xv. 18. 32. This language is too plain to need comment. Death would be the termination of all existence, without a resurrection from the dead; and when he would comfort the Thessalonian church, instead of telling them that their friends were now in a state of happiness above, he shows them that the dead are to be raised, and the living changed at the coming of Jesus in power and glory. 1 Thess. iv. 13-17. And says Paul to Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God shall raise the dead?" Acts xxvi. 8. This was his hope. "And have hope toward God, ...that there shall be a resurrection of the dead." Acts xxiv. 14.

We might proceed at length, but we have fairly shown that unless man is raised from the dead he is lost forever, and this all mediums deny. And now, to sum up what we have presented, before we pass to consider the other side of the question.

1. We have shown that the popular theory of immortality has prepared the way for Spiritualism.

2. That Spiritualism is but a perfection of the Protestant teaching on this point.

3. That the immortality of the soul is not taught in the Bible.

4. That it originated with the heathen; and was not known to the Jews until their commerce with Assyria.

5. That immortality must be obtained by seeking for it, and will be put on at the resurrection.

6. That the soul dies, according to Bible testimony.

7. That the term soul, nowhere means an entity that is conscious when the body is dead.

8. That the dead are asleep and know not anything.

9. That without a resurrection there is no future life for man.

10. That there is no need of a resurrection, a future judgment, or second coming of Christ, if man lives in weal or woe, independent of the body. These facts must commend themselves to all thinking men as the voice of inspiration; and if true, Spiritualism can find no place in the Oracles of God.

"THE LORD SHUT THEM IN."

Never was I more seriously impressed with this solemn thought, than when I took the last look at the mortal form of our beloved Sister Russell, on Monday the 16th instant. Silent in the casket, lips cold in the embrace of death. I knew she would speak if she could.

There she lay so peaceful, at rest. And as they sang that beautiful hymn,

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

the response of my heart was, surely she will never wake to weep, and as I turned away from the casket, I thought of the beautiful expression of him who spake these words, saying, "Those who were ready went in with him and the door was shut." Shut in with Jesus, and God the door keeper of glory, thought. Did you ever read the story the light who went into the ark? If not take down your Bibles when you go home and read it over and over again. See who shut the door. Yes, remember who shut the door. God, the door-keeper, has safe secure. Shut in with Jesus, and God shut the door, "the Lord shut them in." Gen. vii. 16. Did you ever think that this was the antecedent of the phrase "Asleep in Jesus?" Thus in 1 Thess. iv. 14. For Paul tells us, "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him." Then the door being shut by the Lord or Jehovah, and Jesus being the door, if we are in him, whether we are awake or asleep, we are securely wrapped about with that winding sheet which God will, when Jesus appears for his own, unfold. For Paul says God will bring them with him. With whom? With Jesus. What a beautiful story we have here. Do we not? Let us recapitulate, that you may not lose sight of this beautiful figure. "And the Lord shut them in." Not in the Ark now, but in Jesus. Who shut the door? God. None can open it then but God. Man cannot open this door. Who is the door? Jesus. Who is Jesus? Our Elder Brother, and Life-Giver. Now are we God's anointed ones, for Christ means "anointed" and if we are in Christ then we have been "anointed," and if we are anointed of Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. For as many as have been immersed into Christ have been clothed with Christ, sons of Abraham. Gal. iii. 7. Sons of God, Gal. iii. 26, clothed with Christ. Gal. iii. 27, heirs according to promise, Gal. iii. 29. Wrapped about with that celestial winding sheet which God will unfold when Jesus comes. God will bring them with him. God will open the door. What a thought, Beloved. Have we on the wedding garment today? Will we have it on when Jesus comes for his fair Bride? It, the Bride, must be without spot. Like the spotless Lamb, that was slain, that antitype of Jesus. For the promise is only to the overcomer. To him Jesus says, "I will give to eat of the tree of Life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God." The death knell of the ages is ringing out. Solemnly it strikes on our ears, tolling in doleful notes and saying, "Watchman, what of the night?" And the echo comes back quickly, "The night is far spent, and the day is at hand." Whilst Jesus is whispering to us in soft but solemn accents, "Watch! for in an hour when ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." Momentous and awfully sublime it is to be living when we can almost hear the footsteps of the Prince of Peace coming, and the solemn thought should come to each one of us, Are we watching with that eagerness necessary to place us with the wise virgins, who had oil in their lamps? None can tell what a day may usher in. Let not the cares of the world engross us so that we will not be found watching. Are we all today ready for the Parousia? Can we take our places with the spotless Bride? And stand beside the slain Lamb? Are we ready to be overcomers? May we all be such, is my prayer today. Amen

JESSE N SHOEMB.

Behold, I am come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." Rev. xvi. 15.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

In looking over the different references in his book of Revelation, pertaining to the second coming of Jesus, we find most of them some note of explanation attached. Here it is the interjection "Behold." It is designed to call attention to the solemnity and momentousness of the event. It is one of the most important, aye it not the grandest event in the history of the world. It is the order of our redemption, and the crisis of human history. It will also be noticed that the announcement here is made by the Savior himself. No angel, no prophetic messenger sends out this mighty intimation, it is in the first person. "Behold I come." It sounds like the personal whisper of confidential warning, which he is giving to his friends, that they may be watching and always ready. It is not a shout resounding through the heavens, but a solemn whisper intended to reach the heart of every watchful believer. There are at least two important points presented in this passage. First the manner of the Lord's coming, "Behold, I come as a thief." This is the figure expressing the fact that his coming will be a surprise. The thief does not come openly and announced, but by strategy and stealth. He comes when least expected. He comes under the cover of darkness. He comes to surprise his victim. So the coming of the Lord will fall as a snare on all them that dwell on the face of the earth. His waiting ones will know enough to be ready, but even they will not know the exact time, for Jesus himself hath said, "Of that day and hour knoweth no man." Tottenger gives a good illustration in this connection, he says, it will be like a man who is expecting and ready to meet a friend, but he does not know at just what time he will arrive, imagine if you can his joyful surprise when his friend suddenly appears at his side. So will it be with the coming of Jesus, while the watchers are expecting him, still his appearance is so sudden as to surprise them. To return to the text. The thief comes quietly; his coming is not an open demonstration but a secret and silent one. Here lies the difference of the two appearings of our Lord. The first denotes the silent coming "for" and to take away his saints. The second denotes his public appearing in power and great glory "with" his saints, when every eye shall see him. For the latter we are not particularly looking at the present time, but for the former we ought to be ever ready.

The thief comes not to stay, but to make a rapid visit and swift withdrawal. So the Lord's appearing "for" his saints, will be a transient visitation in the air; caught up together to meet the Lord in the air, etc. The thief comes to take away the treasures of the house. He is after the precious things. So the coming of the Lord here refered to will be an exclusive one. It will directly effect only the holy and waiting ones who are to be caught away with him in the air. What an awful morning that will be after Christ has come and gone! Many a lowly one, aye, and some in the loftiest stations will have disappeared. One shall be taken, and the other left, and the world will have lost its treasures; though possibly, at the present time they are unrecognized. The thief leaves much more than he takes. So the Lord's first appearing is not going to change the old order of events very seriously on this planet. The earth will still remain. The firmament will still be blue; the fleecy clouds will float in the heavens, and the rivers run to the sea. The ships will sail the ocean: the trains will be on time next morning, the stores will be open, the newspapers will be published, the churches will remain, the operatic choirs will be there next Sunday morn and I fear some of the preachers too, and probably the pews will still be full, but they are as reprobate silver, for the Lord hath rejected them. Jer. vi. 30.

God grant that you and I, brothers and sisters, may never see the dawning of the day beneath these old skies, which will follow the coming of the Lord. What a world it will be with the striving of human passions, with the resistless control of Satan and his emissaries, and with the floods of the great tribulation surging around this old earth. May the Lord save us from that dark and dreadful time.

Another point that we get out of the text is, the preparation for his coming. Two things are urged upon us. First, that we should watch. This expresses an attitude of intense earnestness and constant expectancy. We are not to be in a languid, easy-minded, complacent spirit, but intensely in earnest and ever on the alert. Such was the spirit of the great Apostle Paul. No man lived nearer the Lord than he, and so far as we know could count more surely on his reward, and yet it is very solemn to hear him say, "If by any means I may attain unto the resurrection out from among the dead ones." If such was his attitude, "What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness." 2 Peter iii. 12. Seeing then that we look for such things, let us guard against easy confidence and self indulgence, but rather be diligent that we may make our calling and election sure.

Second, we are admonished to keep our garments. We are not told to keep them clean, but to keep them; they are clean if we have put on the true garment, which is Christ himself. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. iii. 27. It is only by the indwelling of the Spirit of God, that fits us for that welcome cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh." Brothers and sisters, let us abide in him, that when he shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed. The wedding garment, which every one who expects to be admitted to the wedding feast, must have on, is nothing less than a likeness of himself in us. We read in Psa. lxvi. 10, and Peter i. 6, 7, that he will try us as silver is tried. Now, for the benefit of any one here who may not know how silver is purified, I will say: That when the refiner puts the metal into the crucible or furnace, he stays by it, watching it, until he sees a perfect likeness of himself in the molten mass, then it is ready. Is it possible for us mortal, corruptible beings to reach such a degree of perfectness that the beloved Master will see a perfect likeness of himself in us? Who reads this place? Echo answers, can we? And yet anything short of this would seem to leave us naked and ashamed in the searching light of that great day. The keeping of our garments may have reference also to our faithfulness in service. When a watchman in the Roman civil or military service was found to have neglected his duty, he was deprived of his official garments, and became a marked man with the stigma of disgrace on his person. During the last summer you may have noticed in the papers an American soldier was arrested on a serious charge, and they stripped the buttons and braid off his uniform and sent him home a dishonored man. So it seems, will be the case with some when our Master comes, for he has said, many a servant shall stand in shame and disgrace because of his neglect to prepare for his Master's coming. As unfaithful servants they had failed to keep their garments, while one of the things to bring the reward is the spirit of watchfulness and faithfulness in view of his return.

Brothers and sisters, Simpson was never nearer the truth than when he said: "These are days in which all our Christian work should be done in view of the Lord's coming. It is a time not for ordinary work, not when anything will do, but it is a time for emergency work, when everything should have a direct bearing upon his return, and the best means of hastening to and preparing for it." May our heavenly Father who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, enable us to understand the signs of the times, and be found of our beloved Master in peace and readiness, when he comes "for" his own is my prayer this morning.

D. E. RUSSELL.

"Not a Jew."

"For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh." Rom. ii. 28.

Since the commission Christ gave after he rose from the dead, "Go teach all nations: Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Matt. xxviii. 19; Mark xvi. 15; Luke xxiv. 47. I say since the cross—there is no "natural Jew" in Christ, and those outward Jews of today will be lost, unless they obey the gospel of Christ, seeing it was first preached to them. Rom. i. 16; Mark i. 1; Matt. x. 5, 6; Matt. xv. 22-26. These Scriptures will show that the gospel of Christ was first preached to the outward Jew, but after Christ rose from the dead, the glad tidings should go to "all nations," the middle wall of partition being broken down. Eph. ii. 14, 15. Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; v. 15. During Christ's ministry the Jews had to believe on him in order to be free. The glad tidings came to the Jew first. "He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on his name. John i. 11, 12; see also John viii. 32. The Jews thought because they were the natural descendants of Abraham, they were all right; but Christ taught them their error. See ver. 33-39. Now since the cross, the gospel of Christ goes to "all the world," "all nations," which includes Jews, (outward Jews) as well as Gentiles, the Apostle's word for it. "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." Acts xvii. 26. In harmony with the great commission the Apostle's word for it. "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek (Gentile) for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him." Rom. x. 12. Again the Apostle's word for it. "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." 1 Cor. xii. 13. Again where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all. Col. iii. 11. The majority of the outward Jews during Christ's ministry rejected him, and do until this day, and on account of their unbelief in Christ, they stand broken off, and must be grafted into the true olive-stock, Rom. xi. 20-23, on the same condition as the Gentiles, in order to become the Seed of Abraham. Gal. iii. 26-29 "Neither Jew nor Greek." Ver. 28. Comment is unnecessary.

M. L. ADAMS.

There is something very sweet in the thought that we may be Christ's friends. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him." This means that if we are Christ's friends, he takes us into close intimacy. Not many of us realize all that is possible in the way of companionship with Christ. If we are on terms of unhindered friendship with him we can talk to him freely, as friend with friend. "How does he talk to us?" some one asks. A heathen convert said: "When I pray, I talk to Christ; when I read my Bible, Christ speaks to me." If we live very close to Christ, the words of Scripture are plain to us, Christ himself, indeed, speaks to us in them. There was a godly man in Germany named Bengal, who was noted for his intimacy with Christ. A friend desired to watch the saintly man at his devotions, so he concealed himself in his room. Bengal sat long at his table reading his New Testament. The hours passed. At length the clock struck midnight, and the old man spread out his hands, and said, with great joy, "Dear Lord Jesus, we are on the same old terms." Then, closing his book, he was soon in bed and asleep. He had learned the secret of friendship with Christ.—J. R. Miller.

Active solicitors wanted everywhere for "The Story of the Philippines" by Murat Halstead, commissioned by the Government as Official Historian to the War Department. The book was written in army camps at San Francisco, on the Pacific with General Merritt, in the hospitals at Honolulu, in Hong Kong, in the American trenches at Manila, in the insurgent camps with Aguinaldo, on the deck of the Olympia with Dewey, and in the roar of battle at the fall of Manila, Bonanza for agents. Brimful of original pictures taken by government photographers on the spot. Large book. Low prices. Big profits. Freight paid. Credit given. Drop all trashy unofficial war books. Outfit free. France to Acquire the Congo.

Great Britain ready to consent to the transfer of the Central African Republic as a solution of the entire Territorial problems between England and France. Probably the most significant development of the week in European diplomatic circles is the news cabled from London and Paris that Great Britain and France will settle their long-standing dispute over territory in Africa.

The settlement proposed gives to France all of Belgium's rights over the Congo Free State.

The Congo Free State represents Belgium's share of the spoliation of Africa. It was born of King Leopold's generosity in sending Henry M. Stanley to central Africa. It was explored and organized as an independent state by Stanley, and by treaty of the interested powers signed at Berlin on Feb. 26, 1885, was declared a neutral state, under the sovereignty of King Leopold of Belgium. In 1889, however, King Leopold by will bequeathed to Belgium all his rights to sovereignty in the Congo Free State.

Belgium hasin the Congo Free State a burden much too great for her resources. Its revenues, even when bolstered by a subsidy of 2,000,000 francs per annum, fall far short of the expenditures.

Moreover, Belgium has never held peaceable possession of the territory. The natives have steadfastly resented the innovations of European civilization, and have maintained a constant warfare. Several months ago the natives united in a general rebellion, which is now at its height.

News from Congo under date of June 21 said the native troops under Major Lothaire had joined the rebels and that Major Lothaire himself was wounded and a prisoner. The death of Baron Dhanis, Governor of the State, is also reported, but not yet confirmed.

Feb. 4, brought more serious news. Dispatches received at Brussels from Africa reported the dervishes had captured the Belgian post at Rejaf, situated on the Nile, between Fashoda and Uganda.

Belgium is willing to cede the entire Congo State to France, and negotiations to that end have been progressing some time. The only obstacle in the way has been Great Britain. France has not dared take over the coveted territory without England's consent.

Lord Salisbury, however, has unexpectedly intimated his willingness to recognize the transfer. With a proviso, of course.

The bargain wanted by Salisbury is compensation for British demands in Madagascar and Newfoundland and the cession of a strip of Congo territory for the proposed railway and telegraph lines from the Cape to Cairo.

France has already intimated a willingness to grant England's demands in Madagascar and Newfoundland, but hesitates at the right of way for the railroad along the border of the Congo State.

It is probable, however, the advantages to be gained by France by the completion of the railroad will more than outweigh the loss of a strip of territory, and that in time this advantage will be duly recognized by the French Foreign office.

The Congo Free State, if finally ceded to France, will add 900,000 square miles to her territory in Africa. It solidifies her possessions in central Africa and gives her the long-coveted outlet to the Nile. The Congo Free State has an estimated population of 80,000,000, and its commercial future is almost limitless. The Congo River, with the exception of a break of 250 miles, is navigable for steamers 1,100 miles from its mouth. Many steamers already ply upon the river.

Nanking an Open Port.

Ancient Southern Capital of the Chinese Empire finally thrown open to the free commerce of the world.

On Feb. 1, Nanking, the ancient southern capital of the Chinese Empire, was made a treaty port, open to the commerce of all nations without discrimination or favor.

The event is another triumph for the persistent diplomacy of Great Britain in the Orient. By a treaty made in 1805 China agreed to open Nanking, but, with true oriental procrastination, has deferred the full recognition of the treaty, Great Britain has never relaxed pressure, and the beginning of the present month brought success.

Great Britain, more than any nation in Europe, has desired an open port at Nanking. The city is situated on the right bank of the Yang-tse-Kiang River—the river selected by Great Britain as the main artery of its future empire in China. It is ninety miles from the sea, but accessible to ocean craft.

Nanking is the center of an extensive trade. It is the supply depot for the great Yang-tse-Kiang Valley, and drawn to its warehouses the products of a territory larger than most empires of the world.

Great Britain fixed her eyes on Nanking more than fifty years ago. In a war with China the city was besieged by British forces in 1842, until a treaty of peace was signed. Again, in 1864, British forces bombarded the city, and finally captured it by assault. British claims to Nanking have been twice asserted in war, and never relaxed in diplomacy. When the final partition of China is accomplished, Great Britain will be found in possession of the Yang-tse-Kiang Valley, stretching from the Pacific westward to the eastern lines of India, and Nanking will be the British metropolis of the Orient.

The Sebastopol correspondent of the London Times, who has been touring in European Russia for two months, to discover if possible, some evidence on the part of the Russian government to give effect to the disarmament proposals of Emperor Nicholas, says all his observations were quite to the contrary. The correspondent says: "At the naval dockyards I found feverish activity. Not a man has been withdrawn from the frontiers. The ministers of war and marine have been inspecting all of the important military and naval stations, urging an acceleration of the preparations for defence, but apparently never mentioning the Czar's manifesto. The numbers of men enrolled in the army and navy during the months of October and November last were larger than ever. Reinforcements are being sent to the far east as fast as they can be transported, and all the garrisons along the Russo-Turkish frontier are being largely increased.

The Two Cent Fare Question.

An argument in behalf of two-cent fares on railways is that if one thousand mile tickets can be sold at two cents per mile, the railways ought to be willing to make the rate for all tickets. It has been shown that at the current rate of three cents per mile for trip tickets and two cents for mileage the average is merely a fraction above two cents per mile for each passenger carried, and that the net earnings on that basis are insignificant. The injustice of still further reducing railway earnings is therefore apparent.

It is argued, too, that because people with ample means are able to take advantage of the special rate for mileage tickets, there is discrimination against persons who cannot afford to purchase 1,000-mile tickets. This is also unreasonable. In selling 1,000-mile tickets the railways are following the rule which obtains in all branches of business. Large quantities of certain articles purchased at one time can usually be secured at less than the single article rate. Sellers make lower prices in such cases and buyers always expect them. It is just as consistent to say the baker who charges a dime a dozen for biscuits is discriminating against his patrons who buy less at one cent each.

Great occasions do not make heroes or cowards; they simply unveil them to the eyes of men. Silently and imperceptibly, as we wake or sleep, we grow and wax strong, or we grow and wax weak; and at last some crisis shows us what we have become.—Canon Westcott.

"Hard speech between those who have loved is hideous to the memory, like the sight of greatness and beauty sunk into a vice and rage."

My own good name I may leave to the Father; my brother's my Father has intrusted to me.—Andrew Murray.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and no recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where a conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and get the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complication will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donor request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Present THE RESTITUTION for 1899 to your friend.

Important Notices.

All letters should give their name, post-office, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind."

Remittances may be sent by bank draft, post office money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, not yours, so there is no risk to the sender. It is easy to think that you can tell this in a letter, but no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail never can remember any thing that is not necessary in it. Take no risks, but be safe.

All remittances should be made payable to "Founder of THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot and therefore are not responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In sending books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

I Shall Be Satisfied.

When I shall wake on that fair morn of morns,
After whose dawning never night returns,
And with whose glory day eternal burns,
I shall be satisfied.

When this vile body shall rise again,
Purged by the power from every taint and stain,
Delivered from all weakness and all pain,
I shall be satisfied.

When I gaze upon the face of him
Who for me died, with love no longer dim,
And praise him in the redeeming hymn,
I shall be satisfied.

When I shall call to mind the long, long road,
With clouds and storms and shadows overspread
And know that I am saved and blest at last,
I shall be satisfied.

When every enemy shall disappear—
The unbelief, the darkness, and the fear,
When Christ shall smooth the brow and wipe the tear,
I shall be satisfied.

When every ransomed soul goes sweetly,
And all will be one, as without, Jesus,
In that sweet dawning of the eternal day,
I shall be satisfied.

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No 5.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Allan Fordyce, about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—Ed.]

But this promise of the land of Canaan as a possession, was made not only to Abraham, but also to his seed. If we can arrive at the knowledge who the seed are, then we will know who are to inherit that land forever. Now, it is evident, that as yet neither Abraham nor any of his descendants, have received that land for an everlasting possession. Isaac has not received it as we may read in Genesis, and in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews; nor Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. Abraham had even to purchase a burying place for his wife, Sarah; and Jacob bought a parcel of a field from the children of Hamor. In the same way, if we trace the descendants of Abraham from that time till now, we will find, that for only a few years, during the reign of Solomon, was there any near approach to the possession of the land in its full extent. Immediately before Joshua's death, the Lord said unto him, "There remaineth yet very much land to be possessed." Josh. xiii. This land was apportioned to the children of Israel, but they have never yet received it in possession. Even in Solomon's reign, a king reigned in Damascus, over Syria, and was an adversary to Israel. 1 Kings xi. 25. Any one who carefully looks at the boundaries of the land, will find that Syria is included, and so is Tyre, over which Hiram bore sway. Since the reign of Solomon, the possession of the Israelites has gradually shrunk, till the Turk possesses the land of promise, and taxes the Jews for a place of wailing beside the Temple stones in their beloved Jerusalem.

From all this it is evident, not only that the descendants of Abraham have not received that land for an everlasting possession, but that they have at no time, however short, possessed that land in its full extent. The same thing is witnessed by Paul, when reasoning that there remaineth a rest for the people of God, from the fact, that Joshua did not give them the promised rest, and that the Holy Spirit, testifying through David, promised the rest to the nation of Israel, when they should hear his voice, and cease to harden their hearts. Heb. iii. As time rolled on, the heart of that nation has become more and more obdurate, still precluding them, and all others, from inheriting that rest; so that that rest still remains till another day. But the promise and oath of God—two immutable things, by which it is impossible that God can lie—stand still forth, to give strong assurance that both Abraham and his seed shall receive for ever the land of Canaan for an inheritance. There is no reason to hope that the hearts of the Israelites will be softened till the "deliverer shall come out of Zion, and he shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." This was predicted by the Prophet Isaiah—chap. lix.—and Paul, in his letter to the Romans—chap. xi.—when speaking of the blindness in part which happened to Israel, which he calls a mystery—because then, as yet, it is not completely developed—reminds those Christians of the necessity of understanding it, because the finishing of that mystery will be the salvation of the nation, according to that prediction. Observe, that this prediction concerning the Deliverer announces at the same time the new covenant, which God will then make with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah—a new covenant, not according to the covenant which he made with their fathers in the day when he took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt—Jer. xxxi., and Heb. viii.—but a better covenant, of which Jesus is the mediator; and the terms of which are, that God will put his law in their minds, and write them in their hearts, and he will be to them a God, and they will be to him a people. Under the former covenant with the houses of Israel and Judah, the sins of the nation, year by year, waxed heavy upon them, for the blood of bulls and of goats, annually presented in the holy place made with hands, could not take away sin. Hence, the curses of that covenant have driven them, and still keep them scattered and jostled in every country under heaven—everywhere strangers, and nowhere more than in the land which God gave unto their fathers. Under the former covenant, we have seen that the national sins—the sins of the people as a whole—the sins of the holy politie—were annually remembered, and confessed by the high priest; but the offerings then made by him, although they might procure mercy and the delay of punishment, could never take away the sins that the body politic had committed. If the Mosaic body, during any one year, committed no sins, yet there must be a remembrance of their sins at the great day of atonement, until the time should come when, having done the will of God, Christ—who died for the redemption of the transgressions under the former covenant—Heb. ix. 15—should finish the transgression and make an end of sins, make reconciliation for iniquity, and bring in everlasting righteousness. Not indeed, as some imagine, to finish the transgressions of each individual of the house of Israel, for we read that the sinner dying a hundred years old shall be accursed—Isaiah lxv.—but the transgressions of Israel, in its national capacity, will be blotted out—there will be no more remembrance of these. Under the former covenant, while the leaders of the people caused the nation to err, year after year only added to the multitude of sins, that called down upon the nation the curses written in the law; and, however long vengeance might be delayed, yet, under that covenant, these curses must have come, and all the sins committed by that nation are being visited upon them.

But when Messiah the Prince appears, he shall have made reconciliation for the national iniquity, and shall bring in an everlasting righteousness to reign. The sins of the nation have been the sins their rulers led them into, and hence, the rulers likewise have to suffer the punishment; so that, if the former national sins should be remembered in the everlasting age, they would be remembered on Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews, who already has been stricken for their transgressions. In the same way, if the former iniquities of the nation were not forgiven, they would be avenged on the twelve apostles when they should sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Matt. xix. But when the new covenant is established, God will first have recompensed their iniquity double, and then it will be manifest that Jesus was exalted by God's hand to be a Prince and a Savior, to give repentance or a change of heart to Israel, and the forgiveness of sins—Acts v. 31—and, as of those times of refreshing their sins shall be blotted out, so ever afterwards there will be no more national or governmental sins committed, and thus none to be remembered. As then the reconciliation is effected, and this righteousness brought in by Messiah the Prince, the promise to Abraham, that God would give unto him, and to his seed, the land of Canaan as an everlasting possession, may be viewed as a promise, that that land shall be given to Abraham, and to his seed, Christ Jesus, who did not lay claim, to what pertained to angels, but he did lay claim to what belongs to the seed of Abraham. Heb. ii. And to this agrees the Apostle Paul, when commenting, as follows: "Now, to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. iii. 16. So that God's promise and oath are the surer guarantees, that Abraham shall rise from the dead to receive the land of Canaan, and that Christ shall return to sit on the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

"A Dismal Outlook for Peace."

"The Right Hon. John Morley, M. P., one of England's brightest statesmen, is not one of those who believe that universal peace is to be looked for nor that general disarmament is to be brought about. On the other hand he takes a gloomy view of the future, and not only for his own country but the entire world. In a recent address to his constituents he frankly admitted that he took a pessimistic view of the difficulties threatening throughout the world. 'I think,' he exclaimed, 'we are nearer the beginning of them than the end.' It is his firm conviction that 'the prevailing spirit of imperialism must inevitably bring militarism, a gigantic daily growing expenditure, increased power to aristocratic and privileged classes and war.'

"Germany refuses to consider the Czar of Russia's proposition to disarm in the cause of peace, its chancellor declaring that the salvation of Germany depends on an increase of her military strength; Austria says nothing, but strengthens her army to check dissensions within her borders, her mixed people warring against each other, and herself would be despoiled by the other powers by any serious rebellion. France is polite, and that is all, but orders additional warships. Her great army now dominates the Republic, which is seriously threatened with revolution. England will send representatives to the peace conference, but increases her navy greater than ever, feeling her very existence as a nation depends on it; she also is binding to her side the United States, which is more than quadrupling its army and navy. And it is Russia that England dreads, the very power that demands disarmament, but goes on building her fighting power more than all the rest; she despoils China, bullies Japan, and has reached the borders of British India by buying up the Ameer of Afghanistan, and covets that rich possession. Such a power is not to be trusted any more than a hungry wolf in a sheepfold.

"It looks more, as Mr. Morley says, as if the difficulties threatening the world 'are nearer the beginning of them than the end.'"—Putnam Patriot, England.

Parable of the Ten Virgins No. 1.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be like unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom." Matt. xxv. 1-14.

The above verse of Scripture calls the twelve verses includes or covers the parable of the ten virgins. [illegible] a chapter has been used so often, both privately and publicly in the pulpit and in the press, that it is now generally in the past, and nearly the same number of times has it been [illegible], because the time and place has not been properly understood, and now for the sake of arriving at the truth upon this parable, do we put our pencil to write these few lines that it may be thoroughly understood, and the very first thing that claims our attention is, "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto," the very next ask, then when does the fulfilment of this parable take place. For we both see and learn that the whole affair all turns on the word "then," and that it is all important that we start exactly rightly upon the subject, for whatever starts right, ends right, will surely hear the welcome plaudit, "well done," and forth, and in view of this we affirm that the word "then," is an adverb of time and place and almost universally speaking has direct reference to both time and place, where and when the things spoken of will operate. But before going further on this point just now, let me here say that the dividing up of the Bible into chapters as it now is, is all man's work, and often, quite often, is it the more harm than good as to [illegible] especially as since the Lord is done, for its being so divided is the very reason why we so many lose sight of the line of thought that our Savior had in view to convey and thus do not understand as we ought, but if we will only grasp the thought and hold it there, that this 25th chapter of Matt. belongs to the previous chapter then we are able to learn what follows, and in order to do this most successfully we take a backward march over this chapter of Matt. So we now commence by laying our forefinger on the last verse of this chapter, and first let us now stop and think. What do we want to know before we begin? Of time and place, where and when the ten virgins will operate.

Now let us proceed by reading the last verse first, going very slowly and carefully reading each verse by itself, clear back eleven verses, and we do not find a single verse teaching us any thing with regard to both time and place where and when they will operate, and thus brings us back to the 40th verse. Here we start again, when lo, and behold, the very first thing we strike another "then," which teaches us that the very antecedent is back of this. So we keep on reading backward till we come to the 30th verse, and yet we haven't found anything that teaches us of both time and place, where and when the ten virgins will operate. Well, says one, will we ever find what the Bible teaches us to look for? Yes, we will, but at all events, let us not be weary in well doing. So we start afresh once more, and very first thing we find two more "thens" in this 30th verse touching the same thing yet. So we have to still go on reading and in the very next verse we have found it at last, and what does it say, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days." Now here is the time, and here is the place without any doubt, because it will take both time and place to accomplish this work. But says one, I never heard it that way before, you are leading us astray, and off from our subject, not at all, but right back to the exact time and place where and when our Savior intended to convey to us, where and when we can look by an eye of faith and hope for its fulfillment. Now with regard to the word "then" we have it spoken of once in the 40th verse, twice in the 30th verse, and that they all point back to this same time and place where it reads, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days," for there is no time or place spoken of on this side of that event, so it must be there without any doubt.

Having now learned that the parable of the ten virgins cannot meet with its fulfilment till after the tribulation of those days, we next enquire, who is this tribulation upon, and in the [illegible] part of our subject it is absolutely necessary that we be very careful to follow the line of thought right back from the 29th to 21st verse where we find it speaking of this same tribulation, and on back to the 15th verse, where it says, "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Dan. the prophet, standing in the holy place (whoso readeth let him understand) the above is the testimony of Matt. speaking of the great tribulation twice, and once the cause of it, which was the abomination of desolation spoken of by Dan. the prophet, standing in the holy place, now what is our duty with regard to giving testimony in the mouth of two or three witnesses may every word be established. Deut. xvii 6; xix. 15; Matt. xviii 16. [illegible] forcast two witnesses to make out our case, and which will be Matt. and Luke. We find in Matt. xiii. 14, "But when ye shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Dan. the prophet, standing where it ought not (let him that readeth understand)." Also also in Luke xxi. 20, 22, 23. "When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies then know that the desolation thereof is nigh, for these be the days of vengeance that all things which are written may be fulfilled. For there shall be great distress in the land and wrath upon this people." Now there is no question from the above testimony but that the great tribulation is upon the Jewish people or nation, and we can look and see for ourselves about our Savior spoke the above, then let us hear the coming warning, nor neither did it commence to take place until A. D. 70, when its city, temple and throne were destroyed by Titus and his army, and over a million of people were killed, and their nationality destroyed, and the living portion of their people scattered among all people. Now here is the exact time when the great tribulation commenced upon the Jewish people or nation according to the above quotation, and that it is still upon them, because they are yet scattered. And now seeing and understanding that we are living in the days of their restoration, we can see that there is a letting or loosening up to the great tribulation, and just as soon as their restoration is completed by their being restored back to their own land, then their great tribulation is over-past and gone, and just as soon as this is done, "then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom," and now how that any body can place this any where else is more than we are able to understand, when we are able by the help of the Lord to run the line of thought from our Savior's day forward to when the great tribulation commenced, and on forward to the time when the great tribulation closes, is the time then the word "then" directs us to look forward to with an eye of faith and hope to when it shall be fulfilled, which also is the exact time the our Savior intended to convey facts to understand, so that there need not be any mistake about it and just so sure as the Jews are now loosening up or being restored, just so sure will the time come when their restoration be completed, then will the congregation of the Lord go forth like the ten virgins to meet their now long absent Lord, and we do rejoice too that that day is now near at hand. Just let the restoration of the Jews be once completed, then we do look for the saints of God to take up their line of march for their Master, and though they may start a little too soon, or stop a little too soon and lay down to rest and slumber and sleep as the dear seem, midnight cry is made, yet they know full well that they will eventually meet their coming Bridegroom.

Yours awaiting the glorious time.

J. A. MOYER.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Yours of the 28rd inst received and contents noted: In answer to the two queries would say that there is no variation of text in Gen. xi. 10, except in the spurious versions of the Septuagint, copies of which are still extant, which were the output of the Judaizing rabbis of the second century of the Christian era, the same class who tampered with the text of the whole of the Old Covenant Scriptures under the specious pretext of perfecting the vocalization of the Hebrew text originally by the Masorets probably in good faith. The word rendered "bruise" in v. V. as the same word rendered "kept" or "have kept" where Paul is made to say "I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me," etc., Should I've been rendered "I have watched over," etc. The word translated "cruise" Exodus xv. 20 is used but once in relation to the word used in Gen. iii. 15, and improperly rendered "bruise" in this passage. "Crush" would be a better rendering. The primitive meaning of the word is to rub two sticks together so as to produce fire, and to do this practically requires an surplus of the wood to a fine powder that ignites with the heat engendered by the friction. I do not doubt the ultimate obliteration of the serpent's head and by a more effective process than merely bruising, but there is special need now more than ever that we should all "watch unto" prayer" the close of the mysterious. For we are warned that in all probability but "the very elect" in these last days

[illegible] spoken of in the above quotations and answers, and I would say that I have published to the columns of your paper, THE RESTITUTION, the whole book of Jasher as well as the collateral evidence of his origin. St. I will merely repeat in brief that, the record shows clearly and conclusively that Moseres married Sapphoora, one of the seven daughters of Dragon-el (Reu) C. V.) a descendant of Hahraam, 3rd in line of Hesron (Esau C. V.) from Seir. These sisters had a brother by the name of Zare and Zare had a son by the name of Jooliah, shortened to Jooh, who became the second king of Edom (Edom C. V.) in the 10th of Numbers the person there spoken of as "Hobab" (C. V. in this same "Jooh" and he becomes "Hobab" by the wrong vowel-pointing of those Judaizing rabbis in the 2nd century of the Christian era. Now from this narrative here given it is perfectly evident that he has been acting as "guide" for his Uncle Moseres up to the foot of Mount Sinai and the giving of the law—there as recounted and decides to go back and try for the kingship as successor to "Bulok" who dies about this time, and he succeeds and becomes the 2nd king of Edom as the records clearly show. The Septuagint makes all this and a great many other things perfectly clear.

Yours in the faith once for all delivered to the saints.

CHAS. GARDNER.

In England the persecution of the state church by Romanism still continues. The vicar of Hexton has incurred the displeasure of the Bishop of Peterborough by insisting upon administering the Lord's Supper in the Congregational church in Wellingborough to a large number of churchmen who could not feel at home in the excessively ritualistic atmosphere of their own churches. He proposes to found a society "to provide the sacraments of the Established Church for those Protestant churchmen who are driven from the altars of that church by the practices of Romanizing priests." His course is especially noticeable because the like is so seldom seen.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations, the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths, also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

WE do not like to do so, but the fact that quite a number of those who must know they are in arrears on subscription, have failed to respond, compells us to call attention to this long neglected duty. It certainly is clear to the mind of any one, that after notices have been sent, and later attention called to them, that it is a breach of good manners to not reply to our letters. Just ask yourself, How would I like such treatment? We want a clear understanding with those who owe us. If you are not able to pay now, we want to know it, and know when you can remit. If you are able to pay, then we say frankly that we want the money due us. We are compelled to pay our debts. If we did not respond promptly our credit would be ruined, and our business stopped. We ask you kindly to treat us as you would have us treat you. If you do this we will surely get our money at once.

BRO. Edwin Partridge of Tiosa, Ind. died Sunday last. Obituary will be given next week.

BRO. D. T. Halstead has gone to Wenatchee, Wash., to preach for the Church there for a few months.

WE see by the public press that it is expected that the big telescope designed for the Paris Exposition will be ready on time. It is an enormous reflector, bringing the moon to an apparent distance of sixty miles.

A QUESTION is asked by Mrs. N. W. regarding the meaning of Matt. iii. 2. We will give the reading of the Emphatic Diaglott, and a clearer idea of the subject will be had. "Now in those days appeared John, the immerser, in the desert of Judea, publicly announcing, Reformt because the Royal Majesty of the heavens has approached."

AMONG a number of curious things mentioned by a contemporary paper, are these: 1. The tongue that will not be bettered by a padlock. 2. The nonsense some people tell to God when they think they are making a fine prayer. 3. The reluctance to do which people show, who in health sing:

"Death is the voice that Jesus sends,
To call us to His arms."

IN the course of an article sketching the histories of some early English ecclesiastics, a writer in the Windsor Magazine, London, tells what it cost to burn a heretic. The records are taken from the municipal records of Canterbury, dated 1535, and are as follows:—

"For the expenses of bringing a heretic from London 14 s. 8 d.
For 1½ loads of wood to burn him 2 s.
For the gunpowder 1 d.
A stake and staple 8 d.
Total 17 s. 5 d."

THE Anti-Anarchist conference at Rome has ended. According to common report combined action on the part of the powers is impossible. It was suggested that an international bureau for the supervision of Anarchism be formed in Berlin,—to which Germany, Austria, France, England, Russia, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Switzerland are to send one representative each. The police of Europe to be in communication with this bureau continually. The expenses to be shared equally. It is however said that only a moderate majority voted for these suggestions.

FELIX Faure, President of France, died very suddenly on Feb. 16. There was danger for the Republic, when it is considered that two rivals, Louis Napoleon and the Duke of Orleans both contemplated making the effort to seize the government. But prompt measures were taken and on Saturday last Emile Loubet was chosen as his successor. For a few hours only was there quiet, for when it was known that the new President was a friend of Dreyfus, the opposition began to make trouble, and all day Sunday Paris was in an uproar. Fighting of the factions and many arrests was the order of the day, and toward midnight the crowds broke the windows of the Rothschild's offices, and newspaper offices were attacked. Order was finally restored. Surely France is in trouble.

BRO. J. L. Winn gave the Plymouth Church two very interesting talks on prophecy on last Sunday.

A DISPATCH from Peking, China, dated Feb. 19, tells of a serious conflict between Russian and Chinese in which 300 natives were killed. The trouble was at Talien Wan, about 100 miles from Port Arthur. Russia now has about 20,000 troops at the two places, and 25,000 more are on their way there. The Chinese army in Manchuria is only 16,000 for the entire district. Talien-Wan is an important port near the southern extremity of Manchuria east of Port Arthur, and is the supposed terminus of the Transsiberian R. R. Taxes is given as the cause of the trouble.

LORD Charles Beresford, the Englishman who has been in China for his government, looking after the "trade" of that country, was in Chicago last week seeing the commercial men of the city and is now in our eastern cities at the same work. He openly advocates the alliance of United States, England, Japan and Germany in a compact to keep the Chinese Empire intact, and of course oppose the Russian and French efforts to divide it up. The United States is naturally slow to take up any English quarrel, but if she once realizes that Russia and France both close the trading posts in their respective "spheres of influence," then it may not be a great step to ally with any one for "self-protection." We express no opinion as to the outcome of these matters, desiring only to let our readers know of the passing events.

Still Another has Fallen.

In all the thirty-six years of its existence in Cleveland, the Church of God has never passed through such trials from sickness and deaths as it has experienced of late. We have sadly had to lay away five sisters in about three months, the last being Mrs. Maria Sandford, the sister-wife of Brother John Sandford who obeyed the Truth by baptism, on the 24th of Feb., 1889, and she loved wife followed him in that beautiful adopting ordinance on the 28th of July the same year. Her health at that time seemed to be failing but the Blessed Hope sustained and held or enabled her to look beyond this vale of tears to the country where the inhabitants will not say they are sick. Not long after identification with the body of Christ Brother and Sister Sandford removed to Akron, Ohio, and later to Medina, and from there came to Cleveland to visit their children towards the close of the year. Bro. Sandford worshiped with us on Christmas day, but we learned of his intention of going to Medina shortly. We heard nothing more of them until informed of Sister Sandford's death. Bro. Cartell conducted her funeral under very distressing circumstances,—the dear brother being at the time so ill, that the corpse had to be carried to his bedside for a farewell look. His son was also too ill to attend the funeral. May the glorious Lord soon end the long delay, and appear for those who are his and end these scenes of sorrow, we humbly pray. And may the God of all grace comfort and sustain our brother in his deep affliction. Amen.

Infidelity Marching On.

The religious world is as little inclined as the political, to believe that there is any infidelity or corruption in it. Hence arises its danger; when they are crying "Peace and safety," and rapid progress in the evangelization of the world, they appear unconscious of the fact that the countries contributing their millions for that purpose are, at a fearful rate, letting slip from them the healthful and uplifting influence of the Bible once exerted over them, and myriads have become utterly faithless of the Word. They cannot be made to see that they belong to the class upon whom sudden destruction will come. They seem oblivious of the fact that many of those whose names stand on their church books, and contribute toward expenses, and perhaps occupy their seats once each Sunday, and listen to lectures on various entertaining secular subjects, have lost about all their interest in the Oracles of God, and that but for social and business advantages they would cut off their religious cloak.

We see however, that the most devout and honest among the clergy have discovered that there must be something serious the matter, when about three-fourths of their regular attendants are women, and the proportion of the members not much different.

We do not have to look far for the cause of the existing state of things. The leaders of the people have lost the key of truth. They have no conception of Jehovah's beneficent purpose in Creation and Redemption. The fact in connection with another intimately connected with it, viz., their ignorance of men's nature, have compelled them to teach that the Bible did not mean what it said, and yet required to be interpreted by men specially trained for that purpose. In the nature of things this would cause the laity, if those leaders had all interpreted alike, confidence in them might not have been impaired; but when this privileged class showed that hardly any two of them said the same things, and some of them flatly contradicted the others, the people became bewildered. Then doubt arose, and finally came to believe, that while their pastors may be honest, they were mistaken as to the divine authorship of the book. "Higher Criticism," "Christian Science," and other God-dishonoring devices with a thin religious cloak, together with the marvellous activity of rank infidelity of a few decades past, have contributed to precipitate streams to such the torrent of skepticism now threatening to inundate Bible land. It is our solemn conviction that the clergy of the Protestants, to say the least, prepared the soil for the poisonous seed now yielding such an abundant harvest.

What we call infidelity, includes much more than what popularly goes by that name. To explain what we mean by this, we remark that the general use of the word rendered infidel in 2 Cor. vi. 15; and 1 Timothy v. 8, is shown by reference to 1 Cor. vii. 14, 15; Titus i. 15; and Rev. xxi. 8, where it is rendered unbelieving, and to 2 Cor. iv. 4, where it is rendered, "which believeth not," and to Luke xii. 46; 1 Cor. vi. 6; 1 Cor. xiv. 23, where it is rendered "unbelievers," and Matt. xvii. 17; Mark ix. 19; Luke ix. 41 and John xx. 27, where it is rendered "faithless," and Acts xxvi. 8, where it is rendered "thing incredible." It will be seen from these passages that an infidel is simply an unbeliever of the gospel, not merely one who denies that the Bible is the revelation of God's will concerning man and earth but includes him who, while admitting the Bible to be what it claims to be neglects to accept the great salvation and its conditions therein set forth.

We will now be understood when we say that infidelity is now in full triumph throughout the so-called Christendom under the name of "Liberalism." The very term ought to open men's eyes to its true character, but it does nothing of the kind. If men and women would stop and think they would realize that "Religion is a system of bindings—bindings to God as supreme, or to our neighbors, in the various relations of life. It teaches men to control themselves, and to subject their wills and inclinations to the well-being or honor of another.

Liberalism, on the other hand is a system that unbinds,—set men free from all restraints and ties, and lets them do about as they please, and if they please do nothing. It teaches its disciples to say, "Let me do as I like, and you shall do as you like."

We maintain that selfishness is the real God of Liberalism, and that it draws all its motives of action from its sensuality. We think any one who faithfully examines this subject Bible in hand, will come to the same conclusion. But of course those whose confidence in the Word has been destroyed by aforementioned influences will not do this. But there are unfortunately, those who still claim to have unbounded confidence in God's Word, who are tainted with Liberalism and do not think it right to disturb the beliefs of others. These people allow their sympathies to control their judgment and silence the voice of the Spirit, which says, "He that hath my Word, let him speak my word faithfully—what is the chaff to the wheat, saith the Lord?" What else but chaff is it, to give perishing mortals the impression that they are brethren of Jesus, by treating them as such, while they are blind to, and faithless of the exceeding great and precious promises whereby they can be made partakers of divine nature? Is it not as wicked as cruel, to deceive men and women by teaching them that they have been baptized into Jesus the Anointed of God to sit on David's throne, and who alone has power to bestow God's gift of eternal life. Is it not wicked and cruel, we repeat that they secured a claim and a hope of these inestimable blessings when baptized with the idea that the church is the kingdom, and that they have eternal life already, and will enjoy it in heaven above the skies! Alas, alas, that it is necessary to write thus at this late hour? But it is? Reader, think you, were you called to God's kingdom and glory for any such ignoble purpose? Is this the light you are expected to hold up? Is your talent properly used?

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

The excitement in France over the Dreyfus case continues unabated, and may lead to a Revolution or an European war, and in all likelihood to a renewal of the persecution of the Jews. The Court of Cassation is still considering the case within closed doors,—its decision is expected to be announced this week, and it is generally believed will be in favor of a reopening of the case. The military party will do its utmost to prevent this. The outlook is very serious.

The racial and political conflict in Austro Hungary has been renewed, and is as bitter as ever. Only the general respect and the love for the aged Emperor prevent the outbreak of a struggle that would end in a break-up of the dual Empire.

A convention has been concluded between Great Britain and Egypt whereby the former is to have the administration of the Soudan, in her own hands. Lord Kitchener has been made Governor General, and he has appointed British officers governors of the principal provinces. Britain is thus more firmly rooted in Egypt. The Continental press recognize this.

In China the latest demands for concessions were made by France, but it was refused on the protests of England, Germany and the United States. The rebellion in the provinces is spreading and is likely to precipitate the breaking up of the Empire.

The French Chamber of Deputies recently passed a bill unanimously and without discussion for a credit of $2,600,000 for armaments and military renovations during the coming year. The Senate unanimously agreed to the vote the following day.

Germany is to increase her army. Russia is to make large additions to her navy, and Britain has ordered a number of battleships.

"Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud?"

Not long since, I heard the quotation in the above caption, fall from the lips of an ungodly man. It excited within me a spirit of reflection, and serious thought. I asked myself the question: "Why should the spirit of MORTALS be proud," when we consider what we are, and whence we are bound, unless arrested by Divine power. "For what is your life? it is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." Yes, gone, and gone forever—nothing but a lump of proud flesh, vanished away, even as a vapor before the rising sun. "What is man that thou shouldst magnify him? and that thou shouldst set thine heart upon him?" "My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope. O remember that my life is wind; mine eye shall no more see good." The life of proud mortals, is "swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope," his "life is wind," that sweeps onward, and is gone. "All (mortal) flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower fadeth away." Then "why should the spirit of mortals be proud?"

Not only does the Divine Word graphically describe the frailty of the life of mortals, but it is observable to our physical senses in every day life. And yet how few are wise enough to reflect, and check their mad career, ere their frail organism shall crumble into dust, such a life is "spent without hope."

Jesus, God's Son, was cognizant of the fact that in his own personality unaided by Divine power, he was nothing. Did he not say, "The Son can do nothing of himself?" The phrase, "I can do nothing," signifies utter helplessness, as far as his own individual power was concerned. If that was the case with God's Son, surely what are we? Do not many of us who have professed the Christ name, need to learn that lesson? How many of us think we are something, and are proud of our personal acquirements, and individual smartness. Surely God cannot use us until we realize as did our Divine Master, Of mine own self I can do nothing. Is it not right, here beloved in the Lord, that so many of us fail, and are not used by the Divine Master? It is hard to crucify the flesh. "The spirit of mortals is proud." God resisteth the proud. The will of the flesh is determined to assert itself. Beloved before we can succeed in the work of the Master, our fleshly will must be completely lost in the Divine.

Obituary.

Died at Garwin, Iowa, on Feb. 3, 1899, James Godfrey, infant son of C. F. and Lizzie J. Kennedy, aged 7 months. Sermon by the writer, from Rev. xx. 13, 14, in the Seventh Day Baptist Church. May the bereaved parents find consolation in God's promises and heavenly hope held out before us in the gospel.

A. J. EVERMAN.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Atlanta Hodgson, wife of Lulon Hodgson, of Clinton Co., fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 26, 1899. She leaves a husband and four children, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. She joined the Disciple Church many years ago, and after marriage settled near Antioch Christian Church, (New Light) and united with them, and not being in full accord in their faith, requested I. F. Wagoner, to give a series of lectures on "the Eternal Purposes of God," at her place of worship, which was complied with until the church door was closed on him, and she was so anxious to hear the gospel preached, throwed her doors open for the finishing up of these discourses, which resulted in a general searching of the Word of God in the community. Tat Hodgson, as she was called, was fully convinced that the Church of God was the true gospel church, and because of not the favorable opportunity, was not attached to that body. She was a woman of wonderful influence, and had a world of friends. Had she been spared, no doubt, she would have been the means in the hand of God, of leading many souls in the true light of the gospel of Jesus Christ. She had no fears of death, and her request was, that J. F. Wagoner of Rochester, preach her funeral, and if he couldn't be had, then Father Hatch, and as neither one could be had, L. E. Brown of the Disciple's Church of Frankfort, preached the funeral discourse to as large a congregation, as ever assembled on such on occasion in that community, and at 3 o'clock p. m. 27th of Jan., all that belonged to mortal man, was laid away to await the coming of our Savior Jesus Christ, who will come to judge both the quick and dead, let us all be ready.

Editor Restitution:

I write to inform you that Mrs. P. B. Whaley one of your readers has fallen asleep, we hope to awaken at the first resurrection. Your paper had been sent to her by some friend, and she read it and enjoyed it as long as she lived, but now is beyond all things of the present dispensation, so will need it no more.

Yours in the great hope.

MRS. I. M. JONXSON.

Dear Restitution:

It is with regret we pen the death of little Clevn Clover, the son of Alford and Rebecca Clover, near Glendelder, Kan. He fell asleep the 27th of Nov., in Oklahoma, where they were visiting. His age was 10 years and 4 months, the enemy of man taking him with membranous croup. Funeral was preached Jan. 8th by the writer, from Job xiv. 14. May God hasten the time when the old enemy shall be destroyed.

Yours in Christ,

T. H. OWENS.

An Appeal.

To the Young People of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, of the State of Illinois.

In the name of God, our Father, and of his Son, Jesus Christ, we would entreat you, brothers and sisters, to unite in one body for closer communion and spiritual uplifting. At our State conference it was decided to have a State Young Peoples' Bible Society. For the working out and completion of the organization, we would most earnestly urge you to send your name and address to our State Secretary, Laurence E. Wilson, 5411 Ohio St. Austin, Ill. We would impress upon all the young people the importance of this, especially those who are isolated. If you are a member of a Young Peoples' Society, please send the address of your president and secretary, when you send your own. Do not delay in this as it is the Master's work and let us daily strive to be ready and waiting for him when he comes.

LEILA E. WHITEHEAD, Pres.
LAURENCE E. WILSON, Sec.

"Samson, rocked to sleep on the lap of the crafty Delilah, when he 'wist not that the Lord was departed from him,' is but a picture of the child of God rocked into fatal slumber in the lap of the world."

Lord Jesus, Quickly Come.

Thou who from Olive's brow didst rise
Before the rapt disciples' eyes,
Victorious through the skies,—
Lord Jesus, quickly come.
For Thine appearing, all things pray,
We count the days of the delay;
The prophet's "Not long hence" says;
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

[illegible] the Morning Star"
[illegible] sign of coming day;
[illegible] glorious Sun,
Lord Jesus quickly come.
Break Thou through the lowering cloud of night;
Put these wild lurid clouds to flight,
Thou great, O resurrection Light!
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

Come, with the welcome dawning;
Come, with the joyful greeting;
Come, with the last to weeping;
Lord Jesus, quickly come.
Come, with the resurrection cloud;
Come, Savior, let the heavens be bowed;
Lord Jesus, quickly come.

And when the astonished heavens shall see
When powers of earth and hell to thee
Shall bend the reverential knee,
In that great day of doom,—
Be one the happy lot to stand
Among the white-robed, ransomed band,
And hear thee say, with outstretched hand,
"Ye blessed children, come."

Brief Paragraphs.

Martin Luther said the "best name by which we can think of God is Father. It is loving, deep, sweet, heart touching name. By this name we deeply touch our God since there is not a sweeter sound to the father than the voice of the child."

It is Christ only who is the righteousness of God to man and man to God. We are so far from paying the utmost farthing, that at the utmost we have not a farthing to pay. That man will be a miserable spectacle of vanity who stands upon the tiptoe feet of his own ability.—Seckett.

You cannot repent too soon. There is no day like today. Yesterday is gone—tomorrow is God's, not our own. And think how sad it will be to have your evidences to seek when your cause is to be tried; to have your oil to buy, when you should have it to burn.—J. Mason.

We once knew a man who boasted of his ability to take three straight drinks of liquor a day—never any more, never any less. The old man is living yet, but two of his sons died drunkards, and the third one is keeping a bar room. He sowed his "moderate drinking" and has reaped the ruin of his sons.—The Baptist Standard.

Few peaceable Americans realize to what an extent the world is under arms. A French statistician states that the total number of men permanently under arms is 4,250,000. If universal war broke out there would be 44,250,000 men ready to take up arms at once. Placed in one line the soldiers of the world could cover the equator right around the earth. To pass along the whole line one would need to ride on express train at sixty miles an hour for seventy days. If the soldiers received orders to exterminate the rest of the population they would only have to kill thirty-three persons a piece.

According to the New Testament, every Christian is a herald, a pastor, a missionary. Every follower of Christ is ordered into a vineyard. Unless he takes up his cross daily, he does not belong to Christ. But this is a page of the New Testament little heeded. "The fields are white unto the harvest, but the laborers are few." The minister goes into the field, and the majority of his people go somewhere else. This, in a sentence, is the running sore of Christendom. Why are the churches half empty? Laymen do not work to fill them. Why are the deficits so universal? Laymen do not plan to abolish them. Why does the church make so few converts? Laymen do not talk on the subject of religion. Why does church life flow in such feeble streams? Laymen do not pour their life into it. The baptism for which the church is waiting is the baptism of larger knowledge. We do not seem to know the things which belong unto peace. They are hid from our eyes. We do not comprehend what this means, "One is your Master and all ye are my brethren." We stumble over this: "As my Father has sent me, even so send I you." We forget to whom this is spoken: "Go and make disciples of all the nations." We cannot say with Paul: "I rejoice in my sufferings, and fill up on my part that which is lacking of the afflictions of Christ," because we do not realize that we, laymen as well as clergymen, are called to be "laborers together with God." And yet, "It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him. If we suffer, we shall also reign with him."

Poetry.

[Selected by Mrs. Susie Dow.]

"Art Thou He that Should Come?"

"Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, and said unto him: Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another? Jesus answered and said unto them: go and show John again, those things ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached unto them." Matt. xi. 2-5.

Art thou he, the "Hope foretold,"
Sung by royal bards of old
Prince, foreseen in prophetic vision,
King, by holy seers foretold?

Art thou he? Our hearts are weary
Lo, our watching eyes are dim,
Man's deliverer, Satan's conqueror
Hail we thee, or wait for him?

Speak the word, Oh, Holy Teacher,
Calm our heart's rough troubled sea,
Weary are our souls with waiting,
Master, Master, Art thou he?

Lo, the answer! calm convincing!
Mark what things ye hear and see,
Let my teaching, let my preaching,
Let my actions speak for me.

To the blind comes light from heaven,
To the leper health once more,
Dead ones hear, the dumb are singing,
Dead men rise, death's reign is o'er.

Tell your Master, Desert-wanderer,
Mightier than the seers of old,
That my kind and glorious gospel
Comes, unsought by gen'rous gold

Still we hear through circling centuries,
Rolling down the years for aye,
From the lips of many a sufferer,
Still this sad imploring cry.

We are weary of earth's phantoms,
Seek we rest but seek in vain,
Naught is sure, save endless grieving,
Naught is sure, save toil and pain.

Are there hills beyond death's river?
Is there light beyond the tomb?
Who can teach us, guide us, save us,
Lead us to a lasting home?

List, to words like distant music
From yon Galilean shore.
Sorrowing, doubting, weary mortals,
Come to me and grieve no more.

Ye who toss on life's rough billows,
Ye by doubts and fears distressed,
Laborers worn and heavy laden,
Come to me I'll give you rest.

The Voice of God Against Spiritualism. No. 3

[Some years ago when THE RESTITUTION was published in the City of Chicago, Bro. H. V. Reed wrote a little work entitled "Witchcraft Unveiled: or the Voice of God Against Spiritualism." This work has been out of print for a number of years, and coming across an old copy, we find it fits in so well with the present "Manifestations," and is so complete an answer, not only to the theory as it was twenty-five years ago, but as it is today, that we produce a part of it, and commend it to the careful perusal of our readers.—Ed.]

"There shall not be found among you * * * a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." Deut. xviii. 10, 11.

But there are some who rely upon certain passages of Scripture as proving that the spirits of the dead do communicate with mortals on earth. We shall now proceed to examine the most plausible of these arguments.

I. The witch of Endor.

1. It is claimed that Samuel's spirit was called from the spirit world, and held converse with Saul, king of Israel, through the witch of Endor. This position is not only assumed by Spiritualists, but by many orthodox writers. Clarke and others maintain that Samuel's spirit was really present and conversed with Saul; but there are exceptions among the learned on this point. We have not space to examine what men have said, and therefore we shall proceed to the Bible argument.

There is not one word said about the spirit of Samuel in the whole transaction. The position we oppose, therefore starts out with an assumption. 1 Sam. xxviii.

2. At the time this conversation is represented as taking place, God had forsaken Saul, and had ceased to answer him either by dreams, or by prophets; verse 2, but if God sent Samuel's spirit back from the spheres, then he had not ceased answering by prophets, for Samuel was a prophet.

3. If God had proposed to answer Saul at all, would he not have selected one of his own prophets instead of the witch?

4. Had not God forbidden his people from holding converse with witches or familiar spirits? Deut. xviii. 11-13. If so, then is it consistent to infer that God transcended his own law, and sent his holy prophet to answer Saul whom he had refused to answer through his appointed media? Such a position reflects upon the character of God. Again would Samuel consent to come from the spirit world on an invitation of a witch? And if God sent Samuel, could it be considered as a sin in Saul to converse with the holy man whom God sent to him for that very purpose?

5. Samuel was not called down from the spheres above, but out of the earth. Is this the abode of human spirits?

6. But it is claimed that the witch "saw Samuel." She also says, "I saw Gods (Heb. Elohim,) ascending out of the earth," and if her testimony is valid in the one case it is in the other, and this would lead to a belief in autoterrenan Polytheism, or literally, gods under ground.

7. What was Saul's sin? Was it conversing with Samuel? No. What then? Let the Bible answer. "So Saul died for his transgression which he committed against the Lord,.....and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, to enquire of it." 1 Chron. x. 13.

This historical fact shows that he did not enquire of Samuel, but of the spirit, which was a familiar spirit, and assumed the name of God's prophet, as familiar spirits now assume the name of persons for the same deceptive object.

8. Should any claim that Samuel was actually present, they would have to argue his bodily presence, as she saw an old man with a mantle; and I suppose that Spiritualists would not be willing to allow that Samuel's spirit looked old, or that he wore a mantle! The reader must see from what has been said, that the whole affair was an imposture palmed off on the God-forsaken king of Israel. There is not one word in the whole account, favoring the spirit-ruppings of this age, only that witchcraft does exist in the world!

II. The Transfiguration.

It is claimed that the appearance of Moses and Elias on the Mount, as recorded in Matt. xvii. is positive proof that the spirits of the departed can converse with mortals; but I trust that a few words will satisfy any one that this does not favor the idea for which it is quoted. As to Elias, he never died, but was translated without seeing death: and I would remark that this is God's way of taking men whom he wants, unto himself, not killing them first, and taking their soul, or one-half, but takes the whole man, as in the cases of Enoch and Elijah. There is not a hint alluded to in this history, that would lead us to suppose that Moses' spirit was there. The question at once arises, was this appearance a vision, or a reality? We shall let the Bible decide. "And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them saying, tell the vision to no man," etc., v. 9. Here then is the most positive proof that it was a vision and not a reality. The whole account shows that it was a vision.

In this vision we behold a beautiful exhibition of the future kingdom of Christ on earth. There was Christ in his kingly glory as he will be when he comes again, and Elijah who never died, a representative of all the saints who shall be living when Christ shall come, and Moses pre-figuring the righteous dead who shall be raised when the kingdom comes, and the three mortal disciples showing forth men in the flesh as subjects of the kingdom when it is established. This probably was the design of the vision and he had told them that they should not taste death till they saw the kingdom; and in six days after he gives them this view of a miniature kingdom, and thus fulfilled his word to them. But in the whole account there is no allusion to disembodied ghosts.

III. The Spirits in Prison.

"By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison." 1 Pet. iii. 19. This text has been considered strong evidence in favor of the consciousness of the dead. It is undoubtedly a fulfillment of Isaiah xliii. 6, 7. Christ is predicted, as coming "to open the blind eyes; to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house." Wakefield's translation frees the text from all embarassment and makes it harmonize with other parts of the Bible. "In which indeed he went and preached to the minds of men in prison, who were also hard to be convinced in former times, as when the patience of God continued waiting in the days of Noah." This shows us that the preaching was done to living men, and not to a part of men after the body dies. Spirits, in the text, is equivalent to persons. The text as it now stands, is unfavorable to Spiritualism, which claims that the spirits of the dead, are out of prison, instead of "in prison."

IV. The Thief on the Cross.

Perhaps no other text is more frequently quoted to prove that man is conscious in death, than the promise to the thief on the cross: "Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Luke xxiii. 43. In the first place, it must be noticed that the punctuation of this verse is not inspiration. The whole force of the argument turns on the use of the comma. It is proper to say, verily I say unto thee today, (or now) that thou shalt be with me in Paradise; and we notice that the thief wished to be remembered, not at death, but when Jesus comes in his kingdom: and also that Paradise is yet future when the garden of Eden shall once more bloom on this earth: and that Jesus told Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father." John xix. 17. And this was spoken after his resurrection, and up to this time Jesus had not ascended to God. Here with all these facts, is it not evident that the comma was placed in the wrong place by the translators? The proof is wanting to sustain the popular notion on the text. There are several examples where the construction of the passage as given, is admissible. We will introduce a few for the purpose of showing the principle.

Deut. xv. 15, "Therefore I command thee this thing today."

Deut. xi. 8. "Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day."

Zech. ix. 12, "Even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee."

These texts all exhibit the idea for which we contend. God commanded Israel to do certain things, and says, "This day I command," etc., not that they were to do all those things the day they were spoken, but he then gave the command: so with Luke xviii. 43. "Today," when all things seem to forbid it, I promise you that you shall be with me in my kingdom. And when Jesus comes in his glory the prayer of the thief will be answered as he promised him that day. It might be proper to say, that the original Greek has no punctuation whatever.

V. Rev. xix. 10.

"And I fell at his feet to worship him, and he said unto me, see thou do it not, I am thy fellow-servant and of thy brethren the prophets."

This is brought forward to sustain spirit-agency, or that human beings become angels. But a little thought will show the reader that this angel was not one of the brethren the prophets, but the fellow-servant of the prophets, and to supply the ellipsis, the text reads as follows: "I am thy fellow-servant, and the fellow-servant of thy brethren, the prophets." This is the grammar of the text in hand, and hence, has no force for Spiritualism. The angel who had brought revelations to John, had also taught his brethren, the prophets. But admitting it to be one of the prophets, then it does not follow that it was a disembodied spirit, for Enoch and Elijah never died, and it could not have been one of them, and still the text prove true.

VI. Souls under the altar.

"And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar, the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God." etc. Rev. vi. 9.

From this it is inferred that the soul is separate from the body, and conscious, but the context gives another impression. If this represents the souls of the martyrs under an altar in heaven, they certainly were not happy, for they were "crying." An altar is a place where people are beheaded; and when we reflect that this scene is under the fifth seal, which represents the Roman persecution; and as the scene was presented to John, he saw the saints beheaded, and their blood poured out, and in this condition they were crying to God: the act of their crying no more proves that they were conscious, than the act of Abel's blood crying from the ground against his brother Cain, proves that it was conscious. Whiting translates the word "souls," by the word "persons." "I saw under the altar, the persons of them," etc. This makes the verse clear and harmonious.

There are other texts quoted to prove that the spirits of dead men return to earth and converse with mortals; but they are of the same import as those examined, and we pass them, hoping that the reader will peruse larger works upon the subjects.

Remarks on Ezek. xxxviii.

If our beloved brethren will permit, we would like to give a few thoughts on this portion of the Divine Word, which we hope will be of some interest to our people; as we have found it useful in our research after truths, we believe to be revealed in this chapter concerning the near future of the Eastern question. We believe, to understand prophecy it is necessary first, to understand the component parts of it, and the relation it bears as a whole to the mind of the author. Therefore, we learn that when the Lord commanded Ezekiel to utter the solemn words recorded here, he did not hesitate to comply with the demand required of him. When the Word says Gog and Magog, we understand the ruler and ruled are meant, and territory attributed to them. When the Lord commanded Ezekiel to "set his face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Japheth," we believe Ezekiel turned his face northward toward that foe of God. At the time the vision of this prophecy was given to the prophet, he was among the captives at the river Chebar (Euphrates) in the land of the Chaldeans. The land of Magog was directly north, now occupied by the Russian Empire. It has been a national tenure—from the time of its first occupancy by the children of Japheth after the flood to the present time.

We understand from the first seven verses of this chapter, the following points:—first, God is against this northern power; and second, "He will bring them forth," we understand by this, he will advance the empire of this Magog power, until it forms an alliance with the people of Persia, Ethiopia and Libya; Gomer and Togarmah, who will act as guards or outposts. See verses 5, 6, 7. The reason given for the advancement of this Magog power, and alliance with the nations introduced, is to martial them in later years against the "mountains of Israel," or tribes of Israel, in their own land, in unwalled villages, under a federal head, "that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land." We understand the land surrounded by this Magog power. There will be time given to the people of Israel to establish themselves, and shall "dwell safely." Yet Gog shall know it, "And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army." Ver. 15. "And thou shalt come up against my people Israel, as a cloud to cover the land." The position this power will occupy, at the time of this invasion of the land of Israel, will be so as to verify the express demand of these verses, "north parts," "many people," "a great company," "a mighty army," "a cloud to cover the land." Not having recourse to railroad, cavalry will be their main dependence in this warfare for transportation. We do not understand this invasion—an expansion problem—but for commercial advantage, as it hinges upon the commercial outlook of the future of Israel. In this relation we read the 13th verse thus, "Sheba and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish," as pitted against the aggressive policy of this Magog power, that is advancing so rapidly in the direction of this coveted country, which has been a burden to all people" Zech. xii.

A question arises here, why use these three countries alone as opponents to this Gog power? We answer this way, God sometimes uses this method of representation for the sake of brevity. Please read 27th chapter of this prophecy concerning the vastness of the commercial relation of the countries represented by these three names under consideration. The countries of Sheba and Dedan are on the Persian Gulf, and were inhabited by Abraham's children by Keturah. 1 Chron. i. 32. Tarshish was a grandson of Japheth, (Gen. x. 3) and was a settler on the Isles of the Gentiles, hence a Gentile, not an Israelite, as some would have us read. Therefore, we advance this conclusion, that Gog and Magog, and Tarshish are from the same parental root, and it has been through this line God's power in the Holy Land has been usurped. We believe these kindred powers will meet in deadly combat on the mountains of Israel, and be "cut in pieces." Zech. xii. 3. And the Gentile rule of that country will be overthrown. See Ezek. xxviii. 21-23. The prophet saw in his day, in vision, what we now see, and begin to realize, this great commercial drama that is agitating the world today, as it did in the days of Tyrus, when it was said they boasted themselves as God. See Ezek. xxviii. What more is it today, when the nations boast of their commercial strength. God is surely paving the way for the consummation of the end. We would not dictate thus, unless we verily believed its truth.

A few extracts from history may be of interest here, in helping to understand the powers arrayed in the chapter under consideration. R. Watson, in his writings says concerning Magog, "Moses speaks of Magog, son of Japheth, but says nothing of Gog, Gen. x. 2 According to Ezek xxxviii. 2-3 and xxxix. 1-2, Magog signifies the country, and Gog (being of that country: the general name of the northern nations of Europe and Asia, or the district north of the Caucasus or Mountains of Tarsus. Smith's Dict. says, second son of Japheth, Gen. x. 2, and founder of a race (Rev. xx. 8, the great Scythian tribe, now called Russian. Ezekiel places the action in the north (xxxix. 2) near Togarmah, and the maritime regions of Europe. Ver. 6. They had cavalry and used bows. In the 7th century B. C. they were a formidable power, felt through the whole of Western Asia."

Chamber's Ency., subject Normans, we find in the following passage he says, "According to the Russian Annalist, Nestor, (concerning the Danish and Norwegian Normen) they appear to have penetrated into the interior of Russia, as far as Novgard, whence they were quickly banished by the native Slavish and Finish inhabitants, but were as quickly solicited to return and assume the reins of government. Hither consequently in 862, accompanied by other noted warriors came three Swedish chiefs, Ruric, Sineus and Truwar, sons of the same father, and belonging to the tribe of Ros, (whence Russ and Russia) thus forming a Russo-Swedish kingdom."

Watson, again in speaking concerning, Rosh, says, "The Hebrew speaks of a people called Rosh," and then quotes D. Herbelot, who said, "The orientals hold that Japheth had a son called Rous, not mentioned by Moses, who peopled Russia, that is Muscovy," and then he says, "We question not but Rosh, or Rus, signifies Russia or the people that dwell on the Araxes, called Rosh by the inhabitants, which was the habitation of the Scythians. It deserves notice, that the 70 render the passage in Ezekiel, Gog, the chief of Ros, Mesech, and Thobel; and Jerome, not absolutely to reject this name, inserts both renderings, Gog, terram Magog, principem capitis (Sive Ros) Mosoch, et Thubal, Symmachus and Theodotion, also perceived Ros to be in this place the name of a people; and this is now the prevailing judgment of interpreters."

We have traced this part of our subject as far as necessary, will now try to discover the location of Tarshish.

Chamber's Ency. on the word says, "Tarshish, probably the same as Tartessus, a city and emporium of the Phoenicians in Spain, somewhere near the mouth of the Guadalquiver. It is frequently mentioned in Scripture, notably so in connection with the prophet Jonah, who took ship for Tarshish, when he sought to flee from the presence of the Lord." Jonah embarked at Joppa, on the Mediterranean sea. Chap. i. 3.

Smith's Dict. on Tarshish, Gen. x. 4, Psa. lxxii. 10, Jonah i. 3, says, "Probably, Tartessus, in Spain. Strabo, 3, 148. There was a city and a river in Spain of the same name; perhaps the same river is called Guadalquiver. The articles brought to Tyre from Tarshish, such as silver, iron, lead and tin, (Ezek. xxvii. 12) were productions of Spain. Second, 2 Chron. ix. 21, and xx. 36, from this passage it seems that there was another Tarshish, in the direction of the Red Sea, and probably in India, judging from the articles brought from there, which were gold, silver, iron, apes and peacocks. 1 Kings x. 22. India was the native land of the peacock."

It is necessary at the close of the second section of this quotation to make a few remarks. The author says, "From these passages, it seems there was another Tarshish in the direction of the Red Sea." We do not so understand it; let us read the verses in 2 Chron. ix. 21, "For the king's (Solomon's) ships went to Tarshish with the servants of Huram (Hiram); every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, silver, ivory, apes and peacocks."

The next text is 2 Chron. xx. 36, "And he (Jehoshaphat) joined himself with him (Ahaziah) to make ships to go to Tarshish." The first text says, Solomon and Hiram joined together their mercantile fleets, and we know by our maps, that Tyre was on the Mediterranean Sea, and was Hiram's governmental seat. Therefore, we look for Tarshish in that direction. As to some of the merchandise belonging to India, does not signify anything, in consideration of the time to go and return, occupying three years.

Ezekiel in speaking about commerce with Tyre, xxvii. 12, says, "Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches: with silver, iron, tin and lead, they traded in thy fairs." We believe we have fully demonstrated the fact that Tarshish lies west of Tyre, and will adduce further testimony from Phoenician history along this line, which we believe will establish our line of research in placing Tarshish in the proper locality.

Chambers says, concerning the colonization of the Phoenicians toward the west, that they covered all the islands and coasts of the Mediterranean, with their forts, factories and cities." And after enumerating the immense work done through her mariners, that from Sardinia, and Minorcia, the indefatigable mariners, went still further west—through the Strait of Gibralter, to Tarshish (the California of those days) or Spain, where they founded Gadier, or Cadiz, and in the south, Karteia, Malaka and Abdarach, from here having colonized well nigh the whole of the Spanish coasts, they went northward to the tin islands (Sicilly Isles) and to Britain herself, and while they thus explored the regions of the Atlantic, their alliance with the Hebrews had permitted them to find the way to the Indias by the way of the Red Sea." Do we establish the fact that England and her mercantile fleets is Tarshish? We have traced the name northwestward from the place where Ezekiel delivered his prophecy toward England. Tarshish is a representative commercial people, and was the chief commercial people of ancient Phoenicia and Israel: and England was first inhabited by the children of Japheth, through the Gomerian line. There is one more thought we wish to express in connection with this prophecy. Draw a line from Sheba northwest to London, England, it passes through Babylon, and Constantinople. From this line was Abraham called into the land of Canaan, to be a blessing to the nations, and from this line Ezekiel proclaimed the divine command against that northern Magog power. If this proves to be of interest, we humbly submit ourselves,

Your Brother in Christ,
R. M. REYNOLDS.

Report of Meeting.

It is with pleasure that the writer reports of laboring with the congregations at Wenatchee and Waterville, Wash. Each member of the faith seems truly and earnestly contending for the faith: each willingly and energetically doing their individual part of the labor. Meetings were commenced at Wenatchee, Sunday, January 1st, and were continued there and at Waterville until Sunday eve, Feb. 5. Bro. Richard Corbaley and others have done a great deal of work in these places. The seed had been sown unsparingly. During the time above designated twenty-seven requested baptism, sixteen at the former place and eleven at the latter. May God's blessings attend each one of them.

The congregation at Wenatchee immediately invited Bro. D. T. Halstead, of Andover, S. D., to work with them for a few months, until definite arrangements could be made, to which he agreed. Bro. Corbaley will work with the church at Waterville.

That a crown of life may be bestowed upon each one of these faithful coworkers when he comes to make up his special treasure in the prayer of the writer.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Active solicitors wanted everywhere for "The Story of the Philippines" by Murat Halstead, commissioned by the Government as Official Historian to the War Department. The book was written in army camps at San Francisco, on the Pacific with General Merritt, in the hospitals at Honolulu, in Hong Kong, in the American trenches at Manila, in the insurgent camps with Aguinaldo, on the deck of the Olympia with Dewey, and in the roar of battle at the fall of Manila. Bonanza for agents. Brimful of original pictures taken by government photographers on the spot. Large book. Low prices. Big profits. Freight paid. Credit given. Drop all trashy or Spanish war books. Outfit free. Address, P. T. Barber, Sec'y, Star Insurance Bldg, Chicago.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I have been a subscriber and reader of THE RESTITUTION ever since I saw the first copy that was placed in my hands, now more than twenty years since. It is the best periodical that I know of to place in the hands of seekers after Scripture truth. True I think some correspondents err in their explanations, but as a whole it is an excellent paper to circulate. I would that its circulation equaled by the hundreds of thousands.

Your well wisher,
SOLOMON T. BLESSING.

Editor Restitution:

We are living as many others are isolated and have no preaching of the one faith only as we read THE RESTITUTION. It is a welcome visitor at our house every week, it has so many good and inspiring articles in it. Brothers and sisters, I am striving to serve my Master, and feel like doing more this year than ever before. As I have this whole sheet of paper before me it makes me think of the New Year; it is a clean blank sheet, we have not written anything on it yet, we have not blotted it anywhere yet, it is clean, pure and sinless as God gives it to us day by day. Now let us try to keep it clean of all filthiness and clamor. If we live close to the Savior day by day, we can keep from blotting the white sheet in the year. I am interested in the prayers of the lowest ones that I may have opportunities all the trying circumstances of life and thereby gain an entrance into the everlasting kingdom that God has reserved for those that love the appearance of the Savior. O may I become more reconciled to the earth of all wickedness and the righteousness of God be supreme is my prayer.

Yours in hope of the soon coming King,
D. K. LEATHERS.

Dear Restitution:

As the season for meetings draws near, and I always enjoy the really good letters written by the brethren and sisters of like precious faith, and as I have been so often comforted in reading their encouraging letters, it is a love feast to me, for I am striving to love for the truth's sake, and when I read their letters and see and hear how they feast on the Bread of Life, it is a feast to me, and it inspires me all to feast on the Bread of Life, which if a man eat thereof he shall never die. There is a little band of believers in the gospel of the kingdom here in Brownstown, Va., who are standing firm and contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and notwithstanding, we had not had any preaching for so long by any of our faith, yet we can say with brother Paul, that the Bible thereby furnished us to all good work, and David said it was a light to his path, and a lamp to his feet, and by its precepts he got understanding and this was verified in our midst, we read and studied the Word, from house to house until the seed fell in good ground, and some desired to put on Christ by baptism. We then called on our much beloved Bro. B. F. Boyer, of Seven Fountains, Va., to come over and help us, and he has responded to our call, and visited us several times, accompanied by other brethren, and the Lord has blessed his labors and three interesting sisters have put on Christ by being baptized in his name, and arising to walk in newness of life; and many others are being interested in the great truths of the Bible, and these good brethren have promised us, if the Lord will, to visit us again in the spring. With love and Christian greeting, I am, your Sister in hope of eternal life,

SARAH F. MORRAS.

Dear Restitution:

I will write a few lines to your sacred pages, for the weapons of warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. 2 Cor. x. 4. Then what are our weapons? Eph. vi. 17, "And take the helmet of salvation and the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." Then if we are warriors and these are our weapons, let us use them with all our might. Breaking down the traditions of men—the immortality of man, the idea of going to heaven and many other false doctrines. I feel that the harvest is great and the laborers are few, I desire to be a laborer in the vineyard of my Lord. Though I am young in the cause yet I am zealous of the gospel of the kingdom of God. I believe that God revealed unto man just what man is, and just what he gives man—the breath of life. Now if he gave man some Spirit and failed to tell him what it is, then man has got to save something that he knows nothing of. Then how can he save that which he knows nothing of? Then is man responsible for what the Spirit does, or is the Spirit responsible for what the man does? It is man that is saved by faith in the gospel or good news of the kingdom by a resurrection from the dead. Then it is man that the gospel is spoken to it is man that curses God; it is man that prays; it is man that dies; it is man that is resurrected. Then let us try and save ourselves from this untoward generation and let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto him who is the author of all things.

Your Brother in Christ,
WM. WOODS.

Dear Household of Faith:

One more year has gone into history and many wonderful things have been accomplished. What may be expected of this present year? Let us watch and pray lest we enter into temptation. Let us pray for the return of our blessed Lord from heaven, to set up his kingdom under the whole heavens for some humble position in that kingdom is our desire.

JOSEPH & HARRIET FISH.

Brothers and Sisters of the one faith:

My letter will be late this year for the Christmas love feast, but I want to say that I think the letters from the dear brothers and sisters were very encouraging. I do so love to read them, and may the good Lord bless you all in the year that is before us, and may we all live closer to him this year than we have in the past, is the prayer of one of the isolated ones. If it wasn't for THE RESTITUTION I would never have a chance to [illegible] I hope to see you all in the glory in a soon coming day.

Your Sister in Christ,
MRS. [illegible] DEAN.

Good Restitution:

In the last paper here is a request to hear from every one but one had the paper free for the past year. I acknowledge with gratitude to my dear friends, that it has been seal to me free for years. My pen cannot describe the comfort it has been to me in addition from those of like precious faith. Now it seems my precious Bible are my only comfort, in my sad bereavement—my dear husband died one year and three months ago. I am left alone to weep and mourn, not a kindred but one sister to do and care for me in my loneliness. Adversity has been our lot, all our acquaintances know I am poor, yes, very poor as to this world's goods. Wish I had money to send you, but I have none. My dear husband's dying words to me were, "Trust in the Lord, oh he is my only hope." You can publish this or not, just as you please. From your old Sister nearly eighty-two years old, waiting and looking for the return of our beloved King to reign in righteousness in the earth. Let us all be ready whether in life or death. May the blessing of our heavenly Father rest upon those (and they will) who obey his commandments, is the prayer of your Sister,

JULIA A. ABBE.

Dear Restitution:

I send greetings to the scattered ones. Those deprived of church privileges, who are trying to live for the Master, to live worthy, acceptable lives. I know your lonely hours, the heart longings for Christian fellowship, and the communion with those of like precious faith. To such I say, "Work on, pray on," ever keeping the eye of faith on the promises that are both sure and steadfast, and the hope of glory and a crown of righteousness at the last day. For some time I have been thinking that if those isolated ones, would in each state form a Christian league, and write to each other. We might make many pleasant friends, as well as help each other in our Christian life. We might some times say a pleasant, bright word, that would cheer a drooping spirit. My address is—Miss A. L. Weatherman, Port Byron, N. Y.

If this meets the eye of any such in my own state, or any other, who would wish to write me will be pleased to hear from them.

A man can no more rid himself of fever by scraping off the accumulations on his tongue than he can rid himself of sin by the discontinuation of some of the sinful habits. The fever will coat the tongue again, and the old nature will continue to put forth new sins or repent the old ones. The only remedy for man is the new life, in which old things pass away and all things become new.—Works and Wonders.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

A WAR ATLAS.

The exact locality of many places mentioned in the news of the War between the United States and Spain is not known to the general reader, and as recourse is had to geographies. We have decided to offer our readers a complete War Atlas of sixteen pages of maps, showing all the territory where conflict can occur, besides some valuable statistics. This will be mailed to you for 25 cts. Send orders at once, and set the position of the places named that you can better understand how the various complications will affect the nations of the world. Address,—THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Ind.

SEND THE RESTITUTION to some poor person as present for 1899. The cost is only three cents a week.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT.

We are pleased to announce that we can offer our subscribers this valuable reference book at the very low price of only THREE DOLLARS. This work is so well known that it needs no introduction. It contains the Original Greek text of the New Testament, with an interlinear word for word English translation; a new Emphatic Version, based on the interlinears, on the renderings of eminent critics, and on the various readings of the Vatican Manuscripts. Also illustrative and explanatory foot notes, and a selection of references. By Benjamin Wilson. We have these books now in stock, and can mail at once. Send to this office.

A most excellent and appropriate present for any Bible student.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brothers and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Salvation for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 621 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME XLVIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 1, 1899. NUMBER 9.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Watch.

"Thou holdest mine eyes waking." Psa. lxxvii. 4.

God's world hath many a garden yet
Where blood-drops fall for dew,
Where in the person of his own,
He weeps the midnight through:
Thou wouldst not, if he bid thee to,
Sleep through his anguish too.

And thou shalt watch this very night
With him who died for thee,
And all thy [illegible]
Shall as a shadow be
Spanned by a bridge of patient love
And tireless sympathy.

This night, before the late cocks crow,
Some Peter sorely tried,
Warming beside an alien fire,
His Master hath denied.
Thy Lord within thee wakes and prays
His faith may still abide.

In the gray twilight of great doubt
Some waiting Mary weeps,
Her Savior's empty tomb without
And all her comfort sleeps:
Till through thy faith the Easter light
Across her dim eyes sweeps.

Sick sailors on the sea of fear,
Until by sun [illegible] star,
An echo of thy prayer shall hear,
Borne on the night afar.
Their sleepless Master walking near
To quell the billow's war.

Unbound, the winged feet of love
Speed o'er the spaces wide,
Nor power of earth nor air above,
Nor sea nor swelling tide
Shall stay them till they reach the need
That for their coming cried.

For as the apple of his eye
His mercy keeps thee still
The patient eyes, whose waking sight
The tears of anguish fill.
And thou will share the watch with him,
Obedient to his will.

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No 6.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Allan Ford, ca. about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—ED.]

But, it may be asked, What have we to do with these things? It may be true; for God has promised that Abraham shall have the land of Canaan everlasting in possession. Gen. xiii. and xiv. It may be true; for God has promised that Jesus—the Messiah, the son of David, the son of Abraham—shall inherit that same land forever, and be established for ever on the throne of his father David. Luke i. But what right have we to pry into their title-deeds, or be curiously anxious to know what God will give unto them? Much every way; but chiefly in this, that the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was to Abraham and to his seed, according to the righteousness of faith, and because, if we be Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. iii. 29. He that overcometh will Christ grant to sit down with him on his throne—Rev. iii.—and they who are of faith are blessed, at the same time, with faithful Abraham, and with the same blessings. Gal. iii. Thus, then, it is seen that the blessing to Abraham and to Christ is to others in addition, who receive the promise of the Spirit through faith; so that to examine those things is no anxious prying into things that do not concern us, if by any means we can attain to a co-heirship in them. How can we obtain to such a high position? How can we become partakers in those great and precious promises? The first requisite is belief of the gospel. I beg you will not be offended at my stating this requisite, and insisting upon it. What I do, I do from the firm conviction, that the present age and this country labor under gross delusions, which nothing but the most searching inquiry can dispel—delusions of the most dangerous character that ever were palmed upon man. The whole world slept, but like, in deep darkness for centuries, till the voice of Luther and his coadjutors shook it from its slumbers, and many awoke to the conviction that "justification is by faith." But the world still sleeps on as before, neither believing nor dreaming that the subject of the faith which justifies requires to be defined. Let me invite you, then, to consider this. "He that believeth the gospel, and is baptized, shall be saved," is the immediate promise with which we have to deal; and the first point is to know what the gospel is. What is the gospel? Do not tell me its qualities—how beneficent it is—how fitted it is to the wants of man—how worthy of God. Tell me, frankly and freely, What is the gospel? Do not evade this, I beseech you. Salvation is promised only to those who believe the gospel, so that we must take care that we believe the gospel itself, and nothing else in its stead. They who believe another gospel than Paul preached, and the churches of his day believed, shall certainly share in the curse pronounced upon those who preach another gospel. So that again I ask, What is the gospel? The word gospel, as every one knows, means neither more nor less than "good news," so that the question I am now beseeching you to consider carefully is, What are the good news which God communicates for the salvation of men? We have seen the glad news preached by God to Abraham, that he would make him an everlasting possessor of the land of Canaan, and that he should be the father of many peoples, and that all nations should be blessed in him and his seed—the Christ. We have seen the gospel preached to David, that God would establish his throne for ever in his presence, and that David's Lord—the Just One—would ever be settled in his kingdom. This was all David's salvation, and all his desire. In like manner, Isaiah speaks of the gospel as good tidings, speaking comfort to Jerusalem, saying to the cities of Judah, "Behold your God coming, with strength and an arm to rule, and his reward is with him"—Isa. xl.—and elsewhere, "The gospel that publisheth peace, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion: the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. He hath bared his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God." This salvation by God—this reign of God over his people, Israel, in the redeemed Jerusalem, King over all the earth—has been the hopeful theme of many a prophetic song. It is the good news—the gospel of the prophets, and of the prophets' God. Whether on the monarch's throne, or in the captive's dungeons—when Israel is filled with blessing, or drinks the cup of adverse wrath—ever have the prophets one gospel—the gospel of the reign of God at his appearing and kingdom. When John the Baptist began to preach, it was the same gospel. "The reign of God approacheth"—Matt. iii.—and, as we have seen, the true meaning and understanding of this was in precise accordance with the language of the ancient prophets. And so when Jesus hears that John is cast into prison, he goes forth into Galilee, preaching the same gospel—the gospel of the kingdom of God—saying, "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent ye, and believe the glad tidings." Mark i. 14. He went about all the cities and villages, teaching in the synagogues, and preaching "the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. iv. 23. When he saw the multitude, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd. He saw the harvest was plenteous, but the laborers few; so he sent forth twelve disciples to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and commanded them to preach, saying, "The kingdom of God is at hand!" And they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing everywhere. Luke ix. Here we have Jesus preaching the gospel, that the reign of God approaches; we have the twelve sent forth to preach the kingdom of God, and we find they preach the gospel. Imagine yourself a listener to these preachers saying, "The kingdom of God is at hand," and say whether you would not understand that this kingdom, or reign, was that spoken of by Micah, when he said, "The Lord shall reign in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever!" Micah iv. You answer, Yes; for there can be no doubt that such was the belief of the disciples when they preached concerning the reign of God. But let me notice this, that when they preached that that reign approached they preached the gospel, and, consequently, that belief of the gospel is simply the belief that the reign of God is at hand; for the subject-matter of the gospel is the approaching kingdom, of which I have already written. All the time of the preaching of Jesus, himself and his Apostles had been busily engaged in preaching this glad news; and when he speaks of the time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, nor never shall be again, he says, "This gospel of the kingdom shall first be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come;" and so, after his resurrection, we find him bidding them go forth unto all the world, and preach that gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned. Mark xvi. 16. If language has any meaning, the Apostles were commanded to preach that same gospel they had preached in all the cities of Israel, and salvation was suspended upon the belief of that gospel of the reign of God; so that here we might close our examination, and say with Paul, "If the Apostles, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel, they shall be accursed." Gal. i. 8. Awful thought! and awful the fate of those who believe another gospel than Jesus gave forth for salvation! But the Apostles come under no such curse. They went forth preaching everywhere that which they were commanded to preach. Peter stands at the beautiful gate of the Temple, and points to the men of Israel, that Jesus the Christ was to be sent from heaven, where he is now retained until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. Acts iii. The restitution of which all the prophets have spoken is none else than the restitution of the kingdom of God—the restoration of the kingdom to Israel—when will begin to be fulfilled God's covenant with the fathers of Israel: "In thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed." The Israelites are first made the vessels of honor and glory, through the mediatorship and grace of the Christ, to whom they appertain by right, and then they diffuse them to all the kindreds of the earth. When Peter preached in the house of Cornelius, he corroborated the preaching, after the baptism of John, that the reign of God is at hand; and says, after Jesus rose from the dead, "He commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he who is ordained so of God to be the Judge of the living and the dead." Acts x. And we find Paul standing in the midst of Mars' hill proclaiming that God had commanded all men every where to repent, because he hath appointed a day in which he will judge, or rule, the world in righteousness, by a man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead. Acts xvii. When the elders of Ephesus were gathered at Miletus, Paul told them that the ministry which he had received of the Lord Jesus was to testify the gospel of the grace of God. Acts xx. If we ask, How did Paul testify the gospel? he says, "I have gone among you all, preaching the kingdom of God;" and so, to whatever place he goes, Paul brings salvation by preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things, which concern the Lord Jesus Christ. Acts xxviii. Thus, then, it has been shown that the gospel has been only one since the days of Abraham; and it might be strongly inferred, that it has been, like its author, one throughout all generations; so that when the people, gathered out from among all kindreds and nations, and languages and ages, sit down with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob, in the kingdom of God, it will be found that they inherit what was the common desire of all, and the object of the faith of every one. If it were otherwise—if salvation were bestowed on all who have sincerely believed errors and lies—if the blessings I have treated of were to be given to all, however diverse may have been the objects of faith set before them—then would appear, not only that many had attained what they had never wished before, but what they had actually rejected and despised; and God's salvation would be enjoyed by those who, in the time of their election, had preferred a salvation created by their own fancies, or preached to them by the ministers of the father of lies. We have been taught in a bad school, but we must get to a better, where, instead of the precepts of men, we shall be taught the words and doings and purposes of God, and thus become heirs of those blessings which man's doctrines cannot give nor speak of, but which God has promised to those made righteous by faith of his promises. What a man sows so shall he reap. Hence, if you or any other man should disregard, or lightly think of God's salvation, you need not expect to reap any fruits but those which spring from such seeds. You may imagine that God's bright designs required to be burnished by your genius, and figure a bliss other and different from what God hath revealed. If it be so, you reject God's blessing now, and may rely you will be rejected by him both now and hereafter. Do you fit up some bright star in the vault of heaven, or some comet wandering through the depths of immensity, as the paradise for [illegible] to dwell in? Impious the[illegible]d, who made this world, made it [illegible] the habitation of man—(Psa. cxv. 16)—and he has revealed, that his adversary the devil is not here to triumph, but that his works shall be destroyed, and man shall live in bliss on the earth, which has been cursed for his sake, but is to be redeemed for ever from that curse's bondage. Eph. i. 14.

The Stone Kingdom.

In the prophecy of Dan. ii. We have brought to our view four Gentile kingdoms whose duration is compressed within the limits of this "present evil world." Following the fourth kingdom by conquest, will appear the fifth universal kingdom, symbolized by a stone, which becomes a great mountain and fills the whole earth. The four Gentile kingdoms representing the human rule of this world are symbolized by a metallic image, whose feet with ten toes represent ten coexistent kingdoms, existing at the time when the stone shall smite the image upon the feet. That the stone that smites the image upon the feet symbolizes the kingdom of God is proven by the language in the interpretation, "And in the days of these kings (represented by the ten toes) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.

As the territory of the four Gentile universal kingdoms is on this planet, and as the fifth or stone kingdom, of God, is to succeed and consume them, and fill the whole earth, the irresistable conclusion is, that this planet earth is to be the location of the kingdom of God. Do the Scriptures as a whole from Genesis to Revelation, teach that this earth is to be the geographical sphere of dominion of the kingdom of God? I answer they do most positively and conclusively teach that this earth is to be the location of God's kingdom. Let me give you a few of the many texts. "And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him. Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward, for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." Gen. xiii. 14, 15. Connect this promise with the following, "And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. viii. 11. To further prove that Abraham and his seed are the heirs of this planet, read Romans iv. 13, "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." To prove that Abraham has not as yet received the land promised to him, See Acts vii. 5. "And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." To prove that he temporarily dwelt in the very land, destined to be his future eternal inheritance, See Heb. xi. 8, 9, which reads thus, "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise.

In the light of such inspired testimony, who can doubt that this earth ransomed from the curse, will be the eternal inheritance of all the ransomed hosts of God. But the kingdom of God is like a grain of mustard seed, which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree. This teaches the growth and progressiveness of the kingdom after it is set up in the holy land. First a stone, then a mountain, then it "fills the whole earth."

First let us find the stone that is to smite the image. "And in that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people; all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it." Zech. vii. 3. Now let us look for a smiting of the image. The ten toes upon the feet of the image are parallel with the ten horns representing ten kings, that shall make war with the Lamb, by attacking Jerusalem the city of the Great King; a "confederacy" of the nations for the destruction of the remnant of Israel. But Lo! the stone smites the image, as observe. "Now also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion. But they know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall gather them as sheaves into the floor. Arise and thresh, O, daughter of Zion: for I will make thy horn iron, and I will make thy hooks brass; and thou shalt beat in pieces many people; and I will consecrate their gain unto the Lord and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth." Micah iv. 11, 12, 13. "Thou art my battle-axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms." Jer. li. 20. That this language describes the remnant of Israel as God's instrumentality in smiting the image and terminating Gentile supremacy in the earth, is beyond doubt.

The smiting of the image then, will be the end of Gentile rule, accomplished through the remnant of the house of Jacob as the divine instrumentality, for the manifestation of the righteous government of the Son of David; "For the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 32, 33.

The setting up of the kingdom of God, then, will be the restoration of the house of Jacob or twelve tribes of Israel, to the land promised to Abraham's seed, and ruled over by the returned rightful "Heir of all things," associated with his body the church raised from the dead, and joint heirs with him in the administration of the government of the age to come. Once set up, its object will be to break in pieces and consume all the kingdoms of this world. This will be a gradual process, but when it is accomplished the kingdom of God will fill the whole earth: For "the stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth." And like the little mustard seed that became a tree when fullgrown; so the kingdom of God shall embrace within its area, every clime and every nation. "And in that day many nations shall be joined unto the Lord." "And the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." Righteousness, joy and peace are the characteristics of the Kingdom of God. "And the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever."

"And the kingdom shall not be left to other people." Dan. ii. 44. All the pre-existing kingdoms of this world were left to other people; but in this respect the kingdom of God will be different. "For the saints of the most High, shall possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever." Dan. vii. 18. An everlasting kingdom, ruled by immortal rulers. "And of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it and establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever." Isa. ix. 7. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and with Godly fear. Heb. xii. 28. It will be in this kingdom age to come, that righteousness will flourish in the earth. I might give you a score of texts in proof of this assertion, but a few must suffice as the following: "All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord; and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee. For the kingdom is the Lord's; and he is the governor among the nations." Psa. xxii. 27, 28. For when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. Isa. xxvi. 9. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isa. ii. 4. "Yea all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him. All nations shall call him blessed, And blessed be his glorious name forever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory." Psa. lxxii. 11, 17, 19. Then will be answered the prayer our Lord taught his disciples to pray; saying, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, for so an abundant entrance shall be ministered unto you into the everlasting kingdom of the Lord Jesus the Christ."

IRA FORBES.

A Christian character, like everything else, must obey laws of growth. We cannot suddenly decide to have a strong character where we have been weak before. It is a matter of growth. Place yourself in obedience to the laws of growth and the fruit bearing must follow. Again, do not fear the storms. It is said that the swaying of the tree in a storm helps it to send its roots deeper into the soil, thus taking a firmer hold and deriving more means of growth. In the ninety-second Psalm we again have a picture of the flourishing state of the righteous. "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree: he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. Those that be planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God. They shall bring forth fruit in old age." There is one more thought—upon the planting of the tree. The time to decide in what soil the tree shall be located is when it is young and easily removed. How seldom is a large tree successfully transplanted. In childhood and youth is the time to prepare for the abundant fruit bearing of life.

We do not like to do so, but the fact that quite a number of those who must know they are in arrears on subscription, have failed to re-pond, compells us to call attention to this long neglected duty. It certainly is clear to the mind of any one, that after notices have been sent, and later attention called to them, that it is a breach of good manners to not reply to our letters. Just ask yourself, How would I like such treatment? We want a clear understanding with those who owe us. If you are not able to pay now, we want to know it, and know when you can remit. If you are able to pay, then we say frankly that we want the money due us. We are compelled to pay our debts. If we did not respond promptly our credit would be ruined, and our business stopped. We ask you kindly to treat us as you would have us treat you. If you do this we will surely get our money at once.

He who discovers a truth is better than he who invents a theory.

Germany is a trifle irritated over the Samoan trouble, and a maiden call by Admiral Dewey for the battleship Oregon to be hurried on its way to him at Manila, gave rise to some suspicion that Germany might again show an over-anxious hand in the Philippines.

Arabia is again in revolt against Turkish rule, having been subjected for three centuries. Their ground of complaint is robbery, overtaxation, and religious differences. It is claimed that the Grand Sheerif of Mecca is a descendant of the family of Mohammed, while Abdul Hamid, the Sultan is not. The Grand Sheerif will personally command his troops, and is supposed to have a friend in England, whence he will get money and munitions.

Another "widely known theologian and psychologist," Rev. Dr. Henry Frank, has employed his great talent in endeavoring to "locate the soul." He has been successful, and this time we are told "the soul dwells all through the body." He says "every human being possesses two memories, one of which intelligence is not sufficiently developed to utilize." Philosophers have heretofore told us that the seat of the soul was the pineal gland, or what is known as the "third eye" which was supposed to have belonged to a prehistoric race. Others have said that its locality was just between the two divisions of the brain, known as the large and small brain. But this man now declares the "soul actually controls us by means of the nervous system, and that the soul is in the hand just as much as in the head, and in the foot just as much as in the hand." He explains all the unusual "manifestations" of our time as the outgrowth of "second memory," which will yet be largely developed. Who is next? The Bible does not seem to be one of the books studied by this "distinguished theologian."

Heirship.

We expect about all of our readers would consider it a great honor and high privilege to be named in the will of some wealthy person of distinction, as one of his heirs, having equal rights with his own children, on certain specified conditions. We can imagine with what interest they would peruse the will in order to get fully acquainted with the conditions lest they fail to comply with them in every particular and

LOSE THE INHERITANCE.

This would be the part of wisdom, and the only way to certainly secure what is conditionally bequeathed; and any one who would neglect to adopt this course, and flatter himself that all would come out right if every particular were not complied with, would certainly be thought insane.

But, reader, God who created the heavens and the earth and all that in them is, has made a "will" in relation to its inheritance; and is inviting men and women to become heirs of this grand estate, not for a mortal lifetime, merely, but for ever. The disparity between the first estate referred to, and that which God invites you to

of, is so great that comparison is out of the question. The fact that you are reading this article warrants us to conclude that you believe that God has made a will and published it; and moreover that the Bible is that will revealed. If you or any other person neglected to comply with the conditions of heirship exacted by the man of wealth while you were really in destitute circumstances, in the nature of things the reason would be that you failed to accept the offer in good faith. And if you neglect to secure the everlasting inheritance willed by God to those who comply with the conditions exacted, it will be because you do not accept the offer in good faith. The plain English of that is, that you

DO NOT BELIEVE GOD,

When he invites you and states his terms. To put it in another light, you believe God says what he does not mean, or, plainer still, says what is not true, which makes him a liar. We present the matter in this strong light to show you what the Apostle means when he says, Hebrews xi. 6 that it is impossible to please God without faith; and to make you realize that the is that which takes him at his word and implies obedience, and not a blind or vague confidence in his goodness and mercy, etc. Leaving you to think of these things we pass to the consideration of Scriptures calculated to illuminate the minds of all who want to do the will of God.

Paul in writing to Hebrew heirs in reference to this will, says of Christ, "He taketh away the first, [the one given at Sinai, which was temporary] that he may establish the second, by the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the Body of Christ once for all." Heb. x. 9.

This "will" of God is also called his covenant or promise. Paul in Gal. iii. 15, says, "Though it be but a man's covenant, yet, if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto." And he goes on to say that "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made, he (God) saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." He further says that the covenant was confirmed of God, four hundred and thirty years before the giving of the Mosaic law, and that the law could not disannul it, and adds, "If the inheritance be of the law,

IT IS NO MORE OF PROMISE:

but God gave it to Abraham by promise." Now, as the promise was to Abraham and his seed, the Christ, the question arises, how can WE have OUR names enrolled as heirs of the promise? The Apostle in the same chapter at verse 26 says, "Ye are all children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.....and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise," covenant, or will. All in this position are children of God, and, "if children, then heirs,—heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." Rom. viii. 17.

We trust all will look upon this as a straightforward story so far, and if they do, the next questions they will be apt to ask, will be, "What are those heirs of God to inherit? Will it be or the kingdom of God below the skies? In answering these questions we first call attention to the fact that God gave the inheritance to Abraham by promise. It is what God promised to Abraham as an inheritance, that Abraham will possess as his inheritance, and that everlastingly. Just that, nothing more, nothing less.

We are wondering if the reader ever took the pains to hunt up the promise, or series of promises, upon which Abraham's inheritance depends. If he cares to have a share of it, and fully realizes that God included an inheritance for every one of

HIS ADOPTED CHILDREN

in his promises to Abraham, and, as already quoted from the 3rd of Galatians, every one of them must become an heir, according to the promise to that worthy patriarch, he will lose no time in getting right down to the foundation of the Hope of the gospel,—the hope set before him in those promises. If he can find any promise to Abraham of or beyond the bounds of time and space, there is also a promise to himself of the same, when like Abraham he believes God and obeys him. But if he finds no promise to Abraham of that character, then there is none for him.

A HOME BEYOND THE SKIES,

To further assist the inquiring reader, for fear that he may postpone the examination of the foundation laid by God for the Christian's hope we would give him a few reminders, and

1. That God called Abraham out of his country, and from among his people, "unto a land that I, [the Lord] will show thee." [Abraham] Gen. xii. 1.

2. That God led or directed him to, and showed him the land of Canaan, and said to him, "Unto thy seed WILL I GIVE THIS LAND" not some other. Gen. xii. 7.

3. That God renewed his promise to the patriarch in language recorded in Gen. xiii. 14, as follows. "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward, and eastward, and westward, for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. .....Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it: for I will give it unto thee."

4. That Paul's inspired comment upon the seed mentioned in connection with Abraham in these promises, Gal. iii. 16, is, that Christ is Abraham's Associate heratee.

5. That the testimony of the spirit in Stephen (Acts vii.) is positive, that God, at that time, in the neighborhood of 2000 years afterward, had never yet fulfilled those promises to Abraham and his seed.

6. That the Spirit's testimony in Heb. xi. 8, is positive that Abraham never expected to receive the inheritance he walked over and "spected.—yes, that he never expected that inheritance in his then present mortal lifetime, but proved his faith in its possession in resurrection life, by living in discomfort and as a stranger in the land of promise, see Heb. xi. 9 & 35.

7. That the promised everlasting possession of that inheritance carried with it the promise of everlasting life.

Let the interested reader now turn and read carefully that wonderful third chapter of Galatians in connection with these notes and we think he will see a chain of evidence that cannot be broken, proving the utter hopelessness of those who are strangers to, and therefore faithless of the promises made to the fathers of the Hebrew nation. And we trust that no one will flatter himself that he or she can inherit something that God's will does not contain. What is the will sent to us for, is it not before, obey, and hope for, [illegible] of love offer us? Take [illegible]dt" is promised to Abraham, [illegible] and Jacob and David, and there is to gospel at all. It is he who believes the gospel and is baptized shall be saved. Gospel means or good news from God to man; and we re-affirm that every particle of the good news relates to the blessings covenanted to Abraham.

It has been charged against us that we in this way belittle the office and work of Christ at his first appearing. This is very wide of the truth indeed. For perhaps the thousandth time, we deny this, and proceed to show the absolute need of his exemplary and suffering life, and his ignominious death if any of Adam's race were to be saved. And we challenge our accusers to give a Scriptural reason for his death apart from its connection with the covenants of promise we have been writing about. The words of the blessed Lord himself is most conclusive proof of this. Says he, in Luke xxii. 20, is the New Testament [covenant] in my blood, which is shed for you." If, then, it had not been the blood of the new covenant it would not have been shed for his disciples. The words mean this, if they mean anything. It is the Lord's reason why HIS blood was to be shed for them;—it was the blood of the new covenant.

"THIS CUP

Does some one say, Why was the shedding of his blood in connection with the new covenant, necessary? We ans., Heb. ix. 18 shows that the first covenant was dedicated with and of goats, and the whole connection shows that the new covenant needed a better sacrifice than that, even the blood of Christ, vs. 13, 20.

Secondly, Paul in Rom. xv. 8 says for the Spirit, that Jesus Christ a servant of the Jews for the truth of God to confirm,—[declare—ratify—what?] the promises made unto the fathers, and that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy, through the obedience of the first or old covenant, which confined that mercy up to that point, to the Jews, that is, excluded the Gentiles.

But some may say, we read that Christ died for us and rose again, and we are told that he thereby brought

LIFE AND IMMORTALITY TO LIGHT

for us, and nothing is said in that connection about the covenants of promise." This is either a mistake of the objector or his teacher. By turning to Heb. xiii. 20 we may read as follows:—Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep [How? The exercise of his Almighty power without employing the very means he himself devised? No indeed!] through the blood of the everlasting covenant. The covenant without the blood would after death: and the blood without the covenant was equally powerless. God's promise to Abraham, as we have seen, included everlasting life: but they needed to be ratified by a sinless one of Adam's race before it had power to bestow life after death. Jesus the sinless one was the first to be raised from the dead by means of that everlasting covenant.

NOT GIVE LIFE EVERLASTING

Some of our readers may think we harp a good deal upon one thing, but of late the evidence has accumulated that these essential truths are very indifferently understood,—and as we are rapidly rushing on toward the time when the Word shall judge all who are amenable to the Law of Christ and we want like Paul to be clear of the blood of all within our sphere of influence, we thus plainly and earnestly write.

The King James Translation—Must this be the Court of Final Appeal?

The inquisitive and studious mind earnestly searching for truth says no. I never met but two men who thought King James' translation was perfect. One of these men insisted that to translate was to take a new Bible entirely different from the old one; that the truth would be wholly supplanted by error. The Authorized Version is good but who would risk the statement that it is the best that is, or could be. True it has been very useful to several generations and many a dying Christian has pillowed his head on it: but truth in a somewhat different dress of words is just as sacred and comforting. Some would question the propriety of ever quoting from any other than the version in common use; and others are of opinion that to practice quoting from the many good translations has a bad rather than a good effect. That it, in a measure, destroys faith in the Word of God, and confuses instead of enlightening the hearer. Now, every intelligent person knows that there are several translations of the Word of God in our language, and that these all differ in some respects, though this variation is mainly in the choice of words without a change of meaning: and we all know that there are translations, differing from the text, printed in the margin of our Bibles, and this for the benefit of the reader, who is expected to choose between the two renderings. Why does not this knowledge undermine faith in and reverence for the Word of God, in the same measure as the fact of the preacher making quotations from other translations? What is the difference? Who will tell us? With as much reason we might object to the simple fact of translating at all, and be satisfied to hold in our hands copies of the Hebrew and Greek originals of the Scriptures which would be of as much use to us as the inscriptions on the Moabite stone.

OBSOLETE WORDS AND MEANINGS.

The English language is continually undergoing changes. It is not now what it was in 1606-1610 when the A. V. was made. I have before me a list of obsolete words and phrases taken from the earlier copies of King James' Version. Some of these have been changed i. e. modern words have been put in the places of the antiquated words, by some one, but on what authority does not appear. Many of these words still remain to perplex the reader. Here are a few: "theotend, beware, chapiter, daysman, deal, fray, bough, leasing, let." Now if the preacher has used of a passage containing one of these lots of words what can he do except to quote from some version having in the passage the modern equivalent of the obsolete word. Some times the word is an important one, the meaning of the text turns on it. Must he quote it as it stands in the A. V. and thus convey to his hearers a wrong meaning? A bashfulness preacher of pioneer times puzzled himself and hearers with an elaborate criticism about the tree into which Zacheus climbed, Luke xix. 4, to see the Savior. He and his audience were familiar only with the sycamores of our flat river bottoms, tall as a steeple and smooth as hypocrisy. "Why" said the orator "a squirrel can't climb them." This preacher lacked the advantage of a modern version. Here is a text with a word in it quite familiar to our ears: "And after those days we took up our carriages and went up to Jerusalem" Acts xxi. 15. Many a child has puzzled its brain over this feat of strength of Paul and his traveling companions; and have been quite as much perplexed as to the wisdom of carrying their carriages when they might have rode in them. Perhaps some of adult age have been similarly troubled over this text. This is an example of obsolete meaning. In the Diaglott it is rendered "Packing up our baggage we went up to Jerusalem." Another example is found in 1 Thess. iv. 15. "We which are alive" says Paul" and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep." "Prevent," today, means to hinder, but it did not mean this three or four centuries ago. In the Diaglott it is rendered, "We the living who are left over to the coming of the Lord, will by no means precede those who fell asleep." To quote as rendered in the A. V. conveys a wrong meaning—to quote some other translation is clearly the duty of the preacher in such cases. There are several other reasons for making quotations from other versions and the expositor should avail himself of this advantage. I will here ask the readers attention to a fact known to scholars and which may be verified by any one by reference to the Emphatic Diaglott, or easier and quicker by referring to Young's Concordance. At a glance it is seen that the word world is employed to render four Greek words into English. These words are printed in English letters and defined:

1. "Aion," age, indefinite time, dispensation.

2. "ge," land, earth.

3. "Kosmos," beauty, world.

4. "oikoumene," habitable earth or land. Here the expositor is obliged to quote some other translation in order to be understood. There are five occurrences of the words "end of the world." The audience are interested to know what it is that is to have an end. What was the thought in the Divine mind when the revelation was made through the medium of the Greek tongue? Before I learned the truth "the end of the world" meant to me a terrible catastrophe, the annihilation of the physical creation, the blotting out of the earth and all the heavenly bodies. I did not know that there was or could be any different rendering of the text containing these words. If King James' committee had rendered "sunteleias tou aionos" by the words end of the age then that awful nightmare of my youthful days, "the crash of worlds and the wreck of matter," had never brooded over my mind. Agreeably to this need as set forth in this short paper preachers and teachers every where have adopted the practice of quoting from other versions than the one in common use.

Dear Restitution:

We have read with pleasure and profit the many testimonies from the scattered ones of the household of faith, and thinking perhaps some would be glad to hear of the new here at Oleander, Cal., I thought I would endeavor in my weak way to send in my little mite, hoping it will find a place in your columns. We are still all strong in the one faith and hope, and are striving to be ready when the Master comes. I must say that we have been highly favored with a visit from our dear Bro. W. A. Prosser and wife and daughter, of Scholls, Oregon. They stayed with us over two months, and although we all had a touch of the lagrippe while they were here, yet we had a very pleasant visit. He also preached eleven discourses, which were a feast to us, but it seemed to make no impression on the congregation, (which was small the most of the time) it seems as though their hearts were hardened, and they turn a deaf ear to the truth. It seems like all a great many think of, is to have a good time as they go along, but I fear for them that the time will come for them, that their good time will end, when the Lord comes to take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, then will they call on the rocks and mountains to fall on them, to hide them from the face of the Lamb. We were disappointed to think our Brother and his family could not remain longer with us. They started for home one week ago, but as they seemed delighted with our lovely climate here, we feel in hopes that next fall they will come back and make this their home, and we all sincerely hope that they will not only come themselves, but that they bring others of like faith with them, for we need them here with us, and he is an able speaker, and knows how to rightly divide the Word of truth. We have felt very lonely since they went home, for it seemed we never got weary of hearing our brother talk on the Scriptures to us. There are only a few here of our faith, yet we do not forget to assemble ourselves together every first day to search the Scriptures and partake of the emblems, striving to be found ready to enter into that rest that the Lord will prepare for all those that love and obey him. I sometimes feel as though I can hardly wait for his coming, as I have very poor health all the time and not able to do the work I would like to do. I would like to be able to work more for the Master. I have in the past year scattered a goodly number of tracts and papers, feeling in hopes that somebody and them might get to understand the true gospel, and be turned out of darkness, into light. Then let us all that have named the name of Christ strive to be found walking in the true light, then when our Master comes he will say, "Good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

"My longing heart cries out, oh come,
Creation groans for thee;
The weary pilgrim sighs, oh come,
Being immortality."

Obituary.

Partridge.—Died near Tiosa, Ind. Feb. 19, 1899, of infirmities of age and paralysis, Edwin Partridge, aged 86 years, 10 mo. and 16 days.

The deceased was born in Onondaga Co. N. Y. April 8, 1812. In early manhood he came to Indiana, and located in Marshall Co. On Aug. 18, 1844, he married Rachel Logan, a sister of Mrs. W. D. Thompson of Plymouth. A few months after his marriage he moved to the farm where he died, near Tiosa in Fulton Co. He was the father of seven children, all boys, four of whom preceded him to the grave leaving his wife and three sons, Thomas, Clinton and William, to survive him.

He embraced Christianity under the ministry of Elder S. A. Chaplin, and united with the Church of God in 1860, in no which time his life was consistent with his profession. Years ago when in the prime of life he had Brother Chaplin come and preach in his neighborhood, for some years, bearing all the expenses himself.

Services were held Feb. 21, by the writer at the residence, which for more than half a century has been his home, text taken being 1 Thess. iv. 13–18. After which he was laid in the grave to await the call to come forth at the resurrection day.

The Voice of God Against Spiritualism. No. 4.

[Some years ago when THE RESTITUTION was published in the City of Chicago, Bro. H. V. Reed wrote a little work entitled "Witchcraft Unveiled: or the Voice of God Against Spiritualism." This work has been out of print for a number of years, and coming across an old copy, we find it fits in so well with the present "Manifestations," and is so complete an answer, not only to the theory as it was twenty-five years ago, but as it is to day, that we produce a part of it, and commend it to the careful perusal of our readers.—ED.]

"There shall not be found among you any one . . . a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." Deut. viii. 10, 11.

The texts already presented, certainly do not sustain the position that the soul of the man is conscious. Not one makes an assertion of that kind, and it is only by inference that they can be made to sustain such a hypothesis. But on the other hand, the Word of God is clear and forcible, declaring that the dead do not praise God; that they know not anything; that man's thoughts perish at death, and that there is no wisdom in the grave, whither man goes. All these great truths are taught in the most direct and positive form. But men have left the Word of God, and in its room placed the sayings of men. The professed Christian Church is now reaping the bitter fruits of its own theory. The world has been taught to believe that every man has got an undying nature, and an existence that will run parallel with the existence of God. How is it possible for the clergy to stop the tide of Spiritualism which is now sweeping like a wild deluge over the world?

The only thing that will stand in this age of deception and false philosophy, is the Bible doctrine of the sleep of the dead. Take this from us, and we are at sea without a compass, liable to be wrecked on the shoals and quicksands of infidelity. This is the great issue, and it must become the question in this controversy. The Protestant argument is substantially the position of Spiritualism. The works of Luther Lee, S. Drew, Landis, Hinton, Professor Hovey, and others, all present the argument for the consciousness of the soul of man in the same way, and by quoting the same class of texts to sustain their position; and eventually they will be classed together in this great controversy.

If the position taken in this little protest be true, it forms a safe-guard for the Bible student, and enables him to battle manfully for the truth of God against wicked spirits, and this brings us to our last proposition, viz:—

WHAT IS THE MISSION, AND BY WHAT AGENCY DOES SPIRITUALISM PROPITIATE?

Has it done any good in the world? This is a serious question, and much depends upon its solution. Have the spirits enforced one new moral? Have they taught a new precept for the salvation of man? We answer most emphatically, they have not. And we call upon its votaries to show one truth which was not presented in the book called the Bible. They may say that many have been restored from infidelity to a position of usefulness and morality; but this depends on what is meant by infidelity. It certainly does not mean that men have become believers in the Bible; for it is the leading feature of this system to destroy the idea of the Bible being an inspired book, and instead of teaching men to believe the Bible, they have led them away from it. And so far as the moral argument for Spiritualism is concerned, the world is prepared to judge of its influence in that department of its mission. I think I am safe in saying that it is the voice of an intelligent public, that its morals are degrading, and its influence on society bad. There are exceptions to this principle; but it is true of its system. It is well adapted to become the leading theory of this age. The world is prepared for it, and this last grand deception is the maturity of Satan's first falsehood "Ye shall not surely die." On this one sentence the whole position rests. This has been the pleasant lie of the devil for six thousand years; and, alas! the professed Christian world believe it to be the truth of God, whereas, God told man that if he disobeyed His law, he should "surely die." But man is taught to believe that there is no such thing as death. And thus the Word of God is made void. Again, another class tell us that death is the "gate to endless joy," while God's Word declares it to be an enemy. 1 Cor. xv. 26. God proclaims that man is mortal. Job iv. 17. But men and spirits teach that he will never die, but has an immortal soul. Here the basis of this warfare is now before us, the truth of God against the device of Satan. But God has been pleased to tell us of this last great deception that Satan would bring upon mankind. "When they shall say unto you, seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter, should not a people seek unto their God, for the living to the dead? To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. viii. 19, 20.

Here is an infallible guide, and the subject before us is, Do the spirits speak according to the law of God. This we can easily learn by knowing what the law of God has said on this point. Hear it: "There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer, for all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord." Deut. xviii. 10-12. The law, then, is against all these abominations.

But what do Spiritualists teach on this point? They tell you, "Go to them that have familiar spirits; consult mediums and necromancers, or those who pretend to converse with the spirits of the dead."—Web. Dict. They deny the testimony as well as the law. For God has testified that the dead know not anything;" but the spirit says they know more than all the living. Thus we see that Spiritualism is at war with God and his Word.

But in the last days, just before the coming of Christ, such a deceptive power was to come, for says Paul, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy," etc. 1 Tim. iv. 1, 2.

There are several points in this one prediction, which have a remarkable fulfillment in the spiritual philosophy.

1. The Spirit calls express notice to an important truth.

2. It is to be in the last days when the power is to arise; hence its chronology is defined.

Some are to depart from the faith. How true this is of the present. Thousands are leaving the Word of God, and

4. Giving heed to seducing spirits; that is, they believe what the spirits teach them, and by so doing depart from God; and how few who endorse modern Spiritualism believe the Bible. They call it the "skin of an old serpent, and "A good book in its day," etc.

But there are to be "seducing spirits." This they could not be if they came in their own character; hence they claim to be the spirits of departed friends, and thereby seduce those who already believe in the doctrine of the consciousness of the dead.

Finally, they are to speak "doctrines of devils." What was the first thing the devil ever taught, according to the Bible? "And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die." Gen. iii. 4. He made the woman believe it, and I am sorry to say that most of the world believe it now. But Jesus has said, "The devil is a liar from the beginning," and here is his first lie, and Paul says, "the woman was deceived," but if she never died, the devil told her truth, and God's Word has proved a failure.

We ask you then, in conclusion, if it is not wise in us to hear the voice of inspiration, and believe its truths in preference to all the creeds and doctrines of men. The world is filled with discord and wickedness, and is growing worse and worse. And how can we rest secure in lazy luck, when the signs proclaim in thunder-tones, the coming of the Son of Man. The days are evil, and men are leaving the Word of God for fables, and as Paul says to Timothy, "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned into fables;" and in view of it he charges him before God, "to preach the Word." 2 Tim. iv. 2.

We say, dear reader, strive to obey the God of truth; fly to Jesus as your only refuge, and when the just curses of God fall on the wicked who have despised his Word, and trampled his law under their feet, you will be secure in him; embrace the gospel hope of a resurrection to life through God's only begotten Son, and that day will find you at peace with God. Seek for immortality, and you will put it on at the Resurrection morn. Amen.

Parable of the Ten Virgins. No. 2.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom." Matt. xxv. 1.

Having now learned to a certainty, of the exact time when the congregation of the Lord will go forth to meet their coming Bridegroom, like unto what the parable of the ten virgins describes for them. We next inquire, how does it come that they knew when to go forth? First, by what the Scriptures teach; second, by the signs of the times. First, by what the Scriptures teach: they speak of a great tribulation upon the Jewish people or nation, such as we have already proven. They also teach us that this great tribulation will close by a return to their own land, for it says immediately after the tribulation of those days, or as Mark says in those days after that tribulation. Matt. xxiv. 29; Mark xiii. 24. As sure as the great tribulation is now upon the Jewish people or nation, just so sure will the time come when that great tribulation will close, and as sure as that we are now living in the time of their return home, just so sure will the time soon come when their restoration will be completed with a glory of blessing in their own land. See Jer. xvi. 15; xxiv. 6, 7; xxx. 3; xxxi. 10; xxxii. 37-41. And even this parable teaches us by the word "then" to look forward to the future by an eye of faith and hope to the glorious time when the great tribulation will be overpast and gone. Second, by the signs of the times. Of course the signs of the times are no more nor no less than what the Scriptures teach. Yet at the same time we do know and understand that the Jews must be restored. First, that the present gathering is this restoration, and just as soon as this restoration be completed, they, the saints will well know that it is their time to move, to arise, to go forth to meet their coming Lord.

Again, it is a fact worthy of notice, that in all of the parables of the New Testament Scriptures there is not another one just like this one, and yet this parable above all others is given expressly to teach the saints of God that they do not know the day, nor yet the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh, and that this parable is not given to the world of mankind, but just simply and only to the saints of God, and now the very next thing that meets our attention is "Shall the kingdom of heaven be liken unto." Want now we to understand about the kingdom of heaven? What did our Savior mean when he made use of that expression? Did he mean for us to understand that it would be fulfilled in the days long ago? or did he mean for us to understand that he took the whole to represent a part? Now what are the facts in the case? We do not hesitate to say that our Savior took the whole to represent a part, because there is no kingdom age, and in fact there never was, and never will be, only in the kingdom age, and in this parable he has done this same way in other parables, and now for the proof. We read at the 14 ver. of this same chapter where it says, "The kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling in a far country." Here our Savior uses the whole to represent a part in applying it to himself.

Again, in Matt. xviii. 23, "Therefore is the kingdom of heaven liken unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants." Here again, the whole is taken for a part, to show that the saints of God as servants must willingly be entirely on the side of forgiveness. Again, in Matt. xx. 1, "For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, who went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard." Here again, the whole is taken to represent a part, and notice too how extremely anxious he is to hire, goes out early in the morning, and presenting another view about the servants, that none should hold any envy or hatred against our Lord, because that all agree for a penny a day, simply because one of them had borne the burden and heat of the day. Again in Matt. xxii. 2, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son." Again, the whole is taken to represent a part. So in all of the above cases we learn that it was somewhat common for our Savior to use the whole to represent a part. So we are safe in saying that it is the correct way that our Savior intended to convey in Matt. xxv. 1. We therefore understand that when it says, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto," that it has direct reference to the living saints of God, which the five wise virgins represents that it will be the living and truly overcomer, when Jesus comes as a thief in the night to gather the jewels of the earth to reign with him.

Again, the next thing that meets our attention is, "Liken unto ten virgins," what is liken unto ten virgins? The kingdom of heaven. Well, how is it? To answer just how it is, is not quite so easy as one might think, yet the parable represents the living saints when Jesus comes as a thief in the night. Hence the whole is taken for a part, and that part is to be the living saints, which are to be the joint-rulers with him in his kingdom and glory that shall never die, which the five wise virgins represent, and besides it is a decided good thing that our Savior has taken virgins to represent the living saints when he comes again, because of their strict neutrality with everything else, and their nearness to him. Not only are they called virgins, but that they are called "chaste virgins," as well as the Apostle says to the Corinthian brethren, "I have espoused you to one husband that I may present you as a chaste virgin to the Anointed King." 2 Cor. xi. 2.

Having now learned that the living portion of the saints of God at the time of the thief like coming of our Lord are here represented by the ten virgins, we next inquire, what is said of them? What will they do at that time? It is written of them that they took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom. Please take particular notice here, that according to this parable that there is to be only one going forth to meet the Bridegroom, and at that going forth they are sure to meet him. And now another question arises right here, which is, Is a parable to have all its bearings brought into use? or, Is a parable to be understood in all its branches? or, are all the parts spoken of to meet their fulfillment? or as the saying is, Does a parable go on all fours? We answer, if not, what are they stated for?

And now we take a searching look through the New Testament Scriptures to see what they do teach, and we find that every parable that has an explanation to it, has every branch of it brought directly into use, and in fact the explanation is enlarged upon as will be seen in the parable of the sower as found recorded in Matt. xiii. 1-24; Mark iv. 1-21; Luke viii. 1-16. This parable as is given by the three evangelists all speak and agree that there were four kinds of seed into which the seed was cast, and that this seed represents the Jewish people at the time that our Savior gave it, and will apply to all other people as well, and that in the explanation in each four points it is fully drawn out, and in fact each branch is enlarged upon so that in all its parts we are able to discern its wonderful application. Also the parable of the tares of the field as found recorded in Matt. xiii. 24-31 and 36-43. In the explaining of this parable by our Savior he has fixed it out under the head of seven items, to take place in the kingdom age, and in the explanation he enlarges to about a dozen, so that we can plainly see that each branch is brought directly into use. Also Matt. xv. 10, 11, 15, 14 also 15 to 21. In the recording of this parable by Matt. and Mark we learn that our Savior announced just two items, and in the explanation it enlarges to thirteen items. Now, here are three different parables given at three different times, and what do they teach us? They teach us that every branch of these parables is brought directly into use, and in the explanation given it is even enlarged upon. Now here is Bible testimony, and besides it is plain, and now what does the Bible say with regard to testimony given? That "in the mouth of two or three witnesses may every word be established." Deut. xvii. 6; xix. 15; Matt. xviii. 16. Now notice in these parables where explanation is given us, we are taught that every branch is brought directly into use, and that these three parables teach us how they are used, and that when we come to know this, that the Bible has already established the fact that parables are to be used in all their branches, that it is then our duty to so understand them, and to study and learn how and when all the branches of a parable meet with their fulfillment. Having now learned this, we come back again to the parable of the ten virgins and it is said of them that they took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom, and we now ask when do they take their lamps and go forth? We will let the Bible answer. Immediately after the tribulation of those days, and not possibly before, or in other words just as soon as the Jewish restoration is completed, or at the commencement of this great time of trouble, which will be a great time of spiritual darkness, our side of the prairies of God, and why? Because the whole world is not looking for the rise and coming of the Lord, neither do they care for it, not having any faith or hope in it.

Now, right here please notice another thing, and that is, that there are exactly two times of the end, and that one takes place before the other, and that the first time of the end is the time of the end of the great tribulation upon the Jewish people second time, the end of the Gentile times, and that these two times of the end differ from one another as far as day is from night, because one is a great time of prosperity, of a return of the Jews to their own land, and the second is a great time of trouble. The first is an uplifting, the second is a downfall; the first is a blessing of a return home of the Jews to their own land, which time of the end we are now living in; and the second is a curse, a great time of trouble, a punishment, and just as soon as the Jews are restored, their time of end is over and God will lift his wrathful hand from the Jews, and pour it out on the Gentiles, which will be a great time of trouble and spiritual darkness, but we have not come to this yet, nor neither will we, until the Jews are restored; then it will begin, and the worst kind of trouble you ever saw.

But we will pass this for the present and come back to our parable again, or more properly the Lord's parable, and next inquire what about the lamps? What do they represent? The lamps represent the faith, because they all have the faith, at least they all know the Lord is coming, and hence they all go out to meet the Bridegroom. Then what else does it say about them? And five of them were wise and five of them were foolish, and now just at this stage of action it actually turns out that one-half of the saints are wise and the other half are foolish. Is it possible that this parable will strike the saints of God, when one half of them will be prepared, and the other half will not? What is the matter in this most trying time? What says the Word? They that were wise took their lamps, and took no oil with them. This tells the story. It seems that they did not discern the distance that they had to travel, nor yet the amount of oil that they would have to use, and hence they only took their lamps with what oil there was in them, for their journey. No wonder they are accounted foolish virgins. While they do some things all right, they do not do all things right to insure them all the way through their journey. The one grand and essential thing they were minus of was their extra vessel of oil to supply any and all wastes, and now what does the oil represent? It represents works, and why do we say so? Because the faith and works go hand in hand to prove each other correct, and that a live faith must provide works, and that works must come with to support it, and that too the right kind of works that make faith solid and firm. Then everything is all right, and here we stop and think a little, think quite a good deal and ask ourselves the question, what might these works be? And look out upon mean a people that claim to possess the faith, and ask what are the works that will deprive one half of the living saints of God of being ready when Jesus comes? Let us be candid a little, and if necessary take quite a good deal in order to see what those works might be, and really what they are, and as I thought is best on the part of those who never have seen these works pay us. There is only one half of them found doing these works when Jesus comes? And we still ask what are these works that one-half are doing, and the other half are not doing? Even now, for whatever we can find of works that they are divided one-half and are liable to continue so. Then they are the works which the oil represents, and first we will take up acts of humility. When as our Lord has left on record, we make a great dinner, or a great supper for a feast, or we invite the lame, the poor, the blind the halt, that they cannot recompense us again, that the saints shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just. Luke xiv. 13, 14. Are they divided half and half upon these things, if so, then they are the works. Or is it feet washing as found recorded in 1 John xiii. 4-20. Is the congregation of the Lord divided half and half upon this humiliating work. That one half will do this work and the other half will not, is this the work that will deprive one half of the living saints of being found worthy when Jesus comes, or is it the communion as found recorded in Matt. xxvi. 26-36; Mark xiv. 22-32, Luke xxii 19-23; 1 Cor. xi. 23 to close of chapter. Are one half of us as a people following this closely? do we adhere to it in strict obedience to the spirit and meaning of it only half of us? What do you think and say and do? Or is it being in debt? Are one half of us so in debt that we cannot do our whole duty in the case of tithe? If so, we plead at once in Jesus' name, "Father, forgive." May we struggle with might and main to free ourselves from this besetting sin, and be determined to meet our Savior with joy and peace, for we are plainly taught to owe no man anything, but to love one another, Rom. xiii 8. Or is it keeping the ten commandments of God, and especially the fourth one, which is the Sabbath day? Are we all divided half and half, will this hit us nearer than anything else? If so, we know where we stand. These are the works, and it may possibly be all of the above works. Whatever the works may be that one half are doing and the other half are not doing at the present time will possibly be the work then, because we are so near the time that it will be the same works still.

Now, there is another thing worthy of notice. That it is a very strange thing too that this parable above all others, and the only one that takes its whole place all in the night. But when we come to learn of its place of fulfillment, we find it to be in the very darkest time of the world's history, so much so that none other shall be like it again, and when we come to understand what our Savior has given, we do not wonder at the virgins all travelling in the night in order to represent the darkest time into which the saints will enter, and knowing too that the darkest time is just before daylight.

Yours for wisdom's side.

Our Love Feast.

Dear Restitution:

I take a great deal of comfort in reading of the good news of the blessed kingdom of God in the columns of THE RESTITUTION. I receive it every Sunday morning and read it, as I am isolated from any church of like precious faith. The cares of this life have been very great with me in the last three years. The promises of God have been my only comfort. The promise of life to the overcomer is what gives me strength to overcome sin, for we are told we must be overcomers if we are to wear the crown of life. We are told in the Word of God that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the good things he has prepared for them that love him." Our Savior said "Straight is the road that leads to life." I am trying to walk in that narrow way. The crown of life is all that is worth striving for in this life, for all earthly possessions and friends will fail in time of trouble. Let us all be ready for the Savior when he comes in his glory. I want to hear him say, "Well done, enter in."

MRS. S. J. BUCKLES.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

As we read so many good letters from so many, I will try and say a few words for my husband and myself. We are still alive and contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. All the preaching we have is the Bible and the dear RESTITUTION, which we get free. May God bless the Editor and the friends for their kindness to us. We are very poor in this world's goods, but rich in faith, and we hope heirs of the kingdom. Pray for us that they may be our lot.

MR. & MRS. C. W. HERROS.

Dear Restitution:

I enclose one dollar to apply on my subscription. I am so sorry that our dear Brother Underwood is sick. I hope he is better. May God bless him with his rich love and all of you, for the glorious truths that come to us through the dear old RESTITUTION. May we one and all be ready when our Savior comes, is the wish of your Sister in hope of the kingdom of our God.

ELIZABETH KIMBALL.

Dear Restitution:

My time has been closely occupied the past fall and winter. Our little Ecclesia in Springfield, Ohio, is still alive and all earnest workers. Several of our leading members have fallen asleep the past few years and yet occasionally we add some. What a happy thought that we so many of us have been permitted to see and obey God's plan of salvation, that we may occupy that relationship, that whether we live or die, we are the Lord's, and all is safe with us.

Appreciating your and your Board's efforts in keeping up the interest of THE RESTITUTION, I am yours in the one hope,

R. L. HOLMAN.

Dear Restitution:

I am one you have been coming to see without pay for the last two or three years. This leaves me nearly eighty-one years old with an invalid wife who has been with me in the faith for years. We are quite poor and dependent, the fact is the world has gone on and left us. Your weekly visits help us in our lonely poverty-stricken situation. I see from Cameron's letters that Dr. John Thomas was the main one that unfolded the truth these latter days. It is all a mistake. Over forty years ago some dozen of us met each Sunday to search the Bible and came to the Truth, having no help except George Storr's "Six Sermons" and Barnes' work called "Death not Life," and the "Nature of Man." We all became immersed, broke the bread each Sunday, never having heard of Dr. Thomas. A little band of us have held together, nothing moving us, while Christadelphianism has divided and redivided, until there is almost nothing left of them. Send on the good old paper by all means.

Yours for the faith.

D. S. MONROW.

Dear Restitution:

As I thought it right not to be out of door for me to write some this morning for I am very reading the letters from the band of God, scattered abroad over the land as we are, to whom find so many are rejoicing and are anxiously looking for the Noble Lord's return, the King of kings, who soon reign in righteousness for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and he shall judge among the nations, and shall reinke many people ... [illegible] against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." How different that is from the powers that be. Yes, this world would be a much more gloomy place, were it not for the glory that we are anticipating in the near future, when the present reign of things shall be silenced, and he whose right it is shall hold forth. To this end we pray "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as in heaven." Amen. I am at present making my home in Blackwell, Okla., with my daughter, Mrs. Carrie Wile Chambers. We have a few names here, and we anticipate somewhat in organizing a Bible class here in the near future, that we might be taught, and encourage, and exhort one another. "And so much the more, as ye see the day approaching," says Paul. We had Bro. Zilmer with us last fall, who gave us some very able sermons, and encouraged us on our way. Now, I would like to say to the household of faith, if any are anticipating different surroundings, or going to a new country, hope you will visit Blackwell, Okla., before locating, as we have a fine country, and Blackwell is a thriving city, and will be a place for almost all kinds of business. Now, if any one should like to correspond concerning the place or country, we would be glad to answer, as we would like very much to have you locate here.

ELIZA A. BABB.

Editor Restitution:

There are a few of us here at Laurel, Iowa, of the like precious faith. We have preaching once in a while; it seems good to hear a sermon of the like faith, it gives one light and strength and encourages them to move onward to the high calling mark. We give our neighbors some of our papers. They read them, but don't seem to want to look much about the belief. They seem to think just so a person is sincere they will be saved. We try to tell them what they should believe and obey the Word of glad tidings of the Kingdom of God. Pray for us that we may ever prove faithful to the end. Enclosed find a money order for two dollars, a dollar and fifty cents for the paper, and fifty cents can use where you see best.

Your Brother and Sister in Christ,

MR. & MR. ARTHUR ZESCH.

Brother Underwood:

I have been confined to my bed and chair for the past nineteen years. Wife and I are the only two in our County of the Abrahamic faith, so you see we are completely isolated. Oh, how I do wish some of our folks could come to Austin, Ind., and set the truth before this people. I do all I can by talking to as many as come to our house and by handing our paper. They say the most of the articles in our paper are too strong for them. I say it is because they do not know the first principles and because they almost entirely ignore the Old Testament. How I wish for the "Popular Lectures" by Brother Joblin to hand to them. I think they would do so much good here. Sorry to see you and Bro. Woodward have been sick and I pray God to restore you both and spare you if possible, till our blessed Lord comes. If the free will fund will permit please remember us, and may God bless you.

From your Brother and Sister in the one faith,

R. E. & L. I. WOOLLEY.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Why don't Bro. D. M. Butler write some for THE RESTITUTION? If any of the brothers pass through Audubon, Iowa, I should be glad to have them stop and preach for me. I have not heard any preaching for twenty years.

Yours in the faith.

L. BUTLER.

Editor Restitution:

Will you allow me space in our valuable paper to let the brethren of the Church of God know where I am, and what I am doing? I am preaching where the doctrine of THE RESTITUTION is not preached by the orthodox churches of this country and I find many good honest people who would go to heaven preach the Truth, if they had clothes to wear, but they have to stay at home because they are so thinly clothed. Well, Brother Kidwell, I am still preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. I would be glad to see you; I would like to see all of the household of faith but I am too poor to travel on the railroad, I go on foot everywhere I go, so that you can see that I am poor.

Well, Brother Underwood, we lost our little Cory Ann, she died the 17th day of December, 1898. She was one year, eight months and twenty-two days old. We sorrow, but not as those who have no hope, for we believe that there will be a resurrection of all the dead, therefore we wait for the Lifegiver comes the heaven all things, then we believe we will see our child. We called on a good man to sing and pray at the grave, he was not a member of the Church of God, but it was the best we could do.

I am your Brother in hope of eternal life when the Life-Giver comes.

J. W. CARROLL.

An Appeal.

To the Young People of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, of the State of Illinois.

In the name of God, our Father, and of his Son, Jesus Christ, we would entreat you, brothers and sisters, to unite in one body for closer communion and spiritual uplifting. At our State conference it was decided to have a State Young Peoples' Bible Society. For the working out and completion of the organization, we would most earnestly urge you to send your name and address to our State Secretary, Laurence E. Wilson, 5411 Ohio St., Austin, Ill. We would impress upon all the young people the importance of this, especially those who are isolated. If you are a member of a Young Peoples' Society, please send the address of your president and secretary, when you send your own. Do not delay in this as it is the Master's work and let us daily strive to be ready and waiting for him when he comes.

"The same yesterday, to-day and forever."

"The world is a world of change!"
I hear in a manner key
While it waits and wabs through the centuries
Like the moan of winter seas.
But into the mournful song
There comes the sound of a Name
With the might and thrill of a major chord:
Jesus, over the same.

Yes, the verdict of years is true,
For nothing is here to stay;
To-day that is, and the things that are,
Shall utterly pass away.
And the day of doom is set
For this wonderful earthly frame;
But One stands firm, though the heavens fall:
Jesus,—ever the same!

Oh, then, let the change come!
Change! the nations rage and war,
And the world goes down into awful night
With never a moon or star.
'Tis it best before the dawn;
And to-morrow is all athame
With the glory hair of the coming King:
Jesus,—ever the same!

Elements of the Prophetic Word. No 7.

[These articles are a series of letters written by Allan Fordyce, about 30 years ago, and addressed to a lecturer whose position on some points were called in question. They were first published at Dundee, Scotland, and in 1882 again reprinted by James Fraser, at Glasgow. They are now sent us by Bro. J. Cameron.—ED.]

It was worthy of the profound sagacity of the singular Lady Esther Stanhope, to ask at M. de Lamartine, when he visited her in Syria, "Do you find the social, political, and religious world well constituted? and do you not think that all the world feels the want, the necessity of a revealer, of a redeemer, of the Messiah whom we expect, and whom our desires have already pointed out?" Enjoying the intimate friendship, and residing with her celebrated uncle, Mr. William Pitt, she had seen and become acquainted, both theoretically and practically, with the finesse and intrigue of governmental diplomacy, while she saw, at the same time, that there could be no sufficient cure or corrective, existing in themselves, for the enormous social, political, and religious abuses amongst mankind—that there was no existing remedy for the universal suffering of nature, of men, and of society—but that all our desires and hopes for an alleviator of those intolerable evils of humanity, must point to and be stayed upon an alleviator who is divine; and so agreed M. de Lamartine, although he did not expect this alleviator in the person of Jesus of Nazareth, the Messiah: and he adds, "I perceive in the wavering creeds of man, in the tumult of his ideas, in the emptiness of his heart, in the depravity of his social state, in the incessant tottorings of his political institutions, all the symptoms of an overthrow, and, consequently, of a near and impending renovation."

If man's hopes had no other foundation than those given by the helplessness of his position, they would be very small. So small would they be, that, instead of hope, we might call his emotion despair; for it would be that of the crew of a sinking and burning ship, with the winds of heaven, and the surges of the ocean, threatening an immediate and horrifying doom. If hope is but the promising child of helplessness, then none should have been so hopeful as those who perished at the flood, or of those who battled with the returning waters of the Red Sea. But hope had some better foundation. It is the child of a nobler and richer parent than necessity; for its father is God, and its foundations are God's promises. All our hopes, therefore, as to a future and better state of being, must be based upon and in accordance with God's promises; and we must be prepared, and willing to acknowledge, that the Revealer and Redeemer of mankind, the Messiah of God, will reveal himself and redeem mankind, and govern them as God's anointed, in that way, and in those circumstances which God has pointed out.

It has been made known, that Jesus of Nazareth is that Messiah, and this has been attested by many signs and wondrous works, which none but God could perform. When brought to the bar of the Jewish Sanhedrim, there was no charge found against him, until he was adjured by the High Priest to declare whether he was the Christ, the Son of God? Mark xiv 61. "I am: and ye shall see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." They took him to Pilate, and made before him this charge. "He calleth himself Christ, a king." Luke xxiii. Pilate interrogates him. "Art thou the King of the Jews?" to which he replies, "For this end was I born: and I went forth into the world to bear witness of this truth." John xviii. Convinced that the Roman Government was in no danger, or in danger incapable to be averted, from the hands of that personification of sincerity, saying "My kingdom is not of this world, nor is to be established by the sword of man, but by the armies and power of heaven," Pilate finds no fault in his profession of kingship, and would willingly let him go; but the vociferous pleadings of the multitude set upon his fears, and he sends Jesus forth to be crucified, with his name, and the crime for which he perished, written above his cross, "This is Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews." This was the crime for which he suffered. This was the good confession he made before Pontious Pilate, which God will vindicate in his own good time, as he has abundantly promised.

But the Messiahship, or Christhood, which he asserts before the Sanhedrim, is the charge which meets him before Pilate, when he acknowledges that he is indeed the King of the Jews; so that the Christhood, and the Kingship of the Jews, are one and the same, as is fully borne out by the cries of the people, "Let Christ, the King of Israel, descend from the cross." Mark xv. 32. The Christ was the one whom the Jews daily and anxiously expected. The Christ, in their minds, was the bringer in of a new era of independence, permanence, and glory, and they had learned from the law, that, when the Christ cometh, he shall abide for ever—John xii. 34. —so that the designation, "the Christ," was by them associated with all their hopes for national pre-eminence and dignity. In wishing for the Christ, they did not wish for a Nazarene crucified, nor for one to be enshrined in the highest heavens, at the right hand of God, but they looked for one who would restore again the kingdom to Israel, and would make it far more extended, and far more glorious, and far more powerful than ever it had been before, even under conquering David, or magnificent Solomon. These, too, are magnificently the ideas which Peter had of his Christhood, when he said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Matt. xvi. 16. Peter had then no idea that he was to die an accursed death, nor that he was to sit in the Schechinah of the heavens, but he looked on him as the redeemer of Israel, or, as expressed by Nathaniel, his belief was simply this: "Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel." John i. 49.

The term Christ, or Messiah, had become familiar to the Jews from the practices and customs of the nation, and the promises and prophecies delivered expressly concerning him as such. The word means "anointed," and, in its application among the children of Israel, it was restricted to the anointed for the throne of their Kingdom. The priests and prophets were in some cases also anointed: but they were never considered, in the language of the Scripture, nor in the understanding of the Jews, as being God's Messiah, of God's anointed. When Peter made the confession, on which the Church is built, "Thou art the Christ," he had no idea of him as a priest, nor as a sacrifice, but only and entirely as King of the Jews: and so, when he addresses the thousands on Pentecost, the same idea fills his mind, as he declares, that God hath raised up Jesus to the throne of his father David. Acts ii. 30. Hence, the intimate connection between preaching Christ, and preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God. In truth, the two cannot be dissevered, for it is equally difficult to preach a kingdom without a king, as to preach a king without a kingdom. The two are co-relative; so that if any one professes to believe that Jesus is the Christ, without knowing and believing the things concerning the kingdom of God, he shows that he knows neither what he affirms nor what he speaks. It is only from a knowledge of the sayings and doings of Jesus, and God's mighty works concerning him, that one can believe and confess that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God. Thus, it is not necessary that, on every occasion where the preaching of the Apostles is alluded to, it should be in the definite form of preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God; for the relative expression, "preaching Christ," is of the same meaning, and equally definite.

Does your faith embrace these things? Do you believe the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, as they have been evidently set before you? Ever remember that faith is the substance of things hoped for—the conviction of things not seen as yet. Heb. xi. What, then, are the objects of your faith? If your hope be to enjoy the great and precious promises of God, your faith, like that of Jesus, looks at them through the cross and the shame—and is willing to bear and brave these for the joy set before you in the gospel. Salvation can only be obtained through belief of the gospel: and he who believes it approaches it by faith, as he shall hereafter come in fact, unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the life-giving God, the heavenly Jerusalem—and to an innumerable company of angels—to the general assembly and church of first-borns who are enrolled in heaven—to God, the Judge or Ruler of all—to the spirits of just men made perfect—and to Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant—and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel. Heb. x. Do you see all that glorious assemblage mirrored in your faith?—then this will translate you from the glory you behold to the same glory to be enjoyed. But it is here, as it was to the woman of old—according to thy faith, so be it. Hence, if you believe these things—things surely revealed by the spirit of God, and presented in the gospel preached by all God's messengers, and in outline traced before you in these Letters—in other words, if you believe the gospel of the reign of God—you are in a fair way to have a part in those regal priestly realities, to be brought at the appearing of Christ. But, if you do not believe that gospel, you shall certainly be damned; for, while the gospel is the power of God unto the salvation of every one who believeth, it is to others the savour of death unto death. Ally yourself, then, to those veritues of everlasting weal, and run to obtain a glorious crown at the revelation of Christ from heaven.

"Keep Yourselves in the Love of God."—Jude.

Volumes and essays, almost innumerable have been written on the theme of loving God, most of which leave the mind uninstructed, or worse, mislead us to how the love of God is obtained, and how kept. That the "love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit, which is given unto us," (Rom. v. 5) is a very clear statement of truth. But without reading further we would still be ignorant as to how the Spirit produces this effect. Many therefore conclude that God through Holy Spirit in answer to prayer, will and does by his omnipotent power in an abstruct manner, arrest the affections of the mind, and thus transform them from sinfulness, to God and holiness. While others go further and suppose that, thus a new set of faculties are actually given the mind, which they term the "new creature"—"Life eternal," etc. But did the Apostle after giving the above quotation leave the above subject for us to guess out how the Holy Spirit imparts this love in our hearts? Most assuredly not. For he continues the subject by saying, the very next words, "For (because) when we were without strength in due time Christ died for the ungodly, for scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." Herein we have the statement as to how love toward God is begotten in us by the knowledge of this manifestation of his love toward us, which knowledge we obtain only through the Holy Spirit by inspired writers. Believing their testimony, how could it be otherwise, than, that we could love him in return? Every spirit begets its own likeness. How perfectly this accords with John's testimony in his I Epistle iv. 1-2, "We love God because he first loved us." How did he manifest this love? Answer, 9th verse. "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world (what for?) that we might live through him." Parallel with this is the testimony in John vi. 16, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Truly whosoever believes this testimony of the Spirit, needs no additional power to arouse the emotions of love toward God. How the emotion of love is drawn toward those who manifest love for us by sacrificing some worldly treasure for our good, yet how little the good, when compared with eternal life, with all its environments. Additional testimony by the Spirit might be given almost ad infinitum, as to how God's love towards us begets love in us toward him. But surely enough has been given to establish beyond controversy, the divine philosophy of cause and effect. It is said of some persons, to know them is but to love. Therefore it would be proof, the one not loving them did not know them. It is written "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." To not know God and his Son whom he sent, is to be cut off from the only source of eternal life. See John xvii. 2, 3. But to have a knowledge of God and his Son is to have the faith that works by love. Gal. vi. 6. Hence said Jesus John xiv. 23, "If a man love me, he will keep my words." Perhaps enough has been said to give a glimpse of the importance attached to it. Having shown how obtained—through a belief, unto obedience, of the Holy Spirit inspired testimony of those testifying the glad tidings of his Son. If it be all important that we get this love, can it be any less so that we keep it? Hence the injunction of Jude, at the head of this article. If obtained in the first place, through the Spirit by a hearty belief of the testimony. Therefore it necessarily follows, unless we may entirely abandon the law of cause and effect, that to retain it, or keep ourselves in the love, we must not suffer ourselves to be moved away from the cause that produces it, or as Paul puts it, "Hold fast the confidence, and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Confidence is faith. "Faith comes by hearing the Word of God." Through faith comes hope, and through hope comes love and rejoicing.

Years ago, a good brother, now sleeping, said to me, "If you are getting cold go near the fire." God's fire is always burning. Draw near to God and he will draw near to you. James. The predicate of Jude's injunction is the statement going before, "That in the last time there would be those who separate themselves, having not the Spirit." How graphically Paul describes the last days in his second letter to Timothy. "Lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, from such turn away." Now is the time to remember the "turn away." The present condition, not merely of the world, but quite as much of the nominal church, is a complete photograph of the picture given. Moreover the epidemic is quite contagious. Be not lured away. But give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip (away from us) as water from a leaky vessel—little by little, imperceptibly. The man freezing, before death, becomes entirely insensible of being cold. Let us arouse ourselves while we may. The one lured away, from the warmth of God's love, into the freezing atmosphere of the world, loses his confidence little by little until he becomes unconscious of his own condition. We need only be lured away sufficiently to neglect the great salvation, in order to make failure. Said Jesus, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many wax cold, but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Let us each be fully alive in this time to Jude's exhortation, "But, ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."

D. T. HALSTEAD.

Infidelity and some of its Causes.

The prevalence of unbelief in the sacred Scriptures is very marked, and rapidly on the increase at the present time. And since there is a reason for every thing under the sun, there must be at least a cause for this declension in the faith of the divine record. Atheism is not without its votaries, but it cannot be considered in this connection, from the fact that it is neither amenable to the laws of revealed religion, nor the demonstrations of natural law. It simply ignores all reason, and establishes its own foolishness. But infidelity accepts the idea of a Creator, but denies that he has spoken to man otherwise than by the visible universe. That he has by his eternal fiat launched forth the heavens and the earth, with all that appertains to them. Making all beings and things subject alike to the unchangeable laws of nature, and these laws open and plain to our comprehension. Hence it denies that God ever has, or can in any manner change, or set aside a natural result without stultifying his own wisdom. I believe I have correctly represented the position of infidelity. The Bible is made the target; the rock of offense whenever its teachings are supposed to clash with their partial understanding of the mysteries of nature's operations. We must concede that all the operations of nature are regulated by the God of nature; but we deny that God is bound by these to the extent that he cannot suspend them at his pleasure. God's revealed purpose relative to man, and to such part of his universe as he has determined for his habitation, is based upon his moral attributes, and addresses itself to man's moral and intelligent natures. What he has promised us in the future he has made contingent upon our conduct. The same principle applies to physical law as well. Health and life are only possible when vital conditions are respected. We claim that God has made known his will to man in the book we call the Bible, and has addressed him through his reasoning powers, and has given him laws to guide him toward his highest good here and hereafter, and has set reasonable penalties to those laws. He has done more. He has offered every transgressor a chance to escape the penalty of those laws that relate to final issues, and the chance is based upon reasonable service, and is not hard to perform, and in strict keeping with his highest good here. Here comes in the first objection. (Reasonable Penalties). "What has he threatened if we are disobedient? Seeing he has given us being without our will concurring. A ruined nature anti-dating our birth. Surrounded with strong temptations to evil. Having by inheritance strong passions. Unnatural appetites. What measures ought a God of love to take to reclaim his wayward child, and what penalty would be just and merciful in case of failure?" I address myself to answering the latter question. Since I regard it as a very potent cause of infidelity, when answered according to modern popular theology. Their answer is eternal life in misery, or eternal torment. The infidel says, "Reason on that if you can comprehend it?" Of course the reason is postponed ad infinitum, and the infidel scoffs at such a penalty. To answer this question permit me to refer you to the record of the advent of sin unto the world, since whatever penalty is there announced, and denounced against the head of the race for sin still stands upon the statute, and will as long as sin is in the world. God said to the man and woman whom he had made of the dust of the earth. In the day thou eatest of the prohibited tree thou shalt surely die. They ate of it, and God proceeds to explain all that was involved in the transgression, and the penalty; first, as it is related to this life, and then gives the ultimate in these words, "Until thou returnest unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." If endless torment is involved or contained in the sentence I ask which word affirms it? It is absolutely not there. Such an infinite penalty upon a finite creature without a previous warning from a God of love is not to be thought of. On the contrary we see the love and pity of a kind Father manifested in procuring a remedy for his sin affected children, which should be efficient in reclaiming them from the death state, and securing them against a possibility of its recurrence, and making them the possessors of his own divine nature and eternal life. All this for a reasonable service of faith. What does the word of God continue to assert as the penalty of sin? Ans. "The wages of sin is death." "The soul that sinneth it shall die." "All the wicked will God destroy." "They shall be as though they had not been." "Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be." "The day that cometh shall burn them up root and branch." "Behold I set before you life and death." "He that converteth a sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death." "Sin when finished bringeth forth death." This we maintain is a reasonable penalty, since a man only receives what he sows. He sows to the flesh, and of the flesh reaps corruption. God does not force endless existence upon any one against his wishes, nor fitness. The proclamation of an endless hell, and eternal pain, is not taught in God's Book, and never did, and never will induce any man to turn to the Lord. But has driven thousands to discredit the divine record, because they were told it taught the doctrine. Another very potent cause of infidelity is the variety of doctrines propagated by the different religious bodies, relative to what a man must believe and do to be saved. The Doctors of Divinity differing among themselves. The seeker after God is so confused by such leaders that he is ready to drop the subject, and conclude the book to be the product of fallible man. This condition arises from many causes, sometimes ignorance, and sometimes pride of religious standing, and sometimes prejudices. The most frequent cause is perhaps unbelief in the plain statements of the Word, and a desire to supplant the truth with some philosophy of their own, which they imagine has more merit as well as more mystery. If men would speak as the oracles of God speak they would speak the same thing, and the world would oftener believe. More anon.

The world should not expect absolute perfection in the church members, but rather bear in mind the old proverb, "A diamond even with a flaw in it is more precious than a perfect pebble." So the earnest Christian who strives daily to do the Master's will is a child of God and precious in his sight.—The Rev. F. A. Brown.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restituting of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

We do not like to do so, but the fact that quite a number of those who must know they are in arrears on subscription, have failed to respond, compells us to call attention to this long neglected duty. It certainly is clear to the mind of any one, that after notices have been sent, and later attention called to them, that it is a breach of good manners to not reply to our letters. Just ask yourself, How would I like such treatment? We want a clear understanding with those who owe us. If you are not able to pay now, we want to know it, and know when you can remit. If you are able to pay, then we say frankly that we want the money due us. We are compelled to pay our debts. If we did not respond promptly our credit would be ruined, and our business stopped. We ask you kindly to treat us as you would have us treat you. If you do this we will surely get our money at once.

"The only safe rule of Christian conduct is Christ first, last and all the time."

From a note from Sister Lizzie B. Oliver, of Attica, Kansas, we learn that Sister S. C. Oliver is very ill.

The whole world lieth in the evil one—in sin; the only exception to this is the untraditionized believers of the truth, who walk therein as little children."

For several days the Pope of Rome has been very sick, and it was feared he would not live many days, but the last reports give assurance that his recovery is now certain.

A Letter from Brother Woodward, dated March 1, informs us that he is just able to be out to the post office and back, but will have to be content to remain inactive until the weather moderates, as his lungs are very sore yet. Sister Woodward is now sick in bed with the grip, so that their work for the present is at a stand still. The friends among whom they labor will certainly not wish them to get out until they are fully recovered, which God grant may be speedy and certain. There is so much to do they cannot be spared very well.

The Italian government has made a demand on China for a lease of San Mun bay on the same conditions as granted to Germany in Kiou-Chou bay, but the Chinese have refused to grant it. Consequently Rear Admiral Genet of the Italian navy is dispatched to the scene to take charge, and enforce he demand. It looks as if England was behind the scheme and that the "open door" policy would be abandoned, and the real partition of the Chinese Empire be an event not far distant. The battle is between England and Russia from first to last.

The French are still in a turmoil, the new President not succeeding in controlling the unruly masses. Spain is near a breaking up. The ministry resigned without ratifying the peace treaty, and when the Queen Regent asked Sagasta to form a new one they differed so much that he refused to do so, and it was necessary for her to take up with one of the army generals. The new cabinet proves to be unpopular with the army, and there are grave fears of the Alfonso regime being overthrown. Of course the Carlists are wide awake ready to take advantage of this state of affairs.

John Ruskin truly says, "That which seems to be wealth, may, in verity be only the gilded index of far-reaching ruin; a wrecker's handful of coin gleaned from the beach to which he has beguiled an argosy; a camp-follower's bundle of rags unwrapped from the breasts of godly soldiers dead; the purchase pieces of potter's fields wherein shall be buried together the citizen and the stranger." This witness is true, for a greater than Ruskin declared, "Take heed, and keep yourselves from all covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth." Luke xii. 15. He spake with authority, and not as the Scribes, and his words are as true of nations as individuals.

"No one is so substantially happy as the man whose faith and hope are in God."

Reader, have you learned the outlines of God's Purpose in Creation and Redemption? Have you come to know men as God describes him? Do you realize that God's grand old Book is the Book of Life, the Book of the Kingdom, which he has promised to them that love him? Do what the Apostle calls exceeding great and precious promises touch your heart, and fill it with appreciation and love and gratitude? Do you feel drawn towards their author and desire to be brought into closer relation to him? Do you feel godly sorrow for having sinned against him? Does the unspeakable gift of his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life, melt down all opposition, and make you say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" If so, the answer is, "Arise, and be baptized and wash away thy sins." Will you do it?

Many of our readers are acquainted with H. L. Hastings' valuable little volume entitled "Faulins-Theology." It seems that Elliot Stock & Co., London has recently brought out a new edition of it; and a reviewer of it in one of the papers has this to say: "This is an unsatisfactory book. The author quotes various passages from the writings of Paul in which the words 'perish,' 'death' and 'destroy' occur; and, taking Webster's definitions of the English terms, he argues that the Apostle taught that the finally impenitent go out of existence. It is not our province to discuss this doctrine, which has gained the adhesion of many others besides Mr. Hastings. But we are bound to say that to establish his conclusion satisfactorily his treatment of the subject would require to be more scientific and scholarly. It does not inspire confidence in his expository powers that he insists that the Scriptural passages concerning fire and brimstone must be taken literally. Apart from all other considerations, it is absurd to think that fire and brimstone have any chemical power to dissolve a human personality, or that they can be brought into moral relations with a man's sin."

When men who conduct public journals are not ashamed to publish such inane and senseless things by way of criticism of a book that does not follow the old theological rule, the hope of enlightening their readers with simple gospel truth almost goes out. When the leaders of the people can write about fire and brimstone not being brought into moral relations with a man's sins, we realize what an impassable gulf exists between the masses and God's power for saving. This silly utterance will doubtless pass with them as an unanswerable argument. But in spite of these untoward circumstances we must be witnesses for God and truth till the faithful and true Witness shall appear, shut too the door of the kingdom, and take us to himself. May the glad day soon come.

"Patience."

We are told by the Spirit in Heb. x. 36, that we have need of patience. Oh, how true this is. If we are keeping a strict watch upon ourselves we feel the need of it every day, and perhaps every hour. We do not propose to give an exposition of the above passage, but merely to invite our readers to fix their minds upon the word "patience" and try to recall circumstances when a little of that article would have saved them many a heart-pang and a world of trouble. As they alone can pursue that study, we leave it with them, and remark

2ndly, That while the old orthodox habit of preaching sermons on isolated texts, words or phrases are not calculated to unfold Jehovah's beneficent purposes, at the same time single words often represent subjects which extend throughout the grand old Book. "Patience," in scores of instances is enjoined in the New Testament as a Christian duty, and the mention of the word in the 37th and 40th Psalms shows that the fruit of character it represents is by no means peculiar to God's children of this dispensation. It tells as much of submission to God's will as any word we can think of. Probably enough has been said in this direction, so we will try to draw a lesson for our readers from the above premises.

It is our impression that many brethren and sisters read too much Scripture. We mean by that they read more than they digest. Only the food we digest does us good. It is better to eat little and digest it than to gorge to the full and not be able to assimilate it. Our Father has given us a wonderful Book. Besides plain truths plainly stated, in vast abundance, it abounds in seed-thoughts, and the mere reading of a passage does not give the seed time to sprout. We think we ought to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest," so that we may "by reason of use have our senses exercised, to discern both good and evil. Heb. v. 14.

It is not meet, nor is it possible for all to investigate alike, and so we will try to demonstrate what we mean by noticing the first word of the verse containing our motto, "patience." It is for: "For ye have need of patience, so that having done the will of God, you may receive the promise." These words prove that God has promised something to those who do his will; and that those who do not do his will will not receive the promised blessing. 2ndly That his will cannot be done without patience. 3rdly, That it is God's will that we should be patient. 4thly, That when we exercise patience we are doing his will.

We take it for granted that our readers know what is promised, and so we go back to the word "For" again. It gives a reason for something said before this; and on looking to see what it was, we find in the preceding verse an injunction: not to cast away your confidence, for it [your confidence] hath great recompense of reward." "For" justifies this exhortation of endurance—shows the necessity of it.

Who are told that they need patience? Why, first, the Hebrew believers: secondly all believers. All need patience; trials and cross come upon all. There is no way to avoid them: and we would be borne down by them, or swept away with them if not fortified against them. Patience is absolutely necessary. Especially when suffering for Christ's sake comes in, we need patience. The Hebrews were told that they needed patience. They might not have realized it. They might not have known what the matter was, although conscious of something wrong. Or, their stock may have run down in view of the fiery trials awaiting them. And the gracious Spirit condescended to explain why they needed patience. "For you have need of patience, so that having done the will of God ye may receive the promise.

Patience, it means endurance, suffering with resignation and submission, and calmness and unruffled temper,—pain, provocations, persecutions, slights, taunts, insults, losses, and positive wrongs. Beloved out scattered abroad, what do you know about patience? Is it doing a perfect work? When we reach the point we come upon another "For" yes, another and a crowning reason why we should cultivate patience,—listen to it:—

"For yet a VERY little while indeed the coming One will come and will not delay." [Beyond the appointed time]. And although near 1900 years have passed since the words were spoken, and he is absent still, it must be borne in mind that the actual delay to each believer is no longer than his natural life; and that was a very little while. In reality it will be no longer for Paul than for our own loved ones recently dead. They will awaken equally refreshed, equally youthful, equally joyous! Simultaneously they awake and sing, so that for all practical purposes, we can contemplate death and after life as instantaneous as ever we did in the old theological way. And the coming of him who shall come can not be reckoned in time to the dead, but as if in an instant after losing consciousness, they awake and sing; so that the Apostle truly says, "For yet in a very little time indeed the coming One will come."

The great lesson for each successive age is:—you will not have to exercise patience long. The next verse says the justified one shall live by faith. This keeps hope in the ascendant. This quickens desire to do the will of God by patience and every other fruit of the Spirit. But the next words say: "But if any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him." No pleasure in him. Fearful words, surely. They mean that the backslider's doom will be his,—his life will go out in the blackness of darkness for ever.

Oh, are any of us inclined to draw back? Are the things we have heard, believed and once obeyed leaking out? Slipping away from us? Can we all with heart and soul join with the Apostle and his brethren in the next verse, and say, "But we are not of them that draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul?" This is the frame of mind to be in,—out and out for God and Christ.

Never in the history of the Church did the words: "Yet a little while and he that shall come will come and will not tarry," come with such power as to us. The end of the ages is upon us. Gigantic preparations for the mightiest revolution that ever shook the heavens and the earth are in rapid progress. Jehovah of the armies is marshalling the forces of earth into a position in which he will crush them with a blow. Are we ready for the change? Are we longing for it? Are we praying for it? Are we watching for it? Are we waiting patiently for it? Can we from the heart sing the hymn which says:

"Who counts the days,
The hours of lord she sees?
Longs and watches, weeps and prays.
So the church must wait for those?"

If we cannot there is something wrong. Are we ready to meet him to-night? Are we ready to meet him now? If not, we are not ready to meet him at all. If we are walking in the light we can say yes: blessed Jesus come,—so long to see thee. But what a thought to sustain us, it is that the coming One is he in whom we have believed; our Lord, our life, our all; he who died for us, rose again for us, lives for us, intercedes for us,—ah, it is HE who is coming for us! Then "come Lord Jesus, quickly come," Amen.

A Letter to a Friend in Washington, D. C.

Dear B. G:

My visit to your house last Sunday (Feb. 4) was one long to be remembered on account of the very interesting Bible readings in the book of Job and other parts of Scripture.

I think that you will agree with me when I say that church people have very little curiosity to know the meaning of their Bibles. Job xxviii. was very interesting, showing where, how, divine wisdom and understanding is found, but the 42nd chapter is even more interesting, where the Almighty sends the three smart men to Job that he might pray for them. These men tried hard to convince Job that all his reverses and sufferings were sent him because of some secret sin. God's decision must have been a great disappointment to those three extraordinary wise men. There are thousands of men and women today ready to jump with both feet on every child of misfortune they meet. The Spirit that prompted the inquiry, "Who hath sinned, this man or his parents, that he should be born blind?" is no longer confined to the Jews, but thank God, our reverses are not evidences of guilt, nor are our successes proofs of righteousness.

You kindly invited me to your Church, and I wish to explain here, why I answered you as I did. First, mere church going is not always the best way to spend our time. If we are not learning anything about God, his plans and purposes, etc., we would do more good throwing crumbs on the snow for the starving sparrows, and looking out in our immediate neighborhood that no one is freezing for lack of fire. Going to church is only drilling for the fight, what good is a soldier who is always drilling, never ready to go to the front?

Again, I do not care to listen to a preacher who knows less than I do about the nature of God and the nature of man. Your preacher is supposed to be a teacher. How much has he taught you? Do you know any more now than you did ten years ago? Has your preacher caused you to love your Bible any more, by showing you how to read it? The ministers of your church rarely read their Bibles, and when they do, it is like a Romanist saying their beads, viz., for penance.

The great bulk of the people who attend your church, were never converted to the truth. If they had been they would love God's Book and study it. Persons who are only converted to some church, when their church fails to give them the usual smile and handshake, suddenly go to pieces and remain so until lifted up by the indispensible smile and handshake. This is all the evidence they have of their spiritual health. They never think of going to the Book, and compare their experience with it. No, they are not put up that way. But one who is converted to the truth, to God, the handshake and the smile is neither here nor there to him. He is not dealing with flesh and blood, he is not putting his trust in the son of man in whom there is no strength. He is looking to the God of Jacob for his help. His hope is in the Lord his God. Pious blarney don't figure with him. If you have a Concordance ask your minister to show you how to use it. It is a great help in the study of the Scriptures. Hoping we both may learn to love our Bibles more, I am very truly your sincere friend,

Isaac McCurry, Sr.

Beloved in the Lord:

Truly my heart is made to rejoice as I read, from week to week, the love-feast letters. Like lucious fruits, they refresh the tender sympathies in Christ giving comfort, and soothing love which complete my joy, coming as they do from those showing the same love and zeal, and who have installed Christ as the Master of their hearts, their tongues, their moments and their all. With those who "Mind the things above, not the things on the earth" I would acknowledge the grace, mercy, and peace, which have abounded through the months of the past year while together, we joyfully unite in praise and thanks to God, and thus magnify and honor him who has established our hearts with grace, and mutual faith in believing he will bring us, as blameless and harmless children of God, to his own stand-point of righteousness. The reminiscences of past years which predominate in my mind are those which evidence the consummation of the purposes of God in the salvation of the human race; and which have moved many able minds to investigate the prophetic subjects of the Bible. Some eminently Bible scholars, whose attention have been much devoted to exposition of the prophecies, have thought that the termination of Gentile times might be reached in 1898. Surely the last year has been characterized by extraordinary events, which undoubtedly have been watched with eager interest by all restitution saints.

But if the anticipations of these writers have not been realized, God's saints well know, that he who said to his longing, waiting ones nearly two thousand your ago. "Behold, I come quickly," will come, and will not tarry. Although it is the good pleasure of the Father to conceal the data from the wise, yet to his waiting saints he reveals the fact, that his chariot will not long delay. We have the blessed assurance that, "At evening time it shall be light," and we welcome the "Time of the end when knowledge shall be increased," and receive with gladness the wonderful light, so bright in its divine glory. We remember the parable of the budding fig-tree, while we take cognizance of the many things transpiring which assures us the kingdom of God is nigh at hand; and we know perfectly that the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night to all, only the saints in Christ, who are not in darkness that that day should overtake them as a thief. They are all the children of light, and of the day. Undoubtedly those who have read the book entitled "The Appointed Time By Measurements," have been forcibly reminded of the Fathers instruction, that "When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord has not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously." Let us rejoice that "We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth" the prophet whom God raised up, and to whom the "Father gave a commandment what he should say, and what he should speak." He also gave instructions that we hearken unto him. After informing his disciples what would take place upon the earth just previous to his coming, our Lord's words were that "When these things are beginning to occur, raise yourselves, and lift up your heads; for your deliverance is drawing near. What precious words of encouragement, coming as they do from our Lord to the meek, the gentle-spirited and lowly in heart, who are longing for his kingdom of righteousness, wherein is peace and joy, and which will be filled with the spirit of truth, and life and love in Christ, who is our glory, and the lifter up of our heads. Let us "Be watchful therefore, at all times, praying that we may be accounted worthy to escape all these things about to occur, and to stand in the presence of the Son of Man." While we hear the rumbling wheels of his chariot, let us "Diligently endeavor to be found by him in peace, spotless and blameless, and reckon the patience of our Lord as salvation."

While he lingers, let us be careful not to be of those who think lightly of our Lord's appearing, because his coming does not fully with the many dates set for his advent, and permit our minds to be overcharged with the anxieties of this life, and numbered with those who mind earthly things. Our Lord has said he will come again, and take his redeemed, saved people unto himself. Therefore let us be found with Christians of the early church, and with the devoted and thoughtful of every clime, crying "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly!"

As the children of light, we are aware that it is the time of voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and earthquakes; a time when the mountains (governments) of earth are being overthrown. The God of heaven is now reducing by his power of disintegration some of earth's governments, for they are being swallowed up; and when earth's hills, and mountains are thoroughly melted, the Lord will of the integrant parts, renew, restore, and perfect the new heavens, and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. We are to stand with our loins girded, and our lamps burning, waiting for the Master, that when he comes and knocks, we may instantly open to him. O what a love-feast it will be, when the blessed Lord girding himself comes forth to minister to those happy servants, whom when he arrives he shall find watching. We can safely predict, that the watching ones, are the Lord's peculiar children, zealous of good works, in the world, but not of the world, and have not conformed to the world; neither have they loved the world. They have no abiding city, but have gone forth to meet the Lord outside of the camp bearing reproach for him. With Paul they have separated themselves from the world, not as a recluse, but as their divine Examplar, to go about doing good in every possible way, to the minds and bodies of mankind. Thus they live above the world, and joyfully recognize the claims of the world's Redeemer on the entire service of their hearts and lives. Their devotion to their Lord is such that with Paul they suffer the loss of all things that they may be accepted of him. As Paul did, so will they perfect a character which will give them "An abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of their Lord and Jesus Christ. How great will be the happiness of those found fitted to share in the glories, honor, and blessings of that royal banquet of the Lord's. O it will be a love-feast which will thrill the hearts of his glorified saints. Dear ones in Christ, while we wait in faith and patience for the coming of his glory; let us shut out the world with its throng of sins, and earnestly study to prepare ourselves for our coming King. With firm faith, devout hope, and sincere love, let us faint not while we look for him who is "Our wisdom from God, our righteousness, and our sanctification and redemption." O let us boast in the Lord, until the day of everlasting brightness dawns, and we, by sight, and without a vail behold the splendor of the glory of his majesty; and being transformed into the same likeness, from glory to glory, we shall rejoice without end in the presence of God, beholding his glory face to face. O that the hour may soon come when the Lord will satisfy his longing saints with his presence, and be unto them their all and in all.

Submitted in love to the house-hold of God.

Mrs. D. W. Post.

It is God's desire not to break our wills, but to direct them. If we yield gracefully he leads gently through green pastures and by still waters. But if we are stubborn and will not bend, if needs, he will send a tumultuous storm over the soul until finally the blind pilot, self-will, is thrown, crushed and bleeding, from his self-assumed post, and the rightful Master drives the tempest-tossed bark from the shoals where it was nearly stranded.

There can be no real blessing gained by tying fruit to a tree, however good it might be; but make the tree good and self-bearing, then it will be a blessing to some one by bearing fruit. The Holy Spirit bears fruit, and of that kind which brings a blessing to the world; therefore be filled with the Spirit, and as a result you will be fruit-bearing in your lives, and a blessing to those who come in contact with you.—H. A. Mitchell.

It is good to do the right thing, but it is still better to want to do. Many a one stumbles or drifts into a right action, and so far so good. But no one ought to be satisfied with drifting or stumbling at any time. He ought to know that he has done well because he willed and worked to do well. To ignore one's own faculties is to dishonor their Maker.

No man can follow Christ and not have trouble with the devil.—Ram's Horn.

Poetry.

Tell Jesus.

When thou wakest in the morning,
Ere thou tread the untrod way
Of the lot that lies before thee,
Through the coming busy day,
Whether the sunbeams promise brightness,
Whether dim forebodings fall,
Be thy dawning glad or gloomy,
Go to Jesus—tell him all.

In the calm of sweet communion
Let thy daily work be done;
In the peace of soul outpouring,
Love be banished, patience won,
And earth with its entanglements
Seeks thy spirit to enthrall,
Ere thou listen, ere thou answer,
Turn to Jesus—tell him all.

Then as hour by hour glides by thee,
Thou will blessed guidance know,
Thine own burdens being lightened
Thou canst bear another's woe,
Thou canst help the weak ones onward,
Thou canst raise up those that fall:
But remember, while thou servest,
Still tell Jesus—tell him all.

And if weariness creeps o'er thee
As the day wears to a close,
Or if sudden fierce temptation
Bring thee face to face with foes,
In thy weakness, in thy peril
Raise to heaven a trustful call;
Strength and calm for every crisis,
Come in, telling Jesus all.

The Records of Matthew and Luke Harmonized.

The higher critics, say that "according to the record, given in Matthew, Herod the Great, an Idumean, was king over Palestine and Jerusalem at the time Jesus was born;" that "he began to reign by the appointment of Cesar, B. C. 28, and died, according to Usher, 1 year after the birth, and 2 years, according to Dimbleby and Totten," and that "consequently from these figures, the stay in Egypt would have been some two or three years."

But, that "according to Luke, the birth of Jesus took place some ten years later under the governorship of Cyrenius," that "the history, universally given, is that Herod the Great, died, that his son, Archelaus, was appointed one of the tetrarchs by Cesar, to reign in the stead of Herod over Jerusalem and Judea, and reigned 37 years and was then deposed by Cesar, taken to Rome and Cyrenius, appointed in his place;"—that "the record in Luke, makes no mention of a visit to Egypt, as none was necessary and puts Joseph, Mary and Jesus in Jerusalem, 40 days after the birth with no fear or concern of Herod!" They farther say that "Neither Canon Farrar, Geike, Ritto, nor dozens of other historical writers and critics, give a reconciliation of the two records!"

Now let us see what historians do say, Sulpitius Severus—"the Christian Sallust," writing 401 A. D. says, "Under this Herod [the Great] in the three-and-thirtieth year of his reign, Christ was born, on the eighth day [Dec. 25th] before the Calendar of January."

Tertullian, says—"Finally, concerning the census of Augustus, which the Roman Archives, preserve as a faithful witness of the Lord's nativity." (Tert, adv, mave, lib iv. c. 7).

And again—"For he was of the country of Bethlehem, and of the house of David, as among the Romans. She is described in the Census, 'MARY FROM WHOM CHRIST IS BORN'—in Censu descripto est MARIA, EX QUA NASCITUR CHRISTOS." (Tert adv. Jud. Tom. II.)

Herod came to the throne 37 B. C. according to Robbins' Outlines of History, Page 147, and not at 28, B. C. (Geike gives the same date 37, B. C., as the year upon which Herod became really king,—he had been appointed by the Senate B. C. 40.

Eusebius, places the enrollment for taxation in the 33rd year of Herod.

Clement, states in "Stromata," (Book 1, ch. xxi.) "Our Lord was born, in the 28th year, when THE FIRST CENSUS, WAS ORDERED TO BE TAKEN, in the reign of Cesar Augustus. (750 A. U. C.—Olymp, 194, 3 774, Ol.) and to prove that this is true, it is written in the gospel by Luke as follows; 'And in the 15th year, in the reign of Tiberius Cesar, the word of the Lord came to John, the son of Zacharias', and again in the same book—and 'Jesus, was coming to his baptism about 30 years old.' (Luke iii. 2, 3, 23, and so on.) And that it was necessary for him to preach only a year. This also is written, "He hath sent me to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord.' (Isa. lxi. 1, 2.) This, both the Prophet spoke and the gospel. Accordingly in 15 years of Tiberius, and 15 years of Augustus, so were completed the 30 years till the time (of his baptism at the end of the 69 weeks of lunar years, which began with Nehemiah, after while) he suffered."

If Herod became king 37, B. C., at the time he captured Jerusalem, and the birth of Jesus was in his 33rd year, that would bring us to the date 4, B. C., when all agree that the nativity took place.

Now we have Eusebius and Sulpitius Severus, agreeing, the one, that "the enrollment for taxation, took place in the 33rd year of Herod." And the other that it was in the 33rd year of the reign of Herod the Great, (15th of Dec.) that Christ was born! And yet our higher critics, say that Herod was dead long before either of these events took place! And try to prove this by fixing "the enrollment," far down in the governorship of Cyrenius. ("The enrollment is only a census that precedes taxation) when Clement also says that our Lord was born when the first census, was taken, the Chronicles of Eusebius, opposite the 42 year of Herod, make the following correct annotation? Igitumus, (another name for Cyrenius) being sent by a decree of the Senate into Judea makes a description of possessions and private dwellings (or, according to Main Edition, of possessions and persons)" so Cyrenius, began the census in the 32nd year of Herod and finished it in the 33rd, for "the Eusebian Record covers both periods." According to Tertullian, Jesus, seems to have been included in the census.

Now we turn to the Diaglott. It says, "This was the first TAXATION of Quirinus, Governor of Syria," and remember Quirinus, was sent to Judea in the 32nd year of Herod. According to Eusebius. The CENSUS, was taken at this time,—"the 28th year of Cesar on the 'octavian' scale,' for, counting "from the actual date of the battle of Actium (Sept. 2, B. C. 31), his 28th year would fall in 4, B. C., or 750, A. U. C. (the number of years that had elapsed from the date of the founding of Rome), but "the taxing was not enforced until Cyrenius, was Governor of Syria, in 11, A. D., which was the 37th of Augustus."

(Professor Totten, news Leaflet, No. 8, 1888, page 6).

Then according to Eusebius, Cyrenius, or Quirinus, took THE CENSUS under Herod—this was THE FIRST REGISTRY, of Cyrenius,—who, at the time Luke was writing, was Governor of Syria.

Tacitus, says Quirinus was "an active soldier and a rigid commissioner," and Kitto, says, that "Cesar, to punish Herod, for having marched a military force into Arabia, against some handed robbers and other Arabs, degraded his kingdom to a Roman Province." This would make a Roman census possible.

"For soon after" says Kitto. "Josephus, incidentally mentions, that 'the whole nation, took an oath of fidelity to Cesar and to the king jointly, except six thousand Pharisees who through their hatred to the royal government, refused to take it, and were fined by the king; but the wife of Pheroras, his brother, paid the fine for them.'" and Kitto adds, "As this was shortly before the death of Pheroras, it coincides with the time of this decree for the enrollment, of which St. Luke makes mention; and we may certainly infer that the oath was administered at the same time according to the usage of the Roman census, in which the return of a person's age and properties was required to be made upon oath, under penalty of the confiscation of the goods of the delinquents."

"Males from fourteen and females from twelve, up to 65, were subject to a poll-tax, equal in our money, to 30 cts. "Cyrenius," Kitto says, "who was a Roman Senator, and procurator, or collector of the Emperor's revenue, was employed to take the enrollment." For this view of the subject, Kitto says he is indebted to Dr. Hales.

Now, as to the death of Herod; some have supposed that he died in the spring of the year 750, A. U. C. 3, B. C. (Counting from the founding of Rome, which the letters A. U. C. signify), which would be but a few months after the birth of Jesus.

They fix upon this date because "Josephus says, he died shortly before the Passover and that there was an eclipse of the moon, not long before, but this does not fix the date, for though there was an eclipse of the moon, March 12–13th, 4. B. C., there was also one July 17th 3. B. C. and another, Jan. 20th, 1, B. C.—the latter, is the one defended by Scaliger, while Professor Tottan, fixes upon that of July 17th, and places the death of Herod, Nov. 3rd, where Archbishop Usler, also places it. And we have just as much right, to fix upon, the notable eclipse of July 17th 2, B. C. or upon the just as notable one of Jan. 20th, 1, B. C. And to place the death of Herod a few days thereafter, as the higher critics have to fix upon the eclipse of March, and, I might say, a thousand times, better right, because, by doing this, we invalidate no part of the divine record, nor do we invalidate Josephus.

In a Jewish tract, called the "Book of Fasting," is found, under date of Casleu, (a Jewish month, corresponding in part with our October, and November,) this record. "The 7th, a fast day; because on it Haruden (Herod), an enemy of the wise died; for it is so before God when the wicked depart."

The 7th of Casleu, would be the 3d of Nov., in the Year 2, B. C. De Solu and Lyon's standard Jewish calendar, have recorded opposite the 7th, day of the month Casleu, this record—"Festival on account of the death of Herod the Great."

The weight of testimony is therefore, that the census, was taken in the year 4, B. C. and that Herod did not die till some time after. He must have lived through the year 3, B. C. and through 8 months of the year 2, B. C. or until the 3rd of Nov.

This gives ample time for all the events to take place that are narrated by Matthew and Luke. Luke is supplemental to Matthew. He details sometimes more and sometimes less, of the narratives, given in the other gospels, and pays little heed to their chronological order, while Matthew follows the order of their happening. (So says Guessenns to Luke's style.)

But we must hasten on to other matters. Jesus was born, as recorded, by Matthew and Luke. The shepherds came that same night, and "found both Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger," and "they published that declaration which had been spoken to them about the child," but the thing did not come to the ears of Herod, for Ignatius says "the Virginity of Mary and He who was born of her, was kept secret from the prince of this world;" (Ign. to Eph. iv. 10, See Apocryphal New Testament).

Now had it come to Herod, when Mary and Joseph at the end of 40 days went up to Jerusalem (in our February, 3, B. C.) to present Jesus to the Lord and to make the required offering, of two turtle doves. Anna and Simeon, would not tell the true king, nor would any one who really believed that Jesus was the Messiah. So when the law of the Lord had been obeyed, Joseph and Mary went back to Nazareth, where they abode till the Passover season came around, in the spring of the same year, 8, B. C. This solemn feast was quietly kept, and by all rational inferences the next one also, (2, B. C.) for their custom was to go up to Jerusalem every year. Jesus was now about 15 months old.

It must have been at this time that the Magians appeared upon the scene, enquiring the where abouts "of him who had been born King of the Jews, for they had seen His star at its rising and had come to do him homage." The years of Herod's reign had been full of fears as to the loss of his throne, to himself, and to his children. He had committed murder after murder to make it secure, having had his two best beloved sons in the Asamonean line, strangled.

The Magians, made no secret of their mission and it was straightway told to Herod,—here was another future claimant for the crown, and worse than all, it was the Messiah, the Anointed! He had heard of him before as his question proves, for he was of Esau's race, and had dwelt long enough among the Jews, to be somewhat familiar with the words of the Prophets. No such alarm had ever filled his breast, as that which fills it now. If he cannot destroy this prophetic child, his dynasty is doomed. But he must be very careful.

He calls the chief priests and scribes together and demands of them, "Where the Messiah shall be born?"

The answer is quickly given, as being Bethlehem, (Micah v. 2). Then Herod confers in secret with the Magians: he wants to find out how old the young King is: and he succeeded, having obtained from them the exact TIME of the star's appearing. (Diaglott.)

Then he sent them to Bethlehem to make a strict search, for the child. When they had found him, they were to bring him word, that he also, might pay his respects to so distinguished a personage. The Star, went before them, and came and stood over the place, where the young child was. (It is a matter of record" Dr. Geise, says, that "a new and peculiar star did make its appearance in the first Decan of Virgo in the period immediately preceding Christ's birth, and that it was so brilliant as to be visible even in the daytime. Ignatius says it sparkled brilliantly above all stars. It continued in the sky during the whole period of Christ's lifetime, and for some time after."

Now the Decan of Virgo, is an attendant constellation of the Virgin; both are women, and the women are the same. The one, holds an ear of wheat (the seed,) and upon it the brilliant Star, Spica, in one hand, and in the other the Branch, the other woman, holds an infant. The star seen by the Magians, marked the head of the infant, they called it HIS STAR, on this account. There were also three conjunctions of Jupiter and Saturn, in the sign of the Fishes,—(the constellation of Israel),—before the birth of Jesus, just as there was before the birth of Moses. The Magians being astronomers, would note all these things. They were from Media, the land of captive Israel). (Professor Totten, thinks it was probably the Star Spica Virginis, on the Seed, or ear; I accept that the wise saw).

Mary and Jesus, were found in "a house," and not in "a stable," when the wise men came, and they presented their gifts, after having prostrated themselves in worship and took another road home, having been warned in a dream not to go back to Herod.

The very use of the word "house" points this out, as a different time, from that at which the visit of the shepherds was made: no such great crowds, are present now, and there is room in the houses for guests.

The very night of the Magians departure, Joseph is warned to flee with Mary and the child to Egypt, and to remain there till the Lord speaks to him, for "Herod is about to seek the child to destroy him." And the record says, "he arose at once, and departed that night for Egypt."

Herod, was soon confident that the Magians had tricked him, but he was determined, not to be foiled but to save his throne for Archelaus, his son. He has learned from the Magians, about how old the dreaded King must be, so to make the matter certain, he sent men and "slew all the male children in Bethlehem from two years old and under—according to the TIME which he ACCURATELY learned from the MAGIANS." (Diaglott).—Jesus, being in his second year.

Herod, who had for sometime been in poor health, grew worse. It was rumored at one time that he was dead, and the young Jewish scholars, encouraged by two great Rabbis cut down the Roman eagle, that Herod had placed over the great Temple gate. The ring-leaders were condemned and burned alive! "That very night" says Josephus, "there was an eclipse of the moon" (Antiq XVII. C. 6). July 17th, 2, B. C. Page, describes this eclipse, (See Page "New Light" pp. 73–91). "On the day of this eclipse, Herod deposed Matthias, and made Jouzan high priest in his stead" (Josephus Antiq, XVII. Cap. 6, 8.) His health now failed rapidly. He tried in vain, the warm baths at Callirhoe and returned to Jericho, to settle his affairs as best he might. Many noble Jews were imprisoned, his son Antipatar, was slain, about the 29th, of our October, and on the 7th of Nov. Herod, "gave up the ghost."

Archelaus, was now made Tetrach, but the angel of the Lord, had already commanded Joseph to take Mary and the child and come back to the land of Israel; "for they are dead who sought the child's life." Joseph obeyed, but fearing Archelaus, was warned by an angel, and went and dwelt in Nazareth,—a town, not under Archelaus.

The holy family, were therefore in Egypt, less than eight months. "They went up to the Passover, every year, according to their custom." As recorded in Luke, for they could have been back in Nazareth, after Herod's death, by some time in December.

Let the Scripture Record stand as it is, though Malebas Porphyry and his followers fail. Modern higher critics "do little more than to copy from him and those of his ilk, up to the 18th, century."

God's truth is "written in the very heavens;" it cannot be overthrown. We are but David's, with pebbles and slings, but we go forth in the name and in the strength of the God of Israel.

S. ROXANA WINCH.

Only he who is crucified with Christ is dead unto sin, or ready to be buried by baptism into Christ's death. Of what use to bury a living sinner? He will surely rise from the watery grave in the same old life. Bury dead sinners and raise them up living saints.

Parable of the Ten Virgins No. 3.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bride-groom." Matt. xxv. 1-14.

The parable of the ten virgins verse 4. But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. Here is truly a lesson of wisdom, for from the reading of this verse we learn that three things are essential to make one wise to travel in the night. 1st. A lamp to give light. 2nd, Oil to furnish the light. 3rd, An extra vessel of oil to supply any waste that should follow. Truly, how all important it is with the wise that a sufficient amount of forethoughtedness be exercised and enforced to be qualified for the great task that lies before them, and a lack of these things or any part of them would certainly set a person down as not being sufficiently wise, and would in fact be called foolish virgin, and we find that one-half of the virgins lacked only one of these essential things, and all three of them being essential. Then of course they lacked one of the essential things that would qualify them for the marriage, or to enjoy the feast that should follow, or to engage in the rulership of the kingdom, and no wonder they were called foolish virgins. But how did they come to know that they would meet the bridegroom in the first night? There is not any direct proof that they did know, and besides this parable is wholly out of joint to compare to any thing like it in this one day. It does not compare at all, and you can only fit it where it belongs, and then it fits to perfection, and the only reason that we can give that it was to be part of one night only, is that they did not provide any provision to eat on the way, and even if they should have travelled all of one night they would have got hungry. Hence from this standpoint alone, they did well know that they would travel a part of one night only, and besides they were all wise enough to have lamps, and oil to furnish them with light to travel a given portion of time, till they came to the time of halting at least, and that thus far they seem to travel all right. But the trouble is they were not all wise enough to be supplied with oil all the way through. Hence one-half of them were lacking in only one of the essential things, and that was the extra vessel of oil to supply their waste, and yet that was enough to shut them out.

Now for the application. This parable is expressly given to represent the living saints of God in the first half of the time of the end of the Gentiles, which will be a great time of trouble, and and which will also be a great time of spiritual darkness, and into this the saints will have to pass a little over half way in order to reach a little past midnight of the parable, and as they pass into it they must be cut loose from every thing else, like what the parable speaks of them, and only looking for the coming of the Lord. In the parable there are two vessels, which the wise carry independent of each other, for it says the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. "Their vessels" and "their lamps" are two independent things which the wise have provided themselves with, and now please notice here, the wisdom and precaution that the wise have taken to be prepared with with extra amount of oil. Now for the application. Now the Bible and faith are the two independent things which the two vessels represent, that is the saints have got the faith in them, and have learned it out of the Bible prior to this time. Hence it is a settled principal in them. Therefore, faith and the Bible are the two vessels that carry the same kind of oil, but faith must draw on works to keep up a living faith, and the works are found in the Bible. Now as the oil is the connecting link between the two vessels, so works are the connecting link between faith and the Bible, and it is a fact that one-half the saints will not like to keep up Christians works as they are passing through this great time of trouble, or great time of spiritual darkness, and not having their Bibles by their side, so that they can read it to learn their duty, they will forget what their works are, and thus prove themselves like the foolish virgins. But the wise turning to their Bibles by their sides, the great vessels of good works, they will draw from this fountain head, and read, "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." Matt. xxiv. 13, or to "Occupy till I come." Luke xix. 13 So with this knowledge before them they are prepared at all times to learn to continue faithful to the very last, even if takes them into this great time of trouble, for just so sure as they have started out in this journey, just so sure they do know that they will meet their coming Lord before they give it up. For well do they know that there is but the one going forth to meet their coming Lord, and at that time they will meet him, and also that is a fact worthy of notice, that it is a genuine good thing to be always governed by the pure principal of love. We also know that it is far better thing to know how to use that love with wisdom. So the wise will well know what our Savior has commanded where he says, "But that which ye have already, hold fast till I come: he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." Rev. ii. 25, 26. Hence the wise will well know and understand that it will be their duty to obey in this great time of trouble, as well as at all other times, in order to gain the great reward.

Yours awaiting the time when the saints will pass into this great time of trouble, and be prepared for the coming of the Lord in order to gain the reward,

J. A. MOYER.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Will you kindly allow me to make a few remarks to Bro. Wilson about his reply to my questions? I do not write for the sake of controversy, but to get at the truth. If I am not correct in the view I take of John's visions, I hope Bro. Wilson, or some one else will set me right, as I want the truth, because error does not profit, and truth does. John says in his opening, "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand." So I take it to be very important to understand at least the main outlines of what John has written.

I am free to admit that I made a mistake when I said that the resurrection took place under the opening of the sixth seal. I should have said under the sixth seal, and before the seventh seal opens. But I am unable to see any light from Bro. Wilson's reply. He says that the seals and trumpets cover the same time. But I don't so understand it. It seems to me that if Bro. Wilson will carefully read the 1st and 2nd verses of the 8th chapter, he will see that the trumpets do not sound until after the seventh seal is opened. I am aware that Paul says that the resurrection takes place at the last trump, but is that the seventh trump or some other trump altogether? It seems to me that the last four verses of the eleventh chapter belongs to the twelfth chapter, and the dead that he speaks of in the 18th are the same as the manchild that is brought to view in the 5th verse of the 12th chapter, and they belong to the same scene as the great multitude in the 7th chapter.

I would also point Bro. Wilson to the fact of the resurrection being under the sixth seal and before the seventh seal opens. That is fatal to this theory. Paul says of the last trump, not before, it is the sounding of the last trump that calls the saints from their dusty beds. I take it from some of Bro. Wilson's remarks in times past that he holds with the Romish and Protestant Churches, that the Lord's day that John says he was in the Spirit, was Sunday or first day of the week, am I right in this Bro. Wilson? That being one of their doctrines is a very strong reason for me to reject it. I think that is the only place in the Bible that the phrase, Lord's day is used. I find the day of the Lord and judgment day, and I am of the opinion that they all refer to the same time. And all that John saw takes place in that day. Please give us your opinion, Bro. Wilson.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Mrs. Sarah Hadden, wife of James Hadden, of Johnstown, Wis., Saturday night Feb. 11, 1899. She was born in Green County, Wis., May 8, 1847. She was the daughter of Mr. C. J. and Mrs. Sarah Lee, of Carpenteria, Cal., who still survive her. Two brothers, Charles, of Iowa, and Frank, of Ft. Atkinson, Wis., and one sister Mrs. Lizzie Freel, of Carpenteria, Cal., also survive her. June 1, 1878, she was united in marriage to Mr. James Hadden, of Johnstown, who proved to be a faithful, loving husband, who also survives her, eight children mourn their loss. In 1873, she was baptized by J. F. Wilcox, into the "Church of God," and ever remained a steadfast consistent disciple of Christ in full harmony with her faith. She was a kind, loving wife and mother, looking well to her household, and much beloved by her family. No better testimony could be borne to her character than this that, "Her children shall rise up and call her blessed." Her piety was of such a stamp that one could not be long in her society without being impressed with the sincerity of her devotion to her Master. Her life was spent helping those that were short of this world's goods. The funeral services were held from the family residence at 2 o'clock, P. M., Feb. 14, Rev. S. G. Huey of the Presbyterian church officiating, her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Johnstown Center, where they await the resurrection morn.

"Thou art come to the grave, but we're wrong to deplore thee,
When Christ was thy ransom, thy guardian guide;
He bought thee, he took thee, and soon will restore thee,
Where death hath no power since the Savior hath died."

FRANK J. LEE.

Died at her home near Pierceton, Kosciusko County, Indiana, February 28, 1899, Julia Ruth Stevens, aged 65 years, 10 months and 6 days. Sister Stevens, whose maiden name was Adams, was born near Marion, Wayne County, N. Y., where in December, 1861, she was united in marriage to Herman I. Stevens of Kosciusko County, Indiana, whither she removed and passed the remainder of her life. To this union were born four children, Charley, Kate, Frank and Fannie. Of these the three latter survive to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother. The husband, who was among the early settlers of the county, died Aug. 6, 1893. Sister Stevens early in life united with the Church of God, having embraced the truth, I think, under the preaching of Brother J. B. Cook in her native State. The glorious and blessed truths of the gospel to which the church of her choice has pledged its faith and support were hers to hold and sacredly cherish down to the close of life. Her life was an exemplary one; worthy of imitation by all who make the Christian profession and wear the Christian name. She loved the truth and him who was the "way, the truth and the life." The force of her character, her mental ability and her means were thrown on the side of the truth. "We sorrow not as those who have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." The sleep of death is but for a moment. Funeral sermon by Bro. A. H. Zilmer, at Ludlow Church.

JOHN L. WINCE.

IN MEMORIAM.

Dearest mother, now before us,
In the cold embrace of death;
We who loved thee once so dearly,
Of thy presence are bereft.

Round thy casket, gathered loved ones,
Weeping friends are by thy side;
But thy smile no more can greet them,
Thou hast passed bey ond the tide.

Sorrows, troubles, all have left thee,
Peaceful be thy sleep so sweet;
While in yonder quiet graveyard,
Soon dost wait thy God to meet.

FANNIE STEVENS.

"He giveth his beloved sleep." and so we thought as we gazed it endures on the calm face of Sister Lyon, as she lay with folded hands, peacefully resting after five months of suffering caused by rheumatism of the nerves. She fell asleep Saturday evening, Feb. 11, 1899, in the 68th year of her age. Five days before her death she was stricken with apoplexy, which rendered her partially unconscious, until the last day when she recovered consciousness and knew all the dear ones who had assembled. She took some nourishment and tried to talk, but it was only in disconnected sentences. At times she was heard to whisper as softly as the zepher's song, or the music of the aeolian harp,

"Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow."

To mourn her loss she leaves besides a large circle of friends, two brothers and three sisters, residents of Ontario, which was Sister Lyon's home before she was united in marriage with Eld. R. V. Lyon. Since then she has lived at Niagara Falls, where by patient toil they had succeeded in procuring a comfortable home, to which many friends who have been entertained there can testify, for theirs was a home of hospitality, to which all of the precious faith were welcomed with open arms as belonging to the family of God.

The funeral was held Feb. 14, at her residence, 709 Ashland Ave. The Rev. Mr. Brookman, of Toronto, Ont., ably officiating, and they laid her away in Oakwood Cemtery to rest until the eastern glory lights the skies.

"Until the dead in Jesus shall rise,
And he shall come but not in lowly guise."

We believe she is asleep in Jesus, so we mourn not as those who have no hope. We read, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." Hers has been a lifetime of good works, and of toiling for others to reap. She has fought the good fight, she has finished her course, she will hear the Father's "Well done" when he calls she will answer. Her good works dispensed so quietly and unassumingly have reached and been appreciated far and near. She was beloved by all who knew her. Her life of kindness, charity and Christianity has been truly exemplary.

"After the night of darkness,
The shadows all flee away;
After the day of sadness,
Hope sheds her brightest rays.
After the strife and struggle,
The victory is won:
After the work is over,
The Master's own word Well done.

After the pain and sickness,
The tears are all wiped away;
After the flowers are gathered,
No more of earth's decay;
After the deep heart sorrow,
An end of every strife;
After the daily crosses,
A glorious crown of life."

ANGELINE LENT.

IN MEMORY OF SISTER R. V. LYON.

Gone but not forgotten.
Like some enchanting vision fair,
That captivates the heart and mind,
That leaves its impress there;
Memory recalls kind words of cheer,
While thou art resting, sister dear.

Kind, patient, loving sister,
Thy sufferings all are o'er;
Thy frail bark is safely anchored,
On that peaceful, silent shore.
Where grief, nor torturing pain,
Will ever rack thy frame again.

Thine was a busy, useful life,
Scattering seeds of kindness around,
That will bud and bloom and flourish,
While thou art resting 'neath the mound;
Rest, rest, faithful loving sister, rest,
To know thee well, is to love thee best.

In the footsteps of the Master,
Always striving to do good,
Cheered the weak and fainting ones,
Lifting burdens where she could;
Ah, yes! generous loving heart,
A life like thine is far too short.

Beautiful even in garb of death,
With golden locks smoothed down,
Methinks a brow like thine,
Might wear a golden crown.
And with the angel choir from above,
Sing the song of redeeming love.

The dear old home is desolate now,
There many pleasant scenes have passed,
Where friends in sweet communion met,
And memories live while life shall last,
In fancy I see them gathering around,
Telling of the joys with Jesus found.

No, we never shall forget you;
In our lonely musings we seem
To hear thy voice, and see thy smile.
Alas! Alas! 'tis but a dream,
Sleep on, sleep on, dear sister, sleep.
You shall awaken, but not to weep.

Oh, for a living faith like this,
To pierce death's noisome gloom,
And like the holy saints of old,
To look beyond the darkened tomb.
To a happy reunion yet to be,
When the dear Redeemer's glory we'll see.

Come Lord Jesus, Oh, quickly come,
And set death's prisoners free.
Come and usher the prison doors,
Of time, being immortality;
Then death itself shall die away,
And darkness turn to endless day.

ELIZABETH A. LENT.

Our Savior bids us "Watch." We, therefore, are watchers. One reason why Jesus bids us to be continually watchful is because we do not know the exact time of his second coming. The definite date is unknown. So the heavenly Master says: "Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is," Mark xiii. 33. That that hour may not find us unprepared we are to be vigilant. Burkitt, on Matt. xxiv. 32-36, invite us to learn "that the precise time of the day of judgment is kept by God as a secret to himself. He will not have us know the hour, to the intent that we may be upon our watch every hour."

The Gospel of the Kingdom is no glad a message that everyone who hears it should preach it. "Let him that heareth say, Come."

Change in time of trains on Pennsylvania Lines.

Under a new schedule in effect Feb. 20th, 1899 passenger trains over the Pennsylvania Lines leave Plymouth Station as follows:

For the East No. 6, 2.45 a. m. daily, No. 14, 5.14 a. m. daily. No. 20, 10.33 a. m. daily, Except Sunday. No. 8, 5.40 p. m. daily. No. 2. 7.50 p. m. daily. Extra fare. No. 38, 8.51 p. m. daily, Except Sunday.

For the West. No. 15, 5.14 a. m. daily. No. 5, 6.41 a. m. daily. Extra fare. No. 37, 9.26 a. m. daily, except Sunday. No 39, 2.10 p. m. daily except Sunday. No. 9, 6.10 p m. daily. For particular information on the subject apply to J. E. Haines, Ticket Agent.

The great mass of men are not prepared to meet Christ. They do not believe that he will return, they do not desire that he should appear; they are not ready for the solemn interview which they will have with him. His appearing now would overwhelm them with surprise and horror. There is nothing in the future which they less expect and desire than his second coming of the Son of God.

Wherever two walk together and have Christ for their theme and in their hearts, he will walk between them: especially is he near troubled hearts. No road is so common, no duty so homely, but that his presence is ours.

Important Notices.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed as "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co. Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letter is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to risk that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts give the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as co-rulers with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The King in his Beauty.

"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty." Isa. xxxiii. 17.

The King in his beauty is coming, ere long;
Prepare ye, prepare ye to meet him.
To share in his glory, and sing the new song—
Who, who, will thus joyously greet him?
Already the day-star is beaming;
Let slumber depart from thine eyes,—
